UNDER HIS SHADOW.

BY F. D. MURPHY.

Under his shadow! O blessed position,
Free from the cravings of worldly ambition;
Free from dark doubts and misgivings disquieting;
Free from confusion, dissension, and rioting.
Under his shadow, in penitent lowliness,
Seeking forgiveness, adoption, and holiness;
Day and midday may murmur around us,
Satan's emissaries seek to confound us;
But, neath the shade of omnipotent purity
Nothing can trouble our peaceful security.
O what a privilege there to recline,
Resting the fruit of the banquet divine.
Seeing forever the light of God's face,
Under the banner of Love how we race,
Brave hearts may covet the broad glare of day,
Fearlessly march to the battle's array,
Struggle, and combat, and gloriously win,
Noble battalions of saints;
These are weak ones who can not defy,
Leaders who shrink when assailants draw nigh.
Using no mortal strength of their own:
Hiding beneath the shield of the throne;
Walking the narrow path, oftentimes weeping,
Yet ever singing of faith steadfastly keeping,
Counting not freely our priceless
Gift of liberty for a lost world;
Trusting, protecting, and cherishing
Weak pilgrims friendless and perishing,
Helping them, for us, thus thwarting soul.
Hard burdens confidingly roll
Under his banner, nor fear for future,
Shelter of perfect security;
Plans for the world's salvation.
Out of society of rank, wealth, or station,
Rich and true and coheign
Come and wisdom divine!
Love them, sustain and defend—
Our Substitute, Savior, and Friend.
Peace of purity and bliss;
Heaven came over like this.
While the fruit of its may maintain forsaking,
Yet forget not a pit eternally breaking
Depths of boundless iniquity,
Where may abide them in fruitful serenity,
Let the veil of his shade setting under,
Deep contrition, worship, and wonder,
Under his shadow for ever and aye,
Even in the light of eternity's day!

North Georgia Conference.

BY REV. J. F. SCURLOCK.

MR. EDITOR: On December 6 I left Dalton for Marietta, the seat of the North Georgia Conference. The railroad runs through hills and vales, around curves, and over ridges, with now and then a view of magnificent distances thrown in to give zest to the journey. We passed Kenesaw Mountain (so famous in the annals of the late war) in the night, so that I could not gratify a desire long felt to look upon it, and to contemplate it as a point where many noble Confederates fell in defense of their homes and country. I tarried for the night at the home assigned me in the town of Marietta, and, before breakfast the next morning, left for the city of Atlanta; Chattanooga and Atlanta, with the country lying between, occupy a large space in the history of the late Civil War.

The city of Atlanta is located among the hills, which, bald and bare, stretch themselves away on the right as we enter the city. The business part is compactly built out of brick and mortar. The Kimball House seems to be the largest and most commodious hotel for guests who may visit that point. The people are a live and energetic type of Georgia population. Things move, and they move in a hurry, and they move to completion. Whitehall and Peachtree streets seem to be more attractive than any others. The State road seems to run through the midst of it, which not unfrequently obstructs travel, and endangers the lives of those who throng the streets, and especially children. I took an external view of Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the second station in importance in the Conference. It is valued at $90,000. After purchasing a suit of clothes, and after having my throat examined by a specialist and a prescription filled, I took up my "carriages" and boarded a train for the town of Marietta.

By being absent the first day I lost the run of committees and business. These Georgia preachers know how to systemize and facilitate business. They have official envelopes for financial purposes, which are printed in blank, to be filled out with district, circuit, or station, name of pastor, and the cause for which moneys are collected. The pastors put the money into these envelopes, and then hand them to the treasurers of the different committees. This saves a great deal of writing. The statistical blanks printed by our Publishing House at Nashville are almost exclusively used. They are the best I have seen, and I would recommend to your Conference, if the members have not already done so, to fall into line with this and other Conferences. They are prepared for four years. As well as I could ascertain from the reading of the summing-up of the statistics, there has been considerable increase in membership and collections.

The personnel of the Conference impressed me very favorably. There are fewer old men than I expected to see. Dr. Boring, who has been one of the leading spirits for forty years, from infirmity, was granted a superannuated relation; Drs. Haygood, Potter, Richardson, Parks and Glenn, are still on the effective list. H. G. Smith, the historian of Methodism in Georgia, was there, and in his genial way sold books, and made character for himself in aiding in the transaction of the business of the Conference. The assistant editor of the Nashville Advocate was there, and made himself very efficient both in the Conference-room and in the pulpit. Dr. Young J. Allen, from China, delighted his auditors with his lectures on our missions there. The light he gave will not soon be forgotten. They drew the heathen nearer our hearts, and moved us to give more liberally for the dissemination of the gospel among them. The literary work he did in eighteen years was astonishing. Besides publishing a newspaper in Chinese, and writing a book with the title of, "China and Her Neighbors," founding the Anglo-Chinese College, and conducting it successfully on its grand mission of usefulness, he had translated ninety volumes for the Chinese government. By drawing maps of the cities in which our missionaries are operating, we could form some definite idea of their localities and success. The church does not sufficiently appreciate this noble Christian man and the heroic work he has done. He calls upon the church to aid in converting China. The veritable Sam Jones was there on Monday morning, and I had the pleasure of shaking him by the hand. The pictures I have seen of him are good representations of the features of his face. His keen, black eye, and wiry motion indicate the dynamic forces pent up in his great soul. I did not have the pleasure of hearing him preach. The deep affliction of his wife did not permit him to be present but the one time. Sixteen were admitted on trial, and from the representation given by the presiding elders and others, they will be of great usefulness to the church in coming years.

After a session of five days the Conference closed. Eight were transferred to other Conferences, among them your correspondent, whom the Bishop saw cause, in his own judgment, to transfer back to Louisiana. The hospitality of the people of Marietta was equal to any I have seen elsewhere. One and all solicitously bade their hosts and hostesses good-by; and the preachers, of the Land of Invincibles, rallied, and, impelled by the deepest sense of duty, went soon hastening away to their work of labor, conscious of the fact that they are as likely to fall this year as their seven companions committed to the silent shades of the grave during the last Conference year. Who can tell what a year may bring forth?

After our year's labor, and with health improved, I reluctantly give up North Georgia Conference for another, where, in some respects, the climate is better adapted to my condition. The life of a Methodist itinerant preacher is strangely checkered. He, being tossed much by the fates, can not tell what his future will be. Whilst this method is, perhaps, the best adapted to the spread of scriptural holiness, yet, with the rank and file, it is exceedingly inconvenient. Nothing but the grace of God supporting can conduct them safely through, and bring them to the gate of heaven. Traveling Methodist preachers are of that number whose names become immortal.

In Memoriam.

BY C. D. ANDREWS, D. D.

The Rev. John Lusk, late of the Mississippi Conference, was born in Pittsford Village, New York, July 11, 1818. He came to Mississippi in 1838, was converted to Christianity, became a member of the Methodist Church, and joined the Mississippi Conference in 1840. In 1853 he was married to Miss Eliza Hurst, by whom he had sons and daughters, several of whom survive to perpetuate his name and to cherish his memory.

He had a stroke of paralysis in October, 1885, while in charge of Dover circuit, in Yazoo county, and lingered, gradually growing worse, until he died, April 26, 1887. When first stricken, while yet his mind was clear, he seemed supremely happy at the thought of going soon to his reward. His tongue became paralyzed before he died, and, though he could not speak his triumphs, he pointed upward, expressive of his desire and hope of being soon in the better land.

Bro. Lusk was once a leader of the hosts of Israel in the Mississippi Conference. He was for some years presiding elder of the most important districts in the Conference. He was elected a member of the General Conference, which sat in Nashville in 1858. Some of his deliverances in that body made a profound impression. He was a man of earnest convictions and of well-defined conceptions of truth. His manner was earnest and emphatic, which, combined together, always gained for him attentive and interested audiences. He was a most striking and entertaining preacher. His method of presenting Scripture was altogether original, clearly indicating that he did his own thinking, and that he went to the bottom of a subject, delighting and impressing his hearers with the new and apposite thought enunciated.

He wrote and published several tracts on controverted subjects, particularly one in opposition to the doctrine of the final perseverance of the saints, and one against immersion as the exclusive mode of baptism. Both of these tracts were especially obnoxious to the holders of the respective dogmas, chiefly because he so scathingly exposed their fallacies, and so relentlessly pushed their reasoning to the reduction absurd. To all who love the truth for the truth's sake, his arguments are overwhelmingly convincing, despite their homely dress and severe method.

He was a great reader, and his familiarity with the leading periodicals and publications kept him well up with the thought of the age. He was quite an industrious man; came very near realizing Mr. Wesley's maxim: "Never be unemployed, never trifingly employed." He ceased from the traveling ministry, and became local for several years, during which time he devoted himself to farming with zeal and enterprise. He was a prominent member of the Grange in his neighborhood, and was considered as the best authority upon the subject of scientific and successful farming. His farm, originally of poor land, became quite productive under his judicious plan of fertilization. His character for strict integrity and great moral worth was maintained intact in his community. Even during his greatest devotion to business, and in his full tide of success as a planter, he never forgot the high characteristics of a Christian minister, nor neglected, as occasion served, to proclaim the tidings of salvation. He was truly Wesleyan in his conception of truth, believing that nothing short of entire consecration, or of a holy life, could satisfy the conscience, or be acceptable to the Master. After having tried a secular life for some years, he felt the old longing for exclusive work in the ministry so strong as to cause him to make application for readmission into the Mississippi Conference in 1875. He was readily received, and continued laboring for his Master, as his health would admit, until prevented by disease and death.

Bro. Lusk was a devoted friend of the church, and regarded the ministry as the grandest and most important mission ever committed to a mortal. He has ceased from his loved employ. He will be no more among us to receive his annual assignment to work in the vineyard; but we shall be together again, when the Master shall say: "Go call the laborers and give them their hire." One who loved him and his children desires that his obituary shall close thus, viz: "I do not say that you ought not to grieve for your father, for it is not a crime for us to mourn for our loved ones taken from us. I know too well what it is for the anguish-wrung heart to cry out:

And the sound of a voice that is still

Death of Rev. A. R. Winfield, D. D.

It is our painful duty to announce the death of this faithful servant of God and the church. At thirty-five minutes past six o'clock Monday evening, December 26, the weary wheels of this long and active life stood still. We are appalled as we record the fact. We do not know how we will do without him, how the church can spare him, how the great cause of God and morality will move on without this strong, brave man.

Dr. Winfield came home from the Mississippi Conference, where he had done much hard work—maybe more than his share. He came home weary, exhausted and sick, and any other man would have stopped to rest; but his active spirit spurred him on, and he was soon in his office, hard at work. By Thursday he was compelled to remain in bed, and his doctor pronounced him sick with pneumonia. This disease, severe enough of itself, soon took on other and dangerous complications, which no medical skill could arrest, and the brave sank rapidly to death.

We sat by his bedside and saw the light go out; as he would have said, saw the tabernacle taken down and saw the timbers falling around us. All it was done, and that great, brave, noble spirit had taken wing for the eternal world. Then, when, as he would say again, his faith swept the spires and domes of the city of God, and caught the song of the multitude as they sang, "Unto him that has loved us, and washed us in his own blood, and made us kings and priests unto God, his Father," then heard the loud bass from heaven's eternal thunder, "The Lord God omnipotent reigneth, hallelujah, amen," he was forever with the Lord.

We knew the Doctor was moving with the "pillar of cloud and fire," and we know it was light on his side; but on our side the shadow was deep even to darkness; still, everywhere we stood, that cloud has its golden edging. From the glorious sunlight from beyond, for the hope of an immortal reunion was very bright.—Arkansas Methodist.

MR. EDITOR: The following letter from Rev. A. J. Methvin, just received, has a thrill of power. It recites facts that voice a divine call. The benighted are appealing for the lamp of life. Out of the darkness children are crying for light. Having myself seen those sons of the forest, without the gospel, and almost entirely neglected, I am overwhelmed at the responsibility upon us and the opportunity that opens so auspiciously before us. Whatever may be our theories or hopes of Indian civilization, here are human beings without a knowledge of salvation—immortal souls perishing for the bread of life.

At the last session of the Indian Mission Conference four men were appointed to the blanket Indians of the far West, a field we have not hitherto entered. Our work among the "five civilized tribes" prospers, and is well on the way to self-support. The smaller, wild tribes must now have special attention. Bro. Methvin has explored the field, and brings back reports that ought to fill every man in our Israel with the spirit of Caleb and Joshua. He writes earnestly, but not extravagantly. Full of enthusiasm, he reasons according to knowledge. You are willing to walk among the wigwams, that souls may rule, worthy to be heard by the church. I give his letter without further note or comment.

P. S. When spring opens I shall be able to get large [illegible] them, rather than fail. I want them here, more of the boys and, if I can get others, I can walk. Do you know any men that will do for the work? I pray God for the right kind of men. I would not leave the impression that two men are all we could use in this field. We could use a half-dozen and more, but there is a demand for two that must be met now.

These Indians are anxious to hear the gospel preached, and they give close attention, although I have to preach sometimes through two interpreters. I have found here a goodly number of young Indians who have been to Carlisle and Haskell and Chilocco schools, who speak English, and some of them have very correct ideas of Christianity. This element I propose to get together and utilize where I can. I believe the Master is here, and we shall accomplish something this year. At present I can not get large congregations together. I go, therefore, going to their cabins, or wigwams, wherever I can find them, and holding services. I am troubled some with [illegible] to get an interpreter. If my name can be appropriated for use, I will do the best I can.

HYMN FOR THE NEW YEAR.

BY CHARLOTTE ELLIOTT.

I take my pilgrim staff anew,
Life's path, untrodden, to pursue;
Thy guiding eye, my Lord, I view;
My times are in thy hand.

Throughout the year, my Heavenly Friend,
On thy blest guidance I depend;
From its commencement to its end
My times are in thy hand.

Should comfort, health and peace be mine,
Should hours of gladness on me shine,
Then let me trace thy love divine:
My times are in thy hand.

But should'st thou visit me again
With languor, sorrow, sickness, pain,
Still let this thought my hope sustain,
My times are in thy hand.

Thy smile alone makes moments bright,
That smile turns darkness into light;
This thought will soothe grief's saddest night,
My times are in thy hand.

Should those this year be called away
Who lent to life its brightest ray,
Teach me in that dark hour to say,
My times are in thy hand.

A few more days, a few more years—
O, then a bright reverse appears,
Than I shall no more say with tears,
My times are in thy hand.

That hand my steps will gently guide,
To the dark brink of Jordan's tide,
Then bear me to the heavenward side,
My times are in thy hand.

The Religious Newspaper and the Pastor.

FIVE WAYS IN WHICH IT AIDS HIM.

BY REV. O. C. S. WALLACE.

1. It helps to expel from the homes of his parishioners worthless and injurious literature. Most people will read. There is literature enough, such as it is. But that which most obtrudes itself upon the public is the seed of curses. It is destructive of right thoughts in the young, and is injurious to the old. It prepares no one to live, and certainly softens no dying pillow. The only sure way to avoid injury from this source is by expulsion of the cause. The devils must be driven out, and the house swept and garnished. But not left empty. If it is, worse devils will return and abide. The renovated home must be tenanted with cleanly spirits. Reading matter of the proper kind must be at hand. Books will do much, but not all. The young, especially, are interested in the periodical, the visits of which may be pleasantly anticipated from day to day, and the freshness and newsiness of which are constant charms.

2. The religious newspaper in the home aids in solving the Sabbath problem. Sabbath desecration on the part of the young often begins with reading secular papers and books. The temptations to this, even in some Christian homes, are many and great. The table is covered with daily papers and secular magazines, while religious periodicals are conspicuously absent. Children can not be expected to read the Bible all day, nor attend church all day, nor meditate seriously from morning until night on religious subjects. How shall they dispose of their time? They will read. What shall they read? At this point the wisdom or the foolishness of the parent appears. The wise parent has reading at hand which is interesting, healthful and appropriate to the Sabbath; the foolish parent makes no such provision, and then deplores that his children read and do that which is not right on the Sabbath day.

3. The religious denominational newspaper attaches the people more closely to their own church. Such attachment is not bigotry nor narrowness; it is the proper love and loyalty of one for his own. A man is not a bigot because he loves his own cottage more than his neighbor's. Religious free-love is very prettily and unctuously advocated by certain persons who mistake honeyed sentiment for sterling, rugged piety; but, when looked at fairly, it is seen to be neither pretty nor worthy. The gardens will be kept most carefully if each man takes pride in his own garden, and works there diligently and loyally. He who reads every week his denominational paper finds occasion more and more to love and labor for the denomination to which he belongs. He feels no longer that he is a member of a single church, isolated from all the rest, but that he is a member of the denomination—of the church which branches east, west, south and north, and that he has possessions in this great church in all parts of the world. Therefore, when he changes his residence, he does not change his denominational fealty.

4. The religious newspaper strengthens the people in the fundamental doctrines of the Scriptures. A sermon is a temporary matter. Whatever its pungency, there is danger that its lessons will not be imprinted upon the human heart in characters sufficiently deep to be enduring. There is need of the emphasis which comes from reading and quiet thinking at home. The sermon awakens interest in the subject presented; the newspaper article captures the awakened mind, and carries it forward to safe and solid conclusions. The newspaper can preach doctrinal sermons, and can be a controversialist, every week in the year; the pulpit can not. Sermons need the emphasizing and complemental assistance of the newspaper article.

5. The religious newspaper makes the pastor's work more effective by increasing the intelligence of his hearers; by making them acquainted with the philanthropic and missionary enterprises of the day, and by giving them information respecting churches near and far. Sympathy is excited by knowledge. People give more generously when they give understandingly. When the members of a congregation are well informed regarding the character and needs of the great philanthropies, the pastor is already greatly aided in a part of his work which is often difficult, and, in some degree, painful. They know for themselves what is and what is not worthy, and, instead of being vast weights which his enthusiasm must lift, they aid him by their own enthusiasm. They do not question and groan and delay, but give according to their ability.—Watchman.

Reminiscences of My Early Itinerant Life.

My second charge in the year 1840 was Warren circuit, embracing both North and South Warren. This circuit embraced the territory that was the cradle of Methodism in Mississippi, and had in its membership some of the first families of the church—the Lums and Gibsons, and others; and in its soil reposes the dust of Tobias Gibson, the first pioneer preacher of the great Southwest. These worthy descendents of this sainted man of God, in Methodist lineage, were the right arm of the circuit preacher, and sustained him in his great work by sympathy and prayer and patronage. To Gadi Gibson especially would he acknowledge his indebtedness for his co-operation in attending his appointments, and giving the aid of his powerful prayers and wonderful power of song. His voice could be heard afar off, and rose in its climatic compass above the din of the shouts and praises of God's people on their great occasions of camp and protracted meetings. Oh, how he was gifted and divinely endowed with extraordinary influence at great revival meetings!

In his rounds on the circuit the preacher passed through the city of Vicksburg, where there was as spiritual and progressive a church as was to be found in city or circuit anywhere. It was a great privilege for the young itinerant to meet in the social meetings with the beloved Christian friends, who greatly cheered him in his work by their Christian example and experience and recitation of the victories achieved through grace divine. Featherstun, Bland, Chapman, and others, and many godly women, gave inspiration to the preacher for his work. It was in this city that the prince of hospitality and kindness, Judge Lane, lived, whose home was the home of the itinerant—a regular Methodist hotel when the first Conference held in Vicksburg were entertained as a body. The writer felt in him he had a true friend and kind, with whom he was free and easy, relieved of all embarrassment. In this family lived Rev. C. K. Marshall, the orator of the Mississippi Conference, whose genius and eloquence have attracted the attention of the old as well as the new world. The timid young minister did not feel as free and easy in his society, as he, desirous of eliminating the external and social imperfections as well as developing the higher qualifications of ministerial character, embarrassed by his criticisms, one who was too easily overcome by adverse criticism meant for his good and usefulness. This extraordinary man affords a very striking illustration of a truth demonstrated in the history of ministers. Had he consecrated his great powers wholly to ministerial work without diversion to secular affairs, there could scarcely be a limit assigned to his achievements in ministerial results. His physical power of endurance, as well as mental power, qualify him for extraordinary work; as displayed in epidemics in the city of his home, where he overrode all prejudices arising from the complications of secular affairs, doing more work and more acceptable service in the sick chamber and pulpit than any other man could perform.

On this circuit also lived the Magruders, brothers-in-law of Dr. Drake. One appointment was made in their neighborhood, where I met them in class after preaching, as was the custom of the preachers in those days, greatly to the comfort and joy of preacher and his flock. These two brothers attained eminence in their profession as physicians and teacher; the latter still living and working in his chosen field of training and developing the intellect, in which he has acquired fame and usefulness. They were a blessing to me by their countenance and friendship. It was on this circuit that God blessed me with my first revival. It was a new appointment that I always sought to make in a destitute neighborhood—Ball Ground, so called. The power of God was wonderfully displayed in the powerful conviction and conversion of sinners, very different from the silent and undemonstrative style of modern evangelism. I did not even consider myself the instrument in this work of grace. It was all of God.

The habit was adopted on this charge of horseback reading and rising at four o'clock in the morning; and I can say, from the experience of this year, that no young minister who this economizes his time will ever have occasion to complain of the want of time in accomplishing the course of study assigned him. He will do it so easily that it will astonish him when No. 1 is the standard of his acquirements, without any extraordinary mental endowments. It was this year that a most profound gratification was felt in the analyses of Watson's "Institutes," the great exposition of profound theological truths, demonstrated to the mind with the same mental satisfaction that is felt by the problems of Euclid and Legendre. In fact, Watson, in the discussion of theological theories, is the Euclid or Legendre of theology. There can be no resistance of his conclusions. It is a mental necessity to yield conviction to his demonstrations. Will here close this paper.

H. M. HOOTH.

A Hint.

DEAR GIRLS: The Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle is just the thing for us who can not afford to go to college. Chautauqua literature is cheap, and, at the same time, first-class in every particular. The Chautauqua initiation fee and the seven books of the "White-Seal Course," for 1887 and 1888, cost only seven dollars. Those who prefer an ornamental mind to an embellished body can save that amount by wearing old dresses, hats and gloves this winter. It is a good plan for five girls to contribute $2 40 apiece, and, in addition to the "White Seal," take the "Garnet Seal Series," which consists of four books that cost three dollars. Take turns in reading the books, and meet once or twice in a while, and report progress. But don't have anything to do with a local circle where there are grown-up girls and boys, for that class will soon be converted into a courting club; and, with the solidity and experience expected of maidens almost in the middle of their teens, we should not favor such frivolity. If you have acquaintances whose literary appetite is satisfied with frothy "Seaside" and "Leisure Hour Library" books, you needn't invite them to join your circle, for they'll not like the studies. Too sensible for 'em. If none of your friends belong to the Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle, pick up a correspondence with some girls who are members. Write regularly, and exchange ideas about the various volumes. Initiate immediately, as you will be three months behind; but by a little extra exertion you can catch up in as many weeks. Then push forward, yearning for a seal-spotted diploma.

It is impossible to tell precisely how much time it will take for the required reading; but an ordinary girl, with a moderate share of leisure, can keep up with the course, peruse the ADVOCATE, write two letters a week, read the Bible through quarterly, and memorize the Psalms and Proverbs during the four years.

We may not grow in grace as fast or let our lights shine with as much brilliancy as our older sisters and cousins—who are preparing for a big leap year "pay-supper," to re-shingle the parsonage, and who are up till midnight embroidering pillow-shams and pin-cushions to be raffled off to buy a new Bible and communion service for the church—but we can do our best in our lower sphere, and endeavor to become such true, earnest, womanly women that it will not be necessary for one of us to have to hunt a husband.

Yours, of Class '91,

ELLIE R. RABY.

A Distressing Letter.

The following letter from Bro. Dieffenwierth, one of our superannuates, is distressing in the extreme. Our brother has the sympathies and prayers of the whole church.

"MR. EDITOR: Weep and mourn with me, for the waves and billows have rolled over me. We have this afternoon buried my son, Paul Howard. He came to his end by an accidental discharge of a gun, which killed him instantly. He and his brother Philip went early yesterday morning to an oyster bar for some oysters, taking a gun with them to kill some game, if they found any. On returning with the oysters, Paul left the wagon and remained behind. Before Philip reached home he heard the report of a gun in the rear; on his arrival at home he and his sister heard another report. On the road on which they went and returned was a grove and vacant house. Some persons, passing, saw on the porch a dead person, which proved to be my own dear son, Paul. By the first report which his brother heard, he had killed a dove. During a shower he must have entered the portico to load the empty barrel; and, while doing so, it seems that the butt of the gun slipped over the edge of the portico, where the prints of both hammers are plainly visible. His clothes were powder-burnt, the bosom of his shirt and the skin of his breast were torn by the shot, and the body of the load went into his head between the jawbones. From his position it seems that he hardly moved after he had fallen. I could not go and see him.

"The children intended to have a joyous Christmas. Jimmie and his family were to be with us on to-morrow. Our joy is turned into mourning. He leaves the legacy of a good name. A large concourse of friends and brethren manifested their sympathies and testified to his character in listening in mournful and solemn attention while the pastors of the Presbyterian and Baptist Churches addressed them. Our newly arrived pastor of this circuit read our funeral service. "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches." Mine is a mournfully cheerful submission. I can not presume to entertain a thought of inveighing against the fiat, no matter how bitter the cup I am drinking. One of the crutches of my old age has been taken away.

"'Who fed me last will lead me still;
Be calm and sink into his will.'

"This comes from my old, sorrowing heart.

CEDAR WATER HARROW, Dec. 26, 1887.

A Sad Letter.

MR. EDITOR: Death has again invaded the family circle, and borne from our fond embraces the joy and light of the household. Our precious Nettie, the youngest of seven children, and the pet of the family, died, of typhoid fever, on Sunday night, December 11. We are greatly troubled and grieved, but, thank God, not in despair. Those qualities that made our Nettie seem so lovely to us are not dissipated and lost, but are preserved in the spirit world in the person of our departed loved one. We shall see her again at no distant day, and rejoice with her in the power and glory of the gospel of Christ. Our dear Nettie seemed so necessary to our comfort and happiness that it is hard to be satisfied without her presence and affectionate caresses. Then there are so many things about the house that bring to remembrance our sad loss. Her deft fingers had been employed in so many ways in adorning and embellishing the house that we can not open our eyes without being reminded of our irreparable loss. But, perhaps, dear reader, I do wrong to obtrude my private grief upon the attention of strangers.

There are, however, among the readers of the ADVOCATE many who knew and loved her, and their eyes will be dimmed with tears when they read these lines penned by her sad, disconsolate father.

The Pope's Jubilee.

We give our readers the Pope's circular letter on the occasion of his sacerdotal jubilee, that they may learn something of the pretensions of this "man of Rome:"

LEO XIII., POPE,

TO ALL THE FAITHFUL WHO SHALL READ THESE PRESENT LETTERS,

HEALTH AND APOSTOLIC BENEDICTION.

The first day of the new year approaches, when, with the help of God, We shall celebrate Our Sacerdotal Jubilee, all the nations of the world and all classes of society, with one heart and one mind, rejoice exceedingly, and amid the many trials of the times in which, by the Will of God, We occupy the august See of St. Peter, they, in a most admirable manner, solemnly testify to Us their faith, love, veneration, and good wishes. For this we give glory to God, Who consoles Us in Our trials, and We beseech Him to bless this Christian people and to grant it long-desired peace and concord.

Touched by these sincere displays of devotion and solid piety, and yielding to the requests made by us, that Our children might derive from their Father's feast that which might better assure their eternal welfare, We have decided to open the treasures of the Church of which God has given Us the dispensation. Wherefore, relying on the mercy of God Almighty and on the authority of the holy Apostles Peter and Paul, We grant in the Lord a Plenary Indulgence and remission of all sins to all and each of the faithful of either sex who shall come on the pilgrimage to Rome, on the occasion of Our Sacerdotal Jubilee, in order to bear public and manifest witness to the piety and devotion of their own people, and to render honor and proper obedience to that supreme authority with which God has clothed Us.

In like manner to all Christians of either sex who follow and accompany in mind and heart such pilgrimages to Rome, and also to those who in any way whatever promote the success of such pious journeys, if they make a novena, reciting daily the third part of the Holy Rosary, before the day of Our Sacerdotal Jubilee, that is, before the first day of next January, and if they repeat the same novena during the time fixed for the audiences of these pious pilgrimages, and, truly contrite, and having confessed and received Holy Communion, they visit their parish church, or some other church of public oratory, and there offer their pious prayers to God for the concord of Christian princes, for the extirpation of heresies, for the conversion of sinners, and the exaltation of their Holy Mother Church, We grant in the Lord a Plenary Indulgence and remission of all sins on the day of Our Sacerdotal Jubilee as well as on the feast day that shall follow immediately the novena repeated at the choice of each one at the time above fixed. Moreover, to all and each of those who with contrite heart make such novenas, We remit for each day of the novenas, in the usual form prescribed by the Church, three hundred days of penance that they may in any way have incurred, or may be due from them. All and each of these Indulgences, remission of sins, and dispensations from penances, We grant so that they may be applicable to the souls in Purgatory, and We desire that they be granted only for this year. Lastly, we desire, all things to the contrary notwithstanding, that transcriptions of copies even printed, of these present Letters, signed by a Notary Public and sealed by some constituted ecclesiastical dignity, shall be accepted, as if these Letters themselves were shown or exhibited.

Given at Rome, near St Peter's, under the Seal of the Fisherman, this first day of October, 1887, in the tenth year of Our Pontificate.

LEO XIII.,

M. CARD. LEDOCHOWSKI.

Now, if the reader will turn to II Thessalonians ii, he will find this "man of Rome" outlined in all his hideous character. If the assumption of the authority to forgive sin does not reveal the "man of sin," and if this "circular letter" does not show the Pope "sitting in the temple of God" and claiming God's prerogative, then what does it show? The old thirst for Protestant blood shows itself in the phrase, "extirpation of heresies." All that is needed to bring back the horrors of the Inquisition is simply a little stronger hand. We hope every reader of the ADVOCATE will carefully read this circular letter, and thus learn the baseless pretensions of a church that seeks by every jesuitical scheme and device to lay its withering hand upon every part of the ecclesiastical and civil and political machinery of this and of every other land.

Atheism is the folly of the metaphysician, not the folly of human nature.—Bancroft.

Obituaries.

Obituaries of less than thirty-five lines, of six words each, will be published free of charge. For all over thirty-five lines, five cents for each additional line will be charged, and the money must invariably accompany the manuscript. When parties desire extra copies of the ADVOCATE containing the obituaries of their friends, they must send with the order the sum of five cents for each extra copy ordered.

ALFORD—MRS. MARY S. ALFORD was born in Tennessee, January 29, 1836, and died September 1, 1887, at home near Johnston Station, Pike county, Miss. Her maiden name was Kirk. In 1860 she was married to Rev. Daniel M. Wadsworth, of the Mississippi Conference, who died shortly after their marriage. In 1864 she was married to Seaborn J. Alford, who died three years ago. I knew Sister Alford for four years—stood by the bedside of her dying husband, and laid him away when dead. I have known her in hours of deepest grief, and in the sunshine of human life. I have known her children well—some of them have been my pupils. My estimate of her may be thus epitomized: She was a devoted wife, a careful, painstaking mother, a kind neighbor, and a consistent Christian, who both lived and enjoyed her religion. The reciprocal devotion of her husband, the esteem in which her neighbors held her, and the character of the children she has reared, bear testimony to this estimate. That mother is sadly missed—those orphans are very lonely. May the God of the orphan protect and comfort!

H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN.

HENDERSON—DR. T. J. HENDERSON was born in Courtland, Laurence county, Ala., March 25, 1820, and died in Woodville, Miss., November 26, 1887. He received his literary education at LaGrange College, Ala., and was graduated in his profession from the Medical College, of Louisville, Ky. He was reared by pious parents, joined the church in early life, and was converted during a protracted meeting he attended in Noxubee county. He removed to Woodville in 1852, where he labored as a physician for thirty-five years.

As a man, he was true and honest; as a citizen, loyal; as a husband, faithful, kind and affectionate; as a physician, eminently successful; as a friend and counselor, prudent, though sincere; as a Christian, conscientious, consistent and exemplary in all the walks of life. He loved God and his neighbor. He loved the church of God, and attended upon all her ordinances and institutions. He held a strong place in the affections of his fellow-citizens as was well attested by the large concourse at the funeral, and the closing of all the stores in the town from three to five o'clock, on the day he was buried. At the cemetery in Woodville, midst the shedding of tears, the honors of Odd Fellowship, and Christian ceremonies, we laid his body away to await a beautiful and triumphant resurrection.

H. F. JONES.

PEACOCK—On the evening of November 27, while attending the memorial services of our (North Mississippi) Conference I received a telegram requesting me to attend the funeral services of Mrs. A. O. Peacock at the family burying-place near her home, in Sunflower county, Miss. On my arrival there the next day I found the once happy home shaded by inconsolable sorrow. May God's love sustain the husband and children in this great trial!

Sister Peacock was one of God's chosen vessels. From the toils and cares of life her loved ones always sought and found sympathy in her responsive bosom. She was a Christian of the true type, bearing others' burdens as well as her own. All God's ministering servants, whose privilege it has been to travel the Falsonia circuit, know with what untiring, unstinted kindness this sweet-spirited woman sought to make them happy. Sister Peacock did not talk of her prospects while sick; but the eloquence of such a life as hers was tells plainly where she may be found.

The Saloon in Politics.

From the Hon. William Windom, ex-Secretary of United States Treasury.

In my judgment there is no other evil in our politics comparable with the liquor power. It is to-day a menace to the republic, little less grave than was slavery thirty years ago. It is the deadly foe to all that is sacred in free institutions. It destroys the home and desecrates the ballot. It is the chief cause and instrument of political corruption. Its shameless boast of controlling elections and Legislatures, by the use of money, is without a parallel in criminal effrontery. It breeds ignorance and crime for pay. It saps the foundations of public confidence, and destroys respect for law, by polluting the sources of political power. It is the arch enemy of intelligence, purity, morality and social order. It is the chief cause and promoter of poverty, want and misery, with the discontent, disorder and crime which result. It costs the country in taxation, waste of money, property and productive power as much to support our two hundred thousand saloons as it did to support the Union Army. Their fatal weapons are as destructive of American life as were the shot and shell of both armies during the Rebellion. They are the nursery, the council chambers and the inspiration of disorder, lawlessness and anarchy.

To maintain the right to get money, by the wholesale destruction of life and property, they corrupt the ballot, bribe Legislatures and tamper with justice. This is a faint portrait of the power which has entered our politics, raised the black flag, and proclaimed that all who will not swear political allegiance to it shall politically perish.

In the very first place, is it presumable that such a grossly sensual agency will find any affinities in things noble and of good report? As we find the examples before our eyes everywhere and at all times, the appeals of the whisky influence are directed to the worst parts of our constituency.

The bitterly malign power of the saloon has made this class what it is, and it is the pleasure and interest of the "saloon" to keep it at its degraded estate. Bribery is at all times a vile and destructive agency, and utterly intolerable. But in some of its aspects it may be only comparatively detestable. You may bribe a man with gold, or honors, or office, and we pass this form of crime with more or less reprobation. But to influence the voter by holding to his lips the cup of drunkenness is beyond comparison the lowest of all forms of bribery.

Now take into account the power of this seduction when the appetite for strong drink has been established, and we will find that practically it amounts to an absolute ownership of the voter's suffrage. We have no doubt overlooked the wicked power of alcohol as a factor in almost every popular election held in the country. No doubt thousands and tens of thousands of votes are moved and placed here and there just as the whisky seller wills at every important election in the land. What chance is there in such cases for the moral or political reformer to be heard? What attention will the poor degraded inebriate give to your arguments in favor of great principles underlying our peace and prosperity as a people, when the demon of strong drink intervenes?

The saloon subsidizing any party that will accept its alliance, brings into the fray a fearful power. This has been seen in many of our communities, and in some of our States an oath is exacted of every representative elect to the Legislature, that his election has not been secured by either bribery or treating. The discrimination need not have been made, as the two things are about the same.

How can this age, with all its lights and amazing responsibilities, longer debate and wrangle over so obvious a fact that the saloon is one of the most hurtful and abominable of all the degrading influences ravaging society, and that this influence must be extinguished. It is bad enough in all conscience to stand by and witness the wrecks of honor, talent and domestic happiness that it is strewing all over our land; but when we witness the fact that this base power is invading the precincts of the elective franchise, that it is aspiring to make and unmake laws and set up and pull down the men who are to enforce the laws, it behooves every one of us pretending to a love of his race or his country to see to it that the menace of this shocking evil shall be tolerated no longer.

From H. W. Blair, United States Senator from New Hampshire.

The saloon is a place where the people administer alcoholic poison to themselves, and in most of the States of the Union it is done by authority of law; but whether done by its sanction or in defiance of law, the work is the same. The liquor seller and his victim meet harmoniously upon the floor of the saloon and at its bar consummate a business transaction which is suicide on the part of one and murder by the other. But for the saloon, the greatest evils of the liquor traffic would disappear from the land; and if this omnipresent plague spot were wiped out by concurring State and national law, it would destroy the capital and profits of the most lucrative as well as the most infamous pursuit known among men.

The great minds which manage the trade comprehend this fact and, hence, everywhere they convert the saloon, which is frequently owned by heavy, but concealed dealers, into a political institution, and to-day the vast net-work of dens, where appetite and avarice administer to these mutual bad tendencies, is wrapped around the political parties of the United States like a shirt of Nessus woven out of red-hot wire. Until the power of the saloon is broken the law will uphold the traffic in strong drink, and until the law is changed, and the saloon, instead of being licensed or tolerated by the non-enforcement of law, is thereby prohibited, those clearing houses of sin and despair will continue to be the masters of our political fate so far as the interest of the trade can be affected by legislation or the action, in any form, of the political power. It is only by the creation of a strong and indignant public opinion against this domination of the liquor trade over the interests of the American people, that the destruction of the saloon can be accomplished. Public opinion, when intelligent will be right; and when right, will cure these cancers in the body politic, no matter if it does hurt.

Some of them will be healed by the poultices of moral suasion; some of them will be cut out by the sharp knife of the law. But there will be no such public opinion until the American people are better informed in regard to the nature and extent of the evils of alcoholism and of the remedies which can remove them. The work is as yet hardly begun. The crisis has come, however, and the issue can no longer be evaded. Shall the saloon use the terms synonymous with the trade in alcoholic beverages—shall the saloon be licensed and fostered or shall it be prohibited and destroyed? It is a leading political question. In the nature of things it must remain so until it is settled. Every person is on the one or the other side. There is no longer any fence to sit on. The fence has been broken down by the great numbers who clambered upon it, and it is now a fight eye to eye, foot to foot, hand to hand—and to the death.

Preceding the presidential election of 1884, there were held in New York City one thousand two political conventions—congressional, assembly, aldermanic, and primary, etc. In these political meetings the country is governed. Two hundred and eighty-three of them were held apart from saloons, ninety-three next door to saloons, and six hundred thirty-three in saloons.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is a peculiar medicine. It is carefully prepared from Sarsaparilla, Dandelion, Mandrake, Dock, Pipsissewa, Juniper Berries, and other well-known and valuable vegetable remedies, by a peculiar combination, proportion and, process, giving to Hood's Sarsaparilla curative power not possessed by other medicines. It effects remarkable cures where other preparations fail.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is the best blood purifier before the public. It eradicates every impurity, and cures Scrofula, Salt Rheum, Boils, Pimples, all Humors, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Sick Headache, Indigestion, General Debility, Catarrh, Rheumatism, Kidney and Liver Complaints, overcomes that tired feeling, creates an appetite, and builds up the system.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Has met peculiar and unparalleled success at home. Such has become its popularity in Lowell, Mass., where it is made, that while neighborhoods are taking it at the same time, Lowell druggists sell more of Hood's Sarsaparilla than of all other sarsaparillas or blood purifiers. Sold by druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

That Nothing Be Lost.

Forasmuch as others have taken in hand to set forth in order the men and doings of the North Mississippi and Mississippi Conferences, it seemeth good to me, having had perfect understanding of matters hitherto omitted, to write also; and this not for vainglory, but for the work's sake. Therefore, be it known, that the "colporteur" was present and on duty at both of the fore-named Conferences, and that he did, with fidelity to his trust, disperse good books, pamphlets and tracts, in value as follows: North Mississippi Conference, $198 45; Mississippi Conference, $154 50.

The brotherly greetings, pleasant associations and religious communions enjoyed at Winona and Jackson will never be forgotten by this scribe. I went to the Mississippi Conference almost an entire stranger, but the brethren at once so "took me in"—into their hands, homes and hearts—that I soon felt that we were all akin—fellow-citizens in the household of God, and workers together in one grand cause. May our newly formed acquaintance be renewed often on earth and be consummated by reunion in the glorified state! Reunion with the brethren of my own Conference has always been pleasant and edifying, but never more delightful and reassuring than during our last assembly. May we have many more pleasant meetings on earth and all live together in heaven!

G. W. BACHMAN.

A Correction.

Being called upon for my report unexpectedly, I read it correctly, but made a mistake in giving the sum total of the financial report. I read, $2,708 32. It should have been $5,828 32. This gives $2,298 32 above the assessments—above amount due pastor in charge and presiding elder and missions, etc.

Yours truly,

H. R. SINGLETON.

Cloisters.

BY "JEAN PAUL."

1. Cloisters, monasteries and nunneries constitute an important element in the papal church. They originated in the mistaken conception that exemption from contact with the world, "wordly lusts" would thereby be exterminated.

2. True, the Christian requires occasional solitude—time for taking an invoice of our spiritual make-up: Our Master himself required it. Entire nights he spent solitarily in the quiet recesses of the mountain. But neither the Master nor his disciples require of us a life of hermitage or of seclusion in the dark cells of a cloister.

3. Our Creator certainly knows best the wants of his handiwork, and he declares: "It is not good that man should be alone." But in papal cloisters celibacy is a sine qua non.

4. In some isolated cases cloisters may have been the seats of erudition and the fine arts, but more frequently they have been hot-houses of corruption and debauchery. The best Bavarian beer is brewed in monasteries.

5. The multiplication of cloisters impoverishes society. All who enter as monks and nuns take upon themselves the vow of poverty. Their private fortune, great or small, is at once deeded to the cloister. Often the parents of monks and nuns bequeath large sums of money to the various cloisters.

6. Strange that the occupants of cloisters should be required to wear even now the uncouth and uncomfortable habiliments in vogue during the mediæval ages, and be required to submit to the degrading avocation of professional beggarship!—Texas Christian Advocate.

Don't Give up the Ship.

You have been told that consumption is incurable; that when the lungs are attacked by this terrible malady, the sufferer is past all help; and the end is a mere question of time. You have noted with alarm the unmistakable symptoms of the disease; you have tried all manner of so-called cures in vain, and you are now despondent and preparing for the worst. But don't give up the ship, while Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery remains untried. It is not a cure-all, nor will it perform miracles, but it has cured thousands of cases of consumption, in its earlier stages, where all other means had failed. Try it, and obtain a new lease of life.

What men call accident is the doing of God's providence.—Bailey.

ARTIFICIAL EYES

The Artificial Eye is not only a beautifier, but it serves other excellent purposes.

It enables the eyelids to move as freely as ever.

It restores the fullness of the tear passages.

It prevents the eyelashes from turning inwards, causing inflammation.

It prevents distortion of features, as happens always in case of a young person who has the misfortune to lose an eye—and sometimes in the case of older persons.

Dr. W. Bonser, our Optician, has made a specialty of selling this and fitting them.

Briefs.

Local preachers, 132; members, 80,727—total, 81,159. This gives an increase of 3,619 for the year. Infants baptized, 1,716—increase, 23; adults baptized, 3,397—decrease, 1,500; number of Sunday-schools, 726½; teachers, 5,304; scholars, 47,705. Raised for Conference claimants, $10,859 69; collected for missions—foreign, $15,997 15; domestic, $6,765 65; Woman's Society, $5,202 55; Self-denial Fund, $1,341 40—total, $29,306 75. The number of churches is 714½—valued at $899,844. The parsonages number 116, and are valued at $138,599.

In entering upon the work of the new year, it will be more profitable, perhaps, for us, as ministers of Christ, not to make a new set of resolutions, nor write out a new table of rules for our guidance, but simply turn to our Disciplines and read and ponder and pray over the vows that are already upon us. Those "ordination vows," brother, how long since you have read them? We need not burden ourselves with extra promises and resolutions, for those vows contain all that we can live up to: but if we live up to them, our ministry will be a success all through this year of grace.

Dear, earnest worker for the cause of the Lord, don't become discouraged because you have not reached the goal of your hopes in this matter. You are the Lord's servant, and he is using you according to his deep wisdom; therefore, toil on. Many have accomplished God's purpose in their lives who have not realized their own hopes. Look at Moses. He did not reach the great hope of his long life by entering the promised land; but he did accomplish the purpose for which God brought him into the world. Therefore, be of good courage and work on, and God will round out your life to a completeness approved by his infinite wisdom.

In attendance upon our Conferences our associations with some of the young brethren were very delightful, and made more so by the fact that several of them told us that we had been specially helpful to them during the past year. The apostle uses the phrase, "Helpers together." We are all engaged in the same great and sublime work; and in helping one another we are at the same time helping on the great cause, and we feel that if we could infuse the hearts of our young preachers with a divine enthusiasm for their mission, we would do our greatest work. The Psalmist said: "The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up." Paul said: "For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds." For a new year's meditation we recall to the mind of our young preachers Paul's statement of his success as a minister: "Now thanks be unto God which always causeth us to triumph in Christ, and maketh manifest the savour of his knowledge by us in every place." "Always." "In every place." Paul had experience of success. So may it be during the year 1888 with all the Advocate's young preachers.

During the past year, the American Humane Society has given aid to 31,000 children and procured relief in 109,000 cases of cruelty to animals.

Lest Coming Suddenly.

It was a very solemn injunction of the Master, when he said: "Watch ye therefore: for ye know not when the master of the house cometh, at even, or at midnight, or at cock-crowing, or in the morning: lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping. And what I say unto you, I say unto all, Watch." The certainty of the end of probation is one of the most solemn facts that presses its weight upon the human heart. The uncertainty of the time of the end heightens that solemnity to an extreme degree. It is true that "we know not what a day may bring forth," and yet we go on our way as if we were sure of its issues. The poet has uttered, in one line, the habit of our thinking on this awful subject:

"All men think all men mortal but themselves."

Individual mortality is preached to us nearly every hour of every day, and yet we drive ahead as if, in our case at least, the rule would have an exception. The thing intended to put us on our guard, by its very frequency, throws us off our guard. That which should make us watchful is that which renders us careless. The tolling bell, the crape on the door, the funeral cortège—all fail to recall us to an earnest preparation for the end which we know is fast approaching. It shows the firm grasp with which this world holds us, and it is also an alarming indication that temporal vanities engross our souls more than eternal realities. Awake to earth and its baubles, we are asleep to eternity and its awards! Alas! for us, we are only momentarily aroused by the knell of some departed friend.

During the last few weeks, the church has been shocked by the sudden death of three of her prominent ministers—Burkhead, of North Carolina, being called "suddenly" while in attendance upon his Conference at its last session; Briggs, of Alabama, being called "suddenly" a few hours after he had returned home from Conference; Winfield, of Little Rock, being called "suddenly" after two days' illness from pneumonia. These men were all apparently in good health, and yet the sudden summons came: and they are gone. This is a case where the words of the poet are too true:

Hardly had the first passed away before another presses after him, and then another quickly follows. It is a solemn commentary to the church and ministry upon the Savior's injunction to "watch."

Death cares not for stations. With pitiless heart and ruthless hand he scatters his missiles of destruction. The family is stricken, the church mourns, earth is made poorer, but death cares not. These ministers in their prime, when the church, seemingly, could not dispense with their work, have laid down their trusty swords and reported to the Great Captain:

"Our battle-sample drops a tear,
While cross and rebellion congratulate
The dead as the vanquished foe;
Well, death is triumphant."

The lesson is one of deep solemnity to us all: and the injunction of the Master rings in upon the soul anew: "Be ye, therefore, ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh."

God gave us the best gift of his love, his well-beloved Son. Christ gave us the best gift of his love, his spotless life. The Holy Spirit gives us the best gift of his love, his sanctifying presence. And, now, shall we give in return anything less than the best we have? Alas! for our ingratitude. "Hear, oh, heavens, give ear, oh, earth: I have nourished and brought up children, and they have rebelled against me." For what is ingratitude but rebellion?

Moses as a Servant.

We almost invariably refer to Moses as the great legislator: but Paul calls us to a study of him as a servant. The one mark of distinction which he bestows upon him is of his fidelity. Moses was trustworthy as a servant. This fact is in illustration:

1. That Moses was a man of uncommonly strong common sense. Men destitute of this quality are looking to be either parasites or slaves or tyrants. True service is the only free, as well as the only noble, condition of life. Jesus said, "Let him that would be greatest become the servant of all." Somewhere man's power to control must end. At that point he must either be a servant or a slave. If he recognizes this fact only when he can do nothing else, he is necessarily a slave; hence he alone is a wise man who recognizes the relation of service as both normal and honorable to man. He is eminently a fool who interprets, "All men were born free," as meaning that there is no obligation born with us. Dogs are born as free as men; yet that is no proof that men may be no more responsible than dogs, or that a dog may do what men may.

2. That Moses had a character of his own, and not that of circumstances. Chameleons are dependent upon surrounding objects for their color: so, like chameleons, it is only the characterless who look to position or circumstances to make their lives memorable.

3. That Moses was above fear on the one hand, or favor on the other—that is, he was incorruptible. The throne of Egypt was too worthless to bribe him. The threats of the tyrant was powerless to awe him. The word "policy" was not in his vocabulary. In vain we search history to find a man who threw away so much to undertake a work so thankless. No worldly historian, holding to the maxims of the so-called wise of this world, can write the history of Moses without concluding that he was the greatest fool that the ages ever produced. Yet we have already seen that he was the wisest of all. And that he was above fear or cupidity shows that he was the most magnanimous.

Let us study this word "trustworthy." It means that if there were no other sort of men alive, there would be no use of locks on our doors. It means that the world would be four times richer than it is, since we have to use three dollars' worth of precautions now to save one dollar. It means that every jail and penitentiary would be emptied. It means that every detective would have to seek an honest employment. It means that ten thousand aching hearts would be happy, and ten thousand sleepless eyes would close at once. "Trustworthy" implies not only disposition, but skill and power. It has reference to the heart first, the brain second, and thereafter to the nerves and muscle of the man.

The fidelity of Moses was not in regard to a specialty, but he was "faithful in all his house." He was no prodigy, no one-side man, no crank. No one who takes him as a model need fear excessive development here, and no development there. He will grow up an exceedingly manly man. He "was faithful to him that had appointed him." In this relation he was a subaltern, and yet was an administrator of law. He did not regard it a position in which he might steal government funds, or revenge private wrongs, or glut private passions. He had no ring to serve. He was faithful to him who had appointed him. He was "faithful as a testimony of those things which were to be spoken after." This stretched out over the emptiness of duration unborn. Fidelity to the past and present are not complete in themselves. He who lives only for a memory, lives for the ghosts. He who lives only for the present, guards only a charnel-house. There is no virtue except that which nests and broods over future's chaos out of which the living come. Posterity will want testimony of this generation. What are we going to leave? It will be an awful thought to know that posterity will discover us to have been frauds and perjurers. Will no one point to us as proofs of self-denial and generous labor for others? On the hillocks which shall mark our graves shall no daises grow for the lambs of millennium to nip or make their bed upon?

As a servant! No laissez-faire—no dolce far niente. A busy life that knew none of the light, the hilarious, or the wanton pleasures which we think necessary. The cry is now, "Don't deny the young these things: they will see trouble enough anyhow." Ah! the demon of selfishness can be such a pretty snake when he wants to be! How he glides in under love's moist eyelash and leaves his slimy track where the kiss was pressed as a parting benison! Duty, whose hard face wears neither smiles nor tears, whose voice never rings with laughter nor trembles with emotion, cries only, "Work! serve!" The selfish world will be thankless; the thankless world will be forgetful. So be it. Work on. There will be those whose only safety or success will depend on your work. What men may think or say or do matters little.

"There is no pay!" Who wants it? After all, the servant is better than the hireling. "The solitary is set in families." Moses goes everywhere. He unlocks all doors, sits by all firesides, eats at all tables, rules in all hearts. The cowardly and the sycophantic pay but a venal and servile tribute to power or wealth; but the brave and the virtuous of all lands revere Moses the servant. We haul and toss the mummy of Pharaoh from place to place as a curiosity or plaything. Moses the servant stands still on the Horeb of our hearts, and utters the law which an Elijah preaches, and which a Christ fulfills. Transfigured into a law-giver, he talks with the man who never dies, and walks hand in hand with him who died for all men. As a servant of God, he ranks above earth's proudest princes, and is commissioned by his Master to lead the enslaved and wandering into liberty and the rest that remains for his people. T. A. S. A.

What Our Papers Say.

There is something fascinating in the very idea of power; and the fascination is increased tenfold when we see power exerted for the accomplishment of some good and noble end. Power in reserve, potentiality, is simply awful to contemplate. In church work this is to a great extent lodged in the spirit of unity which binds, as one, the members of a church. On this subject the Christian Guardian says:

"The spirit of unity is an important element of a strong church. Where there is jealousy, factiousness and division, there can not be strength. The help of those members who will do nothing except the plan which they approve is adopted, is dearly bought. There is generally opposition enough from enemies without, and the natural selfishness of the human heart, without fellow-Christians hindering the work by their opposition. Of the early Christians it is said, in the Acts of the Apostles, 'The multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul.' Such oneness of spirit combines and concentrates all the resources of a church on the work to be done, while the spirit of self-seeking and division scatters and enfeebles. Greater nearness to Christ and more intimate communion with him will draw Christians closer to one another. It is when they have not the spirit of the Master, that the low and selfish aims have power to distract and divide. It is scarcely necessary to say that vital faith in God in the hearts of the people is essential to a strong church. Faith begets courage and gives nerve to activity. If the church has not confidence in the promises of God, it will not put forth the efforts which God has promised to bless. To the church, as well as to the individual, Christ says: 'According to your faith be it unto you.'"

This, from the Chicago Inter Ocean, should cause us to ponder well the dangers that come from the fact that so many of our better-class citizens take so little interest in affairs that lie so near to national and State and municipal prosperity:

"The trouble is, that, as a nation, we have been living too much in faith and too little in works. The alien anarchist who comes hither finds our wealthy merchants, our best lawyers, our railroad lords, our coal barons, and many others who would prove loyal enough in the pinch of battle, boast of the 'best form of government in the world,' and using it as if it were only the best to make money under. Absenting themselves from the primaries and the polls, staying at home on Fourth of July and Decoration Day, sneering good humoredly at effervescent patriotism as 'spread-eagleism,' regarding Thanksgiving Day as a relic of Puritan superstition, and once in a while deploring the decay of political purity and even admitting that 'they do some things better in Europe.' Such people give encouragement to anarchists by affording presumptive evidence that the upper stratum of society is a conglomerate of active greed and political indifference."

"The Bible and the Newspaper was the subject of an interesting sermon recently, by Rev. James H. Ross, of Norwich, Ct. Among the points of comparison noted by him were the variety of contents in the Bible and in the newspaper, as variable as the characteristics and temperaments of the people. In the Bible we have history, biography, narrative, doctrines, statutes, poems, prophecies, proverbs, parables, music, friendship, personal news, national intelligence, letters, and the outline of the circle of the universe. In the Scriptures the missionary movement was from the east to the westward. To-day, on the continental scale, it is from the west, eastward. The study of the Bible is a study of the providence and kingdom of God. The study of the local and metropolitan newspapers should also be with a view to the providence and kingdom of God. 'I read the newspaper,' said John Newton, 'that I may see how my heavenly Father governs the world.' 'No higher reason for reading the papers,' said Mr. Ross, 'can be given: no lower reason should be satisfactory to us.' But who would ever know how to interpret the meaning of what the newspapers present until the Bible had first given him the divine clue to the meaning of human life and the intent of the world's on-going history?"

Noting the improvement going on among the various denominations, the St. Louis Advocate recognizes that "not the least encouraging is the increasing reverence for the church building." It goes on to say:

"While there is, of course, no sanctity in brick and mortar, and the stones and lumber of a church are no more than other lumber and stones, it is not to be forgotten that in the human mind, the power of association is so strong as practically to identify worship with the place where it is offered; and if the latter be held in light esteem, the former will soon be regarded with a feeling not differing greatly from contempt. Respect for the edifice means increased respect for the worship held therein and increased awe of the object of that worship. There is a middle ground between reverence for the church as a fetich and regard for the place where prayer and praise are offered, and Protestants in general should strive to take a medium course. But it is safe to say that, notwithstanding the improvement already mentioned, Protestants may entertain a much higher respect for the church building than is commonly found and still avoid the imputations of superstition.

As for Methodists, their houses of worship are solemnly "set apart from all unhallowed and common uses for the worship of Almighty God." Let them remember this:

Notes.

The League of Freedom and Justice, which has been organized in this city for the avowed purpose of abrogating the Sunday Law, has just issued an address to the German voters in New Orleans, in which address we discover a most significant statement. After recommending Gov. McEnery, the address goes on to say: "We not only entertain the well-founded belief, but we are fully convinced that Gov. McEnery, if re-elected, will use his influence to eradicate bad and oppressive laws from the statute book." In the estimation of this League the Sunday Law is a "bad and oppressive law," to the repeal of which this league is pledged, and if these leaguers "are fully convinced that Gov. McEnery, if re-elected, will use his influence to eradicate it from the statute book," then, there is not a Christian man in this State who can vote conscientiously for Gov. McEnery. If the governor has bargained with this league for the overthrow of the Sunday Law, the Christian sentiment in this State should rebuke such "wickedness in high places" by refusing to vote for any such man. The Christians in this commonwealth, whatever else they may do, or not do, can not afford deliberately to hand the government over to people who are pledged to overthrow the best law on the statute book. The voters of Louisiana are not yet ready to give place to a set of German infidels, who are the sworn enemies of some of our best and most cherished institutions!

A Boston jury has decided that cigars are a medicine, and, therefore, their sale on Sunday is not unlawful. The evidence keeps accumulating in favor of Boston!

There were 350 excursionists departed from Chicago, December 1, to visit their old homes in Denmark and Sweden. It was the Christmas excursion to the Fatherland, and the ticket from Chicago to Denmark or Sweden was only $41 75.

What an opening of the thought has the Revised Version given to that encouraging passage in 1 John by rendering it in this way: "We know that we have passed out of death into life, because we love the brethren." That emphasizes both conditions. We were engulfed in death. We are "swallowed up of life."

We are starting out, upon a new year of work for Christ and our race. Let us remember to possess ourselves of the spirit of our Master—the spirit of intense hopefulness. Though a peasant of a despised race, and without a single penny in his pocket, "he never admitted for a moment that he could be defeated." And as he has promised his presence, in the brightness of that hopeful presence let us go forward to continued and successive victories.

Some people can't get the idea in their heads that the saloon rules in the politics of this country. This may show it a somewhat. Senator Blair makes this statement in the last Chautauquan: "Preceding the presidential election of 1884, there were held, in New York City, 1,062 political conventions. Two hundred and eighty-three were held apart from saloons, ninety-six next door to saloons, and six hundred and thirty-three in saloons." And yet we are exhorted to refrain from pushing temperance into politics. If that exhortation is heeded by the temperance workers, the saloon will be as supreme in politics in 1900 as it is to-day! What did Christ go to Gadara for? Simply to cast out a legion of devils. That is the supreme business of the temperance workers in politics!

Now is a good time to ponder the important question: "What do I need to qualify me to do the work of the in-coming year. That each and every one has a special work to do can admit of no question. "To-day, work in my vineyard to-day," is the command issued to each individual as each daily sun rises over the horizon. The one qualification needed by each is the endowment of power for the work in which each is engaged. Not gifts, not talents, not art, not eloquence, but simple power. Art and eloquence and gifts and talents can not do our work if power is wanting. But all these consecrated entirely upon God's altar will be a means to attain unto power. Jesus said: "Ye shall be endued with power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you." Brother, we don't need genius for our work this year; we need the simple power of the Holy Ghost upon us. And may God give it to us early and in its abiding form!

Personals.

We have received this "good word" from a prominent presiding elder in the Mississippi Conference: "I promise my best for the ADVOCATE this year." To every such "good word," the editor's heart responds: "Our best is yet to make the ADVOCATE worthy of the best efforts of its friends to extend its circulation."

We had the pleasure of a call last week from Prof. McGimsey, of Centenary College. He was spending the Christmas holidays with friends in Algiers. He represents the college doing well, and the church in Jackson, La., progressing finely under the supervision of Bro. Penn.

A brother writes: "My facilities for study have not been very good. I insist a great deal and the common people, the poor, love me. I am very grateful for this. I do aspire in this respect to be like my Master: that the common people hear me gladly." That is as noble an aspiration as a mortal can have!

Be sure and read carefully the article, on the third page, entitled, "The Saloon in Politics." Those who speak there are men of national reputation and have a right to claim attention. Senator Blair's name for the saloons is good: "Clearing houses of sin and despair." How long will the Christian people of this land suffer those houses to exist?

The Huntsville Mercury, Alabama, reports that Dr. A. B. Jones has purchased the Huntsville Female College.

We learn that Father Chiniquy, the converted priest, contemplates a lecturing tour in the South, during this winter, and will visit New Orleans this month.

A philosopher has said: "If a straw will tickle a man, it is an instrument of happiness." When we come to think of it, how little it takes to conduce to a fellow-being's happiness? This sentence from an impartial reader of the ADVOCATE causes us to regard the closing hours of the old year with some satisfaction: "I read you every week with increasing pleasure." We "thank God and take courage."

Bro. R. B. Bowmer requests all correspondents to address him at Mount Carmel, Covington county, Miss.

The editor left for Conference last Tuesday, and, as he will necessarily be absent more than a week, correspondents are requested to "let patience have her perfect work."

George D. Wallace, of the newspaper agency of N. W. Ayer & Son, of Philadelphia, died December 28. He was a man of integrity, diligence and courtesy.

Mansfield Female College—1888.

One hundred dollars, paid in advance, will entitle new pupils to board, tuition and music for the term beginning Monday, January 2, 1888, and ending Wednesday, June 13. Seventy-five dollars will pay board and tuition in the literary department, without music. Let those who have been attending home schools during the fall term avail themselves of this offer.

W. H. GRACE, Pres.

This applies to many newspapers than the Brookhaven Leader, from which it is taken. A word to the wise, etc.

There are about one thousand men, more or less, in this county, thoughtlessly going around every day with money in their pockets belonging to this office.

A Proud Woman's Airs.

Why is a proud woman like a music box? She is full of airs. And if they blow on her, coughs and colds must follow. Do not neglect a cold, but take Taylor's Cherokee Remedy of Sweet Gum and Mullein.

The Personal Liberty Party.

The "Pearl of Days" has the following, which we commend to the thoughtful consideration of the readers of the ADVOCATE:

It is not to be supposed that the so-called Personal Liberty Party, which proposes, in several of the States, to destroy Sunday, is to cease its ignoble work. The campaign against the Sunday laws of New York State will doubtless continue this winter, and no doubt with increased virulence. In Pennsylvania, Carl Ruhl, who has only been an American citizen a short time, and yet who is the recognized leader of this party, claims that 18,000 votes in Philadelphia alone have been recently cast against the Sunday. He says that the fight on their part has only begun. He evidently realizes that it will be no easy task to demolish the Sabbath, and he adds:

It will require hard work in the way of organization, because to organize a State like Pennsylvania is a stupendous task. At present we have organizations in Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Scranton, and one or two other towns. These will be maintained. We propose to go from city to city, and from town to town. We will have each county in line to vote for candidates who are favorable to our principles, and to work against candidates who want to continue to trample on our rights. From one end of the State to the other we will carry our banner, and the earnest effort we have just made will not be a circumstance to the one we will make then.

It is no use for us to delude ourselves that this organization can accomplish nothing. These people intend, if possible, absolutely to destroy our Sabbath, and every Christian man and woman in the land is called upon to come to the front with weapons in order. You can't be neutral in this fight. Neutrality at this point is downright disloyalty to God and his law; and a disloyal Christian is really on the side of the foe.

Items of Interest.

There are 113,000 miles of nautical wire cable laid, and the wire-makers are as busy as ever.

A raft, 500 feet long, 50 feet wide and 35 feet draught of water, containing 25,000 pieces of timber was lost on the way from Nova Scotia to New York City.

The Independent says: "It is an actual fact that there is a spot in Northern New Jersey where two votes were cast in the last presidential election for Franklin Pierce." So, so?

W. D. Howells, the novelist, petitioned the Governor of Illinois to commute the sentence of the anarchists to imprisonment for life and was in earnest in other ways for them.

Herbert Spencer is in poor health. He is living at Brighton and writing an autobiography.

Queen Victoria has had thirty-six grandchildren, thirty of whom are living, and four great-grandchildren.

The Methodists recently celebrated their centennial anniversary in Brooklyn. Rev. Woodman Hickson began preaching near the Brooklyn entrance to the bridge, early in November, 1787.

The population of New York City has increased 300,000 since 1880, and there are only four more Protestant Churches than then. To preserve the proportion of it existing in 1880, twelve churches should have been added in the seven years. If things are going the same way in other cities, then we are in a bad plight.

What a wonderful thing is science! It has found out that there is a "uniform confluence of deafness with blue eyes in perfectly white cats."

It is claimed by those recognized as high in authority in the matter that a frequent cause of diphtheria is the practice of leaving a lighted kerosene lamp in sleeping rooms. The lamp consumes oxygen and gives off the deadly carbon.

The annual income of the Pope of Rome is said to be about $1,500,000.

The city of Toronto has a population of 110,000, and prospers without Sunday horse-cars, and without a single Sunday newspaper.

There are four great accumulated masses of gold in the world—$1,000,000 in the United States Treasury, $237,000,000 in the National Bank of France, $167,000,000 in the National Bank of Germany, and $100,000,000 in the Bank of England.

The New York electricians are confident they have invented an air ship which can be propelled against the wind and steered as easily as water craft. The motive power is electricity and the rudder is a wide blade of thin steel. A rotary fan, capable of making 5,000 revolutions a minute, causes the machine to rise in the air and impels it on its voyage.

Books and Periodicals.

BOOKS.

FROM SHORE TO SHORE. Price, $1.25; This is a poetical and pictorial illustration of the picture familiar to our readers called, "The Voyage of Life." It is gotten up in beautiful style by the American Sunday-School Union, Philadelphia.

PEOPLE'S LESSON BOOK ON MATTHEW. By the author of "People's Commentary." Boards, 18 mo., 224 pp. Single copy, by mail, sixteen cents. American Sunday-School Union, Philadelphia.

To aid Sabbath-schools, families and individuals in the study of the Bible. It has seventy-six lessons, which include every verse in the book of Matthew, and give brief explanations, questions and applications, with questions for a weekly review. It contains Orders of Service, Lord's Prayer, Bible Dictionary, Hymns, etc.

In this handsomely bound volume we have the story of the leading painters of the old and new worlds since the fifteenth century graphically depicted, their characteristics indicated, their most famous creations in some measure described, and, chief of all, the lessons of their romantic lives clearly pointed out. The illustrations in the book are high-class reproductions of a few of the most famous paintings of the masters. The book will be a most suitable gift-book. It will please and profit, and, may hap, inspire some one to follow the steps of these great men in patience and perseverance and in devotion to a calling.

These twelve letters are all on "Practical Matters" which enter into the life of all our "girls." Miss Dodge originated what has become a large institution—"Working Girls' Societies," in which every Tuesday evening is devoted to "Practical Talks." These letters have grown out of those talks. They lay no claim to literary merit. All is subordinated to produce wise, practical and much-needed instruction, in plain, common-sense, brief and wonderfully effective words. They are indeed a model. The author, as one of the "girls," puts herself on their level, and speaks in their language, and voices their feelings, wants and trials. Nothing could be more wisely done for the object in view. And the little book can not fail to do great good to the class of girls for whom it has been prepared.

THE OLD SOUTH AND THE NEW. By Hon. W. D. Kelley. Published by G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York. Exposition Building, New Orleans. Price $1.25.

These are letters on the industrial and social condition of the people of the Southern States. The author has devoted a large portion of his long life to the investigation of social and political economic questions; and, doubtless, these letters, respecting such questions in the South, will be read with interest.

Through Eyrich, 137 Camp street, this city, we have received the following juvenile books:

OUR LITTLE MEN AND WOMEN. Illustrated. Boston: D. Lothrop Company. Price, $1.50.

The twelve numbers of this delightful little magazine make as attractive a volume for the eye as any little buyer can spy upon bookstore counters this season. The stories with which it is filled are exactly adapted to the tastes and longings of the young gentlemen and ladies of the nursery.

THE PANSY. Illustrated. Boston: D. Lothrop Company. Price, $1.50.

The Pansy has made its annual appearance, and will be greeted with delight by thousands of readers who number the preceding volumes in their home libraries. The Pansy has a wide and constantly increasing circulation in every part of the country, and it richly deserves it. It is full of instructive and entertaining matter—stories, sketches and poems, and is very fully illustrated.

BABYLAND. Price, seventy-five cents.

The twelve bound numbers of this little magazine make one of the handsomest volumes of the year. For the three and four-year-olds there is no book like Babyland, with its jolly stories and jingles, its puzzles and its pictures, its big, clear type and its beautiful cover of apple blossoms and babies fairer than apple blossoms.

PERIODICALS.

Why not try the Springfield, Mass., Good Housekeeping, which is published fortnightly the coming year, not for your wife and daughters only, but for the benefit of the whole family, and also allow Bridget free access to it? You can send $2.50 to the publisher, or subscribe through booksellers and newsdealers.

St. Nicholas begins the year with a rich table of contents for the little folks. Our young people will enjoy this number, and the promise is that all will be as good as this. Century Company, Union Square, N. Y. Price $3.

The Century for January is out and full to overflowing with excellent papers from writers of all grades, having the ear of the reading public. This number leads off with a paper from Mr. Philip Schaff on "The Catacombs of Rome." Illustrated by Drake and Mosher. Cable, Eggleston, Stockton, Mark Twain, Smalley—all appear in this number. Century Company, N. Y. Price 35 c.

Popular Science Monthly has 140 pages devoted to scientific subjects of all kinds. The writers are men of standing in their various lines of work and study, and doubtless this January number will be read with interest by many. D. Appleton & Co., New York City. Price $5.

The Eclectic Magazine for January begins the year with a table of contents unexceptionable in every respect. If you want gold, solid reading, try this monthly. E. R. Pelton, 25 Bond St., New York City. Price $5.

The New Princeton Review is published six times a year for $3. It deals in politics, science, philosophy, religion, art, education and fiction. These subjects are treated by able authors. Its elaborate system of indexing makes it specially valuable. A. C. Armstrong, 714 Broadway, New York.

The Woman's World is edited by Oscar Wilde, and gives special attention to all subjects in which women are interested. Almost exclusively its contributors are women and they are doing some good work on it and in it. Cassell & Company, New York City. Price $3 a year, 35 cents a number.

Littell's Living Age. The number of the Living Age for the week ending December 24, contains Gambler Parry's Ministry of Fine Arts, Edinburgh Review; Josephine and Marie Louise, Temple Bar; Jenny Lind, Murray's Magazine; A Health Resort out of the Season, Cornhill Magazine; Major and Minor, Good Words; Richard Cable, the Lightshipman, Chambers' Journal; The Future of New Guinea, All the Year Round; with poetry and miscellany.

For fifty-two numbers of sixty-four large pages each (or more than 3,300 pages a year) the subscription price ($8) is low; while for $10 50 the publishers offer to send any one of the American $4 monthlies or weeklies with The Living Age for a year, both postpaid. Littell & Co., Boston, are the publishers.

The December Statesman, published at 179 Washington Street, Chicago, Ill., contains the full text of the recent decision of the United States Supreme Court in the "Compensation cases," and an article on the liquor traffic in missionary lands, which every American Christian should read. Price 10 cents.

Scribner's Magazine has this table of contents: Disposition of One Side of a Tourney Field. Frontispiece. Engraved by Robert Hoskin from a drawing by Edwin Howland Blashfield. The Man at Arms—I. by E. H. Blashfield and E. W. Blashfield. Illustrated by E. H. Blashfield. Our Leader, by C. D. French. First Harvests—Chapters I-III, by F. J. Stimson. White Edith, by Thomas Bailey Aldrich. Municipal Finance, by Clayton C. Hall. Christmas Eve—Germany, by Rennell Rodd. The Great Pyramid, by Edward L. Wilson; with illustrations from photographs by the author and from drawings by J. D. Woodward. Natural Selection. A Romance of Chelsea Village and East Hampton Town—In three parts. Part I, by H. C. Bunner, with illustrations by Carl Hirschberg. A New Light on Balzac, by Edward S. Holden. The Poet, by Charles Edwin Markham. The End of the Beginning, by George A. Hibbard. Illustrated by the author and Francis Day. American Antiquities, by Andrew Lang, with an illustration by H. Siddons Mowbray. French Traits—Intelligence, by W. C. Brownell. At Evening, by Graham R. Tomson. Japanese Art, Artists, and Artisans, by William Elliot Griffis, with illustrations from drawings by a Japanese artist. Life Disenrowned, by L. Cavazza. A Chapter on Dreams, by Robert Louis Stevenson.

With this number the Magazine begins auspiciously its second year. The features of the new year promise to be most interesting and valuable contributions to literature, and the publishers' announcement of increased excellence in illustration is evidently to be richly fulfilled.

Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil and hypophosphites and lime and soda is a remedy of unquestioned value in all forms of wasting diseases. Physicians everywhere are prescribing it. Be sure you get the genuine. Prepared by Scott & Bowne, Chemists, New York. Sold by druggists everywhere.

Personal Work.

A correspondent of the New York Evangelist relates an interview had with Rev. Elijah Buck, of Centralia, Ill., a co-laborer of Mr. Finney. He had participated in more than one hundred extensive works of grace in different parts of the country. He emphasized the importance of personal, individual work, and gave the following illustration:

When a young man, a college student, he visited a village in New York, and found only one individual in the village who made a profession of religion. It was a desperate case, and a man of weaker faith would have given up the thought of a revival in that town. He went in the only pious man in the village, and proposed to him to "invite the Lord Jesus Christ to come in that town on the business of redemption, and to remain there until the business was all done up." (I make use of terms which the good man used in conversation with me.) The two praying men met and implored the Redeemer of men to visit the town in question. Then they immediately started out and visited every house in the town, to inform the people of the fact that Jesus had been invited, and was surely expected that very day. They prayed in every home, and found every home actually prepared for their coming and for the presence of the divine Guest. Conviction seemed to have taken hold upon every individual, and the revival had already begun. The result need not be stated. It was a sweeping work of grace, widely extended and deeply seated. It was the result of personal work with the individual. That is the way Father Buck looked at it.

Nervous irritation and pains in the region of the kidneys and bladder are promptly cured by the use of Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Balm.

P. WERLEIN.—Take notice of the new advertisement of Mr. Philip Werlein in this issue of the ADVOCATE, and see the extra inducements offered for music and musical instruments, of which there is an immense stock to select from. The wares of the best manufactories in the world can be found on sale at this mammoth establishment, at prices unheard of and terms which bring within the reach of everyone, making an endeavor, the possibility to secure a first-class instrument. Testimonials from the first people in the South ready for exhibit, showing forth the liberality and fair dealing of the great piano house of P. Werlein, 135 Canal St., New Orleans, La.

A poet sent to an editor a contribution entitled, "Why do I live?" The editor answered, "Because you sent your contribution by mail instead of bringing it."

CHANGES.—We have quite a number of orders to change the address of subscribers; some without signatures, and others who do not give the former address. Under these circumstances, change can not be made.

Considering how many questions a small boy can ask his mother in a quarter of an hour, it is astonishing how little he seems to know when a stranger asks him any.

We would again call the attention of subscribers and agents that, in making remittances, to make them payable to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. Please keep this in remembrance.

Our Young People.

"OF SUCH IS THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN."

Little feet may find the pathway
Leading upward unto God;
Little hands may learn to scatter
Seeds of precious truth abroad.

Youthful hearts may be the temple
For the Spirit's dwelling-place—
Childhood's lips declare the riches
Of God's all-abounding grace.

Little ones, though frail and earth-born,
Heirs of blessedness may be;
For the Savior whispereth gently,
"Suffer such to come to me."

And in that eternal kingdom,
'Mid the grand, triumphal throng,
Childish voices sweet may mingle
In the glorious choral song.

—Apples of Gold.

MR. EDITOR: As I have never written to you before, I hope you will allow me to have a few words with the young people. I am a little girl eleven years old. My brother takes your valuable paper, and likes it very much. We have Sunday-school every Sunday. Mr. George McCarlie is our superintendent. Mr. Gale is our pastor. We like them both very much. Will any of my little friends tell me what king had fifteen years added to life? I will answer Edith Chichester's question: It is found in Psalms lv., 22. I go to school at Kavanaugh College. My teacher's name is Miss Julia Leggett. I like her very much. She is very kind and sweet. I have a great many schoolmates. I love them very much. I hope this letter will escape the horrible waste-basket. I hope I will see it in print.

Yours truly,

MARCIE STEVENS.

MR. EDITOR: Please allow a little boy a few lines in your valuable paper. I think the girls give the boys bad names. One girl says boys can't cook. I know a boy that makes egg custard without eggs. Now, girls, can you do that? Another girl says boys are stuck-up. They are not half as bad as the girls. The girls commence twisting their hair on Saturday evening to look sweet on Sunday. Another says boys can't milk. I knew a girl who took a basket to milk in. I have milked a good many times, but never have taken a basket yet. Another girl says boys' dancing is like a crippled goose trying to fly. I knew a girl who kicked both heels off her shoes trying to dance. Boys, did you ever beat that? Yours truly, JOHN.

COUSHATTA, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: I am twelve years old. I go to Kavanaugh College. I study history, geography, sixth reader, arithmetic, grammar and spelling, and I am going to try and take some more studies. I am going to take Latin anyway. My teachers' names are: Pres. Featherstun, Prof. Jagers, Miss Lott, Mrs. Featherstun and Miss Leggett. I like them very much. Our school is increasing rapidly, and I hope it will continue to increase. I go to Sunday-school whenever I am well. Our superintendent is Mr. George McCarlie, and he is my teacher, too. This is my first letter to the dear ADVOCATE, and I hope it will be published. I will close by asking a question: Where is "eternity" found in the Bible? I am a new member that wishes to join your band.

DAVE A. REILY.

HOLMESVILLE, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: It has been some time since I wrote to the dear old ADVOCATE, so I thought I would write again. We are very anxious to know who will be our preacher next year. I will answer Catie C. Jones' question: There are 39 books, 929 chapters, 23,214 verses, 592,439 words, 2,728,100 letters in the Old Testament. There are 27 books, 260 chapters, 18,253 words, 838,380 letters in the New Testament. I will close by asking a question:—Where in the Bible is the most beautiful chapter found? With many good wishes to the ADVOCATE and its editor, I remain,

Your little friend,

BETTIE CARRUTH.

SUMMIT, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I send answer to your problem in last issue of the ADVOCATE. I hope that I will not be too late to be first to answer it.

CARRIE AINSWORTH.

LINCOLN COUNTY, Mississippi.

(The answer sent is not correct because there are two additions, when there should be but one.—ED.)

MR. EDITOR: As this is my first letter to a newspaper, I hope to see it in print. My Uncle Robert takes your valuable paper, and grandma thinks it an excellent one. We have a very nice Sabbath-school. I seldom miss a Sabbath. We have a very dear superintendent, Mr. E. S. Drake, and a beloved pastor, Rev. E. H. Mounger. We all love them both very much. I am living with my grandmother, and a dear, good woman she is. My uncle Robert sends us to school. My papa has been dead just one year on the fourth of this month. I have a mother and several sisters and brothers. My uncles are very good and kind to us. I love them very much. Well, dear Mr. Editor, many more things I could say for your valuable paper, if I only had the time; but school children have other duties to perform. Wishing you a happy New Year, I am,

Your little friend,

FANNIE M. NAASSON.

PORT GIBSON, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: As I have not written to your paper in so long, I thought I would write again. There is a fine school at Walthall; 125 students on roll. I regret very much to leave it. We will move back to our home, seven miles east of Duck Hill, the last of next week. I will answer Cate C. Jones' question: There are 39 books, 929 chapters, 23,241 verses, 592,430 words, 728,100 letters in the Old Testament. There are 27 books, 260 chapters, 7,959 verses, 182,252 words, 838,380 letters in the New Testament. The Apocrypha has 183 chapters, 7,081 verses, 152,185 words. With many good wishes to the dear old ADVOCATE, I remain, as ever,

EDDIE BENNETT.

WALTHALL, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl ten years old. I have two sisters and one brother, older than myself. One of my sisters is going to school at Whitworth College. I see that none of the little cousins have worked the example that you gave, some time since, in your paper. I will work it for them. It is done in this way: Head the column with the 10, putting all of the figures under the cipher, except 2 and 3; put them on the left, under the 1, and then add them and you will get the answer. I will close by wishing you a happy Christmas.

MAGGIE F. MORRIS.

WOODVILLE, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: Having written to the ADVOCATE before, and as you were so kind as to publish it, I will write again. I worked at your problem a long while, but could not make it add up one hundred, so I had to give it up. We have four churches in our town. I go to the Methodist Sunday-school. I go to day-school also. I am studying third reader, geography, language, arithmetic, writing and spelling. I have one brother, fourteen years old. I will ask the little cousins a question: How many books in the Bible? I will answer Ruby C. Lovett's question: "God was with Joseph when he was sold into Egypt. Your little friend,

JOBIE WHITE.

THOMPSON, Illinois.

MR. EDITOR: As the question asked by Katie Jones has not been answered, as yet, I will answer it for the little cousins: The Bible contains 66 books, 1,189 chapters, 31,173 verses, 773,692 words, and 3,586,480 letters. Can any of the little cousins tell me which is the middle verse in the Bible?

Yours respectfully,

ETTA MAY.

Household.

Economical Buying.

First. The article should be fully worth the amount asked for it. That is, its intrinsic value should be such that, as prices average, you are getting the full worth of your money. If an article for the table, it should be in good condition to use, and of good weight or measure. If for personal or housekeeping purposes, its quality should be the best to be obtained for the price. Nothing is really worth having that is half spoiled, or that will not wear well in proportion to its cost.

Second. The article should supply a genuine need. The need may not be immediate, but it should be both possible and probable. Many persons have a mania for buying what they will never use, simply because they see a good article for sale at a tempting price. Food, clothing, household articles—all are recklessly accumulated without regard to quantity, and then either wasted or laid by until time or changing fashion renders them almost, if not quite, worthless. Especially in regard to that which is purely ornamental, it is wisest to buy only what you have an actual and immediate use for.

Third. The article should be suited to the use that is to be made of it, or the place that it is to occupy, and to the surroundings of its owner. Sirloin steak is not suitable for soup meat, nor French china for kitchen ware; neither does elaborate trimming look well on a cheap calico dress, nor brocade and plush furniture over rag carpets. These are extreme cases, but it is always in bad taste, and betrays both ignorance and extravagance to use an expensive article for an unsuitable purpose or one inferior to that for which it was designed, or to associate coarse and fine or inappropriate articles together. Instinctive good taste, or a patient study of good examples will save one from such errors.

Fourth. It is not economical to pay very much more, or less, than the medium price for standard articles. For instance, such materials as all wool-goods or pure linen, or good silk, bring a certain price in proportion to their weight and fineness. But the extremes of either coarse or fine are not usually economical. Exceptions may be found to this rule, in the special rates made by large firms, on some of their best goods, during certain seasons of the year, and in instances of peculiar adaptation to some particular purpose, but the principle holds good for all ordinary cases. Neither is it economical for persons of moderate means to indulge in showy and expensive novelties, that are likely soon to go out of fashion, for if the material is good, such articles will outwear their usefulness, and if not, they will become shabby before they have served their time. As regards household supplies, while it is generally true, that "the best is the cheapest," yet there are some important qualifications to this rule that should be noted. It is not economical to put expensive articles into the care of ignorant and untrained servants. If you can not look after such things yourself, it is better, either to refrain from buying them, or to secure a perfectly trustworthy person to handle them, for the losses through ignorance and careless indifference are painful to contemplate. Strong, durable articles, not too heavy, or too elaborately constructed, are the best kind for the average help to use, and are always worth their cost. Large quantities of food should never be given into untrained hands with the expectation of saving thereby, for the loss through poor management is far more than the profit through buying by wholesale.

To sum up the whole matter, if you wish to buy economically, carefully consider and examine a purchase before making it; have a definite use in view and buy nothing simply from impulse.—Good Housekeeping.

ADAMS—Mrs. Elvina L. Adams was born in Abingdon, Va., in 1812, and died, in the city of New Orleans, December 11, 1887, aged seventy-five years. Her father, J. G. Ustick, was an eminent prominence in the State of Virginia for thirty-seven years.

The subject of this sketch gave her heart to Christ, and her hand to the church at the age of fourteen, in Abingdon. Her family removing to Greenville soon afterward, she promptly connected herself with the church there, and devoted her young life and talents to her Savior. At the early age of sixteen we find her a Sunday-school worker, and outstripped by none in the noble ranks of beautiful Christian service. In 1835 her father removed to Livingston, Ala. But changes and removals made no disastrous effect upon a consecrated spirit; so here we find her in the true, devoted servant in the vineyard of her Lord. In 1837 she was married to Mr. J. W. Adams, and was the first bride of their newly adopted home—Livingston. Her dwelling at once became and always remained a meeting-place and home for ministers; a center of religious influence and stronghold of faith. She was left a widow after a brief married life of six years. From her bereaved home she came, with her four children, to New Orleans, and remained until the grandchildren took possession of the city, when she relegated to Alabama. After the war, she returned to New Orleans, and made it her home. Her last years have been spent with her son, Mr. J. W. Adams, well known in this city. For a great while she has been an invalid, and was thus prevented from undertaking those religious activities so dear to her. But her soul was not less loyal to God, and her love not less warm for the church, as evinced, in her older days, she went to the house of God in company to keep holyday. The God of the devoted young girl, and later on, the matron of a lovely and unbroken family, was the God of her old age, when infirmities increased, and one had flown, and all her children but one. Now was the time when character was to be tested and faith declared. Here was the opportunity of witness for Christ, and then to the world how the religion of the Son of God can sustain in the midst of empty chairs and vacant chairs, and vanished beings and departed health. How sweetly and submissively and faithfully she bore herself throughout these are many to-day who can gladly testify.

A visit to her old home this summer, where she had been bride and young mother, living over again, in recollection, the scenes of her youth and meeting with beings now with God, was fruitless, under the divine blessing, allowed her spirit, produced greater meetedness of soul to the world, created brightier longings for the reunion of life above, and left her ripe for glory.

On Sunday morning, December 11, 1887, after a brief sickness, her soul took its flight, while millions were worshiping on earth, and entered upon the glorified worship of angels and redeemed multitudes in heaven. It was evening time. Up through the Lord's door, accompanied and surrounded with the breath of prayer and song, ascended by the church to heaven, she entered into the Lord's kingdom. Where she is to-day. May God in his mercy bring us to the same fearless, painless, stormless land!

ROBINETT—Died at the parsonage, Plaquemine Brulee, La., November 1887, after an illness of ten weeks, Miss JENNIE ROBINETT. She had been one of my family for fifteen years; therefore, I knew her well. Her life was one of devotion to the Master. No better woman have I ever known. Her disposition was sunny and cheerful. She died as she had lived, "in the faith." Several times during her sickness she said she was not afraid to die; that she was ready. We miss her in the family more than words can express. My children realize that they have lost one that they could not give up except at the Master's call. We bow in submission to the will of our heavenly Father. We know that she now is freed from all care and suffering, and in the enjoyment of the home of the blessed at God's right hand in heaven.

KING—Anna Rosette King, daughter of Benjamin and Delia King, died November 7, aged eleven months and fifteen days. This beautiful flower, snatched from the embrace of fond parents, has Christ taken to himself, for he said: "Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of Heaven." Weep not, loved ones, for sweet little Anna is waiting and watching at the beautiful gate for you.

MATIRNE—Died, on Wednesday, November 30, 1887, of a stubborn, pernicious fever, after three weeks of patient endurance, Martha Ann L. Matirne, aged seven years, ten months and six days, daughter of John A. and Martha Ann Matirne, of West Baton Rouge. The case was critical from its incipiency, causing much solicitude to the physician and family; but the little sufferer took the medicine prescribed, without fretting or murmuring. Her intelligence and amiable disposition endeared her greatly to her parents, to her brothers and sisters, to her teacher (who was present sympathizing and aiding) and to her school and playmates—in fact, to all who knew her. She would frequently, during her sickness, send for such of them as she could think of to come and see her, as if she had a premonition of her approaching end. Her positive character, sense of justice and loving heart, made her a constitutional leader among her little associates, without a manifestation of tyranny or disposition to domineer over them. Her winning ways and expressions of gratitude for kindly favors to her, now come up before her father as a vacant shadow, following him as she used to do wherever she could and meeting him on his return home with affectionate greetings expressive of her love and gratitude for any little token of parental love he might bring to her; but alas! it is only a shadow, the reality is gone, those large, expressive, brilliant eyes are dimmed, her sweet voice silenced, and the sound of her little footsteps will be heard no more; but hope looks at the immortal, while she has joined the angel bands of whom she loved to sing and her Redeemer. She loved her Sunday-school and her church, too. Little Mattie, as she was fondly called, was proficient in her catechism and was delighted in reciting it to her pastor, whose visits she always enjoyed, looking forward to those periodical occasions with much pleasure. Even during her last illness she would often inquire if it was not time for Bro. Reed's appointment. She always had her little mite ready to contribute to the church collections. The friends sympathize with her parents in their sore bereavement and sorrow, but feeling with them to be resigned to the will of God; with the assurance that our loss is her eternal gain and a fresh tie for the family in heaven.

LEWIS A. REED.

BUCHANNAN—Died, October 16, at University of Mississippi, W. A. Buchannan, son of Dr. S. T. and S. A. Buchannan, of Benela, Calhoun county, Miss. Willie professed religion and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Pittsboro, in November, 1886. He was attending the law school at the university at the time of his death. He was a young man of promise. His friends and relatives looked upon him with pride and had marked a bright future for him. He was a young man of fine sense coupled with the highest type of Christian manhood.

When Willie started to the university in 1887, at the age of nineteen, his mother presented him with a Bible, expressing the hope that it might be the means of his salvation. How far the wish was complied with we can only gather from the passages marked and the life of his college days. The mother was as much the idol of the boy, as the boy that of the mother, and no doubt many a time, homesick, would he turn to "A Mother's gift to her boy," to find a mother's wish concerning her boy, and he found it—"that you might be saved." How much is due the mother for the grand life and triumphant death of the boy God only knows.

Willie was brought to Benela to be buried in the family graveyard, and though the day was raw and notice short, a large crowd of young and old, black and white, came to pay their last respects to him. He leaves a father, mother, two sisters and a brother to mourn his death, and we say to them, "Weep not, for he is safe; he has done his work, and God has taken him home." A FRIEND.

The North Carolina Advocate will please copy.

HAAG—Robert Haag, third son of Henry and Julia Haag, died at his home, in New Orleans, La., on Saturday morning, at nine o'clock A. M., October 15, 1887, aged two years and two months. Robert was a good boy, an obedient son. He honored his father and mother with his best love and cheerful obedience; he loved his Sunday-school, and his preacher, and had great faith in prayer. We miss him in Sabbath-school; we mourn our loss; but we bow in humble submission to the will of our heavenly Father, who doeth all things well.

Resolved, That we express our love for him, and our sympathy for his fond parents and friends in the songs, prayers and talks of this meeting.

CHAVERS—Mrs. Alice Chavers, oldest daughter of Jacob and Sarah Thorpburg, was born March 8, 1862, near Quitman's Landing, and died November 30, 1887, aged twenty-five years, eight months and twenty-two days. She joined the Methodist Church at old Locust Grove, September 29, 1877, under Bro. Drake's administration. Some time afterwards she was married, and has proven herself a devoted wife and loving mother.

Sister Chavers leaves to mourn her sad departure many friends, besides her fond husband and four little children, from the ages of seven years to five months old. We condole with the bereaved friends of Sister Chavers, and point them to Christ, the great Physician of souls. He alone can cheer and comfort them in their bereavements. She now rests with the sainted spirits.

A. C. FLOWERS, P. C.

The way to make money is to save it. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the most economical medicine to buy, as it is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "100 doses one dollar." Do not take any other preparation if you have decided to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla.

A Successful Career.

One of the most striking examples of what real native American grit and intelligence can accomplish in the face of apparently insurmountable difficulties is presented in the career of the famous Dr. R. V. Pierce, head of the World's Dispensary Medical Association and the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y., and who, through the medium of his curatives, is known and honored throughout all christendom.

Born in a little New York village, and reared in a small Pennsylvania town, his early youth was a struggle between disadvantages and ardent desire in the strife for education.

The public school and every other possible medium of instruction was eagerly utilized by the active-brained boy, until, at eighteen years of age, he felt and knew his ability to cope successfully with a course of professional study. After five years of arduous and continuous effort, he reaped the honors of a signally successful graduation in medicine. His early professional labors were confined to a rural district of Pennsylvania until 1867, when a desire and determination to achieve success and win a name, brought him to the City of Buffalo, in his native State, where the field was broader and opportunities more plentiful.

Goaded onward by an active brain and tremendous energy, we next find him, located in a small room on an obscure street, preparing and putting on the market carefully prepared remedies and specifics for the relief of the multitude beyond the range of a narrow circuit of daily calls.

Another change, and we find him in a large building on Main Street, and the recipient of the first-fruits of growing public confidence.

Dr. Pierce, like every other brainy man of the age, was and is a firm believer in the liberal use of printer's ink, and from his Main-Street establishment he dispatched the message of his healing power throughout the entire country. The Doctor knew, as now the whole world knows, the merits of his skillfully devised and prepared remedies, and was only eager for their public test. A few more years and the largest and handsomest structure in the City of Buffalo towered toward the sky in monumental acknowledgment of the vital energy and gifted learning of this, our representative American Doctor. The Palace Hotel, for Invalids, as this noble Institution was called, fell an early victim to the flames, but, like a Phœnix, from the ashes of this conflagration sprang up the present mammoth dual structure, furnishing alike a luxurious resort of Health, Rest and Invigoration, and also the birth-place for those standard specifics which are going out in a never-ending flow to all the countries of the earth. It is a positive fact that will astound you, who doubt the power of Energy to conquer, that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is as well known in India to-day as in New York City, and is yet only on the threshold of its destined usefulness.

The World's Dispensary and the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute is a combination of luxurious accommodation and every conceivable comfort and possible curative appliance known to science. It is a haven where chronic diseases and physical afflictions yield to the potent influences of skillful treatment.

In conclusion, we can only say that it ranks in public confidence just where it deserves to stand—foremost amongst the reliable curative establishments of the world.

Let us not fail, as we anticipate our future state, to anticipate also the blessedness of our future home. As we think of those who have gone before us, let us not think of them as merely perfect in holiness, but as rejoicing also in material surroundings formed by him who has made all things beautiful to be the residence of his redeemed.—John De Witt, D. D.

WORK IF YOU WOULD RISE.—Soon after the great Edmund Burke had been making one of his powerful speeches in Parliament his brother, Richard, was found sitting silent in reverie, and when asked by a friend what he was thinking about, he replied: "I have been wondering how Ned has contrived to monopolize all the talents of our family. But then I remember that when we were doing nothing or at play, he was at work." And the force of the anecdote is increased by the fact that Richard Burke was always considered by those who knew him best to be superior in natural talent to his brother; yet the one rose to greatness, while the other lived and died in comparative obscurity. The lesson to all is, if you would succeed in life, be diligent; improve your time; work. "Seest thou a man," says Solomon, "diligent in his business? He shall stand before kings; he shall not stand before"—that is, shall not be ranked with—"mean men."—Selected.

"Really, how well you look. You are much stouter, and look ten years younger than when I saw you a few years ago. Then I did not think you were long for this world." "No," my friend replied, "four years ago I little expected to be in the land of the living at this time. It had for many years seemed unavoidable that I should have a sick spell in the latter part of January. So regularly had this been the case that my family looked for it. Four years ago an attack of pneumonia, in January was followed in February by an attack of neuralgia of the heart. So violent and sudden was the attack, that although within forty rods of my house I was unable to reach it and was carried into a house near where I had been standing." I soon rallied and was carried home. This was succeeded by two lighter attacks. After recovering so I could be about, I was taken down with three successive attacks of renal calculi. Recovering from these I was prostrated with a long siege of diarrhœa, from which the attending physician had little hope of my recovery. I had little strength left; little vitality; recuperative powers seemed gone; I felt completely prostrated. No life, no ambition, no power. I then commenced the Home Treatment. In a few weeks I was able to try work again, although quite feeble and not able to indure fatigue or much labor. I resorted to the Compound Oxygen more regularly, and to my surprise all the old bad feelings gradually disappeared. Life assumed a brighter aspect. Strength and the elasticity of youth in a great measure returned. And now though of three-score and four years, I feel younger, brighter and more active than I did twenty years ago. To Compound Oxygen I give all the credit; and I would recommend all chronically afflicted to try it. Tell all such for me that it will be greatly to their interest if they will call at the office of Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa., and get their advice upon their special cases, which is given free."

A volume of two hundred pages on "Compound Oxygen—Its Mode of Action and Results," will be mailed free to all on receipt of address.

It is the "survival of the fittest." All false doctrines and practices come to an inevitable death. Corrupt churches die away, and only the children of God survive. Singularly enough, the true faith discloses itself in every legitimate form of human progress, as well as in holy sacrifices and an unworldly life. Wherever religious belief becomes corrupted, intellectual and industrial progress feels it, as has been illustrated, and is to-day, in portions of Europe, and eminently so in Mexico. Wherever a pure Christian church exists, there will be a thrifty and improving community. This is true in our social life. It rarely occurs that this inspiring manliness and nobleness, earnestness and diligence, even in worldly business, are not the outcome of a true, exemplary, sweet, consistent Christian home. There is no inspiration to be compared with true goodliness. "It has the promise of the life that now is, as well as of that which is to come."—Zion's Herald.

'Many imitators, but no equal, has Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy.

There are not two Christs. The men who know the most of Christ are the men who study both Testaments, and who hold to the divinity of both.—Rev. David Gregg.

"Imperfect digestion and assimilation produce disordered conditions of the system which grow and are confirmed by neglect. Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier, by its tonic properties cures indigestion and gives tone to the stomach.

What is it, in truth, to adorn the gospel, but letting the gospel adorn us: and what is loving God, but letting God love us?—Dr. E. B. Hulbert.

LADIES who experience a sense of weakness and sometimes lameness of the back should use Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier. It will supply the much-needed strength and overcome all weakening irregularities.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

A fire at Elkhorn, La., destroyed one hundred dwellings and seventy-eight business houses. There was little insurance.

The weather is exceedingly severe east, northeast and west. The river is frozen over at Louisville, and the gorge at St. Louis has suspended navigation.

The committee representing the employees of the Reading railroad and the miners of the Schuylkill and Wyoming regions have ordered a strike of all the employees. It is believed, however, that the coal combine is in full operation, and the shop hands show no disposition to strike, and that the knights of labor are losing ground along the road.

The strike on the Reading railroad has ended and the men have returned to work. All trains are running as usual.

Bishop Keane has presented the Pope a copy of the Constitution of the United States on the occasion of his jubilee.

Experts have examined Chicago's gas well and pronounced that the gas is from nature's reservoir.

Bills for the construction of public buildings already introduced in the Senate aggregate about $6,000,000.

The Inter-state Commerce Commission has referred back to Congress the interpretation of the inter-state commerce law respecting express companies.

Naval experts have been surprised by recent reports of the discovery of grave defects in the steel intended to be used in the construction of the cruiser "Charleston," now being built at the California ship yards. It failed to stand the pressure of the hydraulic jack.

The surplus in the Treasury for December is $15,250,000.

A collision on the Cincinnati Southern road took place near Greenwood, Ky., by which six lives were lost and a number of persons injured. The conductor misread orders.

The license to sell liquor, in Atlanta, Ga., was reduced to $1,000. The limits of permissible sales were extended, and the hour of closing liquor shops was changed to ten o'clock.

Mr. Patrick Mealey, commissioner of police and public buildings, and a leading politician of this city, who was shot and mortally wounded on January 1, was buried on the following day. The funeral is said to have been the largest ever witnessed in this city.

A most disastrous conflagration occurred in Salida, Colo., on January 2. Twenty-one houses in the business portion of the town were destroyed. Loss estimated at $200,000.

The New York Republicans have protested against the confirmation of Mr. Lamar, who has been nominated to a seat on the Supreme bench.

FOREIGN.

Austria has made advances to Russia by which continual peace is assured.

Lord Lytton, in presenting his credentials to President Carnot, as British Ambassador, complimented the President in the name of the Queen, and it was replied to in the same strain.

Snow-storms are reported throughout Europe and travel has been greatly impeded.

The Servian Ministry has resigned and the resignation has been accepted by King Milan. This is considered in the light of a check to Russia.

The war cloud is floating away. Prince Bismarck has spoken in favor of peace and Russia is not in condition to force a war upon Germany and her allies.

The Czar, with some of the royal household, is to visit the Caucasus next spring.

Seditious handbills are being distributed in St. Petersburg, appealing to all students in the universities to join the party of liberty. The authorities have decided not to reopen the universities until February.

The Prime Minister of Roumania has asked the Chamber of Deputies for $12,000,000 for armament. The Senate passed a bill increasing the number of recruits for 1888.

The Prussian and German Departments of Justice have appointed a commission to study and report upon the American penal system with the view of making it the basis of a new system in Germany.

Again the report comes of the improvement in the condition of the Crown Prince.

The tension between Russia and Austria is relaxing. The Russian Ambassador at Vienna has assured Count Kalnoky that Russia is pursuing a policy of peace.

The severe weather has very much interfered with contemplated military movements in Russia and Austria. The Czar is supposed to be planning a descent on Bulgaria. The forces along the Bender and Odessa lines now number 85,000 men. The Black Sea fleet is being hurriedly equipped for service.

The Italian papers say that Mr. Parnell may still count with the Vatican for its support in the efforts being made to obtain autonomy for Ireland.

The Czar has sent a friendly letter to the Pope, in which he expresses a hope for better relations between the Greek and Catholic Churches in Russia.

WANTED.—Agents for the marvelous work, "Fifty Years in the Church of Rome." Address F. Q. REYNOLDS, 153 Julia street, New Orleans.

Southern Cultivator and Christian Advocate.

By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer to new subscribers the Southern Cultivator and Dixie Farmer, combined with the ADVOCATE, for $2 50 for the two publications for one year. Commencing with this date, the price to old subscribers will remain the same as heretofore—$2 75 with only twenty-five cents extra to either of the above amounts for "Dickson's System of Farming." These rates are postage prepaid. All orders must be accompanied by cash in full; no allowance for commission to agents, and both papers must be ordered at same time. We will, however, fill orders to subscribers who failed to take advantage of the club rate when they last renewed for $1 for the Cultivator for one year.

All lovers of beautiful flowers should send to the Dingee & Conard Co., West Grove, Pa., for their new guide which is elegantly illustrated, and fully describes over fifteen hundred newest and choicest varieties of Roses, Hardy Plants, Spring Bulbs and Flower seeds, and tells how to grow them. Over five hundred varieties of Roses alone the newest, rarest and best—are described. This company is not only perfectly reliable, but is the largest Rose-growing concern in the country, having over sixty large greenhouses. They have been established thirty years, and in addition to their large business in Roses, handle all kinds of flower seeds, shrubs, bulbs, etc.

Another Extraordinary Offer.

After this date we will include in our club arrangement the New York Weekly World, the price of which, including all postage, will be three dollars. This amount will entitle the subscriber to one copy of the "World's History of the United States," post paid.

This history is on a new plan. It is the record of the events of our history in the order in which they happened. There are no moralizings, no opinions put forth, no criticisms offered in regard to anything. It is not a political record merely, but one of all sorts of facts that have contributed to make our history. Discoveries, inventions, financial and literary matters, are all noted. One merit of the work is, that it can not grow old. The date of an event, when once ascertained, is fixed for all time. The book has twenty-four very good illustrations. We regard it as a valuable book for every student.

Old and new subscribers are entitled to the premium. Subscribers who have already paid will receive the History and the Weekly World one year by sending one dollar. Cash to accompany all orders.

HUGH JAMESON, JR.,
Publisher.

Church Bells.

We have received a copy of the Catalogue of the Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., of Cincinnati, Ohio, containing descriptions and prices of Church, School and Fire Alarm Bells, and over 1,000 Testimonials from purchasers in the United States and Canada. The testimonials are from every State and Territory, and a large proportion of them from Ministers, and speak in the highest terms of the bells, the prices are remarkably low, and within reach of even feeble communities. Churches needing bells—and none should be without—will do well to write for the Catalogue, which is offered free to all who may apply.

To Our Agents.

Do not fail to read and clip out for reference our new rate for the Southern Cultivator and Dixie Farmer. These prices should enable you to get new subscribers with the greatest ease. Try it. Some time later there will be a good offer made for the benefit of agents.

Cornell University has decided to dispense altogether with honors. All mention of them will be omitted from the commencement programs.

How to Make Money.—Plant Le Conte & Keiffer's pear trees; diversify your industry. One party last season got over $700 net from less than two acres. Every planter should lose no time in setting an orchard; the extra labor will not be felt to keep one to ten acres in condition. Le Conte & Keiffer's are blight proof. Correspondence solicited. One, two and three-year-old trees for sale.

THE SABBATH.—The time has come for earnest, concentrated effort on the part of all who believe that the citizen should enjoy, without restraint, his weekly rest day; and the worshiper, his privilege of a quiet Sabbath. The toiling thousands who are compelled to endure the exactions of seven days' labor in our stores and on our railways, appeal to us for help. The laboring man should see that whatever tends to break down our Sunday laws diminishes his chances of finding relief. The employer should see that his personal interest is enhanced by yielding to every man in his employ his proper rights in this respect. Corporations should know that obedience to God, and a due regard to the necessary rest of their employees, ensure in the end the best dividends.—Pearl of Days.

EDUCATIONAL.

Mansfield Female College.

THE FALL TERM will open Wednesday, September 15, 1887.

The Faculty has been strengthened by the accession of Rev. M. S. Watts, of Virginia, who will have the discipline of the College, and Prof. D. F. Hoddle, also of Virginia, who, with many years of teaching experience, both in the boarding department and in school work, and their families, will add much to the social advantages of the pupils.

Other highly qualified teachers have been secured for the Literary, Music and Art Departments.

Annual rate for board and tuition from one hundred and sixty-five to one hundred and eighty-five dollars, according to class. Music, instrumental or vocal, and art lessons, five dollars per month of four weeks, extra.

Instruction in French, ten dollars per year. Use of piano for practice, ten dollars. Incidental expense for the year for board, tuition and single course in music or art, paid in advance, two hundred dollars.

A deposit of five dollars for each term must be made for purchase of books and stationery.

Pupils must furnish their own bed-clothing and pillows; towels and toilet articles.

The College is the property of the Louisiana Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the daughters of members of this Conference receive free tuition in the Literary and Music Departments.

During the steadily increasing patronage during the past four years, the Board of Managers have made arrangements for increasing the capacity and comfort of the buildings, and beautifying the grounds.

Mansfield is on the line of the Texas and Pacific R. R., 288 miles from New Orleans, and forty miles from Shreveport.

JUNE'S REJOINDER.

BY W. B. H.

Is it well to appear
As with shiver and fear
O'liver December, senior month of the year?
Is it wise thus to yearn,
To kindle and burn
With desire, both in season, for a rose or a fern?
Why not soliloquize
With lavish-lidded eyes,
And content thee with age, that should crown thee so wise?

Thou art double my age,
Oh, silver-haired sage,
Who tos-Time hast long wrought and thy silver is wage.
Amid Time's silver hair
Shows forth everywhere,
They must gather Time's silver with care—yes, with care.
Then for me be my whapd!
Of green and my staple
Fresh wealth; furrow not thy serious face with a cribple.

Do not sigh for troughtion
Of form nor complexion;
Thou art blest in thy cycle. Oh! be full of contrition
For murmurs, and glory,
Mouth, mastoid and heary,
That thine eyes saw His birth—thou canst tell the blest story
Of Eve-tell and the star,
And of anthems from far
From the snowy-winged host, from the gates ajar.

Thou hast echoed the tongue
Of the bells that have rung
In the Christmas morn, and the Te Deum sung.
And thou wouldst bemoan
When from zone across zone,
Thou hast drilled with hosanna—and echoed Owre One:
No, no, my December,
While to ash Ogre is ember,
His day wilt thou herald, thy glory remember.

Do thou learn and believe
That the months all weave
Their coloring bright. Life's woof to relieve;
And their gold and their green
Are but woven between
Thy lines of clear crystal and thy mantle's white sheen.
We bow to thee, king,
Thou diamond-pennoned thing;
Thou herald of Promise, that earth shall take wing!

Thou voice not thy woes,
But treasure thy snows,
Immaculate, purer than Eden's first rose;
And June will rejoice,
With million-toned voice,
And thy memory laurel as king of her choice;
And to prove the sweet part
Of her love without art,
From thine eyes shall she shine, and glow in thine heart.

The Agony in the Garden—Its Cause.

BY REV. A. H. CAMERON.

I do not put the above heading to this article for the purpose of leading anyone to conclude that I know and am going to give the cause of our Savior's agony in Gethsemane. To my own mind the heading is more of the nature of a question I would have answered than the intimation of a fact I would disclose. Nor is the design of this article to provoke discussion. There are occasions which seem almost too sacred to admit of controversy. This is one of them. I write more as an honest enquirer after truth. Maybe this is one of the incomprehensible facts in the plan of human redemption with which we are to content ourselves without a knowledge of the cause. If so, and an honest investigation discovers this fact, we should be content. To my mind the causes usually given are not satisfactory. Some seem to be without foundation, others unreasonable, and others wholly inadequate. So far as I know, the principal theories on this subject are: 1. He was enduring the wrath of God. 2. He was suffering the full penalty of the law. 3. It was his last desperate conflict with Satan. For the first I find no authority in Scripture. Neither do I see anything in reason to justify it. Why should he have borne the wrath of God? He says: "I came to do the will of my Father." (John vi, 39.) Again he says: "It is my meet to do the will of him that sent me; and to finish his work." (John iv, 34.) The mind instinctively turns away from the thought, coming on this mission and devoting himself to it as he did, that he should become the object of the Father's wrath. How harmonious with every sentiment of justice, in view of these facts, is the repeated declaration of the Father: "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased." As for the second theory, to my mind this involves an impossibility and an absurdity. We must bear in mind that it was only the humanity that suffered agony. Divinity can not suffer. To suppose this, is to question the infinite perfections of the divine character. Suffering argues imperfection. He became man that he might suffer. Again: It was by merit and not the amount or character of his sufferings that he was to make atonement. Not the character of the suffering, but of the sufferer was to redeem. But how could one human being endure in so short a time all the punishment due to all the sins of all sinners, both for time and eternity? But if he endured the full penalty of the law, then all sinners must escape, or God must enforce a double penalty for sin. We must not thus impeach the justice of God. And as for the third theory, the cause is wholly inadequate. Had he not met and vanquished Satan on other fields? Did he not know his full strength, and that he was just as able to vanquish him again? I can not think of the Savior as being thus "astounded, confounded, overwhelmed," as Dr. Summers puts it, in the presence of this enemy, and then sing:

"And satan trembles when I come,
The weakest saint upon his knees."

Now, Mr. Editor, may I suggest the possibility of the cause of the agony being a full realization of the relation of his condescension, humiliation, teachings, miracles, and now his death, sustained to the work of redemption, with a consciousness of the full meaning, magnitude and consequences of that work in its relation to sin as a terrible fact in the moral universe, and much more terrible in its disastrous consequences upon the moral character of man here and his eternal destiny hereafter? May I also suggest that this consciousness had been cumulative, and that it just now reached its perfection? For we must not forget that it was the mere Christ Jesus who suffered, and that "he increased in stature and in wisdom." And may it not be that never till that hour had he fully conceived the mysterious relation he sustained to the salvation of a race of immortal beings; how he was to "bear our sins in his own body on the tree," "taste death for every man," and "take away the sin of the world." There was no unnecessary provision for the work of the atonement. It required all that Christ was, did, said and suffered. And now the last contribution was laid upon his mental and physical powers and energies, and they were to be taxed to their utmost capacity. This was done in this last hour by this full revelation of his relation to the atonement.

WEST POINT, MISS., Jan. 6, 1888.

In Memoriam.

REV. WILLIAM G. MILLSAPS.

BY REV. J. T. NICHOLSON.

Rev. William Green Millsaps was born near Pleasant Valley, Copiah county, Miss., April 2, 1831. His father and mother were devout members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. After going to school near home for a time, he went to Hanover College, Ind., where he continued until he had finished his education to the senior year. He then went to Asbury, now DePau University, where he graduated at the head of his class in 1853. But he was not permitted to take the first honors, as he had attended this college but one year. His literary advantages were good; and he improved them so well that he soon took a prominent place in the public estimation as a man of learning. He was converted at an early age, and joined the church of his parents. The time at which he first felt a divine call to preach the gospel of Christ is unknown to this writer.

Two years after he graduated, he applied for and obtained admission into the Mississippi Conference. His first appointment was Washington, on which he remained two years. While on this work he made his home with the honored and lamented Rev. B. M. Drake. It was also while on this, his first charge, that he was married to Miss Fannie Maliehy, of Jefferson county, Miss., August 14, 1857.

The whole of his itinerant record may be summed up as follows: On circuits, eleven years: district, one year; stations, eight years; Sunday-school agent, two years; supernumerary, three years; superannuated, one year—making a total of twenty-six years in Mississippi Conference.

Bro. Millsaps was a preacher of superior ability; to see and hear him was to acknowledge that his was a master-touch. He rose rapidly in popular favor.

Within six years from the date of his first appointment we find him in the front rank, filling some of the most important places in his Conference. But his intense labor and ceaseless study which had won for him his early laurels, both as student and preacher, proved too great a tax for his never-too-robust constitution. Before he had been ten years in the ministry his nervous system was shattered and his general health failed rapidly. Still he toiled on through many years of suffering, such as no one can describe or properly appreciate, save those who have passed through a like fiery experience.

Those who had the privilege of hearing Rev. William G. Millsaps before his health was impaired will remember him as one of the most efficient, brilliant preachers of that day. It was the privilege of this writer to hear him but once, and that during his last pastorate. It was at camp meeting, at a popular hour, before a large audience. The glorious impression, and still more glorious results, of that sermon and that hour can never be forgotten.

His last appointment was Hazlehurst station. His first year there was a very successful one. The church was thronged with eager, delighted audiences from service to service, and from week to week, through almost the entire year. During this year, forty or more persons united with the church, some of whom are now its staunch supporters. It is worthy of note that during this year, under him as pastor, that Willie, now Rev. William E. Linfield, joined the church. The people were so well pleased with his ministry and success that his return was asked for, and he was sent back. But his health utterly broke down early in the year, and he was able to do very little work. At the next session of the Conference he was granted a supernumerary relation, and was never after in the active work.

While in Cincinnati, where he had gone for medical treatment, the last summons came. He died on February 25, 1887, aged fifty-five years, ten months and twenty-one days. While he died away from his home, family and friends, yet we fondly and confidently cherish the hope that he was not alone, but that the Savior whom he had so often preached to the delight and comfort of others, and upon whose altar he early laid his cultivated talents, was with him in this last struggle to give him final victory, and that as he laid down his weary, suffering body into the quiet rest of the grave, that his freed spirit passed triumphantly into the paradise of God, where the "wicked cease from troubling and the weary be at rest."

HAZLEHURST, Miss., Dec. 1887.

Money and Christ.

As some of our readers, who are holding trust-funds for the Lord, may not have seen that remarkable book, "Our Country," written by Dr. Josiah Strong, we print some passages for their especial benefit.

"Money is power in the concrete. It confers on the wise man a sort of omnipresence: By means of it the same man may, at the same moment, be building a mission church in Dakota, translating the Scriptures in Africa, preaching the gospel in China, and scattering the precepts of ten thousand Bibles in India. It is the modern miracle-worker. Sarah Hosmer, of Lowell, though a poor woman, supported a student in the Nestorian Seminary who became a preacher of Christ. Five times she gave fifty dollars, earning the money in a factory, and sent out five native pastors to Christian work. When more than sixty years old she longed to furnish Nestoria with one more preacher of Christ; and, living in an attic, she took in sewing until she had accomplished her cherished purpose. In the hands of this consecrated woman money transformed the factory girl and the seamstress into a missionary of the cross, and then multiplied her six-fold. God forbid that I should attribute to money power which belongs only to faith, love and the Holy Spirit.

"The kingdoms of this world will not have become the kingdoms of our Lord until the money power has been Christianized. What is needed is not simply an increased giving, but a radically different conception of our relations to our possessions. Most Christian men need to discover that they are not proprietors, apportioning their own, but simply trustees of God's property. When the Lord returned from the far country to reckon with his servants to whom he had intrusted his goods, he demanded not simply a small portion of the increase, but held his servants accountable for both principal and interest—'mine own with usury.' Then every dollar that belongs to God must serve him. Does one-tenth belong to God? Then ten-tenths are his. He did not one-tenth create us, and we nine-tenths create ourselves. He did not one-tenth redeem us and we nine-tenths redeem ourselves. A narrow view at this point is likely to lead us into fanaticism. Certain expenditures upon one's self are necessary to highest growth and greatest usefulness, and are, therefore, not only permissible, but obligatory. All the money which will yield a larger return of usefulness in the world by being spent on ourselves or families than by being applied otherwise, is used for the glory of God, and is better spent than it would have been if given to missions. And whatever money is spent on self that would have yielded larger returns of usefulness, if applied otherwise, is misapplied; and, if it has been done intelligently, it is a case of embezzlement. Every expenditure which serves to broaden and beautify and upbuild character is worthy, for character is the supreme end of life. Character is the one thing in the universe, so far as we know, which is of absolute worth, and, therefore, beyond all price. The glory of the Infinite is all of it the glory of character."

We give our readers, lay as well as cleric, a few more quotations from Dr. Strong's book, Our Country:

"But what of the beautiful? How far may we gratify our love of it? A delicate and difficult question to answer, especially to the satisfaction of those living in a luxurious civilization. It is difficult to determine how useful the beautiful may be. Doubtless, at times, as Victor Hugo has said, 'The beautiful is as useful as the useful: perhaps more so.' The ministry of art widens with the increasing refinement of the nervous organization. There are those to whom the beautiful is in an important sense a necessity. God loves the beautiful. Each flower would yield its seed and perpetuate its kind as surely if each blossom were not a smile of its Creator. The stars would swing on in their silent, solemn march as true to gravitation if they did not glow like mighty rubies and emeralds and sapphires. The clouds would be as faithful carriers of the bounty of the sea if God did not paint their morning and evening glory from the rainbow as his palette. Yes, God loves the beautiful, and intended we should love it; but he does not have to economize his power; his resources are not limited. When he spreads the splendors of the rising East it is not at the cost of bread enough to feed ten thousand starving souls. Art has an educational value in our homes and schools and parks and galleries; but how far may one who recognizes his Christian stewardship conscientiously go in the encouragement of art, and the gratification of taste? If every man did his duty, gave according to ability, there would be abundant provision for all Christian and philanthropic work, and substance left for the patronage of art. But not one man in a hundred, is doing his duty; hence those who appreciate the necessities of Christian work must fill the breach, and are not at liberty to make expenditures which would otherwise be wholly justifiable. Sin is abnormal, the world is out of joint, and such facts lay on us obligations which would not otherwise exist, make sacrifices necessary, forbid the gratification of tastes which are natural and might otherwise be indulged. Thrice true is this of us who live in this great national crisis and world emergency. It is well to play the violin, but not when Rome is burning.

"The advocators of self-indulgence pose as the vindicators of God's love. They tell us that he gave all good things for the uses of his children. Yes, God is even more beneficent than such suppose. So greatly does he desire one joy that he would fain have us know the blessedness of self-sacrifice for others. The writer has no sympathy with asceticism. Good taste is not unchristian; beauty often costs no more than ugliness. Away with the idea of penance. It belies God and caricatures the Christian religion. It differs from the self-sacrifice which Christ taught as widely as the suicide of Cato differed from the heroic death of Arnold Von Winkelried. Christ did not die for the sake of dying, but to save a world; and he does not inculcate self-denial for the sake of self-denial, but for the sake of others.

"There are multitudes in the land who, after having given one-tenth of their increase, might fare sumptuously every day, gratify every whim and live with the most lavish expenditure. Would that fulfill the law of Christ, 'If any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross daily and follow me?'"

Again we present our readers with some extracts from "Our Country," by Dr. Strong:

"The law of tithes was given when the race was in its childhood and the relations of money to the kingdom of God were radically different from what they are now. The Israelite was not held responsible for the conversion of the world. He was required simply to make provision for his own worship. Money did not then represent the salvation of the world. Moses prescribed rules. Christ inculcated principles—rules for children, principles for men. No one has given up the measure of his ability until he has sacrificed. It binds all alike. Christian people will agree that missionaries are called to make great sacrifices for Christ; but why does the obligation rest on them any more than on all? Does the missionary belong absolutely to God? No less do we. Do the love and sacrifice of Christ lay him under boundless obligation? Christ died for every man. Why is not the rich man in America under as great obligation to practice self-sacrifice for the salvation of the heathen as the missionary in Central Africa? To live in luxury, and then leave a legacy for missions, does not fulfill the law of sacrifice. Legacies to benevolent societies ought to be greatly multiplied, and would be if the principle of Christian stewardship were accepted; but such a legacy can not compound for an unconsecrated life. If the priest or Levite who passed by on the other side wrote a codicil to his will providing for wounded wayfarers, I fear it was hardly counted unto him for righteousness. Christ said, 'Go ye into all the world,' not to the twelve, but to the whole body of believers. If we can not go in person, we are under obligations to go by proxy. The rich man has more power to send than the missionary has to go. He can, perhaps, send a dozen. And why is he not called to make as great sacrifices in sending as the missionary in going? God does not ask of any two the same gift, because to no two are his gifts the same; but he does require of every man the same sacrifice. 'Whosoever he be of you that forsaketh not all that he hath, he can not be my disciple.' It is the sacrifice, not the gift, which is the essential thing in God's eye.

"But,' says one, 'I must not give of my capital, because that would impair my ability to give in the future.' Money, like corn, has a two-fold power—that of ministering to want, and that of reproduction. If there were a famine in the land, no matter how sore it might be, it would be folly to grind up all the seed-corn for food. But, on the other hand, suppose in the midst of the famine, after feeding their families and doling out a handful in charity, the farmers put all the increase back into the ground, and do it year after year, while the world is starving. That would be something worse than foolish. It would be criminal. Yet that is what multitudes of men are doing. Instead of applying the power in money to the end for which it was entrusted to them, they use it almost wholly to accumulate more power. A miller might as well spend his life building his dam high and higher, and never turn the water to his wheel. Bishop Butler said to his secretary: 'I should be ashamed of myself if I could leave ten thousand pounds behind me.' Many professed Christians die disgracefully and 'wickedly rich.' The sin and shame, however, lie not in the fact that the power was gathered, but that it was unwielded.

"Oh, that men would accept the testimony of Christ touching the blessedness of giving! He who sacrifices most, loves most; and he who loves most, is most blessed. Love rejoices to give all; it does not measure its sacrifice. It was Judas, not Mary, who calculated the value of the alabaster-box of ointment. He who is infinitely blessed is the Infinite Giver, and man made in his likeness was intended to find his highest blessedness in the completest self-giving."

Taking Up Collections.

The Bishop, at a recent session of an Annual Conference, was disposed to hackle one of the preachers in respect to the way he took his collections. The preacher referred to had stated that he took all at once, giving each contributor the privilege of specifying how his contribution should be appropriated. The Bishop replied: "You made hash of it." Now, two questions seem appropriate on this subject: First, is it not a matter of expediency on circuits, where the preacher makes but monthly rounds, to take all of the collections at the same time? I know that our Discipline requires that "The collections for the Conference and General Board shall not be taken up together, except at the anniversary meeting held during the session of an Annual Conference;" but I fail to see that it is contrary to this article to take all the collections at one time when the matter is clearly defined and explained, that each contributor may specify to which his contribution shall be applied. This is not taking them together in my opinion. As to the matter of expediency, every preacher who has served a circuit of from four to ten appointments knows well what the trouble would be to take each collection separately, giving a day to each, for it would not do to take more than one at each appointment. For example: The first round he would take a collection for foreign missions, and get about one-third of assessment. At his second round he would try the domestic missionary collection, with little, if any, better success. At his third round he would attempt to raise Conference Fund; and at his fourth, church extension, with no better result. It is apparent at that rate that he would, of necessity, take a collection at each church or preaching-place every round—protracted meeting not excepted—in order to have collections full. And, after all, perhaps fail to round-up everything. It is equally apparent to every preacher who has been so fortunate as to have served a circuit in a farming district that there are at least five months in a year that the people, as a rule, have very little money; indeed, many of them none. It would be utterly useless during these months to make an attempt at a collection.

Now, the second question: If a person who was very hungry could get only a very small quantity of something in the way of sweetmeats or dainties, but could get all the hash that was necessary to satisfy his hunger, would it not be better every way to take a "square meal" of the hash, though not so palatable? It is—and every one knows it—much better every way to get all the assessments.

In the first place, the funds are necessary to carry on the different lines of work. The assessments certainly would not have been made had they not been considered necessary. No one will question the statement that it is to the interest of the preacher to collect all assessments: as all are aware of the fact that preachers are measured largely by their reports along this line. What has anyone to say about this (almost) universal practice, above referred to, of taking up collections. Is it right or wrong? Is it contrary to the Discipline, or is it not? Young preachers have been encouraged in this practice by those older, and even by presiding elders.

"Bro. T. B. M.," in North Mississippi Conference Notes, says, "We lose several of our best men by transfer this year." He then mentions, kindly, Rev. T. W. Dye and Rev. E. B. Ramsey. It may be that Bro. T. B. M. did not know Rev. J. O. Bennett was transferred to Louisiana Conference. Bro. B., it is true, is a home-preacher—in his third year when he left us: but a good preacher. I have had but very little association with him since he joined our Conference; but he preached well before joining, and I have heard, from competent authority, that he has grown rapidly within the three years of his itineracy. May the Lord bless Bro. B. in his new and strange surroundings!

Letter from Vaiden, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: The old year is gone, the new has come, and we are glad to see it. We have been returned to the good people of Vaiden circuit for a second term, and we have promised most solemnly to do more and better than we ever did before. Hope you will not think, by our beginning upon you, that we are incapable of keeping that promise. The inevitable waste-basket is always a gracious outlet for the perplexing and vexatious things of an editor: but we common people have to endure. Yes, we promised to do better and honestly: but, before we could get under way, our tempers or tongues had slipped, and things gone terribly wrong, and we are almost afraid to promise again, lest a worse thing come upon us.

Mr. Editor, it does seem to me that, with your experience in the comforts of a waste-basket, you would not rest day nor night until you had invented a waste-basket for wicked tempers and words in the homes of your readers, that would make them feel like an editor does when he gets a thing like this. I tell you, it is greatly needed in a family that is orthodox like ours, and would be kept about as well filled as anyone in the family of Advocates, and the seniors would find it about as useful as any members of the household.

There is another discovery we are anxious for somebody to make, and it would diminish the size of the proposed waste-basket wonderfully. That is, how to get an orthodox Methodist preacher's family through twelve months on $600, and keep out of debt. I tell you, it takes such close "nipping and tucking," that it is sometimes a question which is the greater sin, the "nipping and tucking," or debt. Sometimes while father is praying, "Good Lord, deliver us" from debt, mother and the children are praying, "Good Lord, deliver us" from "nipping and tucking." Sometimes we get both; but, let me tell you, the last state of that man is worse than the first. If some Methodist preacher does not find this out, no one else need ever try, for many of them live on the very borders of discovery. Oh! if somebody were to say, "Eureka," what a rush of correspondents he would have the beginning of this new year.

Yes, we are making a good start for the new year. Our church here is undergoing some repairs, and the painter's brush, with a few more good days, will make it look like we meant to keep our word. This is the work of the Ladies' Aid Society. Next will come the parsonage—painting and furnishing complete, if possible, by the first of February. The brethren are helping the ladies of the circuit to do this.

The second Sunday in February is designated for missionary day at Vaiden. The third Sunday, at Columbiana, missionary day and Quarterly Conference occasion. We have a prayer meeting at every appointment.

Yes, yes, give us another prohibition Christmas. The Southern Express Company does make a little out of the jug business, but it is a thousand times more preferable than open bell gates all the year round.

We have had an opportunity recently to exercise ourselves upon that Bible injunction, "Be angry and sin not." I would advise your readers not to pray for it.

That which you can't make out, scratch out. If you fail utterly, apply to the source of comfort—the waste-basket.

I am going to send you some new subscribers and renewals to the ADVOCATE. We all like it up here. The Lord give us success in soul-saving this year!

The Threatening Peril.

BY REV. W. W. BOYD, D. D.

Since 1850 nearly ten millions of immigrants have come to our shores. New York City, the metropolis of America, is the third German city in the world; Vienna being first, Berlin second. With the Germans of New York City alone one could form a community whose population would exceed that of Hamburg and Bremen put together. St. Louis, Cincinnati and Chicago are essentially German. One-half of the population of Minnesota was born in foreign lands. Thus, while our fathers dealt with a comparatively homogeneous people, we have to do with a heterogeneous.

The influence of this vast immigration in our civilization is apparent. The immigrant clings with great tenacity to his own nationality, and reluctantly submits to any process of real assimilation to our institutions. Holding fast to the customs of fatherland, he remains, in large measure, separate and distinct from the body of Americans. This is the reason that the majority of our foreign population are open and confessed Sabbath-breakers.

In Berlin, with a million inhabitants, there were, in 1872 (when I was a student in the University), not more than seventy houses of worship, including Jewish synagogues as well as Protestant and Catholic Churches, and even these were rarely filled. In 1876, and again in 1880, I found the same state of things existing. In Paris there was the same disproportion between the population and the church accommodations, and in many branches of industry laborers were hard at work on Sunday as if there were no day of rest. Yet, as Dr. Thompson says, "Nobody seemed to feel any concern or responsibility for this state of things. As for the community at large, religion seemed to have no grip upon the conscience, no sway over the affections, no hold on the pocket, no place in the plans of life, and no control over its practices."

And infidelity is fast reproducing these same results in this Christian land. Those who live in large cities, especially in the West, realize the dangers that threaten. Sunday is becoming more and more a holiday. Continental customs are fast destroying the sanctity of the Sabbath. In many American cities beer-gardens are in full blast as much as in Berlin; saloons are open; concerts are numerously attended in the public parks; theatres are filled afternoon and evening; and any attempt on the part of good people to preserve the Christian idea of Sunday and to protect their own rights guaranteed by law to a peaceable and quiet Lord's day, is met by the almost unanimous resistance of the foreign element, supported and encouraged in many instances by the local press, on the specious plea that the execution of the laws for the preservation of the Sabbath is an invasion of personal rights. Thus openly and defiantly law is abrogated and set aside to suit, forsooth, the caprice and passions of law-breakers; and so disregard for all law is instilled into the public mind, and the foundations of social order are weakened and jeopardized.

Has the time not arrived when every lover of our country and its institutions should stand shoulder to shoulder, and heart to heart, against these disturbing and dangerous forces at work in our American civilization, lest these disintegrating tendencies work irreparable injury to our national, social and religious life?—Pearl of Days.

Week of Self-Denial and Prayer.

The following action relative to the week of self-denial and prayer was taken by the Mission Board at its meeting, November 25:

"In view of the good results that followed the observance of the week of self-denial and prayer, as recommended by the Board, August 8-14, 1887:

"Resolved, That we recommend to our pastors and people throughout the church to observe a week of self-denial and prayer for the blessing of God upon our mission fields, and for the replenishment of the missionary treasury during the year 1888—the first week in April being suggested as the time for the Annual Conferences whose sessions have already been held; the time to be fixed by themselves for such as are yet to be held."

I. G. JOHN, Sec.

"Christmas Gift."

Whence the origin, and what the significance, of this form of salutation, so prevalent throughout Christendom? The slave on the old Southern plantation was wont to wake the dawn of the twenty-fifth day of December, thrusting his head into the door of the "white folks' house," with the cry, "Christmas gift, ole master! Christmas gift, ole mistiss!" and then to the younger members of the household, "Christmas gift, Miss Mary! Christmas gift, Mars William!" Little children, waking with the morning light, leap from their warm beds on the crisp December atmosphere, with the joyous shout, "Christmas gift, papa, mamma, brother, sister, Christmas gift!" Friends meet in the social circle and in the public place, and greet each other with this pleasant salutation. I met an old friend last Sabbath (Christmas Day) morning, and, while we stopped on the sidewalk to exchange a few friendly words, he said, "Christmas gift," his furrowed face lighting up at the same time with a softened ray of joy. The words are frequently uttered with a feeling of expectancy, and often rewarded by some kindly token or gift.

Whence this custom? Has it come by chance? Has it come by the original suggestion and common consent of the whole Christian people? Nay: but to our minds Providence had somewhat to do both in its origin and its significance. For, as God makes even the wrath of man to praise him, so, also, does he make the universal custom of men to praise him, and to work out his purposes of wisdom and goodness.

"Christmas gift," as we hear it now, from a thousand glad voices; is a re-echo of the announcement of the angel to the shepherds on that first Christmas morning: "Unto you is born—given—this day a Savior which is Christ the Lord." It tells the world anew of a Savior born—the Father's first great Christmas gift to the world. Every joyous heart that finds expression in this Christmas-gift salutation, feels a throb of the great joy and re-announces the good tidings "which shall be to all people." The advent of Christ into the world was the most stupendous event in the annals of history—an event radiant with divine glory, and burdened with the divine goodness. And in the wonderful providence of God this great event is published again to the world, in the joyful outburst of "Christmas gift," from millions of happy voices. Wittingly or unwittingly, the utterance of "Christmas gift" on every returning anniversary of our Lord's birth declares anew that Christ the Savior is born!

God gave the word to the angel, the angel told it to the listening shepherds, the shepherds made it known abroad, and now great is the multitude of them that publish it, in the cry of "Christmas gift," on each returning anniversary. Thus, by an unusual method, and in unwonted places, the gospel of the grace of God is proclaimed. In palatial homes, in humble cottages, and cabins of the lowly as well, in the city full, and in the quiet village, in the valley low, and on the mountain-top, the Christmas salutation is heard, repeating again and again the "good tidings of great joy."

A Good Way to Begin.

MR. EDITOR: Please give notice that my address will be, Water Valley, Miss.

The good people of this place have proved their fidelity to the church, and appreciation of the situation of a homeless itinerant preacher, by purchasing a nice residence for the presiding elder, and paying one-half of the cost. No one could have appreciated the kindness of this people more than myself, my family having been on the wing for a month, and no place to rest the foot. May the Lord abundantly bless this good people in this deed of love and mercy!

I find Bro. J. S. Oakley in favor with his people, and doing a good work. The preachers in the district, so far as I have seen, are doing well. I trust the membership in the district, outside of this place, will open their hearts and purses to pay the remaining one-half on the parsonage.

WATER VALLEY, MISS., Dec. 29, 1887.

The Religious Newspaper.

OBJECTIONS ANSWERED.

Among the reasons which church members give for not taking their denominational paper, three are heard very frequently:

1. "I can not afford the paper." The cost is less than a cent a day: the value can not be measured by money-standards. Economy at some other point than this would be wiser—in dress, food, entertainments or excursions. The serious question is, Who can afford not to put the religious newspaper into his home? And who can afford to remain ignorant of what is doing in the Christian world, and of the churches and works of his own denomination in neighboring cities and States? Some economies are costly. This is one of them.

2. "I can obtain an unsectarian paper for less money." True. The wife of good Dr. Primrose wished her son to go to the fair, rather than her husband, because, as she said: "Moses is a discreet boy, and can buy and sell to a very good advantage. He always stands out and higgles, and actually tires them out till he gets a bargain." But when the acute Moses returned from the fair, he brought, instead of a new horse, a gross of green spectacles, because he could buy the spectacles at a bargain! It will be remembered that his trade was not satisfactory to the family. People who intend to ride, want, for that purpose, not spectacles, but horses. Baptists who would become strong in their faith and acquainted with affairs within their own denomination, need a Baptist paper. An unsectarian paper may contain some excellent things, but it can never be a fit substitute for a denominational paper, any more than a hoe-cake can be a satisfactory substitute for a Thanksgiving turkey.

3. "I haven't time to read the paper." Some mothers make this objection with painful sincerity. But if they would give themselves the change and rest of an occasional half-hour with a good paper, their burdens would press less heavily. An unceasing round of monotonous toil robs a woman of her sprightliness and charm, and leaves her a weary, uninteresting drudge. Unless necessity has fettered her as with iron, the busy mother would do well to control her circumstances for her own occasional recreation and comfort. But usually when this plea is made by a man, it is an indication that he is wasting time to his own hurt; that he is robbing his mind of a culture and of information which, if possessed, would add to his respectability, influence and usefulness; and that he is either reading what is of less value, or is running to and fro in the earth on insignificant errands. People find time to eat and wash their faces and tie their shoes and do a multitude of other necessary things, great and small. When a man says that he has not time to read a religious weekly, he simply proclaims that he does not realize his own needs, or the value of that which he so lightly and slightingly sets aside. It is not a question of lack of time, but of use of time. When the members of our churches realize that it is their duty to be intelligent and well informed on matters of doctrine and denominational enterprise, this excuse will disappear with all the rest, and the religious newspaper will be prized and read as its character and merits deserve.—Watchman.

Job, we learn from the figures of speech he makes use of, had acquired considerable knowledge of astronomy. He mentions and locates a number of the greater constellations—the Great Bear, the Giant and the Seven Stars. In his time all the seven stars of Pleiades were distinctly visible to the unaided eye, although in our day only six are discernible. Mail lines were established from one trading mart to another by the rivers. The boats in which the mails were carried were made of very light material, as reeds or bulrushes. They were very swift. The hulls were woven together like baskets, and covered inside and out, with bitumen which rendered them impervious to water.

Job's country extended as far north as the fortieth degree of north latitude, as the quantity of snow he mentions would not be common much south of that line; that would be to the north-east of Palestine, somewhere in the region of the Caspian Sea. He understood well the physiology of the human physical system. He gives us delineation as correct as any found in modern treatises. We have the fact unexpectedly brought out that the bones and sinews are the latest growth of the fœtus. We have a description of the ancient mode of making cheese. The milk was first converted into curd. This was wheyed off. The solid curd was then put into a bandage or hoop to be pressed; and finally it was put into a net and hung up to cure.

Seals were used on official documents as well as any other important writings, which by them were made inviolable and sacred. Savage tribes in Job's time were accustomed to torture their prisoners taken in war. Persons charged with crimes were allowed to defend themselves before a competent tribunal by witnesses. The ceremony of washing their hands in the presence of the court was the way of pleading "not guilty." Persons were allowed to witness the trial with a view to testify in a higher court. The prisoner had the right of appeal, hence there were appellate courts. He could plead previous good character.—Methodist Protestant.

Mirrors.

We are mirrors. We can not help being reflectors. We reflect in our characters every influence that touches our lives. I am introduced to you. You speak one sentence—I know that you are an Englishman, or an American, or a Spaniard. You are a combination of reflections. We become like those with whom we associate. Two boys in a university in England roomed together for eight years. Toward the end of that time these two boys were so much alike that it became remarkable. They had reflected and reflected until one was almost the image of the other. If you called on one, and found the other one in instead, you might talk to him on the same subjects and expect to receive the same answers that you would from the other. I once knew a girl who was growing so saintly that every one wondered. No one guessed her secret. She became very ill, and a dear friend of hers obtained permission to open a locket which she wore constantly about her neck. There she saw engraved on the inside of the locket the clew to the secret: "Whom having not seen, we love." If we reflect the glory of the character of Christ, we shall be changed from glory to glory—that is, from character to character. How this is I can not tell. Had Paul written in these times he would probably have used the photograph instead of the mirror as a symbol. I can not tell how the impalpable shadow which appears on the plate is fastened there—no one can. And I can not tell how character is changed. We reflect Christ for a time, and then we are changed, and then we are changed again and then again, and so on from glory to glory. First the blade, then the ear, and then the full corn in the ear, and after that it doth not yet appear what we shall be. Do you not see the infinite possibilities of this? We are to go on and on. We are to be God's reflectors in this world.—Prof. Henry Drummond.

NO PATCHWORK.—God never repairs. Christ never patches. The gospel is not here to mend people. Regeneration is not a scheme of moral tinkering and ethical cobbling. What God does, he does new; new heavens, new earth, new body, new heart—"Behold, I make all things new." In the gospel thus we move into a new world and under a new scheme. The creative days are back again. We step out of a regime of jails, hospitals and reformshops. We get live effects direct from God. This is the gospel. The gospel is permanent miracle. God at first hand—that is miracle. The gospel thus does not classify with other scheme of amelioration. They are good, but this is not simply better, but different, distinct, and better because distinct; it works in a new way, and works another work. Compare the wrought chains riveted on the demoniac and the divine Word working a new creation in the demoniac. It is all there. It is like the difference between the impotent Persian bishop the turbulent sea with chains, and the gracious Lord, saying to the troubled sea, "Peace, be still."—Dr. Parkhurst.

Man, without the protection of a Superior Being, is secure of nothing he enjoys, and uncertain of anything he hopes for.

The Saloon in Politics.

In asking my opinion as to "the effect of the saloon in politics in the United States," I presume you use the word "saloon" as an equation for the whole traffic for which it stands. The saloon, per se, has something, undoubtedly, to say for itself, so long as such a thing as the sale of liquor as a beverage is a legitimate business, having the sanction of the law like any other. If liquor may be sold to the rich in bulk, it may surely be sold to the poor by the glass. How this may be regulated, is undoubtedly a legitimate question in politics, just as questions of revenue, import and export duties, and the like, have a rightful place there.

But the relation of the drink traffic, in the large, to politics is a much larger, as it is certainly a pre-eminently important, question. The drink traffic represents, to-day, so enormous a pecuniary interest, it appeals, and with such tremendous effect, to the lowest appetites, and it threatens so directly and so seriously the best interests of the state, that its power to influence politics for evil seems to me one of the most dangerous, if not the most dangerous, of the evil forces in our day and land.

It has learned the efficacy of thorough organization. It is absolutely unscrupulous in the use of money, and in posing as the advocate of "personal liberty," it cleverly steals the livery of heaven in which to serve the devil. Already, it owns legislators; unless resisted, it will own legislatures; and a traffic which destroys homes, degrades manhood, multiplies criminals, crowds our jails and alms-houses, is on the road to such a position of unrestricted power that already in great cities, we see it attempting to dictate the policy of parties and to name our judges, sheriffs, district attorneys, and all others who make or administer the laws.

To undertake to estimate the effects, moral, social, and political, of such a condition of things, is a task larger than your limits permit to me. But the widespread apathy in regard to the whole matter may well fill us with alarm. Not until the people are aroused to the danger that threatens them,—not until they have resolved that no man tainted by participation in this traffic can be tolerated in any public office (however innocent individuals may be of any corrupt fellowship with those who make their laws as to liquor selling by buying the law-makers), can we hope that our common peril may be averted. We are told that the country wants in politics a new and living issue. Well, here it is: vital, urgent, and of a consequence second to none which, in the history of the land, has stirred men's deepest convictions.

From Dr. A. A. Livermore, President of Unitarian Theological Seminary.

The saloon, salon, in French usage meant something very different from what it has of late years come to mean in our country. There it was the gilded, elegant apartment, or hall, in which the gay clubs of society met and the leading wits and ladies of the metropolis held their famous conversazioni.

But the saloon in America has fallen into a bad sense. It stands for the grog-shop, the low, disreputable haunt of the victims of alcohol. Its wit is low slang, its stimulus bad liquors, and its patrons the children of Bacchus. The man without a home, or whose home is repulsive, may think he finds in its rough and ready sociability a comfortable resort, but its steps lead down to infamy and death. It stands next to the brothel on the right hand, and the gambling hell on the left, and gives to both a large share of their fatal fascination. The saloon can not be said to have one redeeming feature about it. It helps no cause of human virtue or happiness, but is the enemy of God and man. It is evil, and only evil, and that continually. With these characteristics we may well predict what would be its effects upon the politics of our country.

1. Its first effects is to sophisticate men's minds as to what constitutes true freedom. Under the pretense of resisting what are falsely called sumptuary laws, it boasts of maintaining the liberty of the citizens, when it really enslaves its victims to a worse tyranny than that of Algiers. The saloon fights against the wholesome laws of restraint that insure true liberty, and binds its deadly chains of habit around its victims from which only death can free them.

2. The saloon debauches politics by arraying the dregs of society against social order, temperance, sobriety, and morality. In the lowest wards of our great cities the saloon is often made the voting station of the precinct where pot-house politicians, ballot stuffers, and pugilists do mostly congregate, hold high revelry, and ply their infernal arts. It is as much as the life of a respectable citizen is worth to cast an honest vote against the dictation of this desperate band of terrorists. The saloon is the Ku-Klux Klan of the North, and an equally deadly foe to the purity and freedom of the ballot.

3. The saloon instinctively allies itself with whatever other mischievous element rules the hour. Be it slavery of old in the South, treason in the Civil War, anarchy in Chicago, socialism, communism, nihilism, atheism, irreligion,—wherever the serpent raises his head, the saloon takes his part.

4. The saloon courts the foreign element in our politics, and divides our political house against itself. In fact, it is essentially a foreign institution, the whisky shop of Ireland and the beer house of London and Berlin, imported into America, and having natural roots in our soil. Go into any town or city and see who are the patrons of the saloon and we shall see that it is hatching a dangerous class to true American ideas and institutions.

5. The saloon as a factor in politics in the United States is busy in corrupting the two great parties, Republican and Democratic, by passing the word along the liquor lines, that this or that man on which ever side, who favors free whisky, shall have the support of the retailers, and wholesalers of spirituous drinks. The saloon is the great briber in the political field, and it draws in its retinue an immense army of drinkers, dealers, manufacturers, bar tenders, draymen, agents, clerks, landlords, hotel keepers, who profit by the stupendous iniquity.

Therefore, the saloon must go. Else morals, liberty, politics, religion, law, and order will go from bad to worse. But the saloon will, shall, and must go.

It is hardly too much to say that in the politics of the State and the municipality, the saloon is the ruling power. It determines, in the majority of cases, who shall be our mayors, and our city councilmen; it dictates the nomination of governors and members of the Legislature; it determines what laws and ordinances shall be passed and enforced. The liquor interest, which includes the distillers, the brewers, the keepers of hotels and drinking-places, and the owners of property used for such purposes, constitutes a force to which the average managing politician and the ambitious political candidate are invariably humbly subservient.

The business of the liquor dealers is lucrative; they have plenty of money to spend, and they are shrewd enough to spend it freely: they will not allow any legal burdens or restrictions to be placed upon their business, if they can help it. The political manager is continually made to feel the pressure of this tremendous money power; it besets him behind and before and lays its hand upon him; from its presence he can not escape. The liquor dealers are but a small fraction of the community, but so determined and insistent are they that they control, to a great extent, the policy of both the great political parties. The word of one liquor seller has more weight with the average political manager than the word of five respectable merchants or of ten ministers or teachers.

In Ohio, during the last winter, the Republicans had a clear majority in the Legislature; but they were controlled by the representatives from Cincinnati, and the members from Cincinnati were perfectly subservient to the liquor interest. Probably five-sixths of the Republican voters throughout the State were strongly in favor of a local option law which should apply to counties or townships; probably the Republican members of the Legislature knew it; but they deliberately turned their backs on the great majority of their respectable constituents and prostrated themselves before that imperious oligarchy which holds its courts in the saloon. When the Republicans behave in this fashion, what can be expected of the Democrats?

This is only a sample of the thoroughness with which the liquor interest dominates our politics. In most of our cities the majority of our municipal officers are either liquor sellers, or else closely affiliated with the liquor power. If any other single business interest,—the iron business, the railroad business, the dry goods business,—undertook to control our government, we would rise up and put it down with a heavy hand; but the rum-seller rules us, year after year, and we bow to the yoke, and smile serenely as they heap on our shoulders the burdens of taxation and the loads of degradation.

For this abject vassalage to the liquor oligarchy there are two reasons,—the eagerness to get gain, and the madness of partisanship. Our respectable citizens are too busy to attend to their political duties; and they are generally unwilling, for business reasons, to incur the hostility of the saloon keepers. Many of them, too, are so strenuous in their devotion to party that they are ready to deliver the government bound into the hands of the liquor sellers for the sake of political victory. A deeper sense of the duties of citizenship, and a clearer view of party obligations would quickly bring to an end the domination of the saloon in politics.

A BELIEF IN GOD. I will frankly tell you that my experience in prolonged scientific investigations convinces me that a belief in God—a God who is behind and within the chaos of vanishing points of human knowledge—adds a wonderful stimulus to the man who attempts to penetrate into the regions of the unknown. Of myself I may say that I never make the preparations for penetrating into some small province of nature hitherto undiscovered without breathing a prayer to the Being who hides his secrets from me only to allure me graciously on to the unfolding of them.—Professor Agassiz.

A Good Advertisement.

A Milwaukee lady who had long been a sufferer from lung troubles and nervous prostration writes thus:

"Husband thinks I am as good an advertisement as you could wish for; he says that I preach Compound Oxygen all the time; and in my improved personal appearance its virtues are very fully tested. It certainly is doing more for me than I could expect, and more than you promised in my case."

There is a large force of ladies who are thus setting forth the merits of Compound Oxygen. Renewed lungs, strengthened nerves, restful nights, restored digestion, and other corresponding blessings can not be kept from the knowledge of those who see invalids restored. Every lady ought to know about this best of remedies for chronic sufferers. A note to Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa., will bring you free an important and readable little treatise about it.

It was John Macdonald who said: "If you are in the spirit of prayer, do not be long, because other people will not be able to keep pace with you in such unusual spirituality, and if you are not in the spirit of prayer, do not be long, because you will be sure to weary the listener." That is a good rule for a prayer meeting, and it ought to be observed.

The Little Seed.

A little seed nowed by the storm-wind's wrath;
Then a stout tree lowered all the winter blast.

A little cold it stood—'twas only light;
All the chill's discord the hours of night;
A little pain came and meant to grow,
Then consumption fled all its leave strength low.

Be wise in time. Check the little cough, cure the little chill, dispel the little pain of the little ailment, the conquerable giant of disease. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, if taken in time, is a remedy for these ills.

We never graduate in religion: because the nearer we are to God the more we see there is to be learned.

Peculiar in combination, proportion and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom.

Peculiar in strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "100 doses one dollar." Medicines of larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Peculiar in its "good name at home"—there is more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers.

Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time. Do not be induced to take any other preparation. Be sure to get

ARTIFICIAL EYES

Are Now So Perfectly Made That No one Can Distinguish Them from the Natural Eye.

The Artificial Eye is not only a beautifier, but it serves other important purposes.

It enables the eyelids to move as freely as ever.

It restores the functions of the tear passages.

It prevents the eyelashes from turning within, causing inflammation.

It prevents distortion of features, as happens always in case of a sunken eye, or one that has the misfortune to lose an eye—and sometimes in the case of other persons.

Mr. W. Bonn, our optician, has made a specialty of selecting and matching them.

Briefs.

If the Christian people of this country do not order the saloon to go, and then execute the order at the ballot-box, and then see that the law there made is enforced at all places and times, then they may expect, ere long, to see morals, liberty, religion, law and order and peace and every good and valuable thing trodden under and crushed. The indifference of Christian people to this evil is simply amazing.

An item for Mississippi Methodists: A correspondent of the Boston Watchman, giving an account of the Baptist State Convention of Mississippi, says that during the past year the Baptists of Mississippi have raised for foreign missions, $4,946; for State missions, $8,032; for Mississippi College, $1,409; for ministerial education, $1,022. Pause, ponder, reflect, confess and go diligently to work, dear brethren.

In view of the fact that the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States hands the saloon over to the people to do what they please with it, we may ask now, Will the people sustain the saloon and thus continue the manufacture of drunkards and criminals and paupers, or will they put it down and thus protect society from the pestilent ills which the saloon alone engenders? Where do you stand on this question, reader? And how do you vote?

The pastor, the members, the elders, the deacons, the trustees, the Sunday-school superintendent and his assistant, other officers and teachers, the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, the Woman's Home Missionary Society, the Woman's Society of Missions to the Freedmen, the Boy's Missionary Society, the Girl's Missionary Society, the Mother's Meeting, the Ladies' Aid Society, the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, the Young People's Literary Club the Girl's Sewing Society, the Children's Industrial School, the "Ready Hands," the "Busy Bees," the kindergarten, the church choir, and the janitor.

Of the first, we may say, "Alas! my brother."

A student could not graduate from an American college, in what is called the "regular course," without a tolerably fair knowledge of the religious systems of Greece and Rome; but many a student has graduated from a denominational college without knowing the first principles of the Christian religion. The reason is, he was taught the former from the text-books of the school; but the text-book of the latter was "not in the course." A certain D. D., in one of our exchanges, makes this statement: "The churches have founded and endowed colleges for Christian education, and then have been afraid of the charge of sectarianism if they required the study of the Bible." Is that so? "The more's the pity." The same writer makes this assertion: "If this policy is continued, there will be need of a glossary of Scripture words, phrases, allusions and figures of speech scattered through English literature for the use of scholars educated in our American schools." The church don't seem to think much of God's Word as an educator. God's estimate of it is very different. See Psalm cxxxviii, 2.

Louisiana Conference.

Bishop Key opened the Conference by reading an appropriate Scripture, singing the old opening hymn and offering a prayer which moved all our hearts to reach out after the richest blessings of divine grace and the larger endowment of the power of the Divine Spirit.

Quite a large number of preachers and laymen answered to their names at the first roll call. The brethren look well, as if time had dealt gently with them, and the Lord's providence had been abundant in the supply of their wants. It has been a year of hard fighting, and yet the flush of victory was apparent on the countenances of many. To some have come great sorrow and bereavement, and yet the heart was saying, "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord." Some have had weary months of pain, and yet their lips were ready to say, like the Psalmist, "It was good for me that I was afflicted." Some have been "transferred" to a higher field of service, and are no doubt doing the Master's work in a sphere of unbounded possibilities. Even in heaven "they serve him day and night." We may be partial to this Conference, but it seems to us that this body is growing in several good directions. The personnel of the body has improved wonderfully in the last few years. The spiritualle has deepened and broadened to a degree delightful to behold. The esprit de corps is as fine and chivalrous as that which ever characterized any body. The older men are held in high esteem by the younger, and the younger men are following the older as they follow the Lord. A common devotion to the same cause has produced, between the older and the younger brethren, a spirit of harmony which binds the whole body together in most beautiful bonds. As we sat and looked over this "body militant," and thought of the endless perplexities, the ceaseless anxieties, the hard work, the meagre support of the past year, and noted their cheerful faces, and under that cheerfulness saw a determination to persevere to a faithful end, we asked, Is there anything like this under the sun? If there is, we have not seen the account of it.

Bishop Key, putting the first motion twice, in order to illustrate his exhortation to "put heart into the Conference business," had so happy an effect that every other motion was settled by a hearty vote.

The following were elected deacons: George A. Mandeville, F. N. Parker, J. S. Saunders, H. S. Johns, Robert Harry.

The following brethren were received by transfer: H. Armstrong, from Little Rock; J. O. Bennett, from North Mississippi; J. F. Scurlock, from North Georgia.

The following were admitted into full connection: F. N. Parker, J. I. Hoffpauir, J. S. Saunders, H. S. Johns, Robert Harry.

The following were admitted on trial: C. M. Lyons, W. F. Henderson, J. E. Denson, J. E. Riddle, W. W. Nicholson, W. Dunstan, G. T. Ashley, T. R. Wimberly, C. B. Carter, W. J. Porter, J. B. Williams.

The city of Shreveport at this time would not make a favorable impression on a stranger. The recent continuous rains have simply rendered the streets well-nigh impassable. The mules and horses tug and toil to draw their vehicles, and often fail of success. The mud is deep and sticky. But while the outside is so unfavorable, in the homes where the preachers and delegates are entertained, brightness and good cheer prevail. Shreveport Methodism and its friends keep up its reputation for a generous Christian hospitality, of which many members have a delightful memory when they recur to former days.

The new church is a beautiful structure—beautiful in its appointments, beautiful in its decorations, and "beautiful for situation." It is handsomely furnished in modern style, and seated with improved opera chairs, which are so comfortable as to be a little dangerous. The organ is a magnificent instrument, and, under the skillful management of the pastor's wife, who is said to be one of the finest musicians in the South, fills the large auditorium with grand harmonies in praise of redeeming love. A picture of our beloved Bishop Parker, alongside of that of Mr. Wesley, adorns a memorial window of great beauty. The pastor informed us that the auditorium could be pressed into a capacity for 600 hearers. The church is not quite finished, which, perhaps, is the reason it was not dedicated at this session of our Conference.

The reports of the preachers showed that advance has been made in several directions. The various collections have been well sustained in most places, but in some instances the salaries of these men of God are greatly behind. When will the church come up to the point of paying her preachers as well as she pays her clerks and bookkeepers? The simple difficulty lies in the fact that the money owned by the church is not consecrated to God! It is consecrated to business; but the business is not carried on in the name of the Lord, and there is very little to spare when God's servants are to be paid. When the day comes in which these inequalities shall be equalized, there will be a tremendous pressure somewhere! Take care, reader, or you may be caught under the wheels!

The whole session was characterized by a delightful glow of spirituality, which was but the reflection of the "hope of glory" formed in the hearts of these servants of Christ, and flashing out under the inspiring influence of the "communion of saints." A sunrise prayer meeting prepared many for the duties of the day by strengthening them in the Lord, and furnishing them with "meat to eat which others knew not of." The preaching at three P. M. afforded the citizens an opportunity to attend the divine service, and gave the brethren not engaged on committees the privilege of paying with spiritual things for the temporal blessings which had been so generously bestowed. The night service was well attended, and the preaching was good to the use of edifying, and, doubtless, will produce fruit to the glory of our Lord's grace in the great day.

Friday night the Church Extension Society held its anniversary. The audience filled the church very well, and Rev. B. Carradine delivered the address, followed by Dr. Barbee, the Book Agent, who raised the collection. Bro. Carradine's address was a simple, plain, practical, pointed talk on the history and purposes of church building, and was listened to with great interest by the audience. Dr. Barbee only spoke fifteen minutes, and sent out his collectors, who "gathered up" about $165. The society has advanced during this year beyond the figures of last year, besides giving substantial help to several churches within the bounds of the Conference. It has organized at this session the "Parker Memorial Fund," in honor of our beloved Bishop; and this fact commends the work of the society to the sympathy and benevolence of every Methodist in the State of Louisiana, and the $5,000 ought to be easily raised during this year.

The following are the statistics: Local preachers, 76; members, 15,534; infants baptized, 905; adults baptized, 880; Sunday-schools, 211; teachers, 1,254; scholars, 8,996. There have been raised for foreign missions, by church, $3,984 75; by Sunday-school, $462 15; by Woman's Missionary Society, $1,013 80; in week of self-denial, $1,890; by ladies, $403 60. For domestic missions there was raised $900. For Conference claimants, $2,663 80; Bishop's Fund, $688 65; education, $398 55; for church extension, $973. These figures, compared with those of last year, show a large increase in missionary money, but a slight decrease in other lines. The collection of nearly $2,000 during self-denial week speaks well for Louisiana Methodism as compared with the Methodism of other sections of our church.

Nashville Correspondence.

Now that the first rush of Conferences is over, the Bishops and Conference visitors among the connectional officers are having a partial rest from railroad smoke and cinders. Bishops McTyeire and Hargrove are in the city at this writing; the latter, so rumor has it, preparing to make a home in the new West Nashville, about three miles from the city. The Bishop's many friends in Nashville and throughout Tennessee will rejoice in his preference to settle amongst them, while there is a general feeling in the far West that to the church there a resident Bishop would be a great advantage. Nashville enjoys a great gain in his decision, and may stick another feather in her cap of self-importance—for which there is some degree of justifiable cause.

There is a general activity and an air of prosperity throughout the city, and our church matters are in a most flourishing condition. Where the recent Conference inaugurated changes in the city pastorate, the new preachers have met with a cordial reception, and seem to be themselves pleased with their parishioners and with their surroundings. The period of mutual inspection is pretty well over, and satisfaction and harmony reign in our congregations.

The present work of the Mission Board may be of a less exciting nature than the business of a month or so back, but will result in greater practical good to the church at large. The question of finances absorbs attention at present, and great skill in the manipulation of resources is required in the work. The recent week of self-denial and prayer observed by the Woman's Auxiliary Societies of the church will, it is expected, have an appreciable result in forthcoming contributions to the cause. There have been some misgivings, however, as to whether the season was chosen with special felicity.

The other departments at the Publishing House show a gratifying vitality and a full amount of business on hand. Dr. Barbee renews his energies in the home work of the agency, after his recent visits among the Conferences. Drs. Cunnyngham, Fitzgerald and Harrison seem to have a full sufficiency of work to be done in their offices. Rev. James A. Lyons is kept busy in the classification of Sunday-school libraries; and the business department, under Manager Palmer, indicates a state of healthy and increasing growth.

Our Methodist institutions lead the educational interests of the city. Dr. Price, at the Nashville College for Young Ladies, has established his school firmly on a basis of real thoroughness and general popularity. At the Vanderbilt, students and professors are enjoying the holiday week, relegating recitations and lectures to a temporary oblivion. Among the students there has been much said and written of late, pro and con, regarding the much-vexed question of co-education. The general verdict seems to be pronounced against the innovation, as applied to Vanderbilt University, at least. The majority may have the right of it, but there are two sides to the shield. At the Vanderbilt it has been proved that the number of girls who seek its advantages is extremely small, even when they have access to the lectures free of all charge, as is now the case. It is hardly reasonable to suppose that regular matriculation would cause many additions to this number, as some alarmists seem to think. And their regular attendance at lectures and their strict observance of the requirements of examination would hardly cause any radical change in the scope and design of the University. There is much to be said, and much that is said (on the other side), however, as the somewhat wearied reader of the University paper, and the Nashville's dailies as well, has found to be a rather monotonous truth.

Prof. Tigert has completed his work of editing the "Systematic Theology," by the late Dr. T. O. Summers. Dr. Summers was at home with his subject; and the book will be a valuable addition to the literature of its class. The fact that Prof. Tigert is the editor increases the book's value, insuring fine discrimination and an admirable adjustment of the parts. Popular lectures from the Vanderbilt professors are widening the influence of the University throughout the city.

Christmas among the Nashville Methodists was marked by a broad and unostentatious charity to the poor of the city. The Sunday-school children gave a satisfactory test of the maxim that "it is better to give than to receive;" and private benevolence did much to relieve the want and suffering within its reach.

The Publishing House will send a representative to the Louisiana Conference at Shreveport. The balmy airs from the South will be gratefully inhaled by a Nashvillian fresh from the experience of our superfluous endowment in the way of ice, snow, mud and slush; and this writer has a most pleasant personal recollection of Shreveport's uniform kindness to the stranger within her gates. May the session be fruitful and harmonious, and may satisfactory appointments insure a happy finale.

SPECTATOR.

DECEMBER 31, 1887.

Notes.

There is no profit in trying experiments in religion. The "experimental method" is the very process for science, for the wonderful things in nature have not been fully disclosed. But in religion even the deep things of salvation have been clearly revealed. No essential fact remains hidden. "The light of the knowledge of the glory of God shines from the face of Jesus Christ." Experiments in religion, therefore, are not only not necessary, but they are illusive and lead to infinite trouble. The old Jews, contrary to the divine injunction, were continually "experimenting" with idolatry, and at last, by the providence of God, they were carried captive to an idolatrous land, where they had such a surfeit of it, as caused them to recoil with a contempt for it which yet endures. Seventy years in heathenish Babylon was the result of their experiment. The plan of saving souls is plain, and experiments in religion don't pay.

This, from an eloquent sermon of Bishop Foss, on "Contending for the Faith," will commend itself to every sensible man and woman: "The church of God needs in her pulpits no more of that class of which there are too many already—nice little clipped, perfumed, attitudinizing, platitudinizing, ecclesiastical dudes. But, oh! she wants in every State and in every hamlet and in all lands an ever-multiplying race of brawny, brainy, developed, individualized, consecrated, manly, godly men in her pulpits." And let all the people say, Amen! by putting them there. The work of the church demands men after the Pauline style of courage—real sons of thunder like John and James. Action, action, said Demosthenes. Courage, courage, courage, says Christ.

The Invisible.

We have been much interested in an article by Prof. H. W. Parker, published in the December Forum, entitled, "Arguments for the Unseen." The subject fascinates the human mind and draws out all its powers in a diligent and untiring search after the invisible. So zealous are the efforts to find out and analyze the unseen and unknown that the invisible has really become the real. The Professor says: "There is an increasing tendency of science itself to make everything of the invisible, and nothing of the visible. All psychical research goes out on this very line. Psychology, whether the old or the new, has its basis on the unseen, and pursues all its investigations and makes all its deductions and draws all its inferences, in such a manner, as to show that it is dealing with the invisible, and is, in reality, endeavoring to prove that it is the real."

The fact is plain to everybody that in dealing with our fellowmen we are, in reality, dealing with invisible beings. The Professor says that "the materialist himself must acknowledge that the unknown quantity which constitutes personality is viewless." Nobody sees the real man. We only see an outward manifestation of an unseen power. He who believes in the spiritual nature recognizes and realizes that an assembly of human beings is really an assembly of unseen spirits.

Science has demonstrated the fact that we are surrounded by invisible and intangible things. By a simple experiment rays of light are shown to exist which ordinarily are invisible, and science becomes full of sounds. The scientists reason back to the atom and the ether, and firmly believe that both exist, and yet neither has been disclosed to the eye or to the microscope. They take the visible and the known, and reason to the invisible and the unknown. Even matter, that seems so certain and solid, has been resolved by them into force, which is as invisible as anything can be. Outside of the mind there is no light, no color, no sound. If the vibrations by which these are formed in the mind cease, they all vanish instantly. If the "molecules of matter cease to give forth resistant force, nothing is tangible." From the very experiments and disclosures of science itself, the physical world becomes shadowy and unreal. We are forced by science, therefore, to believe "if there is anything permanent, it must be the invisible." The Professor gives this example: "Men come and go, laws are made and unmade, constitutions are changed, buildings crumble, but the invisible State or Church endures." Science is to-day proving that every visible thing is not only changing, but changing towards its utter and entire destruction. The moon is a dead world. The sun is giving out its heat and light in such a manner as to insure its own destruction. Man is rapidly exhausting the resources of the earth, and the increase of the race goes on at such a rate as must end in the most awful catastrophe. Such are the conclusions of science. It has taken her 1,850 years of research and study to come in sight of a statement made by Paul in the beginning of the Christian era: "The things that are seen are temporal, while the things that are unseen are eternal."

Sir George Trevelyan, one of the Liberal leaders in English politics, in a recent speech at Carnarvon, Ireland, said there had been no public house on his estates for thirty years. Among his tenants there is content and plenty. We agree with the Northwestern Christian Advocate that Sir. George's testimony "goes to the core of the home-rule question." Remove whisky from Ireland, and famines, boycotts and evictions would soon become a mere memory.

Personals.

The retirement of Rev. Dr. S. G. Smith, of St. Paul, Minn., from the Methodist itinerancy has been the occasion of much newspaper sensation and ecclesiastical moralizing. These instances—very rare—never harm our great system of ministerial supply or arrest the aggressive movements of our Zion. When a man gets "tired of moving" and prefers a "settled pastorate," we take pleasure in bidding him a speedy adieu. Our itinerant ranks must be composed of sterner stuff. But while a brother here and there, with ambition for a "permanent field," retires from our columns, the world at large acknowledges the superior value of our system and applaud the heroism of our moving battalions. Like loyalty to constituted authority can not be found in the regular army of any great nation in the world. The itinerants of American Methodism, in their obedience to marching orders, shame the chivalric pride of Von Moltke's disciplined legions, or Garnet Wolseley's splendid soldiery.

We quite agree with Dr. Haygood, in a recent article in the Wesleyan, that the need not only of Georgia, but of Alabama, Louisiana and Mississippi as well, is not an "Immigration," but an "Anti-Emigration Society." We ought to keep our own people at home rather than scour the world for its pauper population.

Mrs. E. S. Porter fell asleep in Jesus, on Friday, the sixth instant, in the seventy-third year of her life. After a long, hard journey she is home at last. Her devoted son, "Gilderoy," has the prayers of the brethren in his bereavement.

Dr. Allen's Campaign.

The Board of Missions has insight and open vision when it recognizes the providence in Dr. Allen's presence in this country at this time. The church and the country have need of him. As no other man can do for us, he can give us the light we need. Do we doubt it? Not all of us, but those do who have to carry the burdens and do the work of our time. As for the rest, they must be carried, too. If the church will rally to Dr. Allen's cause—our cause, Christ's cause, and, therefore, ours—deliverance will come, and our church stand where she ought—in the forefront of the Christian world's greatest movement: the missionary movement upon the heathen races. Napoleon used to say: "The true soldier will march to the sound of the guns."

THE CEDARS.

Mississippi Conference.

The Minutes of the last session were sent to Nashville for publication on Thursday, December 29. The Publishing House will commence sending them out through the mail to subscribers on January 15. There has been a change in the postoffices of some of the subscribers since the list was taken at Conference. Such subscribers will please inform me at once of the change to be made.

C. C. ANDREWS, Sec.

JACKSON, MISS., Jan. 9, 1888.

Our hopes not unfrequently outrun the divine purpose, and human disappointment often is the fulfillment of the divine plan. Our short-sightedness sometimes sees further than the divine wisdom, and when our plans are wrecked, we wonder at the inscrutableness of Providence, forgetting that the overthrow of our plans is but a small part of that wonderful scheme, which, guided by the hand of infinite love, is moving the universe in harmony with that divine purpose which makes it all "work together for good to them who love God." Jeremiah was a man of large hope, great labor and great disappointment. The blow that shattered his country's liberties crushed his hope to the ground, yet he was a man who fearlessly obeyed God. Therefore, let us obey even in disappointment. Even though our brightest hopes lie in ruins around us, out of those ruins God may pluck something that will crown our lives with success.

Mansfield Female College—1888.

One hundred dollars, paid in advance, will entitle new pupils to board, tuition and music for the term beginning Monday, January 2, 1888, and ending Wednesday, June 13. Seventy-five dollars will pay board and tuition in the literary department, without music. Let those who have been attending home schools during the fall term avail themselves of this offer.

F. M. GRACE, Pres.

Wise Words from President Cleveland.

We can not withhold an expression of gratitude that the United States has a Chief Magistrate capable of uttering the sentiments published below. And will it be for our great country when a man occupies that high position representing any other doctrines. Whatever sharp differences there may be among us on questions of governmental policy, however fierce the contentions of party leaders for the mastery, so long as the principles enunciated by Mr. Cleveland shall obtain, we shall move on to grander prosperity.

During the session of the Evangelical Alliance, held recently in Washington, a reception was tendered the distinguished body at the White House, and, in response to an address from Mr. Dodge, president of the Alliance, Mr. Cleveland spoke as follows:

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen: It gives me great pleasure to greet so large a delegation from the Evangelical Alliance of the United States. The purposes of this Alliance, as I understand them, are to apply the teachings of Christian life to the problems and to the exigencies of our social and political life. This movement can not fail to be one of the greatest importance. All must admit that the reception of the teachings of Christianity results in the purest patriotism, in the most devoted and scrupulous adherence to public trusts, and in the best type of citizenship.

Those who manage the affairs of government are, by this Alliance, reminded that the law of God demands of them that they should be courageously true to the interests of the people, and that the Ruler of the universe will require of them a strict account of their stewardship.

The people, too, are thus reminded that their best interests and their happiness and welfare are best subserved and promoted by a conscientious regard of the rights and interests of their common brotherhood.

I am especially pleased that your movement and endeavor is not cramped or limited by denominational lines (applause), that your credentials are found in a broad and generous Christian fellowship. In your noble mission it is necessary, if you would seek to teach the people toleration, that you yourselves should be tolerant; if you would teach them liberality for the opinions of each other, you yourselves must be liberal. If you would teach them unselfish patriotism, you yourselves must be unselfish and patriotic.

In this noble endeavor of yours, if undertaken in a broad and generous spirit, you must arrest the attention and the respectful consideration of your fellow-citizens, and teach the people that a government for the people must depend for its success on the morality, the justice and the interest of the people.

With true benevolence and with patriotic love, it must be that your endeavor will go far to the enlightenment and the improvement of our people, and to aid in the greatness of the destiny of our beloved land.

Ministers' Sons.

The following, which appeared some time since in the editorial columns of the Advance, abundantly answers the old thing at the badness of ministers' children. The scientist, whose facts have been gathered with such diligence, being a skeptic, can not be charged with partiality for the clergy. He simply has the manliness and candor to credit the truth of history. It is a significant coincidence that the President of the United States and his immediate predecessor were sons of ministers:

The French scientist and skeptic, De Candolle, has been making some original investigations which disclose results interesting and inspiring. This noted savant conclusively shows that science and learning are specially indebted to the sons of clergymen. More than this, he makes a strong argument against the celibacy of the clergy. As he claims: "In clerical families their manner of life, their quiet regularity, their residence largely in the country, their counsels to their children, the absence of various causes of dissipation, the habitual vigilance of the father, and his domestic example of study, surpassing the advantages of other families, give all the greater force to the transmission of faculties appropriate to cultivation of the sciences." Good testimony from an independent source and a keen observer.

And De Candolle further affirms that the sons of clergymen have actually outnumbered for 200 years, in their contributions to the roll of eminent scientists, any other class of families, not excepting those of the directly scientific professions, physicians, surgeons and chemists.

Among the sons of pastors he enumerates, who were distinguished as scientists and scholars, are Agassiz, Berzelius, Boerhaave Encke, Euler, Linnæus, Olbers, and a host of others. Among historians and philosophers, he cites Hallam, Hobbes, Emerson, Sismondi, and a long list of equally great names.

The opportunity for sons to follow their father's calling, he claims, makes divinity conspicuously hereditary in such noteworthy pulpit lights and writers as Jonathan Edwards, Archbishop Whately, Robert Hall, Lightfoot, the Wesleys, Booth, Stillingfleet, the Beechers and Spurgeons. The list might be indefinitely extended, as is well known to all familiar with the annals of clergymen.

Among the eminent sons of ministers, De Candolle names, of poets, Young, Cowper, Thomson, Coleridge, Montgomery, Heber, Tennyson, Lowell and others.

Then as to distinguished lights in intellectual philosophy, there are such sons as Dugald Stewart, Cudworth, Reid, Brown, Abercrombie and Bentham.

In the field of literature ministers' sons have been numerous and notable, as witness Swift, Lockhart, Macaulay, Sterne, Hazlitt, Thackeray, Bancroft, Emerson, Holmes, Kingsley and Matthew Arnold.

There may be included as architects, Sir Christoper Wren; as artists, Sir Joshua Reynolds; and among heroic characters, Lord Nelson.

Nor are the daughters of clergymen overlooked, since in this list are mentioned Mrs. Trollope, Mrs. Barbauld, Jane Taylor, Elizabeth Carter, the Brontes and Mrs. Stowe. This would not exhaust the showing, but as the finding of De Candolle will command attention on both sides of the water, we could add that the ranks of the clergy are largely recruited from the sons of the clergy. Ministers and missionaries, the world over, are to a great extent the sons of clergymen.

Papers and critics, which have delighted in giving currency to the exploded slander that the sons of ministers turn out badly, will find some wholesome information in this learned Frenchman's discoveries.

EAST MISSISSIPPI FEMALE COLLEGE,
Meridian, Miss.,

Opens its doors for a few more pupils on January 30, or February 1, 1888. Those who desire to enter then for the five months' session will please apply immediately to secure places. Unexcelled advantages in Literary Department, in music, art and industrial arts. Enlarged facilities, patronage increased beyond previous years. A fine health-resort from malarial districts. One of the most delightful schools for Southern girls in the South. Your daughter needs an education; here is the place for her. Address at once.

A. D. M'VOY, Pres.

It is said of some Christians, in the Acts of the Apostles, that they "went everywhere preaching the Word." This means that wherever they went they preached the Word. Those zealous disciples should be our examples for this year of grace, 1888. If every Christian would be at some pains to preach the Word wherever he goes this year, there would be seen the mightiest revolution that earth has ever witnessed! And the obligation is squarely laid upon every disciple of Christ to do that very thing.

AT BED-TIME.

BY L. VALERIA WILSON.

My darling, with her quaint, sweet ways
And knowing little head,
Lies cuddled like a little bird,
Within her downy bed;
But though 'tis time she were asleep,
And though, o'er laughing eyes,
The lids still fall, to keep awake
The little mischief tries.

And so I tell a dreamy tale
Of slumber-land, until
I think the eyes must soon close tight
And prattling tongue be still;
But, just as lids have almost shut
Dear little eyes from sight,
"Mamma" she cries, with outstretched arms,
"Good little hands to-night?"

"Good little hands?" I kiss them both;
No more awake she keeps.
I always kiss "good little hands"
Before my darling sleeps.
But sometimes little hands are "bad;"
Those naughty can not kiss.
My darling knows that naughty hands
This bed-time joy must miss.

MR. EDITOR: I saw in the ADVOCATE, that Cousin Camille offers a New Year's card to the first boy or girl who will write a Bible story without help. I thought I would try one on Joseph;

"Joseph's father was named Jacob. Jacob loved Joseph more than any of his children. He made him a coat of many colors. When his brethren found out that Jacob loved Joseph the most, they hated him and could not speak peaceably. One day Jacob sent Joseph to the field, where his brethren were feeding their flocks, to see how they were getting along. He met a man and asked him where were his brethren and he told him at Dothan. He found them. They saw him afar off, and said, 'Let's slay him.' But, they did not; they cast him in a pit. They sat down to eat. They saw some Ishmaelites on their way to Egypt, and they sold him for twenty pieces of silver. They killed a kid, dipped his coat of many colors in its blood, and told their father that some wild beast had devoured him. He became the second in honor and power in Egypt. There was a famine in Canaan. Jacob sent his sons to Egypt to buy food. They did not know their brother, but he knew them. He filled their sacks and put the money back in their sacks. Then he told them that he was their brother whom they sold to the Ishmaelites. They fell down and wept with him, and Joseph asked them, 'Is our father living?' They told him, 'Yes.' He also asked them where was Benjamin. Joseph sent them to tell their father to bring all the family over to Egypt. They all went. Jacob said, 'Now, I have seen my son, I am ready to die.'"

Hoping to get the card, I am,
Your devoted reader,

Always Ready.

You have heard your mother often say, "Charlie, are you dressed? Breakfast is ready." "'Tis time you were ready for school, Alice;" or your father has spoken of some one as a ready speaker; and you have learned, in the Sabbath-school, verses from the Bible, where Jesus warns his disciples to be ready for his coming, or Paul urges his companions to be ready for every good work. But, though you hear and use it every day, did you ever stop to think just what and how much this little word ready means?

Ready—the dictionary tells us means to be prepared at the moment, not behindhand when called upon, causing no delay for lack of being fitted; it refers to mind as well as body, including special preparation of mind and heart.

Ready is also used in the sense of quick or dexterous. Did you ever think that the Latin word, meaning right hand, has given us this word dexterous—that is, skillful or easy, just as most people can do better work with the right hand?

Oh, the dictionary—word-book—is a wonderful help in getting at the real meaning of things! But few of us use it as much as we might. Not only can we find what words mean, but through their origin and growth we learn the history of the people who used them.

Another word, prompt, of Latin origin, is nearly the same, but not quite so full of meaning as the Anglo-Saxon ready. The difference between them is that prompt means prepared beforehand, while one who is ready is prepared at the moment. There may be times when as much will be lost by being prompt as late; but to be ready will be just right.

Ready means more than simply waiting to be called upon; ready help offers itself—even more, is watching for an opportunity.

If every person in the world was always ready, always on time, there would be few delays, few fatal accidents, while precious time that is now wasted would be saved. We are so bound together that all may be affected by the act of one. You or I may be but one moment behind time, but our tardiness will delay others, and so on indefinitely, till the total will be thousands of lost minutes or something worse.

On the other hand, those ready for each duty as it comes will be doubly ready for the next, while those who are always even a little behindhand never catch up with lost opportunities. "Little things" are the causes of most delays, but is there anything however small, that may not in some time or place become great? An old proverb has it thus: "For want of a nail the shoe was lost, for want of a shoe the horse was lost," and so on until "the crown was lost, and all for the want of a two-penny nail."—The Christian Union.

HOW HAROLD CAUGHT THE MOUSE.—"I hear mice!" said Fanny, one cold winter evening, as the Bassett children sat around the fire.

"I can go into the pantry and catch one in my hand," said Harold.

"Oh, you can't! I should like to see you do it! Prove it! prove it!" said a chorus of voices.

Harold went into the pantry in the dark, and in less than a minute returned with a mouse clasped close in his hand.

His success was a great wonder to his brothers and sisters. "Do it again! Catch another!" they demanded.

"Not to-night, but I will to-morrow night," said Harold.

For three successive nights Harold caught his mouse at every trial.

So at last Harold explained to them.

"I found the mouse-hole, and I knew it was the only one in the pantry, and they all went in and out by that little bit of a door. So when I heard them frolicking in there, I went in quickly and put my hand over the hole, with the palm outward, and they ran right into my hand, and I caught them."

"Then I can do it!" said Fannie and Leroy and Bertie.

"Yes, if you are quick enough," said Harold.

But mice can learn a thing or two in three lessons, and they deserted that pantry, and went in and out no more by that little door.—Youth's Companion.

MANNERS BETWEEN BOYS.—There is a good deal of rudeness between boys in their intercourse and bearing with one another that is not really intended as such, but is not, therefore, any the less to be disapproved. It is simply the overflow of excessive high spirits. But the very best humor, unrestrained by the proper bounds and limitations, may become the most positive incivility.

We often apologize for the rudeness of people by saying, "He means well." It is well if we can make such an apology for them, for if their rudeness is intentional they are not fit to be received into any worthy person's society.—But they who mean well should also do well, and the ways of politeness are never so easily learned as in youth.

The boy who is habitually coarse and rude in his bearing toward other boys, will be such as a man toward men, and all his life will never gain the reputation of being a gentleman.

The Cheapening Mania.

This is indeed "a fast age," while those of us who are able to recall the history of the last sixty years are startled by the abrupt and marvelous changes. The persistent demand is for cheapness—"cheap, cheaper, cheapest." The word "cheap," conspicuously displayed in the merchant's window, seems to be the potent talisman with which to decoy the unthinking, many having far more thought of the price than the quality, forgetful of the fact that no merchant does business simply for pleasure, while it is more than probable that there is a reasonable reference to a "margin." As a general principle—aside from the tricks of the fraudulent—it is presumable that goods are not sold without some regard to their value, or the market price, this being greatly modified by competition, and that, under ordinary circumstances, there can be but slight variations. In a certain sense, it is far safer to "get the best," rather than the cheapest. It may be objected that the poor are compelled to buy cheap goods, but to do so is to remain poor? (There are but very few of the poor in this land of plenty who have not been made so by intemperance in some of its many forms, by indolence, or by a want of capacity—extravagance, intemperance, and luxuriousness being very prominent among the causes of such poverty.) If the poor can not afford to buy a good—and, therefore, cheap—article now, it may be that a little delay would be possible, so arranging it that only good products need to be purchased. As a general principle the good articles are the cheapest. Indeed, there are goods which only the rich can afford to buy, in consequence of the low price.—Dr. J. H. Hanaford, in Watchman.

THE DRIFT CITYWARD.—The great, brilliant successes are, as a rule, in our cities. They attract notice. All men hear of the man who rolled up a fortune in a few years. Only few hear of the twenty that failed on the same lines. "What is hit is history: what is missed is mystery." One consequence is that the movement is from the country to the town. Young Thatcher is not going to plod along year after year on the farm when he might with less toil make his thousands in the city, as a politician or a man of business. "Why, there is Baker—I'm just as smart as he is—and he is near the top of the wheel: they say he will soon be an alderman." So the tide is townward. Now it is true that one may find the best people in the towns, for mind quickens mind; but you may also find the worst; and in this world evil works at a tremendous advantage. No better population for morals and trustworthiness is found in any Christian country than those who live by the tilling of the soil. We do not ignore the value of cities, but

"God made the country, and man made the town."

and without building on any forced exegesis of this passage, we can not be blind to the fact that city life multiplies and complicates the problems with which Christian civilization has to deal. No five millions of country people in England present so much that is discouraging as you find among the same number crowded together in London. —Dr. John Hall, in New Princeton Review.

"Just Hear That Child Scream!"

said Mrs. Smith to her sister, Mrs. Davis, as the soul of a child's shrieks came across the garden from a neighbor's house. "What kind of a woman have you for a neighbor? Does she abuse her children?" "No, indeed," replied Mrs. Davis. "She is one of the most tender mothers in existence. But you see, she believes in the old-fashioned styles of doctoring. When a child needs physic, she fills a spoon with some nauseous dose, lays the little victim flat on her lap, holds his nose till he is forced to open his mouth for breath, when down goes the dreadful mess. Then come the yells." "No wonder," said Mrs. Smith. "Why does n't she use Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets? They are effective without being harsh, and are as easy to take as sugar plums. I always give them to my children." "And so do I," said Mrs. Davis.

This span of life was lent for lofty duties, not for selfishness; not to be whiled away in aimless dreams, but to improve ourselves and serve mankind.

If you suspect any tendency to congestion in your kidneys and bladder, you can safely increase their activity by using that genial tonic, and never failing remedy, Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Balm.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Hon. C. Edwards Lester,

Late U. S. Consul to Italy, author of "The Glory and Shame of England," "America's Advancement," etc., etc., etc., writes as follows:—

DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Gentlemen:—A sense of gratitude and the desire to render a service to the public impel me to make the following statements:

My college career, at New Haven, was interrupted by a severe cold which so enfeebled me that, for ten years, I had a hard struggle for life. Hemorrhage from the bronchial passages was the result of almost every fresh exposure. For years I was under treatment of the ablest practitioners without avail. At last I learned of which I used (moderately and in small doses) at the first recurrence of a cold or any chest difficulty, and from which I invariably found relief. This was over 25 years ago. With all sorts of exposure, in all sorts of climates, I have never, to this day, had any cold on my affection of the throat or lungs which did not yield to AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL within 24 hours.

Of course I have never allowed myself to be without this remedy in all my voyages and travels. Under my own observation, it has given relief to vast numbers of persons; while in acute cases of pulmonary inflammation, such as croup and diphtheria in children, it has been preserved through its effects. I recommend its use in light but frequent doses. Properly administered, in accordance with your directions, it is in any house. I speak emphatically because I feel earnestly. I have known many cases of apparently confirmed bronchitis and cough, with loss of voice, particularly among clergymen and other public speakers, perfectly cured by this unequaled remedy. Faithfully yours,

C. EDWARDS LESTER.

LEDBETTER—Died, November 4, 1887, in Lowndes county, near Crawford, Miss., BRO. JOHN M. LEDBETTER. He was born in Anson county, N. C., June 21, 1802; was married to Miss Eliza H. White, in 1832; moved to Lowndes county, Miss., 1836; joined the Methodist Episcopal Church in early life, and lived a consistent member until death. He lived in the home in which he died for over fifty years. The writer has known him for forty-six years. He left no blotch upon his character. He raised a large and respectable family, of whom seven daughters, two sons and a number of grandchildren are left to mourn their loss. He was a good farmer, an honest, good citizen, and an humble Christian, and had but few, if any, enemies. He was a regular attendant at church until he partially lost his hearing; then resigned himself to a quiet life, in his extreme old age, to home and room, where he enjoyed himself reading his Bible and amusing his grandchildren. He had no fears for the future; met his visitors with a smile, and was always ready for prayers when visited by a minister. His affliction was short and he died very easy, apparently without much pain, which was very gratifying to his children, as that was all he feared. A death with more pleasant surroundings I never knew. You could see the tears on his children's cheeks; but their countenance showed that they did not have to sorrow as those that have no home. Though he was eighty-five years old, he was lively and walked about actively to the last.

WIDNEY—CHARLIE HARVEY WIDNEY was born in Adrian, Lenewee county, Mich., July 26, 1874, and was fatally scalded by the bursting of a heater in the Calder Sugar House near Franklin, La., December 1, 1887. Charlie was a member of the Sabbath-school of this place and a quiet, sweet-spirited Christian boy. We all loved him. The manner of his taking away left no time for any death-bed testimony, but we feel assured that through Christ an entrance was granted him into the kingdom. The blessed balm of healing to the parents in this sad hour is the consciousness, that since the hour of his birth to the hour of his tragic demise, by both precept and example, they endeavored to win him to Christ. We commend them to the God of all consolation. He doeth all things well. Adieu, Charlie, until we meet in heaven.

HIS PASTOR.

Malaria does not always reveal its presence by chills or regular shakes. Your system may be full of it, and none of these symptoms be present. You will feel miserable, think you are bilious, take purgatives, and only feel weaker and worse, because the malarious poison is still operative. A dose of Shallenberger's Pills, at bed-time, will show you next morning that you have hit the real enemy, and a dose or two more will remove every vestige of the poison. They never sicken the stomach, do not act on the bowels, but simply destroy Malaria.

ANDREWS—JESSE ANDREWS, son of John and Julia Ann Andrews, was born on Bayou Boeuf, July, 1870, and died November 12, 1887, near the village of Big Cane, to which place the family moved nearly two years ago. Jesse was the youngest of a large family, and a pet of the household. His mother requests the writer to offer a few loving words in memory of her darling. His happy, triumphant death assures her that "all is well" with her boy; and even she can say, "Thy will be done," though she idolized him when living. He was found of home and family. Naturally generous, when a little boy, he would spend the most of his small earnings for father, mother and sisters. When larger, he still remembered them by tokens of his love. Though petted and spoiled at home, he was universally loved. All the friends and neighbors of his childhood regret his early death. Ah! why should we? True, we will never see the handsome, dark-eyed boy among us again, nor hear his gentle greeting; but he was anxious to go and be at rest in the home of his Father, where there is no more sin and temptation, no more sickness and suffering, nor toil and care. How happy the thought, for fond father, mother, sisters and brothers, dear little Jesse has gone from the trials of earth to dwell with his God and Savior forever. He had been in bad health for several years, which terminated in dropsy. The last time I saw him was in September. He came, with his mother, to see an aged aunt who was very sick. Several days after his return home he took his bed, never to get well. He had grown to be a quiet, serious youth. His brothers say there had been a change in him for months. He was deeply impressed at a Baptist meeting, held in that vicinity last summer, and spoke of joining the church, but was taken sick. Bro. Whatley, the pastor in charge, visited him during his last illness, and he was baptized. He said if he recovered he would join the church. Several days previous to his death he told his mother it seemed a voice had spoken to him, saying his sins were pardoned. He talked calmly about death; said he was prepared and willing; and it was best that he should die then. He would laugh and rejoice, and say how happy he was, even when the family were weeping around him; would laugh joyfully, and ask them not to grieve; that he would be better off than they; spoke words of comfort and advice to them. He requested them to keep and care for his horse, and other animals to which he had always been kind. His sufferings were intense, but he was patient and uncomplaining. He died in almost a sitting posture, gently and calmly, with a bright smile upon his face. May we all live so that we will meet and be with our dear Jesse and other loved ones forever.

COUSIN MARY.

HEDRICK—The death of MRS. JOHN H. HEDRICK, an estimable Christian matron, touches deeply my sensibilities, as the intimacy of our associations with this family from boyhood rendered them very dear to me. Sister Sinai was a Christian of the highest type, bright in her Christian experience, frequently giving expression to her religious emotions in rapturous shouts of joy. The last interview I had with her my heart was greatly moved in the melting, affirmative response given to the declaration in parting with her that we should meet again on the other side of the river. "Yes, Bro. Horace," she said, most emphatically; "I will meet you, by the help of God, in heaven." With this assurance, I left her for my Texas home, believing this trusting saint of God would fulfill her pledge.

Bro. John, your beloved wife has gone before you, and will look out from the bright world above for your coming and the loved ones left behind. Disappoint her not, and cherish, as a priceless legacy, the example and unfailing solicitude of the wife and mother, who walked with God and pointed to heaven, and led the way. May her God be yours, and may this household form an unbroken family in the paradise of God!

H. M. BOOTH.

WHITE—MISS EDELINE WHITE was born near Evergreen, La., April 9, 1860, and closed her beautiful life on earth, November 3, 1887. With bated breath and trembling hand, I sit hesitating where to commence and when to end the mere outline of this grand Christian character. "Perfect beauty" has no descriptives, and consecrated usefulness no reward in human words. Truly, she has done what she could." She possessed that excellence of character which is profoundly felt, yet undescribed in doing good. In her was that intuition which sees the unspoken need of others, the inventive power to find required relief, and the ready will to sacrifice self that the happiness of others might be promoted. With a cultured mind, a tender, sympathetic heart, an affable temperament and a native delight in ministering to the comfort of others, she easily won a place in the affections of all who knew her. One of her teachers, writing, says: "In Edeline's life were found all the charms, graces and virtues that constitute a noble womanhood. Her life was the essence of a regenerated soul that poured forth light and perfume that made her path a radiant glow to all within her influence." May parents, brothers, sisters and friends all meet in heaven!

PASTOR.

PEARSON—SIMON HOLDEN PEARSON died at his residence, in East Feliciana parish, December 2, 1887. He was born November 14, 1821, in Washington parish. He was married to Amelia Holden, in 1839, and moved to St Helena parish, where he won the confidence of the people and was elected sheriff for two terms. He joined the Methodist Church in 1873, of which he died a Christian and in well assurance of his Savior. He was a bright mason, a kind husband and father. In his last hours he called to his invalid daughter, asking her if she saw the angel coming to him; and his last song was, "Am I a soldier of the cross?" He leaves a wife and several children and grandchildren to mourn his loss. May God bless the bereaved ones with great comfort and sustaining grace and finally bring them to meet him in heaven, where there will be no parting.

B. DUKE.

FLOWERS—MRS. ABIGAIL A. FLOWERS, daughter of Rev. J. Griffin, was born in Claiborne county, Miss., November 13, 1827; united in marriage to Rev. E. A. Flowers, October 19, 1849. Her father was a local preacher in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Raised by pious parents, Sister Flowers joined the church when about twelve years old. She was converted, when fifteen years of age, at Spring Hill Camp Meeting, in 1851. She was the mother of thirteen children, six of whom preceded her to the grave, and we believe to the heavenly Canaan. The others are all members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the eldest brother, A. C. Flowers, is now a traveling preacher in the Mississippi Conference. Sister Flowers died of paralysis, at her home in Jefferson county, Miss., December 6, 1887, surrounded by children and friends; departed calm and peaceful in the full assurance of faith, gaining the victory over death without a struggle. She was a quiet, unassuming, Christian mother, who lived her religion daily in the presence of her family, and by her perfect obedience and Christian example taught her children that true happiness was found only in the path of duty to God and duty to our fellows. A Christian at home and abroad; she has done what she could and has gone to receive her reward.

L. B. M'LAURIN.

COVINGTON—Our community has been called upon to lament the death of one of its oldest citizens, JOHN J. COVINGTON was born in South Carolina, November 18, 1815, was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1845. The year after he came to Mississippi. He was fond of children and took delight in Sunday-school work, filling well the office of Sunday-school superintendent for many years. He loved the church and all its institutions. He won friends wherever he went. He was quite social and generous, unselfish and kind. He was married to Miss Mary Hamilton, of Madison county, Miss., 1845. He was a kind, indulgent husband. He had told his wife several times within the last two years that he had no fear of death. His suffering was intense for twenty-four hours before his death, but he told his wife he was not alarmed, that he was ready to fall asleep in the arms of Jesus. So that we feel assured that though the active, anxious brain, the wearied, generous heart are at rest here in this poor clay, the immortal spirit which animated them is at rest on the bosom of Jesus. He died November 26, 1887.

IRA B. GOBERTSON.

TINSLEY—Little WILLIE LAURIE TINSLEY, daughter of Mr. R. T. Tinsley and Mrs. Willie Geneva Tinsley (nee Barnes), aged one year, four months and ten days, died Tuesday, December 6, 1887, of necrosis stomatitus. A tiny bud of earth, so dark, was transplanted to bloom in heaven. During her short stay on earth she was the center of clustering hopes, and a sunbeam to brighten the life of her parents. We trust, finally, there will be a reunion of the entire family in Willie Laurie's home in heaven.

W. F. H.

HALEY—WILLIE HALEY, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Jessie Haley, died November 26, 1887, aged about four years. One more bud from earth's rose-bed of love has been plucked by the messenger who is no respecter of persons; who comes when he is least expected, and from whom no one is safe; whose pall falls as a barrier, between, upon the rich as well as the poor.

LARKIN—At a meeting of Mt. Moriah Sabbath-school, December 4, 1887, the following preamble and resolutions were presented by the superintendent, J. J. Denson, and unanimously adopted:

Whereas, On December 2, 1887, it was the will of our heavenly Father to call from the cares and troubles of this world our teacher, friend and Sabbath-school worker, BRO. EARLE WILLIS LARKIN; And, whereas, The precepts he has given us from time to time, and the Christian devotion he continually manifested for the cause of his Master, is sufficient example for this Sabbath-school, by divine help, to endeavor to emulate this true Christian character; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the seed he has sown in this Sabbath-school shall not be as those that fell by the wayside and on unprofitable ground, bringing forth no fruit; but, as an evidence of his painstaking in cultivating the mind, they shall be as those that fell on good ground, bringing forth fruit an hundred-fold to the honor and glory of him in whose presence the faithful sower now is.

Resolved, That, by the help of our heavenly Father, we will take charge of the work he has left for us, and endeavor to emulate our departed teacher by following and carrying out the precepts he gave us.

Resolved, That this community has lost a noble Christian example; his friends and associates, a genial companion; his children, a devoted father.

Resolved, That to his relatives and friends we extend to them our warmest sympathy, and direct them to him who has seen fit to bereave them for comfort.

HORNER—We, the committee appointed by the third Quarterly Conference of the Oak Ridge circuit, Louisiana Conference, present the following:

Whereas, It has pleased our heavenly Father, in his all-wise providence, to remove from our midst, by death, our Bro. R. B. HORNER, who, by his faithfulness in his office as steward, secured the respect and confidence of all who knew him; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in the death of Bro. Horner our Quarterly Conference has lost a faithful member, and a true and conscientious Christian has been taken to his reward.

Resolved, That we tender our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved wife and children, praying that our loving Savior may encompass them in his arms of love and give them grace to say, "Thy will be done."

T. S. RANDLE, for Com.

SISSON—The committee appointed by the third Quarterly Conference of the Oak Ridge circuit, Louisiana Conference, present the following:

Whereas, In the wisdom of God, our heavenly Father, BRO. JAMES E. SISSON has been called to his reward therefore; be it

Resolved, That while we can not fathom the depth of his mysterious providence, we bow with submission to the will of God, believing him to be too wise to err and too good to do wrong, and that he doeth all things well. Although he has heavily afflicted us, yet he has only claimed his own.

Resolved, That we lament the death of our departed brother, and extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved children and point them to the God of all consolation.

T. S. RANDLE, for Com.

HAMPTON—The following resolutions were adopted by the Woman's Missionary Society, of Oak Ridge, La.:

Whereas, Our heavenly Father, in his all-wise providence, has removed from our midst SISTER JENNIE HAMPTON, our beloved and efficient secretary of the Oak Ridge Woman's Missionary Society; therefore, be it

Resolved, That although our hearts are sad and we miss her beyond expression, that we feel that our loss is her eternal gain, and that we bow with submission, knowing that he doeth all things well.

Resolved, That this society tender their warmest sympathy to the bereaved husband, little one and family, and point them to her Savior who alone can pour in the oil of consolation.

MRS. T. S. RANDLE, for Com.

There is more experience, time, and brain work represented in the preparation of Hood's Sarsaparilla than in any other medicine. It is this which makes Hood's Sarsaparilla peculiar in its curative power, and in the remarkable cures it effects. Give it a trial.

JOY OF SOUL-SAVING.—Amid all the pleasures of life there is one that is liner than all, and amid all the joys that bloom in the landscape of our days, there is one whose flower stands pre-eminent, whose beauty is seen afar, and whose fragrance fills the air. It is the pleasure of bringing back some one that has gone astray, the joy of knowing that you have led one sinner to repentance. There are pleasures that last but an hour. There are joys that fill but the circle of a moment. There are delights that rise with the sun and go down with the same, leaving darkness; and it may be a darkness that has not a star. But the pleasure of bringing a man back from his evil ways lasts with our lasting, and the joy of finding one who has wandered far off, been bitten by wolves, and lies dying—the joy of finding that wanderer, lifting him to your bosom, and bringing him back to the Father's fold, is a joy that neither rises nor sets with the sun, but stands fixed like an orb that moves not, and whose beams never fade in the firmament of life everlasting. For this is the joy of heaven and those that are heavenly.—Selected.

Consumption Surely Cured.

To the Editor:

Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the above-named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy FREE to any of your readers who have consumption, if they will send me their Express and P. O. address.

Respectfully,
T. A. SLOCUM, M. C.,
181 Pearl St., New York.

Men are saved by word and by example. One drives the nail, the other clinches it. To withhold experience is to hide the gift of God which he designs for the enlightenment and purifying of the world. Many a blessing is lost because it will not bear hiding. It grows impalpable in the darkness and hides itself from us as we have hidden it from others.

Benevolence includes everything we do for the sake of others—being kind, tender-hearted and forgiving. Ah! there is no way to teach this well but by example; so let our homes be full of courtesies and thoughtfulness and helpfulness for each other and for those outside.—Helen Knapp Garrett.

A sort of lethargy sometimes takes possession of the kidneys and bladder. They should be promptly stimulated to healthful action by the use of Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Balm.

Gratitude is not only to be felt, but said. There is a prejudice against something called "gush," by both pulpit and press, but I believe in it. The fountains gush, as does the light of the sun in the morning. Thank God for the gratitude that will find expression.—Dr. P. S. Henson.

HEALTHFUL secretions of the kidneys and bladder can be secured by the use of Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Balm.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

A soldiers' riot occurred at Jefferson Barracks, near St. Louis, on the third instant, between white and colored troops quartered there, which resulted in the injury of many men, and probably the loss of three lives.

Senator Beck has been nominated for re-election by the Kentucky Democratic legislative caucus. There was no opposition.

The State of Alabama has let out all of its convicts, numbering 5,000, on a ten-year contract to work in the coal mines near Birmingham.

Senator Hoar introduced in the Senate, on the fifth instant, a bill for a World's Exposition in 1892, which was referred to a select committee.

Contrary to expectation, the primary elections were held in this city, on the 11th instant, without a single disturbing incident.

The Norris Mills, on Lake Charles, caught fire on the sixth instant, and was totally consumed.

Rev. James S. Johnston was consecrated Bishop of the Episcopal Church of Western Texas, to succeed the late Bishop Elliot. He has been rector of Trinity church, Mobile, for the past seven years, where the ceremony took place, January 6.

The comptroller of the currency, on the sixth instant, authorized the North Texas National Bank, of Dallas, to begin business with a capital of $500,000.

Gov. Ross, of Texas, on the sixth instant, sent to President and Mrs. Cleveland an invitation to be present at the military and civic celebration, which will occur in Austin, May 14-19, in honor of the dedication of the new capitol building, which is expected to be completed shortly before that time.

Mr. Moody began his work in Louisville, Ky., on the eighth instant. Four meetings were held; the aggregate attendance was 12,000.

Two Chinamen were baptized and admitted on probation into the Hanson Place Methodist Episcopal Church, Brooklyn, on last Sunday.

The Anti-Poverty Society will erect a church building in New York. It is understood that Rev. Hugh O. Pentecost will be installed as pastor.

In the Methodist preachers' meeting in Baltimore, on the ninth instant, Rev. Mr. Clemm read a paper entitled, "A protest against the action of President Cleveland in sending a copy of the Constitution of the United States to Pope Leo XIII., on the occasion of the recent jubilee of the latter." The protest excited a great deal of discussion, the members being about equally divided.

The trial of Logan Sigmund for the killing of Wm. Higginbotham in 1861 was begun on the tenth instant in Rock Castle county, Ky.

The office of the Vicksburg Commercial Herald was destroyed by fire on the morning of the ninth instant.

FOREIGN.

The Liberal Radical Union will give a public reception to Messrs. O'Brien and Sullivan after their release from Tullamore Jail.

The Pope's speech, in reply to the Italian pilgrims, on January 3, is regarded as putting an end to the idea of conciliation with the Italian government.

President Carnot is said to have instructed the French Ambassador at Berlin to assure the Emperor that while he remains at the head of the republic, no French government will be permitted to adopt a warlike policy.

Mr. Spurgeon has rebirmed to Loudou from Menton His health is greatly improved.

It is intended that the national celebration on the occasion of the silver wedding of the Prince and Princess of Wales shall include a public holiday and court and public fetes.

The remains of Napoleon III. and the Prince Imperial will be removed from Chiselhurst to Farnsborough.

It is reported that Mr. Parnell will address several meetings in Ireland.

Gladstone having expressed a wish to see the Pope, the latter has intimated that he would be delighted to meet the English statesman.

The trial, in Paris, of those who have been connected with the Legion of Honor decorations swindle has been resumed. The prosecutor announced that additional evidence had been procured which implicated M. Wilson.

Mgr. Persico, papal envoy, denies that he is intriguing to put a pressure upon Irish priests.

The Journal des Debats, of the ninth instant, officially denies that M. Carnot instructed M. Herbette, French Ambassador at Berlin, to inform Emperor William that as long as he remained President there would be no war.

Six thousand persons crowded the tabernacle on the ninth instant to welcome Mr. Spurgeon home and join with him in celebrating the publication of his 2000th sermon. In the course of his remarks, Mr. Spurgeon said his sermons had an enormous circulation in America, but he received no payment for them beyond an occasional newspaper containing a portion of the stolen property. He hoped the authors would obtain a copyright law.

Late advices from Athens state that the records of the celebrated Temple of Kabeiroi have been discovered by German excavators near Thebes.

The French embassy at Constantinople has received reports from Jeddah of a rising against the Christians. It is said that the French consul there has been killed.

WANTED.—Agents for the marvelous work, "Fifty Years in the Church of Rome." Address I. Q. REYNOLDS, 203 Lafayette street, New Orleans.

Southern Cultivator and Christian Advocate.

By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer to new subscribers the Southern Cultivator and Dixie Farmer, combined with the ADVOCATE, for $2 50, for the two publications for one year. Commencing with this date, the price to old subscribers will remain the same as heretofore—$2 75—with only twenty-five cents extra to either of the above amounts for "Dickson's System of Farming." These rates are postage prepaid. All orders must be accompanied by cash in full; no allowance for commission to agents, and both papers must be ordered at same time. We will, however, fill orders to subscribers who failed to take advantage of the club rate when they last renewed for $1 for the Cultivator for one year.

What "Peculiar" Means.

Applied to Hood's Sarsaparilla, the word Peculiar is of great importance. It means that Hood's Sarsaparilla is different from other preparations in many vital points, which make it a thoroughly honest and reliable medicine. It is peculiar, in a strictly medicinal sense: first, in the combination of remedial agents used; second, in the proportion in which they are prepared; third, in the process by which the active curative properties of the medicine are secured. Study these points well. They mean volumes. They make Hood's Sarsaparilla Peculiar in its curative powers, as it accomplishes wonderful cures hitherto unknown, and which give to Hood's Sarsaparilla a clear right to the title of "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered."

Another Extraordinary Offer.

After this date we will include in our club arrangement the New York Weekly World, the price of which, including all postage, will be three dollars. This amount will entitle the subscriber to one copy of the "World's History of the United States," post paid.

This history is on a new plan. It is the record of the events of our history in the order in which they happened. There are no moralizings, no opinions put forth, no criticisms offered in regard to anything. It is not a political record merely, but one of all sorts of facts that have contributed to make our history. Discoveries, inventions, financial and literary matters, are all noted. One merit of the work is, that it can not grow old. The date of an event, when once ascertained, is fixed for all time. The book has twenty-four very good illustrations. We regard it as a valuable book for every student.

Old and new subscribers are entitled to the premium. Subscribers who have already paid will receive the History and the Weekly World one year by sending one dollar. Cash to accompany all orders.

MEDICAL PROGRESS.—The great physiological discovery of the seventeenth century was the circulation of the blood. The great medical discovery of the nineteenth century was an Aberrative for the purifying of the blood. These two discoveries, Harvey's circulation theory and Ayer's Sarsaparilla, are prominent landmarks in the history and progress of Medicine.

ROYAL
POWDER
Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and can not be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans.

WILBOR'S COMPOUND OF PURE COD LIVER OIL
AND PHOSPHATES OF LIME, SODA, IRON.

Cures Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, and all Scrofulous Humors.

The advantage of this compound over the plain oil is, that the nauseating taste of the oil is entirely removed, and the whole rendered palatable. The offensive taste of the Oil has long acted as a great objection to its use; but to this form the trouble is obviated. A host of certificates might be given here to testify to the excellence and success of "Wilbor's Cod Liver Oil and Lime;" but the fact that it is regularly prescribed by the medical faculty is sufficient. Sold by A. B. WILBOR, Chemist, Boston, and all druggists.

EDUCATIONAL.

Mansfield Female College.
1887-8.

THE FALL TERM will open Wednesday, September 15, 1887.

The Faculty has been strengthened by the accession of Rev. M. S. Watts, of Virginia, who will have the discipline of the College, and Prof. H. F. Biddle, also of Virginia, who will manage the boarding department. Both these gentlemen are experienced in school work, and they, with their families, will add much to the social advantages of the pupils.

Other highly qualified teachers have been secured for the Literary, Music and Art Departments.

Annual rate for board and tuition from one hundred and sixty-five to one hundred and eighty-five dollars, according to class. Music, instrumental or vocal, and art lessons, five dollars per month of four weeks, extra.

Instruction in French, ten dollars per year. Use of piano for practice, ten dollars. Total expense for the year for board, tuition, and single course in music or art, paid in advance, two hundred dollars.

A deposit of five dollars for each term must be made for purchase of books and stationery.

Pupils must furnish their own bed-clothing and pillows, towels and toilet articles.

The College is the property of the Louisiana Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the daughters of members of this body receive free tuition in the Literary and Music Departments.

Owing to the steadily increasing patronage during the past four years, the Board of Managers have made arrangements for increasing the capacity and comfort of the buildings, and beautifying the grounds.

Mansfield is on the line of the Texas and Pacific R. R., 288 miles from New Orleans, and forty miles from Shreveport.

TO LIVE, TO LOVE, TO DIE.

In a beautiful land, by a heaven-lit sea,
Lo! these were the gifts of God to men,
Three wonderful gifts—ay, more than three,
To live, to love, to die—and then?

To live, to feel the mighty thrill
Of a vital force through nerve and vein;
To think, to know, to move, to will,
And rule a world from a human brain.

To love with a joy as keen as pain,
With a power that holds o'en death at bay,
With a love that brings to life again
Dead hopes that have slept for many a day.

There is something sweet in e'en the hour
That hangs the blackest before the day;
For we look beyond the glooms that lower
And hail the dawn a zone away.

"And then?" Appeareth not what then shall be
Our sight is too short, we can not scan
The far horizon, where the boundless sea
Rolls freighted with countless gifts for man.

What "then" it will be to simply live
Is more than human heart can know,
When deathless forces we shall receive,
And immortal powers through us shall flow.

What "then" it shall be to us to love,
With a perfect love that shall make in one
The parted souls its that now cower,
And blend like mists that seek the sun.

Ah! we have not learned, and shall not know
Till we master the lessons God giveth here:
To live, to love, to die below,
Then rise to things that shall appear.

—The Marble Cross.

Good Resolutions.

BY W. H. ANDERSON, D. D.

These are of easy structure in their formation, and are often easily shattered. If they are formed under intelligent conviction of error, and have reference to immediate action to secure freedom from bad principles, habits, or associations, they may result favorably in securing better living. Self-confidence is necessary, and so the putting forth of personal effort; but, if reliance on the strength of human purpose and the force of mental resolve goes no higher and ignores the direction and support of the truth and grace of God, the sadly tearful defection and fall of Simon will be often repeated in human history.

Sometimes good resolutions are formed under the sting of the lash of conscience, the sense of personal degradation; or the appeal of those we love, or newly awaked gratitude, may lead to sudden determination to pursue a better course of action. Sometimes these mental resolves are only designed as an excuse for neglected duty—a sort of hush money to upbraiding conscience.

When we pass from good resolutions of individuals to that of deliberate bodies—whether met to consider letters or science, politics or religion—we are impressed with the fact that in large numbers of cases compliment may be offered to grand truths, projects and plans. Pledges are readily given by vote, and then neglected or forgotten until the returning annual periods for good resolutions. What an easy short-hand method is often a Conference resolution, to avoid personal responsibility and personal effort! Pledges are given by wholesale to promote this and that, and, indeed, all the prominent church enterprises by individual influence and action. During the year where is that sermon on church education, missions, the Bible Society, church extension, etc., which we solemnly agreed to preach? It is true we complimented the cause and ourselves by the vote, but it was merely compliment after all. We resolve that a church paper is a vital necessity, and we will "strive" to get one, if possible, into each family of our charge. What is the record of our labor? If a mere Conference resolution, or a group of them, could have effected it, the Nashville Advocate would long since have received its 50,000 subscribers, the Bible would be in every home in Christendom, the missionary treasury would be as plethoric as our national vaults at Washington, our church schools of every grade would be endowed beyond even a miser's desire for "more," and we should be fat and flourishing and the world just ready for the second coming of Christ.

Unfortunately, Conference resolutions are often mere forms. We do not like "to be singular;" we can not afford to antagonize men and measures. We find these an important labor-saving machine. We put our church loyalty into print, and our reputations are "all right" without any disturbance of our personal quiet and ease. While these resolutions flatter our church pride and call out the fancy in the beautiful dreams of the glorious hereafter, they are not "paper" that is "bankable." In themselves they build no schools or hospitals, send out no well-freighted missionary ships, fill no treasuries of the Lord. Indeed, they cultivate a disregard of sacred pledges most publicly and solemnly made; and negligence at this point seriously enfeebles other features of Christian character and action. A resolution to act is not the action itself, and, if carelessly made, seriously injures the integrity and consistency of pious character. Fewer annual resolves, with more daily, pious effort, would be more effective of desired religious results. Fourth of July salutes may be soothing to national pride, but guns without bullets or balls would do but little service in actual war.

Perhaps there may be with some, in voting for these resolutions, the mental reservation: "I will do this, if I can without any inconvenience." The reservation is not an addition to the resolution, and is not binding. It may be that our zeal may momentarily rise to fever heat, and then we "vote money and supplies" which, in our cooler moments, we may find difficult to carry out into practice. Still, good resolutions are the harbingers to good action, and should be carefully matured before we publicly commit ourselves to courses of action.

A Visit to Louisiana Conference.

MR. EDITOR: A visit to the Louisiana Conference is one that I have long cherished to make. The appointment as agent of Centenary College gave the desired opportunity. The session for 1888 was held at Shreveport, La., January 4-9.

Shreveport is a live little city, situated on Red river, in Northwest Louisiana. Several railroads center there. Shreveport has two compresses, with the prospect of another soon; electric lights, two ice-houses, five churches, and an intelligent people. Her merchants are said to be solid and strong, financially. She has more muddy streets than any city or town I have ever seen, North or South. The members of the Conference gave me a hearty reception and a warm welcome as the agent of the college. Several of them mapped out work enough for me, if I had nothing else to do but to travel for the college alone. Oh, that some person who has the money would endow a chair in the college, and let the interest go to the support of an agent—say, for five years—until the college could be endowed, and the patronage of former years brought back!

The Conference has a considerable number of old men, and presents a venerable and strong appearance. She has quite a number of strong and active young men that would be leaders in any Conference. In appearance, R. S. Isbell looks very much like W. P. Barton, of precious memory; R. Parvin, very much like J. L. Forsythe, of like precious memory.

W. C. Dunlap, Commissioner of Education, was present, and gave a plain statement of, and made a strong talk in the interest of Paine Institute. The Conference gave him $300 to liquidate the debt on the buildings, in order to secure the $25,000 as an endowment from the Rev. M. U. Paine, of Missouri, after which he sang the centennial hymn; and there was quite a camp meeting scene.

Bishop Key is quite at ease in the chair, and has made a fine impression on the Conference. Young J. Allen was there. The Bishop being unwell, Dr. Allen was requested to occupy the pulpit on Sunday, at eleven A. M.; also at night. He delighted the Conference and audience with an account of our work in China. I wish the whole church could hear him.

Monday morning presented the usual Conference scene of nervousness and anxiety to rush business through, hence report after report was read and adopted without comment or amendment, until the report of education was presented. The report was a very fine one, and brought forth the usual spirited debate in this Conference. After amendment and adoption, the Conference quieted down, like a sick child that knows it has to take its medicine, to listen to the representations of the various presidents, professors, agents and friends of the institutions of learning in its bounds and elsewhere. Most all things have an end; so must this letter.

The Conference met at seven P. M. to receive the appointments, after which they adjourned to met one year hence in New Orleans.

P. A. JOHNSTON.

Miss Callie Hallaran.

The death is announced of Miss Callie Hallaran, who for several years was principal of our mission school in the City of Mexico. On account of failing health she left Mexico nearly a year ago, and came to Texas, to the family of her sister, Mrs. Charlotte Jones. There, in the midst of those dearest on earth to her, the candle which had shone so brightly slowly burned out. Bishop Keener had great admiration for her. On several occasions we have heard him speak with enthusiasm of her genius as a writer, and her high character as a Christian and a woman. In the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, of December 8, he pays a beautiful tribute to the memory of this gifted and consecrated young woman.

Eagerly rejoicing at meeting our missionaries in the Old City of the Montezumas in the winter of 1885, an hour after the arrival of Bishop Keener and the writer, we were hospitably seated at the table of the superintendent. On the opposite side of the table sat three young ladies. Conversation flowed freely, and the Bishop was at his best. Soon from the opposite side of the table a reply came as rich in insight, philosophy and deep humor as if it had been plucked from some page of Shakespeare. Startled into actual rudeness by the shock of the surprise, the writer looked up and exclaimed: "Do you know what a wonderful thing you have said? Can it possibly be your own?" The twinkling eye and calm, masterful face that looked into mine, forgiving and convincing me at once, has never been lost to memory. When the Bishop and I were alone, he told me some of the things he has published in the just and graceful portrait he drew of Miss Hallaran in the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE since her death.

I am not sure that I have seen another woman so gifted. Her whole soul was kindled into enthusiasm for Mexico. The long years of struggle for freedom won her highest admiration. She had made the politics of Mexico a study, and some of the foremost of her statesmen delighted to discuss these issues with her. She never wearied of the praise she gave to the Liberals for their efforts and success in behalf of education. Their achievements in art and music were to her a never-failing source of delight. But from all these she turned to the poor of her own sex, and planned for them so wisely and with such sympathy that when she had, one evening, as we sat in the Plaza, pictured all her plans for them, I said, "Now give yourself to this work, and we will see to it that you have all the help you need." She did not tell me why she could not do this then; this she did later, and the reasons were such that they only heightened my estimate of her womanly depth of character. Her opinions on school questions in Mexico were better matured, better illustrated with facts, and more fully supported by a grasp of all the details of the situation than those of any other person I have known. She gave all the time she could spare by intense application and judicious economy of every moment to aid in our mission work. She was teacher of the children of an English banker, correspondent of the Times-Democrat, much sought after by the best people of the city; but the circle was never brilliant enough to delay her when the hour for prayer meeting in the little Mexican congregation arrived, for she presided at the organ, and would not disappoint them. She was to her Mexican girls companion, guide, and guardian angel.

She told me of a time when doubts had greatly troubled her, and I hear now the thrilling pathos of her voice as she said to me one evening returning from church: "I shall never be able to thank God enough for throwing me into the family of dear, good Dr. Patterson. All doubts are gone; my faith and peace are perfect."

Bishop Keener has told of her work. It is hard to stop my pen, which would fain run on. I would not intrude, but less I could not say.

Methodism in Politics.

When I was very young my father made our abode where Choctaw Indians were all around, and Methodist preachers and people were of the household. After I became old enough to decide that it should be otherwise, it was not necessary for me to go from the Indians, as the United States moved them away, and if I had preferred to separate from the Methodists, I soon came to know that they were as numerous in any other place which I might select; so I remained during a long life near my early home. Upon reflection I am glad that I have always had Methodists about me.

The Indians at one time owned all the land in North and East Mississippi, with a public road through the center from Nashville to Natchez, on which were houses to accommodate travelers, of whom there were great numbers always going north, being persons who, having descended the Mississippi river on flatboats, and having sold out cargo and boat, returned by this road, before steamboats were introduced. These taverns were called "stands," with the prefix of the owner's name, as Donte's Stand, Osborne, Fulson, and others.

The United States, by treaty, acquired all this Indian domain, and placed agents at these "stands," which were then called "agencies," where Indian affairs were managed, particularly distributing goods of sundry kinds in payment for the Indian lands. I called at one of these agencies, or stands, where the man, evidently in authority, attracted my attention. In appearance, prepossessing, he was respected by the travelers, obeyed by the slaves, and feared by the Indians. He was the superior of a large establishment, consisting of dwelling, store, stables, and numerous outhouses.

At the time of retiring he remarked, in substance: "Servants will show gentlemen to their rooms and beds. Before I bid you good-night, permit me to say that I have family prayers in my room, to which anyone will be welcome. Not to come will be no offense." This was a surprise to me. I did not expect family prayers in such a public place. Upon inquiry I found the name of the man to be Jesse Cole; that he was a Methodist preacher, and acting as United States Indian Agent by appointment from Washington City. Andrew Jackson was President, and was disposed to befriend those whom he esteemed, and in whom he had confidence. Among these were the chaplains among the soldiers whom he had commanded when general. Methodist preachers had come to his notice, and these were not forgotten. This partiality influenced, no doubt, the appointment of Jesse Cole, as it certainly did the appointment of two sons of the Rev. James Given to important offices in Mississippi. William McKendree Given was the son of a Methodist preacher, and named for a Methodist Bishop, William McKendree. He was nominated a United States marshal; Samuel Given, another son, of Methodist preacher, was nominated for the position of receiver of public money at the land office. As these appointees were not citizens of the State, it was an unpopular nomination, and the United States Senate rejected them. The President would make no other nomination until the Senate adjourned, when he appointed the same persons again.

Their father, the Rev. James Given, came to Mississippi and obtained signatures to a petition to the Senate, asking the confirmation of his sons, representing that they were now identified as citizens, and that all the Given family were now, or soon would be, in the State, which really came to pass; three or four sons, and as many daughters, with their husbands, making a valuable addition to the population of the State. William M. and Samuel Given became conspicuous and controlling politicians. The former was at one time senator from that State. Afterwards he was one of the first senators from California.

The intimacy between ex-President Jackson and the son of his old Methodist chaplain may be inferred from the fact that this great man accepted an invitation to, and attended, a reception at the residence of Hon. William M. Given, in Vicksburg, which was an event of great interest and display. Having been present, I know whereof I write. To write more may be tedious. I saw Jesse Cole on his way to Texas.

The Rev. James Given and all his sons and daughters are dead. The last daughter-in-law, Mrs. McWhirter, died recently in Nashville. Her body was brought to Vicksburg, when funeral services were held in the Methodist Church by Rev. C. K. Marshall, and the remains were interred in the cemetery of that city, where the ancestor and others of the Given family have their last resting-place.

Dr. Allen's Visit and Work among Us.

At a called meeting of the Board of Missions, held on Monday, January 2, 1888, the following members were present: President E. W. Cole, in the chair; Dr. I. G. John, secretary; Dr. D. C. Kelley, treasurer; Bishops H. N. McTyeire and R. K. Hargrove, Rev. Drs. W. G. E. Cunnyngham, R. A. Brown, and O. P. Fitzgerald, Dr. William Morrow, and T. D. Fite, Esq. The following paper was adopted unanimously:

Whereas, We recognize a providential opportuneness in the presence of Rev. Dr. Young J. Allen among us at this time when the rapid march of events and the urgent needs of our mission fields demands extraordinary activity and liberality on the part of the church;

And, whereas, Dr. Allen's long residence in the East, his deep study of its condition, and his thorough practical acquaintance with its needs as a field for Christian evangelization, eminently qualify him to furnish our people with the information that will give them a proper understanding of the facts and an intelligent sympathy with the plans and purposes of the Board of Missions in its endeavor to enter the doors so wonderfully opened to the church, and stimulate them to prompt hearty co-operation;

And, whereas, Having heard Dr. Allen's presentation of this cause before the Board of Missions and in the pulpit, and being convinced that wherever our people shall have the opportunity to enjoy a similar privilege, their hearts will be enlarged, and they will be aroused to greater zeal for the cause of missions; therefore, be it

Resolved, That regarding Dr. Allen's visit to America as providential, and, if wisely utilized, calculated to be of great benefit to the cause of missions, we give him a cordial greeting in the name of the church.

Resolved, That it is the wish of the Board that Dr. Allen travel as extensively as possible through the church during his stay among us; and that as his visit is necessarily brief, we think it advisable for him to present the cause in as many of our chief cities as possible, where the largest number of persons may be reached in the shortest time, and from which, as centers, we trust the fresh interest he will evoke may radiate in all directions.

Resolved, That a committee of five members of this Board be appointed, consisting of Bishops McTyeire and Wilson, and the Secretary and Treasurer, and Dr. O. P. Fitzgerald, who shall co-operate with Dr. Allen in determining the schedule of visits and method of operations.

Resolved, That we earnestly commend Dr. Allen to the sympathy, prayers, and hearty practical co-operation of all our people, and especially to the pastors of our churches, upon whose special interest and energetic co-operation so much depends in this matter.

Resolved, That we respectfully request the editors of our church papers to give publicity to this action of the Board, and to give their efficient co-operation in all available ways to this movement.

In accordance with the foregoing action of the Board of Missions, the following list of appointments has been made for Dr. Allen, extending to March 11:

Louisiana Conference, held at Shreveport, January 8; Dallas, Texas, January 15; New Orleans, January 22; Montgomery, Ala., January 29; Charleston, S. C., February 5; Charlotte, N. C., February 12; Lynchburg, Va., February 19; Richmond, Va., February 26; Washington, D. C., March 4; Baltimore, March 11.

Dr. Allen proposes to visit as far as possible points intermediate between those named in the foregoing list. Pastors desiring his services can communicate with him at the points above named, writing in the care of pastors in charge.

I. G. JOHN, Sec.

The book of Psalms contains about fifty references to help, and two thoughts seem to be prominently brought out thereby—Vain is the help of man, and Sufficient is the help of God. In all the trials of life, therefore, there should be confident looking unto God, and earthly losses and griefs should lead to the same resort which David had in mind when he cried unto God, saying, "Be thou my strong habitation." God as a habitation is the great need of every soul. Thus provided for, all is well, whatever may be suffered in any day of adversity. In such a habitation, it may be said, in the words of David, "I shall not be moved."—Watchman.

The Woman's Board.

The following address was made to the Louisiana Conference by the president of the Woman's Board of Missions of the Louisiana Conference, Mrs. E. J. Fullilove:

It is my duty and pleasure to urge the claims of the Woman's Missionary Society whenever an opportunity is offered me; and I count myself happy to be allowed to say a word on this occasion in behalf of the Christian women of our Conference who are laboring in this cause. I wish I could—not almost, but altogether—persuade our brethren to feel the importance of enlisting every woman of the church in this army of Christian workers. We do not presume to have any knowledge to impart to you on the subject of foreign missions.

The inspiration of our zeal is the fruit of your labors, and we still desire to sit at the feet of our Gamaliels and learn of them. But while we listen to your words of wisdom, our hearts burn within us, and even, as Mary, we bring our boxes of precious ointment, and ask to be admitted to the feast that we may break them over the feet of our blessed Lord. You have taught us that our own soul's salvation depends on our efforts toward the salvation of other souls. The outgrowth of this realization is the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society.

The earnestness of our convictions and purity of our motives have been proven by our labors. "By their fruits ye shall know them." The Woman's Missionary Society has proven itself worthy of the confidence of the church, for after years of struggling existence, the Bishops have commended our cause and bid us God-speed. We have gone forth weeping, bearing precious seed into the remote parts of the vineyard; and the Lord of the harvest has promised that we shall come rejoicing, bearing our sheaves with us.

We feel honored in being accounted worthy to work for our Lord, and with a sense of deep humility every consecrated woman asks her own heart: "What must I do for my risen Lord?" In response there comes the pentecostal promise.—"I will pour out my spirit upon all flesh"—followed by an echo from the rocky slopes around the Sea of Tiberias: "Feed my sheep." The glorified Son of Man speaks thus to Peter in thunder tones thrice told, and to his humblest disciples in soft accents of love. We have heard the whispered injunction, and we dare not disobey the command, for our blessing in that day lies at the end of this way. The Savior said, she to whom most had been forgiven was capable of most love. Surely women in Christian lands have been raised from the lowest to the highest social plane. We are lost in adoration of the Redeemer who has so exalted us; and as we view the degraded condition of womanhood in the vast expanse of heathendom, our hearts yearn—oh, so earnestly!—to tell them what our Savior can do for them.

This good work necessitates no neglect of nearer duties, as some faint-hearted ones have feared. Our homes and loved ones are well provided for; and, like the prudent woman of Proverbs, we are "not afraid of the snow, for our households are clothed in scarlet." The busy women are those who have the most time. Indeed, the most active missionary women, as a rule, are those who most appreciate and cherish the sweet influences of Christian home-life. That mother who most tenderly nurtures the little immortal beings entrusted to her care, is most alive to the appeals of the sad-eyed children of heathendom, who have never heard of Jesus, the friend of childhood; and that wife who guards most sacredly the sanctity of the beautiful, mystic marriage vow, typical of the Lamb and the Bride, is foremost to light the hymeneal torch in desolate heathen homes. Nor does this work beguile us from the modest womanly virtues which cluster around the sweet mother and wife who is the center and ornament of the quiet circle which gathers around the happy home altar, for where the celestial fires burn brightest, we find the heartiest response to the calls from over the seas. There can be no conflict of duties. Our labors must extend beyond our happy homes if we would rise to a high spiritual plane, and learn that sweet charity which embraces all of God's children in one family.

Some of our sister societies have lived up to this faith, and have accomplished wonderful results. Their good deeds provoke us to emulation.

The Louisiana Conference Society is yet in its infancy, and it is particularly to our condition I would call your attention. In 1879 the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of Louisiana Conference was organized in Baton Rouge by Bros. Daves, Hannon and Foster, with Mrs. M. W. Reid, president, and Mrs. William H. Foster, corresponding secretary. After four years of energetic labor and partial success, these devout women resigned their office, and, for reasons satisfactory to themselves, advised that the society be reorganized in North Louisiana. Accordingly in 1884 scarce half a dozen women met together in Monsfield during the session of the Annual Conference, and were organized into a Conference Society with the assistance of some of the ministers. The officers were notified of their nomination, and every timid, shrinking woman exclaimed against it. We knew nothing of the work, nor its duties. Some of us had not so much as heard of the Woman's Missionary Society, and, to my personal knowledge, one of us had never even been a member of any committee. Right here failure would have been written on the effort in bold relief had not our venerable, dear father in Israel, Bro. Pipes, come to the rescue by impressing us with a feeling sense of responsibility. We pondered his words in our hearts, and with feeble hands and shrinking feet fell into line, humbly asking God to show us every step of the way. We have since encountered many difficulties, fought great prejudice and opposition by even the members of the household of faith; but we have made some progress. To-day we are still a little band of only 848 members—adult and juvenile—but we are steadfast of faith, trusting in our sincerity and looking unto the Lord for our strength. We have gone too far in this work ever to turn back, and we feel that triumphant success will crown our cause if we can only impress the hearts of Christian womanhood with the feeling so beautifully expressed by an earnest writer: that "the heroism we need is not merely that which can face a frowning world. A harder courage than this is demanded at our hands; that which nothing can discourage; which no amount of opposition can intimidate; which no array of difficulties can dishearten; which no delay in the expected triumph can depress; which does not wait for grand opportunities to serve God, but shakes the world by the grand fidelity it shows in little things; which counts labor, rest and toil sweet when endured for Christ; which answers the call of God in the old prophetic way—'Here am I;' a courage that grows more bold as the hope becomes more forlorn, and that snatched victory out of defeat itself."

No words of mine are necessary to arouse your sympathy for the souls of the heathen, nor is this appeal designed to awaken an interest in the noble missionaries who are bravely giving their lives to the work year after year. You are alive as touching these subjects. It is of the workers at home that I am constrained to speak. We must press forward, else we fall.

In this warfare against the idols of ignorance and superstition, in which the great army of our Lord is engaged, it is wise and needful that all the requisitions toward the comfort and safety of the soldiers of the cross should be made; but we must remember that the great Captain's command is paramount to all else—"Go ye into all the world"—even as he said to the armies of Israel: Go up into the land; conquer and occupy. Every good work meets a hearty response in the heart of the true soldier. For the safety of the army let us teach and practice temperance. For the comfort of the soldiers let us provide pleasant booths in the shape of parsonages. For the true worship of the great congregation let us erect altars along the way and shelter them under consecrated roofs. But we can not tarry long by the wayside, for the command of our King is, "Go ye into all the world." The leaven must be hid in the meal and left there, and we must hurry on to hear the King's message to the waiting millions. "Let thy kingdom come," is on our lips, and yet the King tarries until all the nations shall have heard the news of his coming. No wayside question is equal in importance to the ultimate victory. We must conquer, and then possess. The first impulse of a new-born soul is to shout the good news ahead. This is the true missionary spirit which has impelled so many noble men and women to rush ahead into the regions beyond as couriers to proclaim the gospel story of the King's coming. The enthusiasm of certain victory has passed all along the line, and even "those who remain by the stuff" have caught the fire of inspiration.

We, the women and children—the weak soldiers in this glorious warfare—want to send words of cheer to the van of the conquering hosts. Will you let us? Or will you say to us that we have no part in this work? It is our Savior, too, who has revealed himself. It is our King who has said, "Go!"—go or send. "Few of us are honored in the going; but every one of us has the birthright in the sending." And when we consider the rich inheritance entailed with the sending even, should the privilege be denied the least soul for whom Christ has died? If every woman and child in Christendom could be taught the individual blessing of this work of love, a pentecost would again descend on the church. If only we could reach the hearing of this part of the church, and show the women their privileges in this line of duty, their hearts would respond in glad measure.

Our Woman's Foreign Missionary Society is well organized to its remotest ranks. Its conception, like the grain of mustard seed, was planted in the hearts of a very few consecrated women. After even nine years' growth it has sprung into the Woman's Board of Missions—a fair, stately tree, spreading its branches far out in every direction—east, west, north and south—giving shelter to the almond-eyed children of the orient, the swarthy-cheeked youths and maidens of the occident.

Brethren, we claim your meed of approval and support in this work. We propose to work, but under the shadow of your wing. The Woman's Board of Missions owns allegiance to the parent Board. As a good wife—faithfully performing her allotted part in the domestic economy, cheered by her noble, sympathizing husband, sheltered under his manly, generous nature—we claim our God-given right of your protection. We know your hearts are in the right place, and it is the glory of noble Christian manhood to furnish protection to the weak. If your judgment approves our work, why not give us cordial support? Experiment has proven that our labors supplement yours and, in truth, cultivate the very principles which you are trying to inculcate.

We desire to enlist the sympathy and co-operation of the ministers in this work. There is efficient help which they can render without an infringment on their special duties. When the Bishops, in General Conference in 1886, commended and endorsed the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, they enjoined the brethren to "help those women." Some of the ministers have faithfully performed this duty, and the response to our roll call comes up bravely from their charges.

Our societies, however, are confined to a small territory—the Shreveport district.—In two districts there is not one auxiliary: in another, two. Surely "the harvest is white, but the laborers are few." According to the Minutes of the last Louisiana Conference, there are 15,775 members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. I presume half this number—7,887—are women and children. If we could arouse this reserve force and put energy into these 7,000 women and children, then the possibilities of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society in this State would be no mean factor in the church. The brethren who have had experience in this matter can testify that in those churches where there is a Woman's Missionary Society their own collections are rather enhanced than reduced. Our systematic giving cultivates a spirit of generosity, and the children are educated in the good cause to an extent which only the next generation will reveal.

One other consideration is of importance in connection with this woman's work. Our organization leads to active investigation of foreign fields, and a personal interest in missions. The heathen was a far-away subject of our thoughts before we engaged in this work. It was somebody's business, of course, to tell them the good news, but scarcely ours. The spirit of the gospel was rather a sentiment than a principle. To-day, with 50,000 women and children of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the heathen is a brother, a sister, and the reflex action of this realization is spiritual growth and more perfect consecration. Our own sisters and daughters have taken their precious lives and laid them on the altar, giving up home friends, all for his sake; and can we leave them—bone of our bone and flesh of our flesh—to perish under foreign skies, while we hug our mantles of superficial, selfish, so-called womanly propriety about us, and sit at ease in Zion? The motherly instinct of the savage will follow through fire and blood where their young leads; and must we disgrace the highest type of motherhood by indifference in this glorious cause? You little know the length and breadth and height and depth of mother-love if you think that this rising tide of woman's work can be stemmed through our children. We will learn to love the whole world.

In the Woman's Missionary Society love-feasts thousands of earnest women testify that in this line of work they have attained spiritual heights never reached before.

In our humble opinion there is no surer and more speedy way to infuse activity in the churches than to get the women and children, as well as the men, to work. Let them feel a personal responsibility and interest in the harvest fields; then every dime of mission money will represent self-denial and spiritual benefit as well as material aid. Woman is tender and true, if once her heart is enlisted. The means for usefulness are gladly embraced, and her gifts will come pouring into the Lord's treasury.

As long as woman's care and solicitude circle around her own hearthstone alone, the great wealth of her affections will be centered on selfish things. Self will directly or remotely be enshrined in her heart an idol verily, to which will be sacrificed her best gifts. If self be crowded out to admit holier objects, then her precious gold will be wrought into crowns and harps. When God gave to man his helpmeet, he placed them side by side. Are you content to rise to a high plane of Christian excellence and leave this last, best gift entrusted sacredly to your care in the valley of selfish desolation? With the savage, woman is brutalized; with the pagan, she is deified; with Christian manhood, she should be glorified.

The women of Israel were allowed to bring their gold and jewels to the temple—yea, they were commanded; and may not we help to build spiritual temples in heathen lands?

If our ministers, who alone have the ear of these 7,000 women and children of the church, will impress their hearts with their duty in this work, our Louisiana Conference Woman's Missionary Society will soon rank with any in the South. There is strength in well-organized union, and we want every woman in the church to enjoy the blessed privileges of this holy work for the Master. We want an intelligent, earnest woman in every district to superintend and organize auxiliaries; but she can not work effectively, unsupported and unaided by the ministers in charge. If societies are formed and put in communication with the Conference officers, then the way is open for future enlargement.

We beg the ministers to aid us this far, at least, and we feel confident their outlay will return to them with interest. They need not be hindered in their work, for we will carry the mortar while they lay the heavy stones, and together we will pave the highway of holiness for the beautiful feet of them that bear glad tidings.

A Sunday-School Anniversary.

MR. EDITOR: Reflection is the hill from which we can retrospect the past and conjecture the future; and he who ascends often will make sure progress in life. There is no fitter season for us to ascend than the beginning of the new year. 1887 has past, and with it all its joys and sorrows, of which each one has had his portion. For many things we have cause to be very grateful to our heavenly Father; and we should be constrained by his love to enter upon the new year with renewed covenants and vows to endeavor to live more in accordance with his will than we have in the past.

This is the third anniversary of our Sunday-school. Many Sunday-schools from being summer-born, can not stand the winter, and have to go into winter-quarters when the chilling blast of winter comes. But we, being born in the winter, are inured to the cold, and are unacquainted with winter-quarters. Our last Quarterly Conference gave us a new superintendent, Prof. J. W. Beesoa, a young man, deeply pious, and a fine Sunday-school worker, and retired our venerable and faithful old brother, James L. Stewart, who has stood by the Sunday-school through heat and cold, wet and dry, since its organization.

By way of celebrating our birthday, we had, to-day, a complete review of the past three years, in the way of a report of the secretary of the work, which I will give you in short: Organized January 11, 1885, with 16 members; held 49 sessions; average attendance per session, 36¾; total collections, $69 25; average collection per session, $1 43½; average collection per head per session, $.03 5-6; superintendent absent, 0; secretary absent, 3. 1886—Held 49 sessions; average attendance, 53 1-7; total collections, $56 15; average per session, $1 41½; average per head per session, $.02 1-6; superintendent absent, 0; secretary absent, 3. 1887—Held 52 sessions; average attendance, 74¼; total collections, $54 70; average per session, $1 05 1-6; average per head, $.01½; superintendent absent, 1; secretary absent, 3. The highest enrollment for the three years, 166. Fourteen teachers, 4 officers, 14 classes. During the three years, over thirty of the pupils have joined the church. The average attendance for the three years, 53⅔.

It is worthy of remark that our superintendent, notwithstanding he is sixty years old, and lives two miles in the country, was absent only once during the three years. The secretary was absent nine times. This is the secret of our being able to stand the winter. I will let you make the comment.

Our school has been favored with health and life. During the three years we buried only two of the Sunday-school—Bro. Yarborough and little Jessie Boyd. How is that for health in a town of so many children? Our town has grown much in population, and built up two first-class schools and four churches. We voted out whisky and closed the saloons. We have shipped 18,000 bales of cotton.

In another envelope I enclose you a picture of the E. A. Seminary building, so that you may see how the Lord has favored me in my enterprise of building up my school. I am on good foundation now, and the E. A. Seminary is a permanency, and shall be among the first schools of the country.

Bro. Jones' History.

MR. EDITOR: Will you be so kind as to publish in your paper a notice for me that I have been appointed by Bro. John G. Jones an agent to sell his history of the Mississippi Conference, of which he was authorized by the Conference to write? He has written it, and the first volume is published, which covers the territory of Abibama, West Florida, Louisiana, Texas, as well as Mississippi.

I have sold nearly one hundred copies in this part of the country, and all I have met are delighted with it. Some have read the books over the second time.

Now, I wish to say if anyone in Alabama, Florida, Louisiana, Texas, as well as in Mississippi will send me the price of the book, I will send them the history by mail or express, at my expense. Price, $1 50. Every Methodist family in the South-west ought to have it by all means. I keep them on hand in Hazlehurst, Copiah county, Miss.

Yours respectfully,

A. H. NICHOLSON.

Bereaved.

MR. EDITOR: The last day of the old year was a sad one to our parsonage home. The dark-winged angel came to bear little Nannie Lou Mitchell, only child of Rev. and Mrs. R. P. Mitchell, to the beautiful land far away. The little stranger tarried only a few weeks, but long enough to be baptized with water in the name of the Holy Trinity, and with the tears and prayers of its fond parents. This is the bitterest cup that Bro. and Sister Mitchell have ever been called upon to drink. May the God of all grace sustain them in this their hour of trial!

Important Notice.

All applications for aid to the General Board of Church Extension must be on file in our office April 1, 1888, to secure attention at our annual meeting, April 12. They can not be tabulated so as to give a full and fair hearing to each in less than ten days, and hence the rule of the Board, which is inexorable and will be strictly observed.

Missions Gaining Every Year.

The heaviest cost of missions relative to immediate results is at their beginning. For twenty years prior to 1869 the Baptist Telugu Mission averaged more than $460 expenditure to each convert. Since then the average cost has been twenty-five dollars. This represents the decreasing proportion of expense to result in all foreign missions, because: 1. The percentage of converts is increased. After Carey landed in India the average net gain of converts was two and a half per annum; during the last ten years it has been 2,117. In the whole of India, during the years from 1861 to 1872, the increase of native church members was sixty-one per cent. It is probable that on an average the number of converts from heathen nations throughout the world has doubled every fifteen years. 2. The native agency is less costly than the foreign. The interest on $1,000 will support in perpetuity a native preacher in India or China. 3. The native churches are becoming more self-supporting. The voluntary contributions of the churches in the Sandwich Islands have for some years been $24,000 per annum. In Liberia our church has had a steadily increasing membership, with a steadily diminishing appropriation from our Missionary Society. In China only evangelists are supported wholly by us. The maximum aid granted to any native Chinese Methodist is one-half his support.

Many things are most costly at the beginning. It took a long time to bore through the Alps; it does not take long now to go through the tunnel. The first sewing machines cost, relatively, a great sum, as compared with the cost of the same to-day. Thus the greater and disproportionate expense is at the beginning. There never was a time when so much practical results could be traced from money given to foreign missions as now.—Christian Guardian.

It was a shrewd maxim of Wesley not to be positive in things of doubt and uncertainty. "When I was a young man," said he, "I was sure of everything; but in a few years, finding myself mistaken in a thousand instances, I became not half so sure of most things as before."

Paine Institute.

To the Ministry and Membership of the M. E. Church, South:

You have already been informed of my re-appointment as Commissioner of Education. Having resigned a year ago in the interest, as I then thought, of this work, I re-enter upon it with a more profound conviction than ever that God has "opened a great door, and effectual," to the M. E. Church, South, through the medium of the Colored M. E. Church in America.

In the year past I have been under appointment from the North Georgia Conference, at the request of the Bishops of the Colored Church, as missionary to the colored people. My wonder increased as I came in contact with the preachers and people of this church, that the Lord had so marvelously preserved this link of sympathy between the two races in the South. Never have I been so moved as by the simple-hearted confidence of this church in the Bishops and ministry of the M. E. Church, South. More and more am I convinced, as Bishop McTyeire remarked once, that we built wiser than we thought when we organized and set up the Colored Methodist Church.

In some views of the case I might regret the break in my work; in others, of a personal character, I am not sorry. One thing seems plain: by the voice of the church God says to me, "This is the field I call you into." As an obedient son in the gospel, there is but one response: "Here am I; send me." I have this advantage over three years ago: I am known to the church. At that time I was unknown outside my own State and Conference; now I have seen the faces of, at least, a majority of our pastors. My brethren, I can not do this work without your help. Money we must have; but there is something back of that which if you will give me the money will take care of itself, and that is your prayers and sympathy.

I address myself to two distinct objects in re-entering the field: First, the liquidation of the balance due on the grounds and buildings of Paine Institute: and, secondly, the extension of the work by the establishment of, at least, two other similar institutions—the Lane Institute, at Jackson, Tenn., and another on the other side of the Mississippi river. To accomplish the first there is only need that our brethren and friends should pay up their subscriptions made two years ago. Beyond this I shall only ask our preachers to place this matter upon their own conference and the conscience of their congregations just as they do any other missionary cause—not as an assessment, but as a privilege. But this last note of $9,000 must be paid at once. This not only secures to us beyond contingency the $25,000 from Bishop M. U. Payne, but also gives the property that is now worth $40,000 (though it cost the church only $8,000). Will not our brethren who have already given to this cause help us again now? Will not those who never helped us even now? Let the whole church rise up to this call.

Our work is no longer an experiment; it has passed beyond that—"By their fruits ye shall know them." Already the good results are seen and avouched by many witnesses.

One of two things we of the South must make up our minds to: We must take hold of Christian education among the negroes, or else accept bar-rooms as an inheritance to us and our children forever.

In remitting be sure to name your postoffice and Conference. My address is 115 Magnolia street, Atlanta, Ga. State whether you are paying an old subscription or making a new one.

Brethren, pray for us.

Your brother in Christ,

W. C. DUNLAP.

P. S.—Will not our brethren of the entire church press publication this, and help us by a kind word?

The Saloon in Politics.

From General Clinton B. Fisk, of New Jersey.

The American saloon sits supreme in American politics. It governs in caucus, convention, primary, and ballot box, and will continue its destructive, defiant career until an aroused American conscience shall bury it out of sight forever beneath an avalanche of indignant ballots.

Two hundred thousand dram-shops control our politics: Our whole population go to and fro under the hallucination that either the Democratic or Republican party with varying fortunes of success or defeat is in power. It is not so. Neither of these parties dare strike a blow at the saloon hard enough to knock out of its ranks the distillers, brewers, and dram shop keepers. The Democratic party say boldly, "We won't." The Republican party regretfully say, "We can't." Those who wield the largest political influence in this country are the "obedient servants" of the Liquor Traffic. In the gilded saloon of the cities or dingy bar-room of the cross-road tavern, under the debasing, brutalizing influence of drink, seventy per cent. of our political primaries and caucuses are held. Our pure, bright, well-educated boys on coming to their majority and wishing to take a part in the government of the country, discover that the entrance to politics is through the door of the saloon. Their first lessons in practical politics are received where bad men and corrupt politicians clink their glasses and drink to the success of their party.

Nearly or quite one-fourth of our whole population in the United States dwell in our cities. Fifteen millions of our people have their homes where the saloon is most strongly entrenched and wield its malign power in municipal politics, where blatant demagogues manipulate lazy loafers, where the vicious classes make the dram-shop paramount, and where the public conscience sleeps and snores under the soothing cry of "loyalty to party."

The effect of the saloon on politics in the United States is evil, and only evil, and that continually. The liquor traffic with its controlling influence in politics, supplemented by its lavish expenditure of money in paying for talent and purchasable votes, by its brutality at the polls, and gross fraud in the count of ballots has recently recorded its shameful victories in four great States. Wisdom and patriotism, temperance and sobriety have been overwhelmed in Michigan, Texas, Tennessee, and Oregon. The saloon journals unblushingly boast of their methods of triumph, and publish their thanks to political parties that have done their shameful bidding. In the beautiful city of Detroit, the other day, the Public Leader, a whisky periodical, exhorted its readers to gratefully remember the friends who had so nobly stood by the saloons in their recent conflict with the "preachers, the woman, and cold water fanatics" who were in league against the dram-shops. On the eve of the late election for mayor in that city this Public Leader said:

"The liquor dealers would do well to remember their friends on Tuesday, at the city election. Had it not been for the Republican party this spring, Michigan would now be wrestling with the worst form of prohibition."

The champion advocate and defender of the saloon in Texas, after the defeat of the Constitutional amendment said, "God be thanked for the steadfastness of the Democratic party to personal liberty and their consistent hatred of Puritan notions. Jeff Davis and the Democrats have saved us from the dominion of Woman's Christian Temperance Union."

At a meeting of the Liquor League held in New York not ten days since to consider methods for the defeat of temperance at the approaching local option fight in Atlanta, there was a cool and deliberate calculation made as to the cost of buying 3,000 nigger votes to be cast for the "wet ticket." It was thought they would cost a dollar fifty cents each, $4,500 for the nigger votes, and $500 extra to the man who was to "deliver the goods"—$5,000 as a thanksgiving offering to the shrine of the drunkard's Moloch at Atlanta was ordered.

How long, Christian citizens of the United States, will any of you consent to be counted among the advocates of the saloon, by registering your votes with the allies and stipendiaries of a system pledged against every agency of a Christian civilization? How long can the republic endure the strain? God hasten the day when the Christian commonwealth and the Christian church shall combine its forces for the protection of of American homes against the ravages of the American saloon, and the deepest disgrace of our great country shall be voted out of existence, and no longer be a factor of our politics.

In a democracy the standard of legislation will inevitably conform to the general sentiment and general position of the masses. Government is not carried on by a junto of favorites, as in the absolute monarchy; nor by an intelligent minority, in the interests of a class, as in the aristocracy. The legislators of a Democracy, while representing the entire public, can never be better or worse than that public itself. Hence, the imperative necessity of preventing the deterioration of that public by the influences of the saloon.

The bane of our politics does not lie in the primary system, as practiced in our country until 1845, simply because Democracy has there only begun its march. England and France have advanced a step farther and are gradually adopting the American method. This growth is inevitable. The primary has come to stay.

Reform of politics in the United States, therefore, does not imply a change in the methods of the primary. It depends on a radical alteration in those who compose our primaries, and decide our elections. This can only be accomplished by raising the general social condition of the masses. Hence the paramount importance of a restriction of the liquor traffic. But prohibition in itself is no panacea. It attacks what is as much a result as a cause of the depraved social condition. The remedy must be a wide one. A better economic state of the masses will in itself weaken the recourse to the saloon. Comprehensive measures, therefore, which tend to raise the general plane of social existence among the masses of our voters can alone successfully check this one crying abuse in our political life—the influence of the saloon. The remedy is not merely prohibition—for the evil is inextricably interwoven with the whole social problem. The political atmosphere depends in the long run on the social conditions.

One of the sure-t evidences of success is the rise of imitators, who, without experience, claim to do what others are doing, quicker, cheaper and more efficiently. Every man in business knows what we refer to. But to men of good judgment in other branches of trade welcome such persons to their credit and esteem? Don't they say: "We will trust the man who has been before the public the longest." Of course they do. Drs Starkey & Palen's Compound Oxygen Treatment for Consumption, Neuralgia and Rheumatism, has been in use for sixteen years. More than forty thousand Treatments have been sold to as many different homes throughout this land. Its success has been marvelous. Two claim imitators are springing up in many parts of the country. Scarcely any higher assurance of the value of a useful discovery or invention can be given than the fact that unscrupulous persons attempt to deceive the public by offering them an article to which they give the same name, and to which they attribute the same qualities. The intrinsic value of an article is best evidenced by efforts to make gain through imitation.

Let it be clearly understood that the only genuine Compound Oxygen is manufactured in Philadelphia, Pa., at No. 1529 Arch street, by Drs. Starkey & Palen. Any substance made elsewhere, and called Compound Oxygen is spurious and worthless, and those who buy it only throw away their money, as they will in the end discover. Full particulars about the genuine Compound Oxygen and its curative properties may be obtained without charge by addressing Drs. Starkey & Palen, as above.

Perpetual reform should be the aim of every church and every Christian, because we are always summoned to higher attainments. But we must be careful to adapt our means to the ends proposed, and remember that many evils can not be abolished by a plan or a proposition. Daniel Webster was wise in saying: "A strong conviction that something must be done, is the parent of many bad measures."

Dyspepsia

Makes many lives miserable, and often leads to self destruction. Distress after eating, sick headache, heartburn, sour stomach, mental depression, etc., are caused by this very common and increasing disease. Hood's Sarsaparilla tones the stomach, creates an appetite, promotes healthy digestion, relieves sick headache, clears the mind, and cures the most obstinate cases of dyspepsia. Read the following:

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a fullness or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced. It relieved me of that faint, tired, all-gone feeling. I have felt so much better since I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, that I am happy to recommend it." G. A. PAGE, Watertown, Mass.

ARTIFICIAL EYES

The Artificial Eye is not only a beautifier, but it serves other excellent purposes.

It enables the eyelids to move as freely as ever.

It restores the functions of the tear passages.

It prevents the eyelashes from turning within, causing inflammation.

It prevents distortion of features, as happens always in case of a vacant eye—and sometimes in the case of other persons.

Mr. W. Loeffler, our Optician, has made a specialty of selecting and inserting them.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 19, 1888.

Briefs.

Dr. Young J. Allen, our missionary to China since 1859, will be in New Orleans, January 22. It will pay anybody in reach of us to visit our city at that time to hear this great Christian statesman on the missionary work in the East.

The deacons ordained by Bishop Key at the Louisiana Conference are these: F. N. Parker, J. S. Saunders, H. S. Johns, Robert Harry, George A. Mandeville, S. S. Holliday, W. W. Nicholson, J. F. Carroll. These were ordained elders: S. J. Davies, E. B. Galloway.

We have attended three Annual Conferences this winter, and have seen some surprising things. One thing greatly surprised us, and, that is, the number of editors we discovered. It is really astonishing how many are running loose in the church. As they say, in hunter's phrase: "The woods are full of them." We received a stock of information and advice sufficient to "run us" during the balance of our editorial life; and we intend to profit by it as soon as we can adjust ourselves, as the brother in Shreveport said, to the "elements of the surroundings."

As our preachers have a good deal to do with books, we publish the following definitions for their benefit, remarking that preachers who have good libraries have had some experiences with the "bibliokepts," but did not know what to call them:

A bibliopegist is a bibliophile with a special regard for bookbindings. A bibliotaph is a book miser. A bibliopole is a bookseller for bibliophiles. A bibliokept is a stealer of valuable books. Mr. Lenox, who would not let Prescott see his Mexican manuscripts, was a bibliotaph, and Sam Pepys was a bibliokept. Bibliolatry is the worship of books.—Art Review.

To the patronizing Conferences who so generously voted "ringing resolutions" in favor of the ADVOCATE, we commend this paragraph from the National Baptist:

It is proper to remind our brethren that no means has yet been developed of publishing a paper without expense. Nor is the current theory that quails and manna fall daily in the yard of the publisher justified by facts. Nor have yet our paper-makers and printers, nor the butcher or the baker, agreed to accept resolutions and good words as cash in payment of their bills. No doubt, in heaven, all these will pass current for the face of them; but just now, you know, we have to have something less spiritual, more carnal and earthly.

The last Southern Review, have you seen it? It is a bimonthly edited by Dr. W. P. Harrison, and published by our House at Nashville under the authority of the General Conference, and costs only $2 per annum. We print below the table of contents of the January number that you may see what it provides for you, and that thereby you may be induced to subscribe for it:

The New Reformation, Fortnightly Review; Dissent in Russia, the editor; The Missionary Cause, W. H. Goodale; Trials and Discouragements of Stewards, Anonymous; The Stars and the Earth, R. Abbey, D. D.; Rise of the Monthly Magazine, the editor; Mr. Wesley's Bitter Pill, "High-Churchman Disarmed;" The Modern Pulpit, Rev. W. P. Lovejoy; Editor's Table—The Plea of the Covetous, The Bangorian Controversy, The Church and Popular Amusements, Early History of Georgia, Mr. Spurgeon and the Baptist Union, Economic Facts and Fallacies, The Church of England, The First English Printer, Extremes Meet, The Inventor of the Steamboat, Difficult Passages of Scripture.

Missionary Advance.

The missionary meeting of the Louisiana Conference was a notable meeting in several respects. The fact of having present a missionary, who had been nearly thirty years working earnestly in this cause in China, was of itself an inspiration of hope that the meeting would be a success. Dr. Young J. Allen gave the Louisiana preachers two of the best missionary addresses they have ever heard. Dr. Allen is an impressive speaker, and his perfect familiarity with the laws and customs of China, and with our missionary operations there from the beginning, gave a freshness to his speeches which was greatly enjoyed by the brethren. His broad views, his comprehensive grasp of thought, his earnest words, his apposite illustrations, his eloquent exhortations—all went like a thrill through our hearts, and awakened in us a desire to do more and to dare more for this great cause than ever. The very fact of sitting before one who had spent the best years of his life in the foreign mission field, and listening to him tell of the toils and sacrifices of the missionaries, and the gradual, but sure success of the mission, placed upon each hearer a new responsibility, and implanted in each heart the holy ambition to be more consecrated to mission work. Dr. Allen's addresses will bear much fruit in Louisiana.

The treasurer's report showed that Louisiana Methodism had made quite an advance along this line. In 1886, reporting 15,775 members, we raised a little over $6,000 from all sources. In 1887, reporting a little over 16,000 members, we raised over $9,000 from all sources. This is about fifty-six cents per member. But when we state the fact that these 16,000 members raised during the week of self-denial $1,890, we believe that no other section of the church can show so good a report. Methodism in Louisiana is coming to the front in missionary finance; but this ADVOCATE will not be satisfied until our church in this State gives as much to missions as she does to support herself. Any lower mark for effort can not be thought of for a moment. We can never demonstrate to the world that we keep the second table of the law until we do as much for other people as we do for ourselves. The motto for each circuit and station in Louisiana this year should be: "As much for missions as we pay our pastor." That much is required as an offset to selfishness and before true beneficence can begin its work.

At Last.

During the few months past, Louisiana has been stirred, as rarely before, on the political question. There were two candidates for nomination for the office of governor put forth by different sections of the Democratic party. The canvass has been exciting in the extreme. An innumerable number of lies has been circulated, men's motives have been impugned; passions aroused and strifes fomented, and a general hubbub created. Last Friday the Nominating Convention at Baton Rouge selected Gen. Francis T. Nicholls as the nominee of the Democrats for governor of Louisiana. We do sincerely hope that things will now quiet down. We wish to say to our constituency that the most important matter now is the selection of men to represent them in the State Legislature. It is a fact well known, that a very determined effort is to be made to repeal the Sunday Law, and, if that can not be effected, to modify its provisions so that it will not affect this city. If there is any place on the globe that needs such a law, it is this city. The present defective law has done us much good, and, as defective as it is, we believe a majority of the voters here greatly prefer it to no law on that point. To modify the present law, so as to except New Orleans from its provisions, would result in tenfold more damage than we would have received if we had never had it in force. The reaction in such cases always swings to the extreme limit. To go backward now is simply to lose all that we have gained, and to put ourselves at a disadvantage from which we could hardly recover. We want "able men, men who fear God, hating covetousness" as our law-makers, and we can only obtain them by bringing them forward and voting them in. The Christian people in this State "hold the balance of power," and they must use it in the coming election for righteousness. In these important matters Christian manhood must stand upon its rights, and battle for those rights in a manly, Christian way. The idea of a Christian "being compelled to choose between two evils" is as large and damaging a lie as Satan ever circulated in the earth. There are able, God-fearing, humanity-loving men in every part of the State whose services in these matters can be secured; and such men should be sought out from among the people and put in office. Let the readers of the ADVOCATE set their faces as a flint against all aspirants for office who are not in determined opposition to the saloon, and against all who are in favor of repealing or modifying the Sunday Law.

After Conference.

Suggestions come to the mind of every thoughtful participant in the proceedings of an Annual Conference which, at the time, modesty or a feeling of lack of time, or some other cause, keeps from utterance.

We had several stirring episodes during our late Louisiana Conference session:

1. One was the address of Mrs. Fullilove. The delivery and reception of that address were excellent, and, as to its intrinsic merits, the readers of the ADVOCATE will doubtless have opportunity of deciding for themselves. Mrs. Fullilove is the able president of our Woman's Board of Missions. No one could have listened to that paper and the secretary's, Mrs. Foster's, report, which followed, without feeling that woman not only has a right to her share in the world's evangelization, but that with her refined sympathy she is an indispensable factor in the work. The suggestion which I would like to make in this connection is, that these women will never know their full power, and never realize the first fruits of their labor and prayers, till they put themselves in personal contact with the women of the church. Why could not one or more of these women make a tour of the churches during the year, appealing in person to our sisters to organize, and giving the work a start in every pastoral charge which it may never have otherwise? This is no reflection on pastors. Many pastors are poor organizers, especially of women's societies; besides, they have many other pressing interests to look after, and then the sisters of any charge need the inspiration of a visiting sister. I give this suggestion to the ladies, and hope they will consider it at their next annual meeting.

2. Then I might speak of our church extension work. Our Board is now well organized, and our last is, I think, the best report we have ever made. The new movement of a Parker Loan Fund, in honor of the memory of our beloved Bishop, is destined to date a new era of enterprise not only in our own Conference, but wherever the Bishop was personally known. The suggestion here is: Keep this loan fund matter before the public. Let us have large, special donations to it. Every dollar of it will be employed in the erection of churches, and it will be perpetually employed thus, and every church thus erected will be a monument of our glorified Bishop.

3. Now, lastly, the ADVOCATE. Of course, it will speak for itself; but only to those who get it. There is just one sufficient ground on which the circulation of the church paper is urged, and that is the fact that it is the only organ of church intelligence and church enterprise. Whatever the philosophy may be, the fact remains: that the church has its greatest forward movement where the church paper is best circulated.

J. W. MEDLOCK.

A Text and an Exhortation.

Now there cried a certain woman of the wives of the sons of the prophets unto Elisha, saying, Thy servant my husband is dead; and thou knowest that thy servant did fear the Lord: and the creditor is come to take unto him my two sons to be bond-men. And Elisha said unto her, What shall I do for thee? tell me, what hast thou in the house? And she said, Thine handmaid hath not anything in the house save a pot of oil. Then he said, Go, borrow thee vessels abroad of all thy neighbors, even empty vessels; borrow not a few. And when thou art come in, thou shalt shut the door upon thee and upon thy sons, and shalt pour out into all those vessels, and thou shalt set aside that which is full. So she went from him, and shut the door upon her and upon her sons, who brought the vessels to her; and she poured out. And it came to pass, when the vessels were full, that she said unto her son, Bring me yet a vessel. And he said unto her, There is not a vessel more. And the oil stayed. Then she came and told the man of God. And he said, Go, sell the oil, and pay thy debt, and live thou and thy children of the rest. (II Kings iv, 1-7.)

A good man, a prophet of God, had fallen on sleep, leaving a widow and two sons in poverty. He had been faithful in caring for souls, but had not time to acquire lands and earthly possessions for his loved ones. To those whom he had served and led from darkness to light, and who were indebted to him to an extent not estimable in money, he had left those who were dearer to him than life itself, feeling assured that he might appeal to their sense of obligation as effectually as Paul did to Philemon. But the church had been neglectful, and the widow and sons were in deep distress. The boys were about to be torn from her arms and forced into slavery. But Elisha was there. Better still, the God of Elisha was near. The widow turned to Elisha, and he turned to God for help; and help came. A miracle was wrought; distress was relieved, and the prophet's widow and sons made to rejoice.

Turn we from the Bible to the Minutes of the Mississippi Conference. Here we find that at the last Conference there were twenty-five widows of prophets, twenty or more orphan children of prophets, and nine superannuated prophets who had borne the heat and burden of the day, and all, with one exception, needing help—and sorely needing help. Some were in deep distress. The hearts of the members of the Joint Board of Finance ached as we considered these cases, and the small amount of money we had divided among them. Only three thousand and eighty-five dollars and forty-six cents! Well might we add: "But what are these among so many?" We did the best we could with this pittance, and the recipients were grateful for what they received; but, alas! alas! that it should have been so little. Oh, that we had been as full of the Holy Ghost and of faith as was Elisha, and had power to do what he did! Oh, that the Son of Man had blessed and divided and so supplied the wants of each one of these many claimants! But did God ever work a miracle or permit one to be wrought where there was no need for such display of divine power? Could we expect a miracle to be wrought when 30,470 members were asked to contribute only $3,500 for a cause so noble and so worthy? And then to think of that small sum not being paid! $3,500 called for, and $3,085 46 paid, leaving a deficit of $414 54! But there was an increase of $492 66 over the contributions of the previous year. For that we thank God and take courage.

Although two more widows and another child and two more superannuates were added to the list at the last Conference, the Joint Board of Finance did not increase the assessment, but urged that not only every cent of the assessment be collected, but, if possible, be doubled. To meet the actual needs of these claimants, $10,000 would not be too much; and the church members should esteem it a glorious privilege to contribute to the comfort of the veteran soldiers of the cross, and of the widows and orphans of those who died at the post of duty, and with harness on.

T. L. MELLEN.

WESSON, Mississippi.

The above showing from Bro. Mellen's pen is enough to make the heart sick. These claimants, which the providence of God has left as a sacred legacy to the care of the church, present an opportunity, the best opportunity, for Methodists to show their appreciation of a privilege to do great good; and yet what is the showing? Ten cents apiece to feed and clothe and house those needy ones whom God bids us care for! It is a downright disgrace to Methodism. We beseech the brethren everywhere to go earnestly to work to wipe out this stigma of shame. Don't put off this matter. Begin early, and work resolutely through the whole year to raise a decent support for these claimants, so that we can, at the next annual convocation, look them full in the face without blushing.

B. H. Sasnett, in the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, has this on "The Tide of Worldliness:"

This worldliness is manifold in its manifestation, yet springs from the same baneful root and unregenerate heart. Destitute of spiritual life, these world-loving members of the church cherish nothing but the outward decencies and proprieties of religion. With them worship is attractive only as the music is artistic and the preaching intellectual. Having no spiritual hungering to satisfy, they turn to the excitement of the opera, the play and the dance, or drown their compunctions in the convivalities and mirth of the banquet.

This spirit of worldliness has reacted not only upon the piety of the church, but upon its doctrinal beliefs. In many places ministers themselves are toying with the "deadly cobra of another gospel" and diluting and adulterating the truths of the Bible with the deadly inventions of "modern thought." The depravity of man is scouted as a myth and the future punishment of the wicked looked upon as the conjured specter of a phrensied imagination.

And a brother who knows much of the church and her real condition made some sad remarks the other day in regard to the future, unless some measures be devised by which church discipline shall be vigorously enforced. The hardest thing to do is to convert worldliness after it becomes domiciled in the church. And it seems to be about as hard to get it out of the church.

It is a great pity that so many of us dread poverty more than we dread sin. And yet poverty may be "honest poverty," but sin can be nothing less than sin and always abhorrent to God, and ever bringing in its train evils which weigh down our spirits.

Notes.

There are many of us who are really poor, but we should remember one fact in our Lord's history; he was never heard to complain of his poverty, yet he was poorer than we are.

After all, poverty is not a very desirable possession. The man who prayed, "Give me neither poverty nor riches," was surely well acquainted with the perils of each. There is not a very wide distance between the rich mean man and the poor envious one. The temptations which beset each are fearful, and very few can withstand them. "Lest I be poor and steal—lest I be full and deny the Lord," are the reasons for desiring neither.

Lazy Christians prevent good. Cranky Christians prevent good. Critical Christians prevent good. Inconsistent Christians prevent good. The best way not to hinder good, is to do good. Take hold and help. Is the next thing. Why stand ye here all the day idle? Dr. Pierson says that "the bulk of professing disciples practically do nothing whatever in discipling others." Canon Wilberforce says that a Christian's duty is to admit, submit, commit, and transmit. You admit the truth of Christ, you submit your will to Christ, you commit your soul to Christ, but what do you transmit to others? Begin now; do some personal work for Christ and souls. The Lord is watching to see your work. "Let every hearer become a herald."

In religion what a blessed habit is trust. It opens all the doors to the incoming Savior and he enters all the avenues of the soul. To "trust Christ" is to believe him and to believe in him and to receive him into the soul. Trust and love have a mutual affinity. The trustful heart and the loving Savior are attracted together and united by a bond of sacred friendship, which nothing but sin can sever. Trust completes its work by that vital act by which we commit all our affairs into Christ's hands and expect from him and through him every needed blessing for this life, and the gift of eternal life hereafter. Trust sits in the heart and by the tongue proclaims that its Lord is a willing, loving, present Savior.

"The saloon," says Harper's Weekly, "is now not merely a resort for drinkers; it has become an organized 'interest' and a very effective form in politics. It nominates candidates and controls elections solely in reference to its advantages, and consequently those who otherwise would be disposed to disregard the question are compelled to interest themselves in it to prevent a degrading and disastrous ascendency in public affairs."

The most serious fact in our present condition is that by means of politics the saloon has the nation by the throat and is choking the life out of it. And yet there are pretended statesmen and pretended Christians who look on with indifference. Christ said, "He that is not with me, is against me."

When a man can, without rebuke and without suspicion of any ecclesiastical impropriety, lay his plans and make combinations which have for their sole object the exaltation of himself to the sacred office of the episcopacy, then the very spirit and methods of 'corrupt politicians have crept into the church, and the cry, "To the victors belong the spoils," lingers not far behind. The writer does not say these things are being done in Methodism. We do say that the tendency is in this direction. There are some pretty 'solid straws which by their movements show which way the wind is blowing. It is a good time to call a halt. As our beloved Methodism turns her face toward the dawning of the twentieth century, let her stand in robes unsullied by unholy ambition and the greed of office. Before all nations let her stand as the most conspicuous example of unselfish devotion to Christ and humanity the world has ever seen.

George Whitefield was an orator of transcendent power, the most wonderful preacher of his time; Charles Wesley was vehement and fiery in exhortation; John Wesley was the calmest preacher of all who were connected with the early years of the great revival, and yet no man of them all produced such immediate and indescribable effects upon the people. Why? We judge that it was because he was the most genuinely and profoundly earnest man of them all, and the people felt, and yielded to the power of his unutterable conviction and love. And in the same way we account for the success of Thomas Maxfield, Sammy Hick, Billy Dawson, Wm. Carvosso, and many more. Genuine soul-earnestness is power.

The above from the Western Christian Advocate is commended to our readers. We would simply ask, Why was John Wesley "the most genuinely and profoundly earnest man of them all?" We think, because he had more faith. Paul said, and so did the Psalmist, "We believe and therefore speak." The effectiveness of a man's preaching depends upon the depth and breadth and height of his faith. Get a big faith, if you want to preach effectively.

Personals.

On Monday before Dr Winfield's death Dr. Hunter came to see him. Opening his eyes, he recognized his old friend and co-laborer. Dr. Hunter, taking his hand, said: "Bro. Winfield, you are in the hands of the Lord now." "Yes," he replied, "good hands! Safe quarters!" These were the last words he ever uttered.

A note from N. J. Sheely, Paulding, Miss., dated January 12, brings the sad intelligence of the death of Rev. J. C. Brogan, of the Mississippi Conference. He died of pneumonia after but a few days' illness. "One by one" the Lord is calling the laborers and giving them their hire. We extend our sympathies to the friends of our brother.

R. D. Norsworthy, P. E., writes:

A preacher is needed to fill the vacancy caused by Bro. Brogan's death. Let any who may desire to take charge of this work address me at Meridian, Miss.

The Methodist Advance, of Goldsboro, N. C., has been sold to L. A. Potter, who is editor and proprietor. He is a layman of the Methodist Church and an editor of experience. While we regret to part from Bros. Bobbitt and Robey, we extend a welcome to the new editor

Every pastor who reads the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE carefully during this year of grace will be able to do better work for Christ in the way of saving souls and raising money for the enlargement of his kingdom than ever before. Mark the prediction.

One of the Presbyterian Churches in Nashville has a "committee on the sexton." This is a good idea. Every church ought to have such a committee—a committee of one, wide-awake and able-bodied.

The last Alabama Christian Advocate records the death of Rev. J. H. L. Davis, of the North Alabama Conference. He was a graduate of Vanderbilt University, and a young man who gave promise of great usefulness in the church.

The residence of Rev. C. D. Oliver, Calera, Ala., was consumed by fire on the night of January 3.

Dr C. K. Marshall has an earnest article in the Nashville Christian Advocate, of January 7, on a very important subject. Cheap literature of the right kind is one of the pressing needs of our church, and yet we seem indifferent to it.

We are sorry to part with our young brother, Rev. S. H. Werlein, who has been transferred to the St. Louis Conference. He carries with him the good wishes of his Louisiana brethren, and they commend him heartily to the Methodists of St. Louis.

A Presbyterian minister out West somewhere raised a storm when he refused to marry one of the members of his Sunday-school to a liquor dealer! We admire that man's "grace."

N. B—The first week in April is designated as the "week of self-denial and prayer" for this year. Let us keep it before the people, so that when it comes everybody may be ready.

A brother, whose work is among the Red men of the West, writes: "We are busy putting up our summer ice; a new thing under the sun to me. Every visit of our dear old ADVOCATE is hailed with delight." The ADVOCATE hopes to be always a delight to its readers.

Rev. Horace Jewell takes charge of the editorial department of the Arkansas Methodist for the present. Bro. Jewell is an old co-laborer of ours, and we extend a warm hand to him in this enterprise.

Dr. Barbee, the Book Agent, is calling for the outstanding Publishing House bonds. His aim is to cancel the entire indebtedness of the House by April 1.

Bishop Key appointed the editor of this paper to the Dryades Street charge, in this city. It is a congregation of Germans principally.

Bro. D. L. Cogdell, of North Mississippi, writes that Iuka station raised during the week of self-denial sixty-three dollars and thirty-five cents. Now, if those figures be moved up to one hundred dollars during the week of self-denial, this year, we will be glad to chronicle the fact.

The postoffice address of Rev. J. G. Sibley is Fair River, Miss.

A certain church paper, in its last issue, contained eleven clippings from the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and gave it credit for two! We can stand it if the other party can.

The white Methodists of Virginia number more than the white Baptists, Presbyterians and Episcopalians combined, is the way Bro. Lafferty says it.

It is estimated that the total average circulation of the seven principal magazines of New York City reached 650,000 copies each month; which is 7,800,000 copies a year.

Gen. E. S. Bragg, of Wisconsin, has been appointed Minister to Mexico, in place of Judge Manning, deceased.

Rev. Dr. Alfred S. Patton, editor and owner of the Baptist Weekly of New York, died January 12, aged 62 years.

The big fog in London last week suspended travel by water and greatly impeded the railway service. Several vessels went ashore and numerous fatalities occurred.

President Fitzhugh, of Whitworth College, was pleased to make us a call last Saturday, and he gave us a delightful half-hour visit. His college is going up, up, up all the time. Besides being interested in his special work, President Fitzhugh has an eye that ranges over the whole church and takes a broad view of the needs of the work and the dangers around. What a boon is the co-operation of such laymen in the affairs of the church!

Items of Interest.

Baron Hirsch has given $10,000,000 to found primary schools for the Jews in Russia. It is estimated that the interest on this sum will found and maintain 1,000 schools with 50,000 children.

There will be three World's Fairs this year. Barcelona, Melbourne and Vienna are the places where they will be held.

The Methodist Episcopal Church has two Conferences in Alabama, and each covers the entire State. One is white; the other, colored.

Mr. Moody goes to the Pacific Coast about February 1, to spend a month or two.

Rev. Lyman Abbott has been selected as pastor of Plymouth Church, at the same salary paid Mr. Beecher.

Dr. John Hall, of New York City, gets a $20,000 salary from his church. We know one or two preachers in Louisiana who could manage to "worry through" on $55 a day.

The Adams Express Company handled 50,000 packages the last few days before Christmas.

The Great Eastern has been sold for $80,500 and will be broken up for old metal.

Senator Blair has written a book called, "The Conflict between Man and Alcohol."

Mrs. Jeremiah Porter, Chicago's first school-teacher and the wife of Chicago's first preacher, died January 1, in Santa Barbara, Cal.

The Supreme Court of Massachusetts has decided that, under certain circumstances, shaving on Sunday "is essential to a man's health and cleanliness."

In Europe, clocks are coming into use which run five years without winding or regulating.

The discussion of the temperance question is continually letting in more light. One of the most significant facts yet brought to view is stated by Hugh Price Hughes in a temperance address lately delivered in the West End Mission, London. In Edinburgh there was a gin distillery with a million and a half capital. In Sheffield there was a large iron foundry with the same capital. In the distillery 150 persons were employed; in the iron foundry 3,000 persons were employed. By a little figuring, we see that it takes $10,000 invested in the liquor business to employ one worker, while $500 will employ one in the iron trade. By figuring a little further, we see that any legitimate business will maintain twenty persons, where the liquor business maintains only one. There is where the profit comes in to the liquor dealer, and there is where nineteen persons are unemployed. If we will take the number of persons engaged in the manufacture of liquors and multiply that number by 20, we will see how many people would find remunerative employment if the money now invested in liquor-making was invested in the manufacture of cloth or iron or in some other legitimate trade. These facts very plainly indicate the source of poverty and trouble among the working class. Every liquor-making establishment in the land throws out of employment twenty persons to every $10,000 invested. If the liquor traffic in this land were prohibited and the capital invested in other branches of industry, it would give employment to every unemployed man and woman in the country. But who cares for the unemployed?

Uncle's Fat Wife.

Why is the lotter P like uncle's fat wife going up hill? It makes ant pant (mint) and cooling off too soon produces coughs and colds. Taylor's Cherokee Remedy of Sweet Gum and Mullein will cure her.

Louisiana Conference Minutes.

The Committee on Publication of the Minutes of the past session find that to pay for publication the assessment to each charge will be one-fifth of the apportion for Bishops for 1887. Pastors will please take this collection immediately, and forward same without delay. If prompt attention is given, the minutes will be ready for mail by February 10, and distributed promptly, prepaid.

HUGH JAMIESON, JR.

Letter from Japan.

MR. EDITOR: I have but a few minutes in which to write, but it is to tell you of the increased interest in the Christian religion in many places in the "Land of the Rising Sun." I have just had a few lines from Dr. W. R. Lambuth, who has just been to Nwajima, on the south end of Shikoku. He writes me of the great interest there among many in the religion of our Lord. He says:

Dear Father: I wrote you from Nwajima that I arrived there on December 7. Preached that night at the house rented by these people who are studying the Bible, and the next night I preached to 500 persons in the theater, as the rented chapel was insufficient to hold them. Baptized two and registered six probationers; organized a Methodist Society, appointed (one of the two) a class-leader; gave them some Testaments, hymn books and catechisms, and left them happy and resolved to labor and pray for the growth of the church. My arrival and sermons were opportune, being right on the heels of the Buddhist lectures against Christianity.

He also writes me from Oito, in Bungo Kiushu, where he found a deep interest in Christianity, and especially among some of the prominent men of the place. The provincial judge said: "Send us a native preacher who can preach the gospel and teach English, and we will support him. We also want a missionary and his wife to come and live among us, and we will pay them $125 per month, and find them a house." Surely the Lord is moving upon the hearts of many among the people. Help us, dear brethren. The Macedonian cries still come to us, and we have not men enough to meet the call. Send us the man you have promised; and may the blessing of God be with him!

Your brother in Christ,
J. W. LAMBUTH.

PERIODICALS.

—The Living Age—new volume. The number of Littell's Living Age, dated January 7, begins a new volume—the one hundred and seventy-sixth—of that standard weekly magazine. As periodical literature has been growing from year to year in extent and importance, The Living Age has gone on increasing in value. It is a necessity to the American reader who would keep pace with the best literary work of the time. The first number of the new year has the following table of contents: The Life and Letters of Charles Darwin, Contemporary Review; The Magic Fan, by John Strange Winter, author of "Bootle's Baby," etc., English Illustrated Magazine; Mohammedanism in Africa, Nineteenth Century; Lord Macaulay and Madame D'Arblay, National Review; A Dramatic Effect, Blackwood's Magazine; The Future of the Negro, Spectator; Early English Navigators and Their Nautical Instruments, St. James' Gazette; New Names for New States, Spectator; Old Silver, St. James' Gazette; with choice poetry and miscellany. This, the first weekly number of the new volume, is a good one with which to begin a subscription. For fifty-two numbers of sixty-four large pages each (or more than 3,300 pages a year) the subscription price ($8) is low; while for $10 50 the publishers offer to send any one of the American $4 monthlies or weeklies with The Living Age for a year, both postpaid. Littell & Co., Boston, are the publishers.

These January periodicals have been received:

—Outing. A magazine of recreation. 140 Nassau street, New York: $3.

—Southern Review. Southern Methodist Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn. Price, $2.

EPPS'S COCOA.

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

Our Young People.

THE HIGHWAYMAN.

BY ALLEN G. BIGELOW.

Did you ever meet a robber, with a pistol and a knife,
Whose prompt and cordial greeting was, "Your money or your life!"
Who, while you stood a-trembling, with your hands above your head,
Took your gold, most grimly offering to repay you in cold lead?

Well, I once met a robber—I was going home to tea;
The way was rather lonely, though not yet to dark to see
That the sturdy rogue who stopped me there was very fully armed—
Until in honest bluster I declared that I didn't feel alarmed.

He was panting hard from running, so I, being still commanded
Very boldly faced the rascal, and demanded what he wanted;
I was quite as big as he was, and I was not out of breath,
So I didn't fear his shooting me, or stabbing me to death.

In answer to my question, the highwayman raised an arm
And pointed it straight at me—though I still felt no alarm;
He did not ask for money, but what he said was this:
"You can not pass, papa, unless you give your boy a kiss!"

—St. Nicholas.

The editor hereby introduces to the "little cousins" a full-blood Indian boy, and hopes the cousins will give him a hearty welcome. If you could see the beautiful handwriting in which his letter came to this office, many of you would be ashamed of yourselves. In his own behalf and in behalf of the "little cousins," the editor "extends the right hand of fellowship" to Allie Standing. Here is his letter.—Ed.

MR. EDITOR: I am a Wichita boy, thirteen years old, and I am a full-blood. My mother sent me to school, where my brother is, when I was eight years old; and now I am in Chilocco School. It is a large, nice school, too, where Indian children can learn a great deal. I know this is very good for the Indian children, and it is a nice chance for us to have a good opportunity here, and to get a good education. Well, I have been very anxious to tell about this school. I go to school in the morning, and I work in the afternoon in the tailor-shop. I like to work there as well as go to school. I think I can learn how to make nice clothes. Some of the other boys are learning how to make shoes, and how to be blacksmiths, farmers, carpenters and laundry-men, and we will all have a good chance here to learn to do any kind of work. I will tell what I am studying. I am in the fourth reader, geography, physiology, arithmetic and spelling-book. I will tell you what we do on Saturday and Sunday. We have holiday on Saturday, and we play; and Sunday morning we have preaching. In the afternoon we have Sunday-school; in the evening we have Bible verses. I learned some things about the Lord Jesus Christ. I learned that from the Bible. The first time I came here I learned a verse from the Bible, and I would have you to remember that, and never forget the verse: that is, "Let not your heart be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me." I am glad that I learned so many things from the Bible. I will try to remember them and be a good boy.

Very respectfully,

ALLIE STANDING.
(Wichita boy.)

CHILOCCO SCHOOL, Ind. Ter.

MR. EDITOR: I have written to your paper once before, and was glad to see it in print. Christmas morning I awoke and hurriedly dressed myself, and ran to my stocking and found it as full as it could be; and I found a nice writing-desk Santa Claus had for me. Christmas eve we had a nice time shooting fire-crackers and Roman candles. I will answer some questions: Marvin P. Hudges, the passage, "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian," is found in Acts xxvi, 28: Samuel anointed Saul king. It is found in I Samuel xi. Now, I will ask one. Where is the verse found in the Bible that contains all the letters of the alphabet except Q? I am a member of the church. Our pastor is Mr. Standefer. My cousin, Lewis Stephens, has been very sick of typhoid fever, but is better now. I will close.

Your little friend,

MARY KENDALL.

OXFORD, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl twelve years old. I live three miles south of Hickory Station. I am a member of the Methodist Church. Bro. Peebles is our pastor. We love him very much. We have a good school. I am studying reading, writing, geography, arithmetic and grammar. I can work out the 1, 2, 3 problem by using fractions:

Job lived in the land of Uz. He was the greatest of all the men of the east. His possessions were immense. He had everything that heart could wish for: had seven sons and three daughters. He was noted for his piety. But amidst all his glory and splendor, God permitted the tempter to tempt him. His vast possessions were all swept away, his children were all killed, and he was covered with sore boils from the crown of his head to the sole of his feet. His wife advised him to curse God and die. In all this he sinned not, but suffered on patiently and praised God. After this his health was restored, and the Lord gave him twice as much as he had before. So he again had everything the mind could conceive of, to make him happy. Yours truly,

ANNIE V. RAYNER.

HICKORY, Mississippi.

(The above solution of the problem is correct. Good for Miss Annie!—Ed.)

MR. EDITOR: After seeing so many nice letters from the boys and girls, I thought I would attempt to write one myself, if you would be so kind as to publish it. First, I will say, as most of the cousins do, my father is a subscriber to the good old ADVOCATE. He has been a constant subscriber, he says, for twenty-five years. Its frequent visits are always welcome. It brings so much interesting news of the good work done for our Savior. The protracted meeting at New Hope this summer resulted in the conversion of more than fifty persons, most of whom were boys and girls. A large prayer meeting has since been organized. Also the young men of Many have a flourishing prayer meeting organized. I attend as often as I can. I am going to school now. School will be out the second week in January. Our teacher has given one week vacation. We will commence a ten months' session as soon as this is out. Pa says I may go all of the next session. As my letter is getting long, I will close. Hoping to see this in print, I remain,

Your friend,

EDDIE DUGGAN.

MANY, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl thirteen years old. I have been trying to work your example for nearly a week. I thought it only went to 9; but I see in Maggie Morris' letter that she used 10. I believe I have it. Make 56 out of 5 and 6; add 1, 2, 3, 4, 7, 8, 9 and 10 to 56. 100 will be the result.

Your friend,

HAMIE CALLAHAN.

MR. EDITOR: I think I have worked out your puzzle. 1 and 9 makes 10, and the cipher at the right makes the 100. I hope I am correct. I will ask one question: Which is the next to the shortest verse in the Bible:

W. P. MURRAY.

STEENS CREEK, Mississippi.

Household.

Breakfast.

Breakfast ought to be made a very pleasant meal, beginning the day as it does after the family have been separated for the night. Yet in how many families is it the custom to send off the master of the house to his daily round of business with an unsatisfied feeling after partaking of a hurried, uncomfortable meal, composed mainly of the remains of yesterday's dinner warmed over in any way most easy to the cook, without seasoning, and altogether unpalatable.

I am not finding fault with the materials for the breakfast, but with the manner of preparing and serving. By all means use at breakfast what is left from dinner of the day before, but cook it carefully, season it appetizingly, serve it prettily, and have it hot—smoking hot, not merely warm. Give your cook to understand that she must be down in the morning in time to get ready the breakfast with as much care as she bestows upon the dinner. Be down yourself at the moment of dishing it, to see to its being served temptingly.

If summer, and your home is in the country, always have a few flowers on the breakfast table, no matter what you do at other meals. Even a few daises or clover blossoms, with the dew still on them, lend a grace that is pleasing. If winter, have highly-colored fruit, if possible, such as oranges. If your purse can not afford this, see that at least the silver is shining, the coffee-pot bright, and the table has an air of warmth and comfort. An aid to this is a red table-cloth in winter; but be sure that it is clean and spotless. Do not allow it to be left on the table between meals, but substitute a different one for this purpose.—How to Cook Well.

HOME HAPPINESS.—Probably nineteen-twentieths of the happiness you will ever get you will find at home. The independence that comes to a man when his work is over and he feels he has run out of the storm into the quiet harbor of home, where he can rest in peace with his family, is something real. It does not make much difference whether you have one little room in that house, you can make that little room a true home to you. You can people it with such moods, you can turn to it with such sweet fancies, that it will be fairly luminous with their presence, and will be to you the very perfection of a home. Against this home none of you should ever transgress. You should always treat each other with courtesy. It is not often so difficult to love a person as it is to be courteous to him. Courtesy is of a greater value and a more royal grace than some people seem to think. If you will but be courteous to each other, you will soon learn to love each other more wisely, profoundly, not to say lastingly, than you ever did before.

YOUNG CHILDREN AT TABLE.—From the time a child is old enough to sit at the table, teach him the proper use of the knife, fork and the spoon. Never allow a child to lean upon the table; habits such as that will accompany him all through life. He should be taught to wait patiently till his elders are served. By proper training in the beginning parents are saved annoyances and mortification in the future. At this age children should be dieted as carefully as when they were infants. By this is not meant that their diet should consist solely of milk; by no means, do not fall into the error so widely prevalent that children, having obtained their teeth, are capable of digesting all manner of food. This is the chief cause of destruction of life in children between three and six years of age, their stomachs being totally unfitted for the rich food they are allowed to eat. Potatoes, meat, rice, oatmeal, brown bread, ripe fruit, are diet for children of that age.

Jack and Jill each took a pill,
Of fashioned kind—all grown;
Jack's feet down—but with a frown—
Jill died from "cause unknown."

Smiles will supersede many frowns, and many discomforts will be unknown when Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets entirely supersede, as they will do, the large and less efficient pill of our forefathers. Every day they gain new laurels! Most popular when most ills abound!

MISCELLANEOUS.

No Universal Remedy

has yet been discovered; but, as at least four-fifths of human diseases have their source in Impure Blood, a medicine which restores that fluid from a depraved to a healthy condition comes as near being a universal cure as any that can be produced. Ayer's Sarsaparilla affects the blood in each stage of its formation, and is, therefore, adapted to a greater variety of complaints than any other known medicine.

Boils and Carbuncles, which defy ordinary treatment, yield to Ayer's Sarsaparilla after a comparatively brief trial.

Mr. C. K. Murray, of Charlottesville, Va., writes that for years he was afflicted with boils which caused him much suffering. These were succeeded by carbuncles, of which he had several at one time. He then began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and after taking three bottles, the carbuncles disappeared, and for six years he has not had even a pimple.

That insidious disease, Scrofula, is the fruitful cause of innumerable complaints, Consumption being only one of many equally fatal. Eruptions, ulcers, sore eyes, glandular swellings, weak and wasted muscles, a capricious appetite, and the like, are plainly sure indications of a scrofulous taint in the system. Many otherwise beautiful faces are disfigured by pimples, eruptions, and unsightly blotches, which arise from impure blood, showing the need of Ayer's Sarsaparilla to remedy the evil.

All sufferers from blood disorders should give Ayer's Sarsaparilla a fair trial, avoiding all powders, ointments, and washes, and especially cheap and worthless compounds, which not only fail to effect a cure, but more frequently aggravate and confirm the diseases they are handsomely advertised to remedy.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

BLOCKER—Rev. MICHAEL ERASTUS BLOCKER, son of Rev. Micajah Blocker and Mary East, was born of the flesh in Calcasieu parish, La., August 8, 1860, and was born of the Spirit at the age of twelve years, at which time in the State of Louisiana he joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. At the age of nineteen he was licensed to preach in Terrell, Texas, July 26, 1879. Received on trial into the traveling connection in the East Texas Conference in 1881, and into full connection in 1883, at which time he was ordained deacon by Bishop Linus Parker. He graduated in theology in 1885, and was ordained elder by Bishop McTyeire at Beaumont, Texas. On the second day of February, 1887, he led to the hymeneal altar as his bride, Miss Ella May Clay, who, with the aroma of the bridal wreath still lingering upon her brow, laments his early demise. Six months after the happy nuptials, on August 29, at 8:12 P. M., the young wife, faithful mother and devoted brother, Rev. R. M. Blocker, with other friends, witnessed their loved one lay down the cross and receive his crown. Thus fell away one of the most promising young preachers of the East Texas Conference. Had he have lived even until fine manhood, I hardly think he could have had his equal in the Conference as a scholar, theologian or preacher. His early educational advantages had been limited, but he belonged to that class of men that we find in all of the higher professions, to make themselves heard and felt by self-education. In this respect he had lain a broad and sure foundation for rearing in himself literary attainments that would have, in a few years, made him a man of authority among his brethren. His knowledge of the Bible was rapidly increasing as his days rolled by. His deliverances on the standards of the peculiar people called Methodists gave forth no uncertain sound; but were always in accordance with the Book. As a pastor he was much beloved and very popular. Several works traveled by him are within the bounds of the Jennings district. In almost every parlor and sitting-room you enter, you will find among the clusters of cherished pictures fondly relies the photograph of our beloved brother. I have entered, since this year located on the circuit he had traveled without hearing from the inmates remarks of the highest esteem for him, and expressions of condolence at his premature decay. Two years ago his health was impaired that he asked the Conference to grant him a supernumerary relation. For weeks and months before his demise he was closely confined to his room and bed, sometimes hopeful of recovery of health, and then desponding; and though at times suffering intensely, he could always kiss the hand that held the rod, and say: "Though he slay me, yet will I trust him." The last interview between us I remarked that I would leave the ensuing day to be in attendance at a camp meeting, and that probably we would not meet again in the flesh. He remarked: "That is so, my brother. I know not how soon the end will come. I am waiting for something to develop that will make me better, or take me home." As I left him, he said: "Farewell! if you do not find me here on your return from the camp meeting, I will be up yonder. When you get there, look for me; I will be sure to go there when I leave this bed of affliction." These were his last words to the writer. On August 29, just as the stars of the great upper deep came forth as higher sentiments, his star emblazoned the diadem of the world's Redeemer. E. B. PHILIPS.

PARKER—JAMES ROBERT, youngest son of B. F. and Mollie Parker, was born March 19, 1881, and died December 31, 1887. He died of croup and pneumonia—suffered intensely for a few hours, and was then taken to that "sunbright clime" where no budding flowers ever wither, fade or die. H. D. HOWELL.

Symptoms of Catarrh.

Dull, heavy headache, obstruction of the nasal passages, discharges falling from the head into the throat, sometimes profuse, watery and acrid, at others, thick, tenacious, mucous, purulent, bloody and putrid; the eyes are weak, watery and inflamed; there is ringing in the ears, deafness, hacking or coughing to clear the throat, expectorations of offensive matter, together with scabs from ulcers; the voice is changed and has a nasal twang, the breath is offensive; smell and taste are impaired; there is a sensation of dizziness, with mental depression, a hacking cough and general debility. If you have all, or any considerable number of these symptoms, you are suffering from Nasal Catarrh. The more complicated your disease has become, the greater the number and diversity of symptoms. Thousands of cases annually, without manifesting half of the above symptoms, result in consumption, and end in the grave. No disease is so common, more deceptive and dangerous, or less understood, or more unsuccessfully treated by physicians. Five hundred dollars reward is offered by the manufacturers of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, for a case of catarrh which they can not cure. Remedy sold by druggists at only 50 cents.

Dr. Talmage says: "There is a man in our church who is apt to be taken with a coughing fit just as the contribution box comes to him, and can not seem to get his breath again until he hears the pennies rattling in the box behind him." The propensity to cough in church is wonderful; but to cough at the presentation of the plate—this is more wonderful. Of all the benefits of money, none is greater than that it gives opportunity of presenting to our Lord a thank-offering thereof. Among other questions is this—Can a stingy man or woman be saved? "Take heed and beware of all covetousness," said the Head of the church, and he knows.—Southern Churchman.

Woman's Modesty.

Many women are prevented by feelings of delicacy from consulting a physician in those disorders arising from functional derangement of her peculiarly delicate organism, and the most serious results are often caused by this neglect. To such persons Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is an especial boon, as it offers a sure and safe cure for all those distressing disorders to which women are peculiarly subject, while it saves a modest girl or woman from the embarrassment of a personal consultation with a physician. "Favorite Prescription" is the only medicine for woman's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, sold by druggists under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. See guarantee on bottle wrapper.

The recent celebration of the twentieth anniversary of the Peabody gift at the Tennessee State Normal College, in Nashville, called out a letter from Dr. Samuel A. Green, of Boston, secretary pro tem of the fund, in which he says that during the twenty years the amount expended for education has been $1,629,249, distributed as follows: Alabama, $95,200; Arkansas, $103,475; Florida, $72,075; Georgia, $123,127; Louisiana, $96,870; Mississippi, $88,353; North Carolina, $138,315; South Carolina, $77,950; Tennessee, $306,975; Texas, $122,380; Virginia, $267,599; West Virginia, $137,010.

Consumption Surely Cured.

To the Editor:

Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the above-named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy FREE to any of your readers who have consumption, if they will send me their Express and P. O. address.

Respectfully,

The New Mecca.

In this age of misrepresentation, when the irrepressible Quack walks abroad through the medium of the printing press, and with an entire disregard of the consequences to humanity, seeks to impose his unskillful services or worthless decoctions upon the public, we take especial pleasure in saying a word in commendation of a reliable and justly famous Institution of Healing.

We refer to Dr. R. V. Pierce's "World's Dispensary and Invalid's Hotel," the pride of the good City of Buffalo and the "Mecca" of a multitude of invalids who owe recovery to the skillful treatment and attention there received. Dr. Pierce's establishment comprises two mammoth and artistic structures, connected by an open passage-way: One an Invalid's Hotel and Surgical Institute, presided over by a corps of Eighteen Celebrated Physicians and Surgeons, and provided throughout with the most luxurious appointments and conveniences that taste can suggest and money can supply.

Here are faultlessly furnished and decorated reception-rooms, reading-rooms, spacious sleeping-apartments, Turkish Baths, and every possible convenience of a magnificently constructed and liberally managed Hotel, with each and every department a marvel of artistic fitness and completeness.

The adjoining structure is known as the "World's Dispensary." Upon each of its six immense floors a scene is presented, which, when once observed, can never be forgotten.

In the Laboratory on the top floor, a large number of careful chemists are constantly employed in the preparation of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, Favorite Prescription, and other world-famed preparations, which, at all hours of the busy day, goes singing and gurgling through a system of tubing, from its birthplace on the fifth floor to the bottling and labelling department in the vast basement of the building. The intermediate floors are alive with the buz-z and whir-r of, not alone, fourteen printing presses, throwing off a countless variety of pamphlets, circulars, books and labels, but of folding, pressing and pasting machinery—all operated by the deft fingers of cleanly dressed and intelligent young ladies—all operating together and filling the place with the music of a well-disciplined activity second to none in our country. Dr. Pierce has done and is doing a great work for humanity, and can accept the honors and emoluments of his recognized position with a knowledge that no success was ever more worthily attained.

To go through a detailed account of the myriad mechanical and electrical appliances and contrivances here to be found in perfection of construction and application, or to lead your observation through suit upon suit of cheerful and elegant consulting and treatment-rooms, and to dwell upon the other thousand-and-one attractive and useful features of the establishment, would be a pleasing task, but, at the present moment, for us an impossible one. Enough for us to say that the people of this country should be proud of this great success, built up solely on the elements of true Americanism, viz: Pluck, Integrity and Ability.

Twenty-two years of the daily and hourly exercise of these characteristics has gained for Dr. Pierce the confidence of the entire public, and the heartfelt thanks of the patrons of his skill, "whose name is Legion."

THE BEAUTY OF THE WORD.—The more exquisite your sense of beauty becomes, the dearer will the Holy Scripture become to you, the more natural and indispensable will the wisest and grandest of its sayings become to your heart and mind. As wings to the air, as feet to the ground, as light to the eyes, you will feel certain that the mind was created for the saying, and the saying for the mind. I learned at one period of my life the whole New Testament by rote, and I can not unlearn the beauty of those sweet old Saxon phrases in which I thought so long. Full of "light that never was on sea or shore," I feel in using them to mingle a new element with earthly speech, and to relive, in some sort, with their glory, the dreary lifelessness of words.—Sidney Dobell.

THOUSANDS of people suffer with back ache, not knowing that in most cases it is a symptom of diseased kidneys and liver, which plasters and lotions can not heal. The best and surest remedy is Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Balm.

One of the marked tendencies of the time is the increased desire for expository preaching, and it is because a great many have come to have less confidence in the authority of a church, a creed, or a minister, but maintain their belief in the Word of God, and they recognize as authority and as just what they need.

An English preacher was attracting great crowds in New York, and I asked a friend what it was that took him from his business to hear the man. He said: "I find that that preacher knows just my spiritual wants, and, when he has shown them to me, he does not tell me what he thinks about them, but turns to God's Word and reads me his truths about them, pours his divine balm into my wounds, and I go away healed and strengthened."—Dr. Broadus.

Scientific.

Is There a Science of Ethnology?

Ethnology has been defined, briefly, as "the science of the races of men," and, more fully, as "the science which treats of man as a member of a tribe or nation, and of his culture, morals, and language." Many treatises on this science have been given to the world by scholars of the first eminence, from the days of Camper and Blumenbach to our own time. But, when we examine their works, we are struck by the fact that no two of them are agreed on the mere elements or fundamentals of the science. If we inquire, for example, the number of the races of men, we find that Virey is satisfied with two, and Cuvier with three—that Linnæus makes four, Blumenbach five, Buffon six, Peschel seven, Agassiz eight, Pickering eleven, Friedrich Müller twelve, Bory de St. Vincent fifteen—while Morton increases the number to twenty-two, Crawford to sixty, and Burke to sixty-three. If we seek the criteria by which the races are distinguished, we discover that one high authority proposes the color of the skin, another the texture of the hair, another the shape of the skull, and a fourth mere geographical location—while others combine with one or more of these distinctions the minor characteristics (as they deem them) of language, stature, and mental traits. On the most important question of all, the question whether the races of men are distinct species or simply varieties, the votaries of the science are divided into opposing camps. In the latest works of the most distinguished anthropologists, we find the views of the monogenists and the polygenists as far apart and as decided as they were fifty years ago.

The question naturally arises whether a study which has no established principles and no accepted classification can rightly be dignified with the name of a science. Writers whose opinion on such a question must be received with respect have been inclined to answer it in the negative. Eminent among these, from the position which he holds, must be ranked the distinguished chief of the American Bureau of Ethnology. "There is," declares Major Powell, in a late number of Science (June 24, 1887), "a science of anthropology, composed of subsidiary sciences," which he enumerates. "There is," he continues, "a science of sociology, which includes all the institutions of mankind; there is a science of philology, which includes the languages of mankind; and there is a science of philosophy, which includes the opinions of mankind; but there is no science of ethnology, for the attempt to classify mankind in groups has failed on every hand."—Popular Science Monthly.

CENTRALIZATION IN SCHOOL-LIFE.—James P. Applegate, editor of the New Albany, Indiana, Ledger, in an address before an Editorial Association, considering the evils of the centralizing tendencies of the times, traced their origin to the public schools, when he said: "Teaching and learning have been reduced to a mathematical system and work with the regularity of machinery. Given so much room, so many pupils, so many hours, so many studies, so many pages of each, so many months in one department, so many in another; one class goes into the hopper at one end and goes out at the other. No matter if one head is larger or smaller than another, the brain brighter or duller, the body stronger or weaker, all is grist that goes to that mill and it is all ground with the same burrs. This system produces a certain order of general average intelligence, higher, perhaps, than existed in the days when boys and girls, not classes, were taught, but where are the individual scholars? Passing through the public schools the student, if further pursuing his studies, goes to college, and there the routine, while of a higher order is the same in principle, all class and grade individuality is lost. Do the graduates of our colleges go out as well educated as their forefathers? The average is higher, no doubt, but are they individually as well equipped for the battles of life?"—Popular Science.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Gen. E. S. Bragg, of Wisconsin, has been appointed Minister to Mexico by President Cleveland.

The Florida Sub-Tropical Exposition was opened, on January 12, with most impressive ceremonies and demonstrations.

Severe storms were reported from the Northwest on the twelfth instant. A number of persons are said to have perished in the cold.

The nomination of G. W. Nott, postmaster at New Orleans, was confirmed on the twelfth.

Earthquake shocks were felt in Georgia, North Carolina and South Carolina on the twelfth instant.

Gen. F. T. Nicholls was nominated for governor by the Democratic State Convention, at Baton Rouge, January 13.

Senator Walthall has been renominated by a Democratic caucus of the Mississippi Legislature.

The Legislature of Virginia has agreed upon a bill to give each soldier and sailor from that State who served in the Confederate forces a pension of $30 per annum. Its benefits will also extend to the widows of men who lost their lives in the service.

The Memorial Committee of the Waterways Convention had a hearing before the River and Harbor Committee of the House, on January 14.

Secretary Fairchild has prepared a letter to Speaker Carlisle, urging additional legislation to prevent the smuggling of opium.

A snow-storm was reported from Crystal Springs, Miss., on January 15.

Grace M. E. Church, at St. Augustine, Fla., was dedicated, on the 15th inst., by Bishop Mallalieu. It cost, with the parsonage and furnishing, $75,000, and was presented to the congregation by Hon. M. Flagler, of New York.

A fire at Denniston, Texas, on January 14, destroyed the roundhouse of the Missouri Pacific railway and twelve locomotives which were in it. The loss is estimated at $100,000.

The nomination of Hon. L. Q. C. Lamar, who had been appointed Associate Justice of the Supreme Court by the President, was confirmed by the Senate on January 16. The nominations of Messrs. Vilas, to be Secretary of the Interior, and Dickinson, to be Postmaster General, were also confirmed.

The Crystal Springs Canning Company has been organized, with a capital of $50,000.

The terrible storm which has swept over the Northwest, blockading the railroads in five States, subsided on the sixteenth instant. It is not improbable that a hundred lives have been lost.

FOREIGN.

A plot against the life of the Crown Prince is said to have been discovered.

Lord Salisbury, in an address delivered at the Conservative Club banquet, Liverpool, on the twelfth, said that the dark cloud over Ireland was lifting, resolute government having had its effect.

The International Socialist Congress will be held in London in August.

Prince Oscar, second son of King Oscar, will be married shortly to one of his mother's maids of honor.

A deputation of the Baptist Union held a conference with Mr. Spurgeon, on January 13, in reference to his withdrawal. He declared that he must maintain his resignation; but would continue to support the department of the Union in which he was specially interested.

De Lesseps maintains that the Panama Canal will be made available for the transit of vessels in 1890.

Several military officers, government officials and teachers have been arrested in Sofia, on the charge of conspiring against Prince Ferdinand.

Advices from the Russian frontier say the troops in the Lubiy District are suffering terribly from cold. Forty sentinels have been frozen to death.

Lord Salisbury has announced that he will not resign unless defeated on the Irish question, and at the same time issues a circular to the party, advising certain concessions to his Liberal allies.

The war scare has not passed. All Austrians have been notified by the police to leave Poland, and the Polish officers in the Russian army have been sent to the interior for garrison duty. Austria is not idle; troops are being hastened to the Silesian frontier.

Ex-President Grevy suffered from a stroke of apoplexy last week. He has since then been confined to his bed, and his physician has been visiting him twice daily. His condition was kept secret as long as possible.

Archbishop Ryan has handed to the rector of the American Seminary, President Cleveland's letter, with the volume of the American Constitution presented to the Pope. The rector will present the gift on the occasion of the Pope's reception to the American bishop.

A conflict occurred at Gweedore, Ireland, on January 14, between peasants and a party of police. Several persons were more or less seriously injured.

A party of Orangemen attacked an Irish League meeting at Everton, a suburb of Liverpool, January 14, and wrecked the hall where the meeting was held.

In an interview, Mr. Parnell is reported to have said that there is grave dissension among the members of the Cabinet, and that a government party crisis may occur at any time. He said that the recent reductions in rent made by the land commission are not half what the tenants of Ireland are entitled to.

It is reported from Paris that M. Fourens, Minister of Foreign Affairs, is endeavoring to establish an entente between France, Russia and England.

WANTED.—Agents for the marvelous work, "Fifty Years in the Church of Rome." Address I. Q. REYNOLDS, 203 Lafayette street, New Orleans.

Southern Cultivator and Christian Advocate.

By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer to new subscribers the Southern Cultivator and Dixie Farmer, combined with the ADVOCATE, for $2 50 for the two publications for one year. Commencing with this date, the price to old subscribers will remain the same as heretofore—$2 75—with only twenty-five cents extra to either of the above amounts for "Dickson's System of Farming." These rates are postage prepaid. All orders must be accompanied by cash in full; no allowance for commission to agents, and both papers must be ordered at same time. We will, however, fill orders to subscribers who failed to take advantage of the club rate when they last renewed for $1 for the Cultivator for one year.

Our Daily Bread.

HEAVY and sour bread or biscuit has a vast influence through the digestive organs upon the measure of health we enjoy. How important to our present happiness and future usefulness the blessing of good health and a sound constitution are, we can only realize when we have lost them, and when it is too late to repair the damage. Notwithstanding these facts, thousands of persons daily jeopardize, not only their health, but their lives and the healths and lives of others, by using articles in the preparation of their food the purity and healthfulness of which they know nothing. Perhaps a few cents may have been saved, or it may have been more convenient to obtain the article used, and the housekeeper takes the responsibility and possibly will never know the mischief that has been wrought. Paterfamilias may have spells of headache, the children may have lost their appetites, or look pale; if so, the true cause is rarely suspected. The weather, the lack of out-door air, or some other cause is given, and the unwholesome, poisonous system of adulterated food goes on. Next to the flour, which should be made of good, sound wheat, and not ground to fine, the yeast or baking powder, which furnishes the rising properties, is of the greatest importance, and of the two we prefer baking powder, and always use the Royal, as we thereby retain the original properties of the wheat, no fermentation taking place. The action of the Royal Baking Powder upon the dough is simply to swell it and form little cells through every part. These cells are filled with carbonic acid gas, which passes off during the process of baking.

The Royal is made from pure grape acid, and it is the action of this acid upon highly carbonized bicarbonate of soda that generates the gas alluded to; and these ingredients are so pure and so perfectly titted, tested and adapted to each other, that the action is mild and permanent, and is continued during the whole time of baking, and no residue of poisonous ingredients remains to undermine the health, so heavy biscuits, nu sour bread, but if directions are followed every article will be found sweet and wholesome.

To Our Agents.

Do not fail to read and clip out for reference our new rate for the Southern Cultivator and Dixie Farmer. These prices should enable you to get new subscribers with the greatest ease. Try it. Some time later there will be a good offer made for the benefit of agents.

HOW TO MAKE MONEY.—Plant Le Conte & Keiffer's pear trees; diversify your industry. One party last season got over $700 net from less than two acres. Every planter should lose no time in setting an orchard; the extra labor will not be felt to keep one to ten acres in condition. Le Conte & Keiffer's are blight proof. Correspondence solicited. One, two and three-year-old trees for sale.

A Great Newspaper.

There appears in another column of this paper an advertisement of the Cincinnati Commercial Gazette, the leading Republican newspaper of the central States. It is a paper fully abreast with the times, and is complete in all the various departments that go to make up a family newspaper. The advertisement gives no uncertain sound, and has a clear ring. It is worth your while to read it.

All these cases have increased in weight from 16 to 28 lbs., and are not now taking any medicine."

EDUCATIONAL.

Mansfield Female College
1887-8.

THE FALL TERM will open Wednesday, September 15, 1887.

The Faculty has been strengthened by the accession of Rev. M. S. Watts, of Virginia, who will have the discipline of the College, and Prof. H. F. Biddle, also of Virginia, who will manage the boarding department. Both these gentlemen are experienced in school work, and their families will add much to the social advantages of the pupils.

Other highly qualified teachers have been secured for the Literary, Music and Art Departments.

Annual rate for board and tuition from one hundred and sixty-five to one hundred and eighty-five dollars, according to class. Music, instrumental or vocal, and art lessons, five dollars per month of four weeks, extra.

Instruction in French, ten dollars per session. Use of piano for practice, ten dollars. The expense for the year for board, tuition, and all single course in music or art, paid in advance, two hundred dollars.

A deposit of five dollars for each term must be made for purchase of books and stationery.

Pupils must furnish their own bed-clothing and pillows, towels and toilet articles.

The College is the property of the Louisiana Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and the daughters of members of this body receive free tuition in the Literary and Music Departments.

Owing to the steadily increasing patronage during the past four years, the Board of Managers have made arrangements for increasing the capacity and comfort of the buildings, and beautifying the grounds.

Mansfield is on the line of the Texas and Pacific R. R., 288 miles from New Orleans, and forty miles from Shreveport.

AN IDEAL.

He was not fair, but in her face
There was a purity of soul,
That gave each feature perfect grace,
Lit up and beautified the whole.

Her hand was not the "lily-flower,"
Or "drifted snow" that poets sing;
But in its touch so soft and kind
There was a strength most comforting.

And little children cling to it,
And all the poor she clothed and fed
Knew what a cool and soothing touch
It laid upon the aching head.

Her laugh was low, and seldom heard;
Her smile, soon woke, most passing sweet;
Her sympathies went quickly forth
At another's joy or woe to meet.

Her creed? Ah me! she was not one
Who thought her own the only way,
And thanked her God, like him of old,
Who "went up" in his pride to pray.

But pressing on her upward road,
She strove to win all hearts for heaven.
And counted no man wholly lost
Why lived—so yet might be forgiven.

She knew heaven's gate was open wide,
She knew how great the joy within;
And in her perfect charity
She would have had all enter in.

The Pope of Rome vs. the Son of God.

BY REV. J. A. PARKER.

In this paper I wish to lay down six propositions, the elaboration of which will go to sustain the charge adopted as a caption.

It is taken for granted that every Christian desires to be in line with the cardinal doctrines and controlling spirit of the Son of God. Indeed, the very thought that a man is a Christian, is a thought that that man is in harmony with Christ, following him in faith and practice. "Having the mind that is in Christ" is the germinal idea of a Christian's being. "That ye may be one even as I and my Father are one," is the expression of the divine idea. Without this identity, or oneness of person with Christ, no man can be a Cristian in the true sense of the word. If it be not so, then Christianity is a mere system of apery, or blind, lifeless pretension.

"He fashioneth all their hearts alike." "The grace of God which bringeth salvation to all men hath appeared." "Salvation is of the Lord."

From these three cardinal principles, of redemption, we deduce the following facts:

1. That as between man and man there is no difference. "He—God respecteth not the person of princes."

2. That God alone is the dispenser of grace.

3. That the power to save is vested in the Lord alone.

4. That whoever attempts to exercise any, or either of these prerogatives, assumes to take the place of God, and to exercise powers vested in him alone. Hence our first proposition:

A person claiming powers and privileges above his fellow-mortals must show the ground of his claims and the source of his power.

The correctness of this proposition, I think, can not be denied. Suppose some one should come into our community, claiming the right and authority of dictator. If comes clothed with proper authority—armed with credentials from some person or body originally having such power, we must submit. Otherwise he must go.

A gentleman in soldierly equipage, mounted on the ideal charger, comes to draft ten of our number to leave home and face the dangers and hardship of war for a term of years. You fall among the chosen. Are you going? "No. He may be an imposter. He must show his authority. If he comes around with a commission from the President, backed up by an act of Congress, why, then, I will go, and not before." Very good. Your decision is a wise and a patriotic one. But is not the Pope of Rome doing this very thing? He proposes to banish you from your heavenly home if you refuse to obey his order. Has God ever given him any such authority? Can he do what he claims? Will the great President of the spiritual union send a detachment of "the army of heaven" for you if you fail? If he will not, then the Pope has no power to coerce you. His claims are puerile. Like the ambitious youth, who, putting his foot at the tide line, ordered it to rise no higher, he must give back when the great tide rolls in, or be swallowed up in its returning folds."

The claims of popery are as fraudulent as its usurpations. He says God gave him this power over the souls of men. When did he confer this power upon a man? "He gave it to Peter to loose or bind." He did? But Peter was not a Pope. He was an apostle. So this power over the souls of men was never given to a Pope, but to an apostle. The power given Peter was over live men, not dead ones; over their persons in relation to Christianity, and not over their souls in relation to heaven and hell. Now, if the Pope claims power to remit sins or to seal damnation to men, he must have derived that power from God. Hence our second proposition:

Delegated power can never exceed the authority whence it is derived.

If special authority has been given the Pope over the souls of men, it could not be by man, for man has no such power over man. Nor could it be by any set of men—as the church—for the church has no power except as derived from God. Power beyond the persons of men in their relations to the church has not been given to the church, as is plainly shown by our blessed Lord. "Master," said one of the disciples, "we saw one casting out devils in thy name, and we forbade him, because he followed not us." The answer from the lips of the Lord came like a crash upon the excinsive assumptions of the disciples: "He that is not against us is on our part. * * * Other sheep have I which are not of this fold. Them also will I bring with me."

Here are the very men, of one of whom it was said: "Whosoever thou shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whomsoever thou loosest on earth shall be loosed in heaven." And yet they had no power to stop a few men from preaching the gospel. These disciples were the chief pastors in the church of God, and had no power over the souls of men. They could not, therefore, give such power to the Pope.

Whence, then, has the Pope this power over men? By virtue of his office as the head of the church? No. For the Pope holds an office not known to the church in the apostolic times, nor for three hundred years after the last one had died! By express declaration of God or, of his Son? No. For there is not one word in all the Bible giving man authority to judge men. "Who art thou that judgest another?" "Judge not, lest ye be judged: for with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged." Judgment is the right of Jesus, for "he shall judge the world." This brings us to our third proposition:

A person representing another must carry out the will of him whom he represents.

"Judgment is mine. I will repay, saith the Lord." "I will have mercy and not sacrifice." When, under the sanction of the Popes of Rome, "heretics were burned for the good of their souls;" when Tyndall was burned for translating the Scriptures into the English language for the use of the ignorant thousands of England; when the whole palatinate of the Rhine was laid waste under the sanction of Clement, and the wicked Charles V. of France saw, from his palace, "thirteen cities burning at once," and the homeless and ruined citizens fleeing in wretchedness and want—was this according to the will of the meek and lowly Jesus? Clement and John and Gregory, all Popes of Rome, cursed their enemies, and consigned their souls to endless perdition. Jesus looked in pity on his enemies, and said: "Father, forgive them; they know not what they do." It is impossible that one of these elements could be the representative of the other. It is more fitting that Arctic night should represent Tropic day. Oh, no! the Pope can not be the vicegerent of Jesus. Jesus said: "My kingdom is not of this world." The Pope says: "My kingdom is of this world. The church and the world are under my thumb." Jesus said: "Render, therefore, unto Cæsar, the things that are Cæsar's, and unto God, the things that are God's." The Pope says: "Render unto me all things; Cæsar is my subject." Jesus said: "Search the Scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life, and they are they which testify of me." The Pope says: "Go to the priest for knowledge, for you can not understand the Scriptures." And so it goes, at direct variance with the Son of God, in almost all things.

Whatever is not in keeping with high moral principle is in opposition to the Son of God.

When the crusades were inaugurated, permission was given to the soldiers to outrage all decency, all morality, and all right, and to trample down all authority save that of the Pope. Incendiarism, rapine, murder, arson, and all else hellish and diabolical, was permitted under promise of pardon from the Pope on returning from the wars, or a house in heaven if the soldier died before his return. The author of such diabolism can not be the vicegerent of God.

In matters of moral import, everyone must be actuated by the same motives—justice and mercy.

When the Son of God sent out his soldiers, he gave them this injunction: "Be ye wise as serpents, and harmless as doves." When the Pope sent out his soldiers, he ordered them to hunt down and burn all who differed from the Church of Rome.

Under the ministry of Jesus an adulteress was pardoned because her accusers were guilty. Under the ministry of Dominick and Tetzell as well—innocent virgins were subjected to the most cruel torture, and the most fiendish insults and hellish outrages.

Jesus sent his ministers out to "preach the gospel to every creature, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and the Son, and the Holy Ghost." The Pope sent his ministers out to conquer opposition with fire and fagot and gibbet and rack.

The Son of God reveals himself as the friend and guide of the erring. The history of the Pope of Rome reveals him as the foe and the destroyer of those who err.

These are facts the denial of which we challenge. In the light of these, can any thoughtful soul do otherwise than conclude that the Pope of Rome is in opposition to the Son of God?

We bewail the condition of Africa, of China, of Mexico, of Brazil, and well we may. But why? Three hundred years ago so important was the position of Africa in ecclesiastical councils that great deference was paid to her clergy. Was Africa in a better condition then than now, and if so, why? Dr. Draper—preface to "Conflict of Science and Religion"—says the church by which he says he means the Romish Church—has always been an enemy to science. We all know the Romish Church is an enemy to literature, opposing all schools not under the management of her priests, and shutting up those which are under such surveillance from the scrutiny of the world.

We know Rome does not accept the Bible as the LXX gave it, but has an interpolation by Pope Sixtus, so arranged and interpolated as to give coloring to Rome's presumption and sustain her arrogance.

"Compassion on the Ignorant."

One of the paradoxes of suffering is that it is cured by multiplication. "Sympathy is "weeping with them that weep until both quit crying." When I was a child I burnt my hand, and my nurse told me to hold the hand to the fire till it drew the fire out of the burn. So they taught me that "the hair of the dog is good for the bite." These two instances are given of a distorted teaching of a true principle. The ministry which is always effective, with the people must be of the people. An education or a condition that sets the preacher apart from the people is necessarily more defective than can possibly result from what is ordinarily called illiteracy. But, of course, that education of the mind and that elevation of condition in life which still admit of condescension to the estate of the lowly and of raising them are the true education and condition of an effective ministry. There are several points upon which humanity must be touched in order to following with a glad mind the teachings of their ministers.

1. The ignorant suffer from their ignorance. Many of their ills vanish on being told how to remove them. A bad temper in husband or wife is often thought to be the work of the devil when it is the work, perhaps, of a badly cooked breakfast or a smoky chimney. A sharp tack in the toe of a shoe may on a cold day transform Martha into an original Mary Magdalene. Disease that is laid plaintively at the door of an all-wise and all-good Providence is often found behind the kitchen window. Vice that flourishes in ale-houses and bagnios begins in the ignorance of the springs of pleasure that rise around the tireside in the evening readings of the family.

2. Ignorance of other people's condition often produces restlessness. A youth from the sunny valley, looking through a telescope, saw a man upon a high mountain leaping and throwing his arms vigorously up and down. The youth thought the man must be very happy to be dancing so, and was envious of him. The truth was, the man was exercising to keep from freezing. We do not know why some persons who are friendly to us appear so oflish. We misjudge their conduct. Sometimes they treat us meanly, but they know no better. "Forgive them, they know not what they do," is a prayer we do not repeat as often as we should.

3. Condition of illiteracy and poverty produces only one kind of ignorance. There is no class so ignorant of the condition of nine-tenths of the world as the learned and rich. Their very isolation renders them incapable of appreciating those stories of poverty, wretchedness and degradation which they sometimes read in books. They learn after awhile to believe that these descriptions in fiction are really "made-up tales," having no existence except in the literature with which they amuse themselves.

4. The fourth class is the misinformed. Millions of highly cultivated people have been enlightened with *un*facts. Their condition is all the more deplorable by reason of the fact that they have that which passes for knowledge. They know more than one can teach them. They propose to enlighten the teacher. Even the opening of their eyes to the truth is not always unaccompanied with great danger. To discover the falsehood of what they have learned for truth may be followed by a skepticism of all truth. They may come to believe that all knowledge is a fraud or relapse into the opposite, and yet equally fatal, error that one's life is independent of what he knows or believes to be true or false.

5. Heart-ignorance or stupidity. Of all classes this is the most hopeless. The stupid know that they do not know, and yet do not care. They have lost the knowledge of even the sweet spiritual sensation of the desire to know. Negation of knowledge has reached the limit, and stolid will becomes un-will to every aspiration to that which is lovely or honest, or pure or of good report. To compassionate the ignorant of these classes is not a thing to be done without effort or training. The ordinary man can not do it, although of "naturally a good heart." It is not so easy as shedding tears, which many take for compassion. This writer once told the story of a preacher which caused almost everyone in the audience to shed tears. He then took up the collection for the widows and orphans, and got a dollar and thirty-five cents! To illustrate the need of training, let us suppose the hunter to have a young falcon or a young bloodhound: Neither has been trained to hunt, though of keenest eye and scent. They will be fit for the chase by and by. So one of a "good heart" should be chosen; but that good heart must learn how to have compassion. The word to have compassion signifies meditation rather than sympathy in actual possession of the same sorrow and ignorance. He will know how to mediate for the unreflecting and erring.

But all ability does not follow from experience. Sorrow, toil, and suffering are not necessarily invigorating to mind or heart. There is no more virtue in a tear than in a smile, in a groan than in a laugh, if we come to the last analysis. Affliction works glory only when we look, not at the seen, but the unseen. Experience works hope when the Holy Ghost is shed abroad in the heart. But otherwise the sorrow of the world works death, and the more experience in human suffering hardens men, and many are so callous as the wretched, none so unsympathizing as the damned. One of the most appalling features of hell will be that no one of all its myriads will know how or be able to sympathize with another. Helpful sympathy, while it implies community of condition, implies superiority of character condescending to equality of suffering in order to elevate to like grade of enjoyment. The idea is not born of the material theory of equivalents. It puts a divine quality of an active nature into the passive condition of life. In this quality germinates the heroic and martyr spirit, for no one is worthy of either title until he has suffered with and for the undeserving.

There is nothing in temptation—nothing in having sinned which gives strength to genuine compassion. That sympathy which seeks ignorance and sin because they are of the same character proposes no relief, but a perpetual union of the bad which we deprecate. But the tempted longs to lean upon one who is superior to temptation; the stained hand of the sinner reaches up and pleads for the friendly grasp of the sinless. So, on the contrary, there is an infinite longing in real goodness to remove the evil that is in the world. Only true wisdom longs to enlighten ignorance until it knows as it is known. Only a rectitude that knows no shadow of deflection knows how to compassionate the erring. Only the truly good and wise know the wretchedness of the ignorant and sinful, both in what is not enjoyed, and in what is suffered; and so they only are able to have a proper compassion for them. Only One such has ever in person represented the human race. Only he, therefore, is worthy of the eternal priesthood after the order of Melchizedek. T. A. S. A.

Our English Letter.

Methodism in England is divided into six branches. It is no uncommon thing to find three or four of these denominations represented in villages where one could meet all the demands. Your correspondent has frequently preached in hamlets and small villages, containing three, and even four, Methodist preaching-places, each maintaining a weak and struggling existence. Recently, the subject of Methodist reunion has occupied a large share of attention. The last Conference, after a very interesting and animated discussion, appointed a committee to consider the matter. Strange as it may appear, the movement for union has met with strong opposition. It is asserted that Methodist reunion would involve compromise and a surrender of dearly bought and cherished rights and privileges.

The feeling in favor of union, however, is a growing one, and the editor of the Methodist Times fondly indulges in the hope that when, in 1891, the church comes to celebrate the centenary of Wesley's death, a united Methodism may gather around his grave. Mr. Hughes may be somewhat of an optimist, but, if the time for union is not yet, surely some scheme could be devised by which there could be a division of labor, so as to prevent friction and waste.

I see from the American papers that the Methodist Episcopal Church (North) has elected several lady delegates to its approaching General Conference. I also learn that there are several ladies in that denomination exercising their gifts as preachers. The British Conference, at an early day, delivered itself on this question. As far back as 1805 we find a standing rule "prohibiting women preaching, even under that vague and perilous condition of an 'extraordinary call' to any but their own sex."

English Methodism is proud of the record made by her sons in her own and other communions. One of the most gifted young clergymen of the Church of England are the sons and grandsons of Methodist ministers. The Rev. Arthur McCullagh, B. A., son of an ex-president of the Wesleyan Conference, has just secured a prize offered by the Bishop of Durham for the best essay on an ecclesiastical subject. Mr. McCullagh is curate of Hartlepool.

The papers this week announce the sudden death of the Rev. Thomas Nattrass. He was taken sick in the pulpit, and died before medical aid could be procured. Mr. Nattrass entered the ministry in 1852, and was a faithful and successful minister of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

If we do not want to "speak of him," let us beware of plausibly persuading ourselves that it is because we do not want to speak about ourselves. Let us be honest, and own that the vessel does not overflow because it is not very full of faith and love.—F. R. Havergal.

The Weekly General Assessment Plan.

The writer has been asked by different parties to explain the general assessment plan for raising finances which has been in operation during the past Conference year, and prior thereto, in the Jefferson Street Church, Natchez, Miss., and how the same can be successfully carried out; therefore, for the benefit of those interested, he writes this:

The plan is simple. It is, that the contributor assess himself or herself a certain amount, to be paid at stated periods, and to cover all claims for contribution which the church may have against him or her for the raising of the necessary amount to meet the customary obligations. Or, to be more definite, I will explain how we have begun and expect to operate the assessment plan in our church during this year. The Board of Stewards met promptly, and, after fixing the salaries of the pastor, sexton and organist, made an estimate of the amount to be raised to cover all demands for the year, and resolved to raise the amount and relieve the pastor of his duty to collect any Conference fund. On the following Sabbath the Board fully informed the congregation of their action; what amount they were expected, as a congregation, to pay, and asked them to assess themselves individually with sufficient liberality to enable the Board to meet the obligations which they assumed as the agents of the church. Printed cards were distributed among the congregation, which explained our plan, and asked for a weekly contribution from the members, to cover all demands upon them, at the same time enumerating the different purposes to which their assessment would be appropriated; as, for instance, pastor's salary, incidental account, foreign and domestic missions, etc. In the vestibule of the church the secretary of the Board remains until the congregation is all in, and gives each of the members who assess themselves an envelope containing a card, upon which they write the amount they are willing to give each week, and sign the same. This card is so ruled that a regular account is kept thereon with the member of the amount contributed.

Experience has taught us that persons of limited means can and will give larger amounts by paying weekly, instead of at longer periods—as monthly, quarterly or yearly. During the week of toil and hardship they will lay by a small proportion of their earnings to aid their Master's work for the salvation of man; and at the end of the year these small weekly offerings assume a larger aggregate than they could possibly give should they defer the payment until that time. For example, a poor sister will give ten cents every Sunday; could she give $5 20 at the close of the year? The envelope and card is taken every Sunday, the contribution placed therein, and returned to the collector when the regular Sabbath-morning offering is taken up. As soon as the members assess themselves, we consider them indebted to the church to the amount they name, and we proceed to collect in pretty much the same manner that a business man acts toward his customer—that is, we send them regular statements of account; when they are in arrears, notify them; ask them to pay, urge them, persuade them, and encourage them all we can. Our effort is at all times to impress upon them the sacredness of the debt, their solemn obligation to meet it, and that it takes priority to all others. We make it a rule to fully advise the congregation of the state of the finances, and what we are doing in the premises. Once a month, or oftener, some member of the Board, in open church, before the benediction is pronounced, makes an oral report to the congregation, and, at the same time, earnestly encourages and exhorts them to do the very best they can. Now, mark you, the pastor does not make the statements in regard to finances, and it is not expected that he shall say anything in the pulpit at all about finances. The Board shoulders the entire responsibility of raising funds, and says to the pastor, Give all your labor to strictly pastoral work, go comfort the heavy-hearted, minister to the sick and dying, "rescue the perishing" in sin. You are better fitted for this work than we, and we will see to the finances.

We conceive that a pastor hampered and harrassed by the responsibility of having to collect any of the funds can not accomplish as much and as good ministerial work as one free from all such cares, and it would be well for Boards of Stewards to bear this in mind. But, as to the duty and neglect thereof of Boards in this connection, I will say more in another communication, with your permission, Mr. Editor.

It is our especial effort to get everyone to assess themselves, and contribute weekly, no matter how small the amount may be. A number of children, some quite small, take an envelope each Sunday, and put five or ten cents in it. By this means the little folks are being educated to give. Besides, it is a great help to us. Most of our contributors are people in moderate circumstances; and our object is not to raise our funds by the liberality of only one or two, but by the united effort of all. We want everyone interested. Like the little street waif who joined the missionary society, we want them to feel that they "are partners in the concern." But you will doubtless ask, Suppose the members do not assess themselves with sufficient liberality? Then we act as a Board of Equalizers. We examine the assessments, and those who are able to bear an increase we request to be more liberal. During the past year we did not have to make this request of any. Occasionly, when special circumstances require it, we send to the members circular-letters, fully explaining to them what we desire, and appealing to them for assistance: and we generally meet with appropriate response.

To carry out successfully our plan, we have to be very active. The secretary has considerable work and responsibility upon him. The Board must co-operate with him, and, as they are generally prominent business men, they should bring to bear their business experience and tact to aid the work. The stewards should also be faithful workers in the other departments of church work, and give the pastor their encouragement, aid and support at all times. The office of steward is one of importance; and, if the incumbents of the same would realize fully what is required of them under and by the provisions of our church laws, there would be but few half-paid preachers, and but little deficiency in our Annual Conference returns. We know our duty. Let us perform it. He gave his life for us. Can we not devote to his cause a small portion of our energies, our talents, our time, and our means?

"Jesus Wept."—Why?

The perfect humanity of Christ brings him into perfect sympathy with the human race. It is natural that this should be so. It is so throughout all the orders of creation. Kind always sympathizes with its kind. The more perfect the kind, the nearer perfect the sympathy. One mother stood by the open grave and saw the remains of her babe buried out of sight; she then walked across the cemetery to where another open grave awaited the remains of another mother's babe; and, although the two mothers had never met before, they fell into each other's arms, and wept upon each other's necks. "The fellowship of suffering." Paul says: "He took not on him the nature of angels; but he took on him the seed of Abraham: wherefore in all things it behooved him to be made like unto his brethren. For in that he himself hath suffered, being tempted, he is able to succor them that are tempted." Isaiah says, "He hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows."

These Scriptures have a striking illustration in the occasion which called forth the short verse at the head of this article. Lazarus was sick, "therefore, his sisters sent unto him (Jesus), saying, Lord, behold he whom thou lovest is sick." "Now Jesus loved Martha, and her sister, and Lazarus." As he wept, the Jews said: "Behold how he loved him." When Martha "heard that Jesus was coming, she went and met him," and said: "Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died. But I know that even now whatsoever thou wilt ask of God, God will give it thee." Could she have expressed stronger faith? "Jesus saith unto her, Thy brother shall rise again. Martha saith unto him, I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day." He had given her no assurance, so far, that he would raise him before then. "Jesus said unto her, I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live. And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die. Believest thou this?" How promptly and how fully she replied: "Yea, Lord." Not only did she believe that, but more: "I believe that thou art the Christ, the Son of God, which should come into the world." Her faith took in the whole scheme of redemption, and she does not hesitate to say so. Could the Savior have asked a better or fuller faith? He must have been satisfied with this. Mary starts with the same confession: "Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died." He does not attempt to draw out her faith any further, nor does he wait for a fuller expression of it. The presumption is, that the sisters had much the same faith; and, if any difference, Mary's was better. But "when Jesus saw her weeping and the Jews also weeping which came with her, he grieved in the spirit, and was troubled, and said, Where have ye laid him? They said unto him, Lord, come and see." Then it was that "Jesus wept." And then it was that the Jews said: "Behold, how he loved him." They understood it to be a case of purest sympathy: such it appears to us. What an exhibition of perfect humanity and of perfect sympathy with humanity! He knew he was going to raise Lazarus, but he enters into the present sorrow of the sisters.

That mother knows that she is going to replace that broken toy over which her child weeps, but her mother's heart leads her to take the child to her bosom and sympathize with its grief. For this purpose Christ was "made like unto his brethren" that he might be prepared to sympathize in all their griefs. He did not charge these sisters with a want of faith; nor chide them with weakness, but entered heartily into their grief, mingling his tears freely with theirs. What a guarantee to all his suffering followers is this! If others fail to sympathize, Jesus does not. If others think it undignified to weep, Jesus does not. I am so glad that this shortest verse in the Bible is there. There is a volume of significance and a world of comfort in it. If I had been with the multitude on the occasion of the Savior's triumphal march into Jerusalem as they came to the descent of the Mount of Olives, I think I should have joined in the shout: "Hosanna to the Son of David: Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord: Hosanna in the highest." And when he came near and wept over the city, I might have approached him with a degree of familiarity, and asked:

"For whom, bless'd Jesus, we would know,
Doth such a sacred torrent flow?
What brother, or what friend of thine,
Is graced and mourned with drops divine?"

But without these evidences of humanity, I would tremble and flee from the authority which drives the beggars and sellers out of the temple. Had I stood by him as he hungered at the barren fig tree, Zacchens-like, I might have had him to dine with me. But without this evidence of humanity, I would witness with terror the withering of the fig tree under his curse. Tears which flowed freely from sympathy with Martha and Mary might have increased to torrents as "Jesus wept." But, oh! without this, when I hear him cry, "with a loud voice, Lazarus, come forth," and witness the miracle of the resurrection, I would fall to the ground, and, Peter-like, exclaim, "Depart from me, I am a sinful man, O Lord."

These evidences of humanity are wonderfully significant; wonderfully encouraging. While no one can approach the unveiled Deity and live, we come with confidence through the sympathizing, weeping Man of Nazareth. I am so glad that he was human as well as divine. I am so glad that he was a man, and not an angel. I am so glad that "he was a man of sorrows, and acquainted with griefs." I am so glad that he wept over wicked Jerusalem, and the dead body of his friend, Lazarus.

MR. EDITOR: A number of brethren have expressed their gratitude for my calling attention to the above course of study, so permit me to call attention to a feature which may induce others still to examine its excellency. I have often thought if it were required to prepare the Conference course of study according to a plan like this, our young preachers would learn more in one year than they now learn in two, if not four, years. For illustration, I will refer to the doctrinal course. There are eight courses. Pope's Theology, based upon Townsend's Elements, is preferred, though some others are accepted in special cases. When your name is enrolled, and you have secured the books, an outline and a list of instructions are sent. To bring the illustration so all may see it: Suppose that Binney's Compend were a perfect statement of the elements of theology as presented by Watson, and that Binney had a systematized index, you would be directed to get a blank book of about two hundred pages and record the subjects and topics, using every third or fourth right-hand page. Memorize this index and then master the book (compend), making annotations in your own language under the proper heads. Then you would take Watson and give it at least two readings, making annotations each time, and when done make out a system of your own from your written book; which is to be sent to the dean, and he sends printed questions, which are to be answered in the presence of an examiner, without referring to any book or writing.

On the left-hand pages you would make notes of your readings from other books, as well as references to works in which these subjects or topics are treated. Suggestions are given as to how to work the matter into sermons; and this suggestive expression is given—"A theology which can not be preached is useless." And in the instructions in reference to the use of the Bible in the course of the study, it is well stated: "A theology which is not biblical is worse than useless. It is pernicious." There are many other excellent requirements, but my letter would grow too long to mention them. If I can induce any preacher, old or young, to begin the course, I will feel amply repaid for my time and trouble, and I am sure they will bless the day that inaugurated the "Chautauqua School of Theology."

From the Work.

CANTON, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I am beginning my third year in this station with good prospects of success. In some respects Canton is a hard field. It is a whisky town, and the whisky power is a great hinderance to the cause of religion. The organized forces of evil are formidable, and the churches make but a feeble impression on the community. Some of those who profess to be the followers of Christ are lacking in the courage necessary to "witness a good confession" before a gainsaying world. But we have some good people here who walk worthy of their high vocation. We have a membership of near two hundred in a population of near three thousand. Our church is in a good condition now for work in the vineyard of the Master. Last year they met all their assessments in full, and this year they propose more liberal things in the matter of ministerial support. This is a relief to the pastor, who has been trying, on a very small salary, to educate a son for the ministry. A good spirit seems to prevail among our people, and we are hoping for a year of prosperity.

On the first day of this year two of our members died. At early dawn Mrs. F. H. Wood, after a painful illness of several months' duration, died in great peace. She came to this State from Missouri during the war, and settled in Canton after the war with her husband, who died more than a year ago. She joined the "Christian" Church early in life, and remained a member of that communion until near two years ago, when she united with the Methodist Church in this place. She had worshiped with our church for years here, and was highly esteemed for her many virtues. A cultivated Christian lady of uniform piety and devout spirit, she has gone to her reward.

Bro. A. H. Ford was one of the oldest and best of our members. He will be remembered by many of the former pastors of Canton as an efficient steward and as an earnest co-worker in the vineyard of the Lord. When I came to Canton two years ago he had recently returned to this place from Richmond, Ky. His sainted wife had recently died, and he had suffered, and was still suffering some, from a stroke of paralysis. He was getting old and feeble, but he was in his place in church on all occasions of public worship. After this he suffered much and long with an attack of rheumatism. He had partially recovered, and resumed his accustomed seat in the house of God. On Wednesday, December 28, he made me a long visit. Thursday, December 29, he was at prayer meeting as usual. Sunday, January 1, between one and two o'clock in the afternoon, he fell asleep in Jesus without a struggle.

Thus the saints of God are gathering home. Entering upon this new year we should all renew our diligence and zeal, for we know not what a year may bring forth.

Our new presiding elder, Rev. D. A. Little, has chosen Canton for his home. Our first quarterly meeting was held the first Sabbath in January. Bro. Little has made a fine impression on our community as a preacher. Everyone parted with Bro. Ellis, our former presiding elder, with regret; but he has a worthy successor in Bro. Little.

W. B. LEWIS.

MOUNT OLIVET CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: I wish, through your columns, to make suitable acknowledgements, and to return my thanks to the good people of Satartia and vicinity for their many favors received since my return from Conference. On the day before Christmas they sent to the parsonage a wagon-load of all kinds of good things, eatable and wearable—something for everyone of us. Dry goods, notions, canned goods, groceries, fancy goods, cakes, mince pies, etc., were piled up on the chairs, on the beds, on the tables, until it looked like I was going to set up a little store. I have read of "storms" in the ADVOCATE, but never was exactly in one before that I know of. If this was one, why, then, "storms may howl, and clouds may gather." Although I never remember to have been in a storm before, yet, for the past two years that I have been on this circuit, there has been a steady breeze from all quarters. Many good things have come in, and continue to come from every direction.

In return for the good things from the people of Satartia, I want to do the generous thing myself—that is, to take Bros. Little and Huntley down there and give them some good preaching. You see, I read "Robin Hood" when I was a little fellow, and its pernicious effect still cleaves to me. Moral to the boys and girls: Don't read such books as Robin Hood and the like, or it will make you as bad as I am—wanting to take the sweat out of Bro. Huntley and Presiding Elder Little to do a generous act in my own name. Oh, depravity, what a hold thou hast upon us!

God speed the ADVOCATE and all the preachers in our united efforts to battle for the right and the salvation of souls this year! In some counties, Yazoo among the number, the great battle for prohibition has to be fought over again this year. We have had prohibition two years. Its beneficial effects are seen and acknowledged by all who are not blind or one-eyed; but it is astonishing how many one-eyed people there are, though. Some were born so, I suppose. Others have had one eye jabbed out by the rum seller. Some close one eye a-purpose. They don't want to see with it. Appetite has gotten the better of them. The rum seller would like to jab out both of the eyes of his victims, and make swine of them at once; but that would make them too stupidly indifferent to his cause. He wants them to see his version of the matter, so he can use them as tools to serve his purpose. Poor, deluded, one-eyed victims! There are those who predict, with seeming satisfaction, that this county will "go wet next time." Well, I tell them the weal or woe of your sons and daughters, now growing up, is wrapped up in the question, indifferent as you may seem to it. Yes, the damnation or salvation of hundreds of boys will turn on that very question this year. And the girls—they will some day be the wives of those boys.

Some of the—did I say, some—all, of the arguments that I have heard used by the whisky bloats in favor of their cause are too silly to be worthy of refutation, or so absurd as to be beneath the notice of a circus clown. They don't even amount to a good joke.

But I did not start out to write about anything but the "storm," and here I am with four pages. I must have thought that I was on my sermon for the Examining Committee. If this is too long, it is a very easy matter for you to shorten it, though. Scissors work faster than pen, and the waste-basket beats them. So, good-bye. Yours truly,

S. J. COTTON.

CHULAHOMA CIRCUIT, NORTH-MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: A brief report from this charge may not be uninteresting to some of the readers of the ADVOCATE. I am just entering upon my second years' work in the Chulahoma circuit. I have been warmly received by the people. I have found this a very pleasant field of labor, though not a strong work financially. The people are highly cultured, intellectually, morally, and religiously. This was once one of the wealthiest portions of Mississippi. But not so now. The generous soil that was such an abundant source of income has been mostly washed away during the last fifteen or twenty years. I suppose that land in this section has depreciated in value seventy-five per cent. during the last ten or fifteen years. In consequence of this a spirit of discontent has been prevalent, causing many to move away. By such removals the church has been greatly weakened.

Last year, in response to Cousin Cate's call, the ladies of the charge, under the superintendency of Miss Josie Bloodworth and Mrs. J. W. Sharp, made a most beautiful and valuable crazy quilt, which was sold according to directions of the originator of the scheme. But so little was realized that I did not report it separately at Conference. (The people had already paid nearly two hundred per cent. more for foreign missions than they had paid the previous year.) It was then proposed to sell the quilt again and make the preacher a present of the proceeds as well as the quilt. This was done, giving some timely strength to the preacher's purse, and putting his family in possession of an article both useful and ornamental, which is very much appreciated, not merely for its intrinsic value, but for what it expressed as a gift from the noble ladies of this charge.

Wall Hill and Chulahoma have each had a splendid Christmas tree. Both were occasions of much innocent pleasure to the people. This preacher was very handsomely remembered on both occasions. May the Lord help me to be more useful to this people this year than I was last year!

I will do all I can for the ADVOCATE. It should be in every Methodist family in the Conference. Yours fraternally,

J. M. HUGGIN.

WALL HILL, Mississippi.

When a day of sickness and pain comes to us, it is a day which the Great Teacher, who is also the Great Lover, calls us to pass in his School of Patience to learn the Lesson of Resignation which he alone can make at once clear and sweet. It repeats—he repeats—the scriptural mandate, "Submit yourselves to God." (James iv, 7.)—Christian Index.

Temperance.

Arrogance of the Saloon.

The gravest problem in municipal government is to secure honest and economical administration. Our great and rapidly growing cities are obliged to spend very large sums for public improvements of various kinds; and wherever public money is to be spent, there we may be sure we will find men anxious to have a hand in the business. For somehow there has grown up a false code of honesty in the public mind; the thief who steal outright from a private citizen is condemned and punished, while he who steals from the treasury through cunning contracts, sharp practice in bidding, and other schemes unfortunately far too familiar, suffers no loss of social or business standing.

The opportunities of many municipal office-holders to obtain profit out of office holding has led dishonest and disreputable men to seek such positions with eagerness; and the saloon has been the most potent influence by which they could compass their wishes. The result has been that there is not one of the larger cities of the land but has become the victim of an organized scheme of plunder. The erection of public buildings, the paving of streets, and every other municipal improvement has been made to cost far more than it would had it been done for a private individual; and our total municipal debt is many millions greater than it would otherwise be, on account of these wholesale stealings.

It has become common for men who are notoriously corrupt to seek and obtain office in our great cities. They do not appeal to the honest, respectable classes for their support: they know that this would be unavailing. But they turn to the saloons, and through their means control the ignorant and degraded, and the distinctively vicious classes of the community—classes whose numerical strength would not be so great were it not for the saloons themselves. Rum is the parent of poverty, ignorance, vice, degradation; and where the saloon flourishes most, there we find the greatest number of these dangerous classes.

The rum power has not been slow to recognize the power it thus wields in politics. The men who are rivals for the saloon support have courted and coddled the rum power to obtain place, until it has become fully cognizant that it can control municipal politics. And it has not been slow to make the most of this advantage. No man, as a rule, who is known to be an active opponent of the rum power can obtain municipal office of any kind. If he can not be defeated for nomination in the caucuses, he is overthrown at the polls. Hence men who in their hearts resent the tyranny are nevertheless compelled by their own political ambition to keep silent, and even if they do not do the bidding of the rum power will not actively oppose it, knowing that the knell of their aspirations will be struck by the first show of opposition on their own part.

This has gone on until the dangers of this growing supremacy of the rum power has become clearly apparent. The saloonists and their allies have so centralized their power, and are so conscious of their strength, that in many of our cities they bid defiance to all law, wherever it may interfere with their schemes of profit and plunder. They are willing that all laws shall be strictly enforced except those which concern themselves. They regard themselves as a privileged class—as above and beyond all law. There is not a liquor law upon the statute books of any State or any city that they will not disregard. They feel secure in their law-breaking, because they know the power they wield in politics. The official who does enforce the law against them will be driven from power at the next election. They feel themselves stronger than the sentiment in favor of law or order, and hence ignore whatever laws they may choose with impunity. They even have abrogated the Fourth Commandment, because Sunday is one of the best days in the whole week wherein to sell rum.

So universal is this disregard of law by the rum power, so fully is it recognized, that it is even made an argument against the enactment of restrictive laws. The most oft-reiterated plea against restrictive law is: "Oh, you can't enforce the law!" Things have come to a sad pass, indeed, in this land, when a class of the community has become so defiant that citizens give its lawlessness as a reason for the non-enactment of legislation!

The rum power is one of the two parties responsible for this state of things. The other is the people themselves. They have been playing the role of cowards in this struggle, and have allowed the infernal tyranny of the rum power full swing. It is time for an awakening, and we are glad to see the signs of its coming. The rum power has gotten too arrogant. It has driven things with too high a hand. A reaction is setting in rapidly against the domination of the saloon in politics.—Toledo Blade.

Neal Dow and His Prohibition Crusade.—Gen. Neal Dow, now nearly eighty-four, is almost as youthful and as fresh as at forty. Sitting in his study at Portland, Me., he lately told a friend how it happened that he first undertook the big task of abolishing the liquor traffic. "I have never told the story in public," he said, "nor has it ever been printed. As you know," he went on, "it was a good many years ago. I was sitting in this same house one evening quite late. In answering a knock at the door I found a lady, whom I knew very well as the wife of a government official in this city. He was a periodical drunkard, and on this very night was downtown on a spree. His wife wished me to get him home quietly, because if he was drunk next day he might lose his position. I started out, and found him in the back room of one of the down-town saloons. That was in the days of license in Maine. I said to the keeper in a quiet way: 'I wish you would sell no more liquor to Mr. Blank.' 'Why, Mr. Dow,' he said, 'this is my business; I must supply my customers.' 'That all may be,' I replied, 'but here is this gentleman with a large family depending on him for support. If he goes to his office to-morrow, drunk, he will lose his place. I wish you would sell him no more.' He became somewhat angry, told me that he, too, had a family to support; that he had a license to sell liquor to whomsoever he pleased—and that he didn't care to have me meddling in his business. 'So then' you have a license?' said I, 'and you support your family by destroying that man's. We'll see about this.' I went home thoroughly determined to devote my life to suppressing the liquor traffic in the best way possible. The Maine law originated in that rum-shop.

Two Hundred Thousand Stumbling-Blocks—Where? In these United States. These are to be found in every city, town, village and on every road-side. They are drinking saloons; in no sense beneficial to the country, but to every sense a positive and continuous detriment. Their existence can not be justified by any argument based upon justice, necessity or mercy. They impede the progress of civilization, education and religion, and obstruct all material and moral advancement. No early training or social habits can be justifiably quoted, as a reason, why these hindrances to everything that tends to elevate and bless humanity should be permitted to exist. No human statute should throw around their iniquitous traffic its brazen palladium and thus protect them from the sweep of a Christian indignation. Surely it is time, and also the imperative duty of all friends of humanity, to unite and to demand of our legislators all over our land a suppression of these saloons, and to say to them in the language of God's own Word, "Cast ye up, cast ye up, prepare the way, take up the stumbling-block out of the way of my people."—Pulpit Treasury.

How They Allure.—The New York Sun recently gave a description of some of the leading bar-rooms of New York City, showing some of them to contain from $60,000 to $100,000 each in paintings, statuary, etc., to make the path to perdition attractive and fascinating. These saloons are the product and legitimate outgrowth of the license system. The plea that license "restricts" is utterly false and fallacious. The young men who frequent these gilded pathways to hell are first assured that these places are licensed, legalized, and protected by the strong right arm of the law, and hence are legitimate and necessary to the public good and welfare. One of these gilded saloons will do more to lure souls down to eternal ruin than a hundred "low dives," that only take the cast-off victims when so debauched of character as not to be fit to associate with the new "customers" which these more "respectable" saloons are constantly receiving. The gilded "saloon must go" in order that the young men may be saved. God and truth and right are stronger than all the world combined.—Temperance Advocate.

The Saloon and the Home.—The first is the enemy of the second, while the second is a necessity of society. The home is the place where the family instituted by God has its permanent resting-place, its sacred enclosure, its scene of increase, growth and culture. That which tends to injure home has its origin from beneath and not from above, because God would not stultify himself by establishing two institutions, the one contrary to the other. The home is evidently of God, because it tends to the carrying forward of his purposes with our race, but the saloon is just as evidently not of God, because its influence in every direction tends to injure and destroy the very objects which God designs to effect by the home. Why then should the saloon, man's invention for gain, be permitted any longer to exist when its influence upon the home is evil and only evil and that continually?—Pulpit Treasury.

Strong preachers have ever been Bible preachers. The old reformers drew their weapons from the heavenly armory. The sermons of Bunyan, and Baxter, and Flavel, and men of their stamp, were full of God—instinct with living doctrines. Their very garb was after the Scripture pattern. Whitefield, as a custom, read the Bible with "Henry's Commentary," day by day, on his knees, praying over every sentence, line, and word. Edwards and Davies were mighty in the Scriptures. Of Chalmers, it has been said that his sermons "held the Bible in solution." Preachers who saturate their sermons with the Word of God never wear out. The manna which they bring is pure, and sweet, and freshly gathered. It never cloys. God's Word is deep, and he who studies it will ever have something new. He will never be dull, for the words of the Bible are strong, living words, and its images and descriptions are flowers of eloquence. Apt citations clench the passages of the preacher's discourse, and give sanction, dignity, positiveness, authority to it. And they shed light into his subject, like windows in houses.

Can a Man Swallow a Cannon-ball?

Well, "that depends." He can if his throat is large enough, and the cannon-ball not too large. The question really seems worthy of some consideration in view of the size of some of the pills that are prescribed for suffering humanity. Why not throw them "to the dogs" and take Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets? Small, sugar-coated, purely vegetable, perfectly harmless, in glass and always fresh.

"Everyone wishes to have truth on his side," says Whately; "but it is not everyone who sincerely wishes to be on the side of truth." A vital difference. Those who wish to have truth on their side, are apt to persuade themselves that what is on their side is truth, and thus to give the authority of truth to their error. Those who wish to be on the side of truth, search honestly to discover on which side truth is, and, if need be, renounce their error to embrace truth. Caiaphas may be the outcome of the first process: only the second process has for its outcome a Paul.

What is Scrofula

It is that impurity in the blood, which, accumulating in the glands of the neck, produces unsightly lumps or swellings; which causes painful running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which develops ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or many other manifestations usually ascribed to "humors." It is a more formidable enemy than consumption or cancer alone, for scrofula combines the worst possible features of both. Being the most ancient, it is the most general of all diseases or affections, for very few persons are entirely free from it.

How can it be cured? By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the cures it has accomplished, often when other medicines have failed, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. For all affections of the blood Hood's Sarsaparilla is unequalled, and some of the cures it has effected are really wonderful. If you suffer from scrofula in any of its various forms, be sure to give Hood's Sarsaparilla a trial.

Briefs.

After all the "science of religion" and "philosophy of ethics," about which we hear so much nowadays, we incline to the opinion that the whole matter had been well digested and assimilated by the mind of the man who said: "A handful of help is worth a cart-load of pity."

In our statistical report of the membership of our church in Louisiana we gave the figures as reported to us by the statistical secretary; but after our interview with him some delinquent brethren handed in their statistics, and this greatly altered the figures. The whole number of members is 16,109.

A brother, in whose judgment we have great confidence, said to us a few days ago that the best thing the pastors of the various churches could do for the good of the country is to circulate Dr. Josiah Strong's book, "Our Country," and induce the people to read it. The general indifference of church members to the great questions of the day is a very serious matter. Twelve millions of Christians in this land ought to exert a greater power for the welfare of the nation than they at present do. The responsibility is on them, and must be met or answered for.

We call the attention of every steward in our church to an article in another column entitled, "The Weekly General Assessment Plan." We think Bro. Reed has done good by giving an account of how it works in his church: and we remember that Bro. Singleton, his pastor, read a fine report at Conference. Every effort that takes a step forward in solving the financial problem of the church is one step nearer the millenium. Study Bro. Reed's plan, and, if you think it good, adopt it and work it faithfully. Any plan that proposes to induce everybody to give something every week ought to be tried and not pooh-poohed.

An exchange has this interesting note:

"De Lesseps, who recently celebrated his eighty-third birthday, can look around him and see but very few men of anything like equal eminence who are as old as he. The German Emperor is 90, Dr. Dollinger is 88, Moltke and Bancroft, the historian, are each 87, Kossuth is 85, and Prof. Owen is 83. Of sovereigns, the Pope is 77, and King William of the Netherlands is well on in his 71st year. Of statesmen, Gladstone is 79, Mr. Bright is 76, Prince Bismarck is 72, M. Jules Grevy is 74, M. Léon Say and M. Leroyer are each 71; Lord Selborne is 75, Sir Rutherford Alcock is 78, Lord Sherbrooke is 76, and Lord Granville is 72. Of generals, MacMahon is 79, Lebœuf is 78, and Bazaine and Cialdini are each 76. Of poets, Lord Tennyson is 78, Mr. Browning is 75, and Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes is 78. Of musicians, Verdi is 73. Of engineers, Lord Armstrong is 77, and Sir John Hawkshaw is 76. Of painters, Meissonier is 72; and, finally, of showmen, Barnum is 77. Perhaps, however, M. Chevreul, who is fairly upon his 102d year, ought not to be omitted.

Tell your neighbor that his house can not be comfortably furnished without a copy of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE coming in every week. This valuable piece of furniture can be had at 112 Camp street, New Orleans, for $2. There is no real comfort to a Methodist family in Mississippi or Louisiana without it.

Young J. Allen, the Missionary.

Dr. Allen reached our city last Saturday evening from Texas. He spoke twice in Carondelet Street Church on Sunday to large audiences; and on Monday, in the same church, he made an address to the women on the different phases of woman's work in the foreign field. Our people have been fortunate in the privilege thus given them to hear what has been done by mission work in China under the eye of this observant and faithful missionary. They have now clearer views of China—its people; its customs, its laws, its government, and the progress and present attitude of our work in that great empire—than they could possibly obtain from any other source. Dr. Allen's long residence among that people, his intimate association with all the other missionaries working in that field, and his connection with government officials in educational work, have all conspired to give him a broad and comprehensive view of the present aspect of affairs; and his statesman-like conception of the needs of the work, and of the agencies to be used to meet those necessities, render him an efficient leader, whose voice should be heard by all the church.

From the character of his addresses, containing, as they do, so much valuable information in regard to the whole East, and also in regard to the deficiencies of our work there, we judge that Dr. Allen's visit home and his tour throughout the bounds of the home church is a very important part of that providence by which the Lord, at this special time, is endeavoring to arouse us to a proper appreciation of our high privileges in sending his blessed gospel abroad to those who need it. One of our great faults is, that we fail to study the developments of providence; and, therefore, not seeing the "open doors," we do not enter upon works to which God calls us, and hence lose the rewards which always come to the watchful and observant.

We do sincerely trust that our people everywhere will catch a new enthusiasm from the platform addresses of our faithful missionary, and that they will respond heartily and liberally to his earnest appeals for help. And we have to say to them just what Paul said to the Corinthians on the subject of liberality: "Therefore, as ye abound in everything, in faith, in utterance, and knowledge, and in all diligence, and in your love to us, see that ye abound in this grace also."

One of the most thrilling episodes occurred during Dr. Allen's address on Sunday night. Having heard that Capt. Wyman, who was in command of the ship, "Seaman's Bride," in which he made his first voyage to China, was in the congregation, Dr. Allen asked him to come to the front; and the meeting of these two men, in the presence of the vast audience, after so long a separation, was a most impressive scene. Capt. Wyman's presence during the recital of the trials and dangers and triumphs of that voyage added no little to its interest in the minds of the hearers.

The Suffering Christ.

BY "GILDEROY."

In your issue for January 12 I find a thoughtful and suggestive article, by Rev. J. D. Cameron, on "The Agony in the Garden.—Its Cause."

It is not my purpose to answer the question raised by Bro. Cameron. I do not know the cause of the agony in the garden, only that it was a part and parcel of the suffering Christ came to endure. Bro. Cameron says: "We must bear in mind that it was only the humanity that suffered agony. Divinity can not suffer. To suppose this, is to question the infinite perfections of the divine character. Suffering argues imperfection." Now, is this true? Is it true that God can not suffer, did not suffer, and does not suffer now? Is it true that suffering argues imperfection? I ask these questions not to answer them, but to provoke thought, to stimulate inquiry. The breaking of the Father's heart in the gift of his only begotten Son to die for us seems to imply the greatest suffering. What it cost God in heart-agony to do this seems to be the reason why we should give up all for God. The whole transaction, from first to last, seems to have put a great strain on the divine heart. God saw the need, and God laid the plan; but I do not like to think its execution cost God's heart no pain. The agony of the Son in that garden surely touched the Father's heart deeply. It would have done this had he been only a man. God sympathizes with man, feels for man; how much more for his divine Son?

It may be well to consider that the agony of the garden was purely spiritual, a sorrow of the soul, if not of the divine nature of Christ. The time had not come for the physical suffering of our Lord, and, yet, the agony of the inner man caused him to sweat, as it were, great drops of blood. It was the "fineness," if not the "divineness," of the nature of our Lord that made him capable of such agony as no other man ever endured. Instead of "suffering arguing imperfection," it is one of the very things that argues the perfection and purity of natures as we understand them. The purer people are, the more they become like our blessed Lord, the more they partake of the divine nature, the more acutely they suffer—particularly in the inner man. The facts, as we see them, are against this statement. Sin blunts; grace refines. The finest nature our world has ever known endured the agony in the garden. It was so great because the divine sufferer was so capable.

Again: Christ had in him two whole and distinct natures—the Godhead and the Manhood—once united, never to be divided; and, yet, in our reasoning, we often allow Christ to be God only, or man only, or God and man both, just as it happens to suit our convenience and our preconceived opinions. It seems to me he was God and man united in the garden and on the cross, and now on the mediatorial throne; and I confess I can not see or understand how the inner human Christ could suffer without the God-Christ suffering, too. I affirm nothing, only tentatively and suggestively. The union of two natures in one is a profound mystery too deep for human ken, and yet clearly revealed in the divine Word. In some way sin and salvation involved the divine nature and divine character, as well as the nature and character of the sinner. It was a question too deep for any but God himself, as to how God could be just and yet justify the ungodly, or forgive sin. Somehow Mercy and Justice must harmonize, and Justice and Mercy be made to kiss each other. The nature of God and the character of God were involved, hence the need for a God-Christ to save, to make it possible for God to save without an infraction of his justice on the one hand, or his mercy on the other.

The agony of the garden and the suffering of the cross lay deeper than the human nature of our Lord.

SENATOBIA, Mississippi.

The first week in April is set apart as a "week of self-denial and prayer," and the collections during that week are to be held separate and go to the relief of the General Board of Missions. It will take a great deal of earnest praying to get ready for that important week. Are you getting ready?

The North Mississippi Conference Minutes.

ANOTHER OPEN LETTER FROM THE PUBLISHER.

I have had quite a number of letters from brethren in regard to the Minutes—some of them quite complimentary, and some complaining. I thank those brethren for their kind words. To the others I have only this to say: I do not know who paid, nor how much, to the publication of our Minutes. No list was given to me; and when the work was done, I gave instruction to send some to every member of the Conference, assuming that every man was entitled to them. I did not think that brethren paid to get just so many for just so much. If you get less or more than some other brother, it was an accident of mailing. No intentional discrimination was made. I do not mind being fussed at; but when I take a "thanky job" and pay for the privilege of doing it, as I have done, I feel that I have a sort of right to fuss back. To those who did not get many, I will say, I have Minutes on hand yet. If you got less than eight copies, send me postage, and I will send you a few more. You must excuse me for not paying out any more money, for I am already $23 out on them.

By the way, I have been asked what the job cost. The printing cost $135 for 1,500 copies; postage and expressage, $27—making $162. Resources: Cash paid me at Conference, $108 95; advertisement, $25—making $133 95, leaving a deficit of $28 05.

Perhaps you will say I was extravagant. Doubtless so. But you wanted a decent work; and I believe you have it. Brethren say they are the best we ever had. You wanted it done in the Publishing House—which was right; but it costs more to do rule and figure work at Nashville than in country offices. But it is always well done. And you got it on time—a thing you never did before. I told you at Conference, if you will remember, that it would cost $150 or $160 to get the Minutes.

Now, dear brethren, you have a full statement; "henceforth let no man trouble me." I have done the best I could; and I will vote next year that all these complaining brethren be made a committee to get out the Minutes, and they will know something at the end of it that they don't know now. In the meantime, if any brother has not gotten any Minutes, let him write to me and send postage, and I will send him some.

Your brother,

T. B. MALONE.

What Our Papers Say.

Once in awhile the Independent prints a good religious editorial. In a late issue was an article on "The Holy Spirit and the Prayer Meetings," an extract from which is this:

The first meeting together of the disciples after the ascension was in obedience to the command of Christ, for the purpose of being baptized by the Spirit. While they were waiting and praying, the Spirit was poured out upon them, and they were all filled with his presence and power; with a divine enthusiasm and a burning love of the truth. Shortly afterward they were again in prayer, "and the place was shaken where they were assembled together; and they were all filled with the Spirit." This would seem to indicate the close relation between united prayer and the Spirit of God, and sets the example of waiting upon and expecting his presence whenever Christians are assembled for prayer. It is not necessary that we should look for or receive the external manifestations of the Spirit, as in cloven tongues or in the physical shaking of the place where prayer is made. These were phenomenal manifestations of the Spirit's presence to disciples who until then had known nothing of his presence, in any such way as he then came to them, or as he manifests himself to us now; but no prayer meeting ought to convene without the expectation of his presence as making one among the disciples and as being essential to the very end for which the meeting is held. It is thus that Jesus fulfills his promise to be present with his disciples wherever and whenever two or three of them are met together in his name.

This, from the Southwestern Methodist, may be a hit at you; therefore, read it with a great care:

The man who has eccentric views of piety is sure to distrust the piety of others, and, finding only one in a hundred who is in sympathy with his eccentricities, he mourns the low estate of Zion and the general corruption of the ministry. Such a man prescribes for the church, "prayer, more prayer." That were well if prayer, divorced from the duties that daily press upon us, did not cease to be prayer. But of one who prays much, or claims to pray much, and one who is most prompt in kind deeds, few will be at a loss to declare which is more spiritual. There are people who formally pray for the missionary, whose prayers are, and will remain, an abomination in God's sight until they give more of their money to help the missionary; and there are people praying in old dilapidated churches whose prayers will not be heard in the house of God until they honor God with their substance by putting his house in better condition. Some who make loud professions and talk much in public meetings, need to observe the weightier matters of law, justice, truth and mercy.

In an article, on "Memorizing Scripture," the St. Louis Advocate, after speaking with approval of the present methods of teaching in our Sunday-schools, recalls a "good old custom, the decadence of which is to be deplored." The reference is to the custom of requiring Sunday-school scholars to commit to memory verses of Scripture every Sabbath. We have heard one of our Bishops deploring the same decadence; and we respectfully call the attention of our Sunday-school teachers to these words from the St. Louis Advocate:

The practice of memorizing Scripture had obvious advantages. Purely as a literary exercise, its tendency is decidedly good, for, as every scholar knows, the English Bible has created the English literature. The language of the King James' version is the purest specimen of genuine English ever written, and its crisp, curt style is a model of concise fullness, which, with changes to suit modern words and expressions, may be profitably imitated by any writer. Aside from the mere verbiage, every reader of the Bible must have been frequently impressed with its aptness and elegance of illustration, a quality which has commended it to the careful study of any and all who proposed, either through the press or from the rostrum, to influence the public mind. To a literary man, the study of the Bible is indispensable, even if his object be no higher than the establishment of a correct literary taste, for it should never be forgotten that the Bible contains the best example of history, the cleverest presentations of argument, and the highest flight of poetic fancy the literary world has even known. But, more than all, the memorizing of Scripture is the best training in practical Christianity that can be given. Texts learned in childhood are never forgotten, and often, in after years, recur to mind to soothe and comfort when words from other sources are vain and empty. In view of all these considerations, it might be well for Sunday-school teachers to give more prominence to Scripture learning.

The Arkansas Methodist, discussing the design of the Church Congress, recently held in Washington City—viz.: to promote a closer union of Christians, and greater harmony in church work—thus states the position of Methodism on the subject of "church unity:"

For more than a century Methodism has stood right where the earnest men of the Church Congress are trying to get. Methodism has always said: "Whosoever will do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother and sister and mother." Upon the part of Methodism this has not been a mere empty sentiment. It is well known that members, in good standing in other communions, are received upon certificate without re-baptism. Ministers from other churches are received without reordination. We fully recognize the official acts of other denominations. With us the unity of the church is a glorious reality. There is no necessity for one great ecclesiastical organization; all that is needed is a recognition of the Christian character of each other—the only test being loyalty to the Lord Christ.

Notes.

Father Chiniquy, in his book, "Fifty Years in the Church of Rome," speaking of the instruction he received in a Roman Catholic college, says: "The gods of the heathen spoke to us daily by their apostles and disciples—Homer, Virgil, Pindar, Horace,—and the God of the Christians had not permission to say a single word to us in that college!" Are not many Protestant colleges following the same steps? We give our children Paganism in all its forms in our colleges and leave Christianity for them to learn after they come out! Is it any wonder that our schools are so hard to keep going?

Congress is likely to act in one way or another on the liquor question. There are many members of the Lower House who are in favor of some sort of action, and the Senate is considered by the liquor men as adverse to their interests. Several bills have been already prepared and, no doubt, will be presented in due time. The bill to prohibit the traffic in the District of Columbia, it is said, is favored by many Senators, and will probably pass that body. With the Supreme Court solid for prohibition and the Senate favorable, the friends of that measure have only to work on in earnestness and hope, and the victory will be secured.

"What God has joined together, let no man put asunder." If we sever that which God has united, we lay claim to a superior wisdom; but the end of the experiment always discloses the true state of the case. God has joined faith and works; so joined them that a true faith issues in good works. If they are separated, faith is destroyed and works rendered valueless. Dogma is valuable only as it leads up to practical ethics, and ethics of the right kind are simply the flowers of dogma. "Faith without works is dead," but by "works faith is made perfect." The credenda and the agenda balance each other in the Christian system. Paul says, "We are created in Christ Jesus for good works."

We have often thought of putting in a "note" in reference to "condensing;" but the Michigan Christian Advocate has done it so neatly that we copy and ask your attention to it:

If some person or convention thinks you have delivered an extra good sermon or read a superior essay and asks you to send it in for publication, don't do it. But give them added evidence of your common sense by sitting down and condensing that sermon or essay into a bright, terse, solid column article. Save just the juicy marrow. We like to get such articles. And the people like to read them. We can not truthfully say as much for the sermon essay sort that spreads out over three or four columns of space. It's not always easy work to boil things down so—not till you get used to it. Try it. If you don't succeed, come around and borrow our patent condenser.

There are thousands of Christians in our cities who are actually asleep in the enjoyment of their religion in their comfortable churches. They have lost sight of the great fact that Christianity, if true to its aim in carrying out the programme of its Author, must be aggressive. Reclining in their luxurious pews, Sunday after Sunday, and listening complacently to a favorite preacher, they are dreaming away the day of their opportunity. Religion seems to her as an opiate upon their spiritual lives. When on every corner the cry is heard, "No man cares for our souls," these dreamy Christians, like the priest and Levite of old, pass so far away on the other side as not to hear the terrible moan of agony. Are such Christians "the workmanship of God, created in Christ Jesus for good works?" Is the man who never does any aggressive work for the cause of Christ, entitled to the name of Christian? It is just these sleeping, dreaming Christians to whom Christ will say: "Inasmuch as ye did it not to the least of these, ye did it not to me." As pastors, let us try to wake up these deluded members of our church. Nero fiddled while Rome was burning, but such people are asleep while hell is enlarged to meet them at their coming. The idea of such people having an evangelical faith is an absurdity.

Personals.

In a private letter, a brother in Mississippi hits the nail on the head, and drives it home," when he says: "It is better to have people want you to write, than to want you to quit writing." It seems so to most people.

Rev. H. R. Withers has a beautiful and just tribute to the memory of Dr. Winfield in the last number of the Arkansas Methodist. There are few such men as Dr. Winfield was.

Mr. Caleb Foote has been editor of Salem (Mass.) Gazette since 1825. He has been connected with that paper since 1817. He is eighty-five years old.

The late Sir William McArthur, of London, left $250,000 to the Wesleyan Societies of England and provided for much more to come to them on the death of his widow.

Our friend, R. A. Smith, of Arcadia, La., has sent us a beautiful photograph of his E. A. Seminary building, and it now adorns our office. We have long known Principal Smith, and believe him to be a first-class teacher, and his Methodism was "bred in his bones." We wish him and his Seminary all success.

William E. Baker, of the sewing machine firm, Grover & Baker, died recently on his farm at Wellesley, Mass. He is said to have spent large sums in gratifying his eccentric tastes in all kinds of fantastic things upon his farm.

M. D. Babcock, the inventor of the fire extinguishing apparatus which bears his name, died in an almshouse, in San Francisco, December 21, aged seventy.

Senator Walthal has been unanimously re-elected United States Senator from Mississippi, for the term commencing March 4, 1889.

It is reported that Consul Brigham, at Puerto del Norte, has been appointed Consul at Kingston, Jamaica.

Hon. S. S. Cox, of New York, was elected Speaker pro tem. of the House during the illness of Speaker Carlisle.

Rev. Clement E. Babb, formerly of the Herald and Presbyter, has just closed his thirty-fifth year of continuous editorial work.

We were delighted with a visit last week from Rev. J. B. Laurens (Uncle Larry), of Virginia. He is just out from an eight months' spell of severe illness and was on his way to the City of Mexico, where he will spend at least two months.

A private note from Dr. Tillett, of the Hymn Book Committee, says:

"The MS. of the new hymn book is now simply awaiting the final touches of a musical expert, and it will, we trust, be turned over before long to the printer and pressed right through."

According to figures made up by Rev. W. S. Robertson, the Christian world raises over $11,000,000 a year for Protestant missions.

How to Obtain a Valuable Book.

Wishing to have in my library the invaluable McClintock & Strong's "Cyclopædia of Biblical, Theological and Ecclesiastical Literature," I wrote to the Publishing House for prices; and the reply was, "We can give no reduction." Being very anxious also for Johnson's "Universal Scientific Cyclopædia," I wrote to our Publishing House for terms; and the same reply came: "We can give no reduction."

I have procured both of these Cyclopædias; and the publishers wish me to sell my ministerial brethren other sets. Every scholar knows their value. They are mines of the purest gold. I am prepared to offer the brethren of your patronizing Conferences the following terms:

McClintock & Strong (twelve volumes), cloth; publisher's price, $60. Library, sheep, (twelve volumes); publisher's price, $72. The cloth set I will furnish for $50, and the Library, sheep, for $60. Johnson's "Universal Scientific Cyclopædia" (eight volumes); publisher's price—cloth—$48; sheep, $56. I will furnish eight volumes, cloth, for $40, sheep, $46.

Should the brethren wish to read a suggestive and spiritual book, let them order, through our House, Dr. A. B. Bruce's work, called "The Humiliation of Christ in Its Physical, Ethical and Official Aspect."

The iniquity of the saloon power is daily becoming more daring. It is known to many that twenty-three States and Territories have laws requiring temperance instruction in the public schools. The saloon power is now making an effort to nullify these laws. A circular sent out from Boston by prominent clergymen contains these significant words:

Desperate endeavors are now being made by the liquor dealers and bookpublishers friendly to them to nullify this instruction by introducing text-books which do not comply with the law, and which, by showing only the evils of an excessive use of intoxicants, practically encourage moderate drinking, and in some cases positively commend it by describing its exhilarating effects.

This saloon power seems to have taken in hand to repeal or modify all the good laws in the statute book; and will the people have it so? Will the people deliberately go to ruin with their eyes open?

EAST MISSISSIPPI FEMALE COLLEGE,
Meridian, Miss.,

Opens its doors for a few more pupils on January 30, or February 1, 1888. Those who desire to enter then for the five months' session will please apply immediately to secure places. Unexcelled advantages in Literary Department, in music, art and industrial arts. Enlarged facilities, patronage increased beyond previous years. A fine health-resort from malarial districts. One of the most delightful schools for Southern girls in the South. Your daughter needs an education; here is the place for her. Address at once.

A Glimpse of Japanese Life.

We are permitted to publish the following extract from a private letter of Mrs. Daisy Lambuth, which will give to our readers some idea of a "high tea" in Japan:

Well, we have formed a ladies' society, and over twenty were present at our first meeting. It is a society for improving ourselves in every way—reading, music, cooking, etc. We had a very nice set of ladies and schoolgirls present. The school is growing right along, but has not reached its old number yet. They have singing, then the Bible, next they memorize a verse daily in English and Japanese.

We were rather surprised to hear from Mrs. Y. that our schools here were only for English, no Bible. It could not be more opposite. The Japanese are anxious for the Bible. In all our mission schools and night schools, though they pay, the Bible is given to them in some cases one-third of the time. Mr. Mosely and Mr. Waters both have large Bible classes.

Now, for our feast: One of the school-girls had us all around to her home (a large restaurant) for a four o'clock meal. We were invited up stairs into two large rooms, beautiful, of course; carved works, unexpected shelves, beautiful flower vases and stands. The lady of the house did not come in until just before the feast began. Ten of us in all, we were placed in a semi-circle, with velvet cushions under us on the floor. First three large dishes or bowls upon lacquered stools were brought in, and the hostess helped us with her own hands. First we had pomelos, sparrows and green orange peel preserved, and fish-ball and boiled chestnuts. Then came a splendid soup of custard with eels—you might call it egg soup; then fish (the pie) with turnips, greens, and several kinds of vegetables peculiar to Japan; then soups of three kinds of sea-weed—the only thing I did not like. The soup bowls were beautiful lacquer, and the dishes were put on a little lacquered stand of five inches in height before us. None of the dishes were removed, so we could return to any dish we liked. Rice and oysters cooked together came next, and when we finished our rice, tea was poured into the bowl. We washed our chopsticks, drank the tea, and were finished. I forgot that first we had tea and red bean cakes and sugar. Between each course we had music, singing, and two dancing girls to perform for us. Their dancing was wonderful. How they ever take such postures I do not see. We began to eat about four and finished about seven, and my feet did not hurt one bit when I got up. Japanese food is ever so much better than the Chinese. No grease about it; not so much as about our own food even.

DAISY.

The Nashville Christian Advocate, in a thoughtful article, on "Burning Strange Fire," has this paragraph, which every preacher should prayerfully ponder:

Of course, any manner of life which slights the truth that has been written by the inspiration of the Spirit grieves him away from the soul, and so it sometimes comes to pass that a man, through a morbid passion for feeling, having grieved the Holy Ghost by neglecting instruction, and being thus bereft of the only legitimate excitement of the religious sensibilities, resorts to artificial stimulation; kindles strange fire on the altar of the heart, the flame from above having been extinguished by his profane stirrings. A horrible form of this sin, and one which is, perhaps, not as uncommon as some may suppose, is the habit of some men who put strained, unwarranted, sentimental interpretations upon the Scriptures for emotional uses—handling the Word of God deceitfully to inflame the passions instead of commending themselves to every man's conscience in the sight of God by manifestation of the truth.

An Avaricious Man.

Why is an avaricious man like one with a short memory? He is always forgetting, but the wise parent never forgets Taylor's Cherokee Remedy of Sweet Gum and Mullein, the croup preventive, and cough and consumption cure.

Mansfield Female College—1888.

One hundred dollars, paid in advance, will entitle new pupils to board, tuition and music for the term beginning Monday, January 2, 1888, and ending Wednesday, June 13. Seventy-five dollars will pay board and tuition in the literary department, without music. Let those who have been attending home schools during the fall term avail themselves of this offer.

F. M. GRACE, Pres.

On our eighth page to-day will be found a striking and instructive illustration of the comparative worth of the various kinds of baking powders now in the market.

Le Conte Pear trees grown from cuttings. Apply to W. R. STUART, Ocean Springs, Miss.

Another Extraordinary Offer.

After this date we will include in our club arrangement the New York Weekly World, the price of which, including all postage, will be three dollars. This amount will entitle the subscriber to one copy of the "World's History of the United States," post paid.

This history is on a new plan. It is the record of the events of our history in the order in which they happened. There are no moralizings, no opinions put forth, no criticisms offered in regard to anything. It is not a political record merely, but one of all sorts of facts that have contributed to make our history. Discoveries, inventions, financial and literary matters, are all noted. One merit of the work is, that it can not grow old. The date of an event, when once ascertained, is fixed for all time. The book has twenty-four very good illustrations. We regard it as a valuable book for every student.

Old and new subscribers are entitled to the premium. Subscribers who have already paid will receive the History and the Weekly World one year by sending one dollar. Cash to accompany all orders.

Publisher.

The excellent showing made by the Southern Insurance Company in their annual statement, which will be found in this issue of the ADVOCATE, speaks in the highest praise of its excellent management. Although 1887 was considered a year of heavy losses in fire assurance, the Southern has, after paying adjusted losses and reserving the amount of unadjusted losses, been enabled to make connections with a surplus justifying the directory to declare the usual semi-annual dividend of four per cent. on the capital stock.

Publisher's Department.

No fraudulent advertisements will knowingly be allowed in the ADVOCATE. If one ever appears, it will be by accident.

In ordering from those whose advertisements appear in our columns please state that you have seen the same in the ADVOCATE.

P. WERLEIN.—Take notice of the new advertisement of Mr. Philip Werlein, in this issue of the ADVOCATE, and see the extra inducements offered for music and musical instruments, of which there is an immense stock to select from. The wares of the best manufactures in the world can be found on sale at this mammoth establishment, at prices unheard of and terms which bring within the reach of everyone, making an endeavor, the possibility to secure a first-class instrument. Testimonials from the first people in the South ready for exhibit, showing forth the liberality and fair dealing of the great piano house of P. Werlein, 124 Canal St., New Orleans, La.

Putting up stoves is not an aggreeable task; yet, strange to say, it seems every body who engages in it.

CHANGES.—We have quite a number of orders to change the address of subscribers; some without signatures, and others who do not give the former address. Under these circumstances, change can not be made.

Half the pepper sold consists of p's.

We would again call the attention of subscribers and agents that, in making remittances, to make them payable to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. Please keep this in remembrance.

EDUCATIONAL.

Mansfield Female College.

THE FALL TERM will open Wednesday, September 15, 1887.

The Faculty has been strengthened by the accession of Rev. M. S. Watts, of Virginia, who will have the discipline of the College, and Prof. H. F. Huddle, also of Virginia, who will manage the boarding department. Both these gentlemen are experienced in school work, and they, with their families, will add much to the social advantages of the pupils.

Other highly qualified teachers have been secured for the Literary, Music and Art Departments.

Annual rate for board and tuition from one hundred and sixty-five to one hundred and eighty-five dollars, according to class. Music, instrumental or vocal, and art lessons, five dollars per month of four weeks, extra.

Instruction in French, ten dollars per year. Use of piano for practice, ten dollars. Total expense for the year for board, tuition, and single course in music or art, paid in advance, two hundred dollars.

A deposit of five dollars for each term must be made for purchase of books and stationery. Pupils must furnish their own bed-clothing and pillow towels and toilet articles.

The College is the property of the Louisiana Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the daughters of members of this body receive free tuition in the Literary and Music Departments.

Owing to the steadily increasing patronage during the past four years, the Board of Managers have made arrangements for increasing the capacity and comfort of the buildings, and beautifying the grounds.

Mansfield is on the line of the Texas and Pacific R. R., 285 miles from New Orleans, and forty miles from Shreveport.

EPPS'S COCOA.

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

QUESTIONS.

Can you put the spider's web back in place
That once has been swept away?
Can you put the apple again on the bough
Which fell at our feet to-day?
Can you put the lily-cup back on the stem,
And cause it to live and grow?
Can you mend the butterfly's broken wing
That you crushed with a hasty blow?
Can you put the bloom again on the grape,
And the grape again on the vine?
Can you put the dewdrops back on the flowers,
And make them sparkle and shine?
Can you put the petals back on the rose?
If you could, would it smell as sweet?
Can you put the flower again on the husk,
And show me the ripened wheat?
Can you put the kernel back in the nut,
Or the broken egg in the shell?
Can you put the honey back in the comb,
And cover with wax each cell?
Can you put the perfume back in the vase
Where once it has sped away?
Can you put the corn-silk back on the corn,
Or down on the catkins? say.
You think my questions are trifling, dear?
Let me ask another one:
Can a hasty word ever be unsaid,
Or a deed unkind undone?

—Wide Awake.

The editor wishes the little cousins to know that he can not print letters unless he knows who they are from. The initials at the close of a letter will not do; he must have the full name. Now, the editor will to ask a question: Where in the Bible is "the phrase "hot springs" found?

MR. EDITOR: Seeing so many nice letters in your paper from the little cousins, I thought it would please my mamma and papa to see a letter in the ADVOCATE from me. So I will try and do my best to get one in it; for I love to please them. Mamma takes your nice paper, and I must say, it is highly appreciated by all. After they get through reading it at home, mamma sends it to me. I am going to school in Lebanon, Ohio, at the National Normal University. I have joined the Young Men's Christian Association, and go to prayer meeting every day after noon, and enjoy it splendidly. I have a brother and sister at home going to school to a young lady, whose name is Miss Sallie E. Ramage. She left here October 1, 1887, and has been teaching school ever since. I think she has twenty-five pupils or more. We also have a nice Sunday-school at home. My papa is the superintendent. I went every Sunday that I could, and so did my sister and brother. I am about fourteen hundred miles from home, and you may be sure, Mr. Editor, I would like to see my folks. I have been away from home some five or six months and expect to stay about six more. I enjoyed my Christmas very well. Mamma sent me a nice Christmas box, and you may know I relished what was therein. I trust all the little cousins enjoyed their Christmas as well as I did, if not better. We are having some very pleasant weather here for this time a year, although I expect we will get it about February. We have already had snow about ten inches deep. With many good wishes to the dear old ADVOCATE, I remain,

Yours ever,

ALVIN D. MOORE.

LEBANON, Ohio.

MR. EDITOR. Here I am again. I hope you had a merry Christmas, and I wish you a happy and pleasant New Year. My cousin has three pets: two beautiful little squirrels and the prettiest little canary. I do wish you could hear him sing. His name is Tommy. I will first answer Marcie Stevens' question: Hezekiah had fifteen years added to his life. Will also answer Wilna Chichester's question: "To the Unknown God," is found in Acts xvii, 23. With your kind permission, I will answer Olive A. Reily's question: "Eternity" is found in Isaiah lvii, 15. I will close by asking the little cousins a question: Where is "yesterday" found in the Bible? Your little friend,

EDITH M. CHICHESTER.

EDWARDS, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I would like to join the little cousins. Pa takes your valuable paper, and we all like to read it. We have no Sunday-school here now, but have preaching twice a month. Bro. L. P. Meador is our preacher. Everybody likes him so well. I will answer Olive A. Reily's question: "Eternity" is found in Isaiah lvii, 15. Ella May, the middle verse in the Bible is found in Psalms cxviii 8. I will close by asking a question: Where in the Bible is the word "choke" found?

Your little friend,

KATE MURRAY.

STEENS CREEK, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little boy that was eleven years old not long ago, and am not very much older yet. I like to read the ADVOCATE. My folks are all Methodists. I live where there was woods once—but they have axed it all out—and near McNair, on the Valley road. I go to school every day when it doesn't rain, to Miss Annie McLaurin, a nice young lady from Whitworth College; and to Sunday-school when it does not go into winter-quarters. I live on a farm where they raise corn, cotton and potatoes and have gardens. I raised a small bale of cotton last year myself; but it only weighed 135 pounds. When I sold it, I did not get much for it. I would like for some of the cousins to tell me how to make it weigh more. I think I will make my patch larger. I would like to ask a Bible question, as it seems to be in order. Who does the Bible say sold themselves for corn, and what kind of corn was it? I have seen pop-corn and Indian corn, but I never saw any that anybody would sell themselves for—except "corn-juice." I will answer the little friend's question about the longest verse in the Bible. It is found in Esther viii, 9. Where is "wash-pot" found in the Bible? The middle verse in the Bible is found in Psalms cxviii, 8. Our preacher is Bro. John A. B. Jones, of Port Gibson. Hoping I won't get in the waste-basket, I am,

Your little friend,

GEORGE A. M'DONALD.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl seven years old, and as this is my first letter to your valuable paper, I hope to see it in print. My grandma takes your nice paper and has been taking it for many years. I am always glad when it comes, for I enjoy reading the young folks' letters very much. I have been going to Sunday-school every Sunday. Grandma Davis is my teacher. We have preaching once a month. Rev. D. P. Bradford is our new minister for this year. He will preach for us on the fourth Sunday. So you see we have not heard our new preacher yet. I will close by asking the little cousins a question: Where in the Bible is the word "cheekbone" found? I am a new member that wishes to join your band.

Your little friend,

IDA S. DAVIS.

BAYOU TUNICA, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: As I have seen several letters from friends of mine in your excellent paper, I thought I would write one, too. I go to the Port Gibson Female College, and we all think it a very fine school. The president, Rev. E. H. Mounger, is a very accomplished gentleman, and we all love him very much. In the ADVOCATE, of December 29, Wilna Chichester wishes to know in what chapter and verse of Acts are found the words, "To the Unknown God." She will find them in Acts xvii, 23. I will now ask a question: In what chapter of Genesis is found the word "aprons?" I must close. Your little friend,

KATIE A. DRAKE.

PORT GIBSON, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: This is my first attempt to write to a paper. I am a little boy eleven years old. My mother takes the ADVOCATE. I delight to read the little cousins' letters. Our pastor last year was Robert B. Downer. I like him very much. Our pastor this year is Bro. Hines. I have never seen him yet. I will close by asking the little cousins a question: Where is "parlour" first mentioned in the Bible, and who were the first that were invited in to it, and by whom were they invited? I will close.

Household.

Against the Rainy Day.

However thriving and "well-off," then, a man and his wife may be, they do their children a positive wrong in failing to do them a positive good and providing them with a means of taking care of themselves should thieves break in and steal or moth and rust corrupt their treasures. For the son there are more means at hand of taking this care than for the daughter, more ways marked out, more trades; and there is always the healthy and natural occupation of caring for the land, into which he can be initiated early and almost unconsciously. But still there are a great many clean and wholesome and pleasant trades left for the girl, which may be taught and with whose practice she may be made familiar, even if she really never have to touch them afterward in the whole course of her life. Not to speak of stenography and type-writing, which, until the time when they shall be made parts of universal education, will afford means of obtaining a livelihood, there are various house-keeping, flower-raising, seed-raising, bee-raising, and kindred industries, all of which may upon need be found far more profitable than the music lessons and wild-flower painting on which so many of our young ladies rely for eking out their incomes, and beyond these there are always the industries of the needle in dress-making and bonnet-making, and the like.

Every girl who has the least art of tricking herself out with ribbons and finery can use her art advantageously in making and trimming hats, and the more ideal she may happen to be in other ways, the more fanciful and "taking" will her bonnets be; and the girl who has an eye for form, and any dexterity of finger, will make of herself a mantua-maker of more or less merit, but equal to a livelihood on necessity, with, moreover, the advantage of being able to instruct and direct her own dress-maker if she never have to use otherwise the art she has learned. However wealthy, however finely educated the young girl may be, she will find it surely accruing to her comfort and good in the future if her friends have seen fit to give her, in addition to all else they may have given, a trade, or something answering to a trade, with which she can earn her living in case of need, whether the need ever come or not.—Harper's Bazar.

AN IMPROVISED BOOK-CASE.—If you have a spare window or door which can be closed up, you can make a very handsome case for holding books, pictures and bric-a-brac, by lining it with bright colored canton-flannel, or if your purse is larger, you may use a more costly fabric. I used garnet-colored canton flannel, laid it in graceful folds, and fastened with brass-headed tacks, covered the shelves with the same, and finished their front edges with woolen fringe. I put in two shelves, and the window-sill makes the third, which also is covered.—Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

Pity the Little Ones.

The daughter of a well-known gentleman in Richmond, Va., who has turned her thirteenth year, was suffering with a bad cough night and morning, and nasal catarrh so severe as to be obliged to use seven or eight handkerchiefs per day. Five months after they used the first treatment of Compound Oxygen. They wrote for another supply, and stated that she was still improving; that the discharge from her nose, which had been so copious and so annoying, had ceased. "Her improvement is wonderful. Looks well; romps and plays out of doors." Nearly four more months expired when they wrote again, saying: "My little one has wonderfully improved. She thinks she is entirely cured."

Hundreds more of such interesting cases among children might be added. The little book of two hundred pages called the Treatise on Compound Oxygen is replete with instructive testimonials, and the history and use of the Compound Oxygen. Sent free on application to Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa.

As every lord giveth a certain livery to his servants, charity is the livery of Christ. Our Savior, who is Lord above all lords, would have his servants known by their badge, which is love.—Latimer.

WHEN you get up in the morning with tongue heavily coated, a disagreeable taste in the mouth, skin hot and dry, eyes burning, head aching with a dull heavy pain, and to sum it, feeling as if you were "all broken up," you should at once take Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Pillets. 25 cents per vial.

To Assist Nature

In restoring diseased or wasted tissue is all that any medicine can do. In pulmonary affections, such as Colds, Bronchitis, and Consumption, the mucous membrane first becomes inflamed, then accumulations form in the air-cells of the lungs, followed by tubercles, and, finally, destruction of the tissue. It is plain, therefore, that, until the hacking cough is relieved, the bronchial tubes can have no opportunity to heal. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral the inflamed membrane, arrests the wasting process, and leaves no injurious results. This is why it is more highly esteemed than any other pulmonary specific.

Soothes and Heals

L. D. Bixby, of Bartonsville, Vt., writes: "Four years ago I took a severe cold, which was followed by a terrible cough. I was very sick, and confined to my bed about four months. My physician finally said I was in consumption, and that he could not help me. One of my neighbors advised me to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I did so, and before I had taken half a bottle was able to go out. By the time I had finished the bottle I was well, and have remained so ever since."

Alonzo P. Daggett, of Smyrna Mills, Me., writes: "Six years ago, I was a traveling salesman, and at that time was suffering with Lung Trouble.

For months I was unable to rest nights. I could seldom lie down, had frequent choking spells, and was often compelled to seek the open air for relief. I was induced to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which helped me. Its continued use has entirely cured me, and I believe, saved my life."

KIRK—Mrs. Julia Ann Kirk, wife of Capt. George H. Kirk, departed this life after a long and painful illness, January 5, 1888. At sixteen years of age she wrote in her diary: "The Lord pardoned my sins, and adopted me as his child. To me a glorious day." The writer became acquainted with her three years ago, and was soon impressed by her rare and beautiful character. Deep and earnest was her piety. Her Christian experience was rich and eloquent. Endowed with fine natural gifts, and these thoroughly dedicated to God, her life was exceptionally radiant. On her fifty-sixth birthday she wrote: "My soul would raise a glad song of praise to God, my Father in Heaven; to Jesus, my blessed Savior; to the Holy Spirit, my blessed Comforter. * * * I long to do more in the vineyard of my Master." Two years ago she was attacked by a malady which ended her life. In sickness, as in health, her faith prevailed. "It is my Father's hand," she said; "let him do what seemeth him good." Not a murmur escaped her lips. Patient, gentle, considerate, trustful, she awaited the result. She has left behind the legacy of a character most lovable and exemplary. How honored the husband of such a wife; how blessed the children of such a mother! She was the light and joy of the home. Her last hours were hours of holy triumph. She spoke joyously of the future. Just before her spirit passed away she seemed to be gazing on objects of wondrous beauty. Her face lighted up as with supernal lustre, while she softly said, "Peace," and sweetly she leaned on Jesus. Thus closed a life which had been a benediction to all who knew her. She walked with God. She stimulated in others the desire to know more of things spiritual. In her death God gave his seal to the completeness of her salvation.

S. H. WERLEIN.

For four years the editor was the pastor of Sister Kirk, and he can say all that Bro. Werlein has said, with this addition: The beauty of her character grew on him all through [illegible] four years.)

HORTMAN—Lillie Pearl Hortman, only daughter of J. J. and Silvanie Hortman, was born September 20, 1877, and died December 29, 1887, aged ten years and three months. Sister, as called by the family, was a very sweet little girl. She was a member of the Pleasant Valley Sunday-school, and very fond of attending Sunday-school and all other religious service. She was fond of singing and would join the school or the congregation in singing from her little hymn-book the sweet songs of Zion. Her song book, as well as her Bible, and other good books, was her daily companion; hence when laid away her little hymn-book was placed in her snowy little hand because it looked natural and proper. Little sister is so sweet in heaven to-day. May our heavenly Father comfort the broken hearts!

MITCHELL.—William B. Mitchell was born in Davidson county, Tenn., September 8, 1819; moved to Yalabusha county, Miss., in 1839; was married to Miss Sarah S. Word, May 20, 1840. He professed religion and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Spring Hill Camp Ground, near Grenada, Miss., in 1842; moved to Oxford, Miss., January 1, 1850, where he spent most of the remainder of his life. He was licensed to preach at Cambridge Camp Ground, in 1851, ordained deacon in 1855, and elder, in the city of Memphis, Tenn., by Bishop J. O. Andrew, in 1859. He joined the North Mississippi Conference in December, 1871, and, after traveling five years, located at his own request. After several years spent in Oxford, Miss., he moved to Iuka, Miss., January 1, 1887, where he died suddenly, December 12, 1887. Bro. Mitchell was a man of good preaching ability, and if he had entered the ministry in early life, and devoted himself to that one work, would have made a very efficient itinerant preacher. He was a thorough Methodist in his views, studied closely our doctrines and economy, and was always ready to defend them, which he did with skill and success. He was always, for what he thought the right side of every question, and never left you in doubt as to which side that was. His influence was most sensibly felt in his own home, and its fruits most visible in the lives of his children—all of whom grew to become exemplary and useful members of the church. Three of his sons are useful members of the North Mississippi Conference. He rests from his labors and his works do follow him. J. D. CAMERON.

JORDAN—Died at Pleasant Hill La., September 29, 1887, Sister Lucretia Jordan, consort of John Jordan and daughter of Dr. William A. Jones. Sister Jordan was born May 7, 1816, in Alabama, professed religion when quite young and joined the Methodist Church, in which she lived until the messenger of death came, and took her from the church militant to the church triumphant. It may be truly said of Sister Jordan that she was not without oil in her vessel, and her lamp trimmed and burning ready to go out to meet the bridegroom. As her pastor, I visited her a few hours before her departure, and found her in perfect confidence as to her acceptance as a child of God. As we rose from prayer with her weeping children she said: "I am not afraid to die. Let me go home where there are no more sickness or burdens to bear!" Will the dear children and grandchildren remember their mother's life of devotion to the cause of Christ, and her prayers for them? May the Lord direct them to look away from the pleasures of this world to that home where their loved one has laid down her burdens for the crown of life! J. M. Johnston

WADSWORTH—Died at Franklinton, Washington parish, La., January 2, 1888, Bro. Judge John Wadsworth, aged sixty-five years, four months and twenty-two days. Bro. Wadsworth had been a citizen of this town for thirty-five years; was a member of the Masonic fraternity for over thirty years. At the time of his death he was Royal Arch Mason. He was a lawyer by profession, and acted in the capacity of parish judge from 1872 to 1874. Bro. Wadsworth leaves a large family and many warm friends to mourn his sad death. He was a patient sufferer for four years. The church sustains a great loss in the death of Bro. Wadsworth, as he was one of the leading spirits in "Centenary Church," being Sunday-school superintendent and a strong supporter of the church. We condole with the bereaved family, and point them to Christ, who can soothe all their sorrows. A. C. Flowers, P. C.

"Give Him a Cheer."—Many a man fails in a good but difficult effort because he receives criticism when he needs and ought to have encouragement. It is better to help than to hinder, but the latter is easier; a child may throw a railroad train off the track.

A fireman was trying to reach from the top of a ladder a poor woman who was imploring help at the window of a burning house. One among the crowd below cried: "You can't do it, come down."

He was already sufficiently discouraged by the difficulty, was somewhat burned and almost choked by the smoke. He began to descend and was leaving the woman to her fate, when a man shouted; "Give him a cheer."

The vast crowd made the air ring with their encouragement, whereupon the fireman stopped, again ascended towards the window, and, aided by the cheering of the multitude, though a seeming miracle, brought the woman safely to the ground. "Give him a cheer," is a good motto.

Oil Calming a Troubled Sea.

That oil properly used, as has been frequently urged in this journal, has an extraordinary effect on troubled waters there can be no sort of doubt; and it is much to be regretted that the experiment is not brought into general and regular practice, and that every sea-going ship is not provided with a quantity of oil, and the proper apparatus to employ it as a sea-calmer, if not a tempest-stiller. Its singular efficacy has been proved over and over again by English seamen in English ships and boats; and if is gratifying to find that the same practice has been tried in America with marked success. From a private letter, dated at Truxillo, in October, 1886, from a passenger on board a large trading steamer plying between that place and New Orleans, we learn that the vessel encountered a terrible hurricane in the Caribbean Sea, early in that month, when the ship was disabled and became unmanageable, and lay in the trough of the sea in a dangerous position, and entirely at the mercy of the waves, which ever and anon broke over her. The captain, having tried almost every expedient to keep the ship's head up without success, determined to have recourse to the oil experiment. We give the result in the writer's own words: "The captain now put four oil-bags on the windward side of the ship, when the oil acted like magic. The sea became smooth for at least twenty-five yards in that direction, and not a sea broke over her, while ahead and astern and to leeward, the ocean was in a wild rage, and the howling of the winds drowned all other sounds." Here was an extraordinary escape from immediate danger; and the remedy was apparently repeated or continued, for the letter goes on to say that the ship lay for thirty hours in the trough of the sea free from the danger of broken water, and protected by the application of the oil, until, at the end of that time, the hurricane passed away, and the ship was enabled to proceed on her voyage uninjured. Now it is not too much to say that, had it not been for the efficacy of the oil, the ship in her helpless condition must have succumbed to the violence of the hurricane, and probably all on board would have perished. Could not the Board of Trade be urged to lay down some rule making it incumbent on all sea-going ships to be provided with a certain quantity of oil for use in case of need?—Chambers' Journal.

Mineral Fibers.—Mr. C. V. Boys, describing, in the Physical Society in London, "The Production, Preparation and Properties of the Finest Fibers," said that in producing very fine glass-fibers, he found it best to use very small quantities at high temperatures, with a velocity of separation as great as possible. In the last point, the best results are given by a cross-bow and straw arrow, to the tail of which a thin rod of the substance to be drawn is cemented. By this means, fibers of glass less than 1-10000 of an inch in diameter can be made. The author had also experimented on many minerals, with more or less success. Ruby, sapphire and fluor-spar could not well be drawn into fibers, but quartz, augite and feldspar gave very satisfactory results. Garnet, when treated at low temperatures, yielded fibers exhibiting the most beautiful colors. From quartz, fibers less than 1-100000 of an inch in diameter had been obtained. The thread can not be drawn directly from the crystal, but the latter has to be slowly heated, fused and cast in a thin rod. Quartz-fiber seems to be free from the torsional fatigue so evident in glass and metallic fibers, and is, therefore, valuable for instruments requiring torsional control. The tenacity of such fibers is about fifty tons on the square inch.—Popular Science.

"I am weary of living," moaned poor Mrs. Hinkley. "For I'm fairly worn out with the ache in my back. My nerves are a chain Of weakness and pain. And my poor head is aching as if it would crack." "Now, don't be discouraged," cried good Mrs. White. "It is never so dark but there's promise of light; I can tell you in brief, What will give you relief— Pierce's Favorite Prescription will soon set you right."

It is the only remedy for woman's peculiar weaknesses and ailments sold by druggists under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case or money will be refunded. See guarantee on bottle wrapper. Large bottles (100 doses) $1. Six for $5.

A Pastor's Power.

To the most effective and spiritual power it is essentially prerequisite that a pastor be content with his own personality and with his divinely appointed field of labor.

Nothing is more suppressive of whatever spiritual power may be in a pastor than a habit of comparing himself disparagingly with others. Each child of God, layman or minister, is a specialty in himself as to his constitution and as to his gifts. Blessed be God for phenomenally gifted and successful pastors. But every pastor will find out some time, if he did not know it at the outset of his career, that he can be no one but himself. Studying of other effective lives to find out and to appropriate, if we can; the secret of their effectiveness, must be right, if we do it with the motive of ourselves attaining to the highest degree of usefulness in the service of our God. But the best model will always continue to be our Lord himself. Whatever anyone can do (and we can all do much) toward self-culture through the study of the best models, everyone of us will, after all, continue to be himself. We ought, indeed, to set out with the determination to make the very utmost of what we are and have, and yet we ought always to bear in mind that what we are to accomplish at all, we shall be compelled to accomplish, not through another, but through our own personality. No one has been long in the ministry without having known at least some who have aspired to be what they were not and never could become, and have wrecked their own comfort and usefulness upon this ambition. It is the meanest of follies to seek to be other than one's self. Most of us know this, and perhaps very few, if any of us, are guilty of it. And yet, after all, when we see that our own spiritual power is less than that of some of our brethren, we may at times indulge a feeling of discontent over what we fancy to be an unequal distribution of gifts and successes. This feeling, dear brother, just in the degree in which we harbor it, is suppressive of spiritual power. A prime necessity to this power is contentment with one's own personality as God's gift, and determination by divine help to make the very best use we can of it for the ends for which it is given.—Rev. David Cole, D. D., in Intelligencer.

Don't You Know

that you can not afford to neglect that catarrh? Don't you know that it may lead to consumption, to insanity, to death? Don't you know that it can be easily cured? Don't you know that while the thousand and one nostrums you have tried have utterly failed that Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy is a certain cure? It has stood the test of years, and there are hundreds of thousands of grateful men and women in all parts of the country who can testify to its efficacy. All druggists.

A strong creed is a great educator. It comes to the individual disciple in an aspect and manner which spontaneously commands his attention. It states the truth in a dispassionate form, presents the elements of the gospel in systematic order, and wins for them the readiest acceptation. It reminds the church, in ways which are both interesting and commanding, of what it has professed to believe, and what it is regarded by other Christian bodies and by the world as believing. It furnishes to all classes within the believing household convenient and helpful modes of describing their personal faith; it supplies linguistic moulds into which their convictions may flow and be solidified into form. As an educator of those who avow their belief in it, a Confession like that of Westminster is equal to a regiment of preachers. It is hardly doubtful, for example, whether any document of the Reformation has done as much to mould and determine the faith of English-speaking Protestants as the Shorter Catechism. That little declaration has been doing for the past 200 years the work, perchance, of 1,000 pulpits.—N. Y. Evangelist.

Heartburn.—This very disagreeable complaint results entirely from indigestion, and prevails largely during the earlier stages of dyspepsia. If the liver and digestive organs are in proper working order, there will be no heartburn. Take Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Pillets. 25 cents per vial.

Oppression makes wise men mad; but the distemper is still the madness of the wise, which is better than the sobriety of fools.

Indigestion results from a partial paralysis of the stomach and is the primary cause of a very large majority of the ills that humanity is heir to. The most agreeable and effective remedy is Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Pillets. 25 cents a vial.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Justice Lamar was sworn in and took his seat on the Supreme bench on the eighteenth instant.

Two Jewish rabbis, one Catholic priest, and a justice of the peace were indicted in St. Louis, January 18, by the grand jury, for failing to make returns on marriage licenses as required by law.

Thompson, Ga., was almost destroyed by fire. Fifteen business houses on the main street were burned.

A bill prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors within five miles of Whitworth College was passed by a unanimous vote in the Senate, January 21.

The Secretary of the Interior, on January 20, decided the famous litigation between the State of Louisiana and the cities of New Orleans and Baltimore over certain lands in Louisiana, lying about sixteen leagues above New Orleans, on the Mississippi river, between the river and Lake Maurepas. Something less than 100,000 acres was involved in the controversy, of which amount under to-day's decision about two-thirds goes to the State of Louisiana and the balance to the two cities. The cities of New Orleans and Baltimore claimed the land in question under the will of John McDonough, who bequeathed it to the cities for educational purposes.

The east wing of the Holyoke (Mass.) Envelope Company was burned on January 22. Loss $235,000.

The parsonage belonging to St Augustine's Roman Catholic Church, Bridgeport, Conn., burned January 23. Over $50,000 worth of property was destroyed.

Several cases of small-pox have broken out among the colored residents of Detroit, Mich.

The Methodist ministers of Baltimore, at a meeting held on the twenty-third instant, adopted, by a vote of 19 to 10, resolutions censuring the action of President Cleveland in sending a copy of the Constitution of the United States to Pope Leo as a Jubilee gift.

The doors of the First National Bank of Auburn, N. Y., were closed on January 23, pending an examination of the affairs of the bank.

FOREIGN.

The British Baptist Union has accepted Mr Spurgeon's resignation.

Premier Tirard has rejected the Budget Committee's decision touching the taxation of the liquor traffic. Several ministers oppose M. Tirard, and a crisis is imminent.

A dispatch has reached the American Board of Foreign Missions from Mardin, in east Turkey, stating that 10,000 people are starving there, and calling for immediate relief.

While 4,000 workmen, under the command of several mandarins, were making Breakwater to stem the Hoangho floods, they were engulfed by a sudden rush of water. Only a few escaped.

Three hundred mariners have been ordered to Scotland to quiet the disaffected crofters.

The Emperor of Austria's desire to depose Prince Ferdinand has been increased by the speech made by Ferdinand to his officers, New Year's day, in which he defied efforts to dislodge him.

Mr. William O'Brien, M. P., and editor of the United Ireland, who has been confined in prison since October 11, was released on January 20.

It is stated that Spain is organizing an expedition for Morocco to consist of 25,000 men.

Mr. Gladstone, in replying to a eulogistic address presented to him at Florence, said he hoped it might please God to terminate at an early hour the controversies now dividing Great Britain in a manner most in accordance with truth and justice.

The authorities have proclaimed a number of meetings of the National League which it was proposed to hold at Kilrush, and in the vicinity.

The Sultan has requested Prince Bismarck to send a competent German to Asia Minor to instruct the natives in the better working of mines and forests and in husbandry.

The gift of President Cleveland to Pope Leo was presented to him, January 21, in the throneroom in the Vatican. He was delighted with the gift, and ordered that it be placed on exhibition among those of the kings.

The socialists attempted to hold a meeting at Trafalgar Square, London, on the twenty-second instant, but were prevented from doing so by the police, who arrested two of them.

An attempt was made to kill Louise Michel, at Havre, on January 22. She was making an address at a meeting of anarchists, when a man in the audience fired two shots at her. She received a wound in the head and the lobe of one of her ears is torn away. The wound is not of a serious nature.

News received from Cuba, on the twenty-third instant, is to the effect that the city of Havana is in the greatest state of excitement, caused by Captain General Marin's administration. He has been captain general of Cuba only three months. During said time the government tax office at Matanzas has been robbed of $50,000, and in every branch of the government it has been frauds, robberies, etc. The newspapers have been suppressed, and communication with the home government cut off.

Ismail Pasha's claims have been settled. He receives the Egyptian palaces that formerly belonged to him, his property valued at £500,000, the commutation of his civil allowances at fourteen years' purchase, and £10,000 in cash for crops.

WANTED.—Agents for the marvelous work, "Fifty Years in the Church of Rome." Address I. Q. REYNOLDS, 203 Lafayette street, New Orleans.

Southern Cultivator and Christian Advocate.

By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer to new subscribers the Southern Cultivator and Dixie Farmer, combined with the ADVOCATE, for $2 50 for the two publications for one year. Commencing with this date, the price to old subscribers will remain the same as heretofore—$2 75—with only twenty-five cents extra to either of the above amounts for "Dickson's System of Farming." These rates are postage prepaid. All orders must be accompanied by cash in full; no allowance for commission to agents, and both papers must be ordered at same time. We will, however, fill orders to subscribers who failed to take advantage of the club rate when they last renewed for $1 for the Cultivator for one year.

JANUARY 1, 1888.

HOW TO MAKE MONEY.—Plant Le Conte & Keiffer's pear trees; diversify your industry. One party last season got over $700 net from less than two acres. Every planter should lose no time in setting an orchard; the extra labor will not be felt to keep one to ten acres in condition. Le Conte & Keiffer's are blight proof. Correspondence solicited. One, two and three-year-old trees for sale.

W. R. STUART,
Ocean Springs.

To Our Agents.

Do not fail to read and clip out for reference our new rate for the Southern Cultivator and Dixie Farmer. These prices should enable you to get new subscribers with the greatest ease. Try it. Some time later there will be a good offer made for the benefit of agents.

Messrs. C. I. Hood & Co. have taken another new departure in 1888, and have issued Hood's Office Calendar magnificent in size and attractiveness. It is like the Hog cholera lithograph, only very much larger, and the back the marvelous growth of C. I. Hood & Co.'s business is illustrated by finely lithographed pictures of the various buildings the firm has occupied, including their present mammoth laboratory. The figures on the pad are big, and altogether it is just the thing for one's office or place of business. Owing to its very great cost the charge for the Office Calendar is twenty-five cents, sent by mail.

Copies of the Household Calendar may be obtained at the drug stores, or by sending six cents in stamps to C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

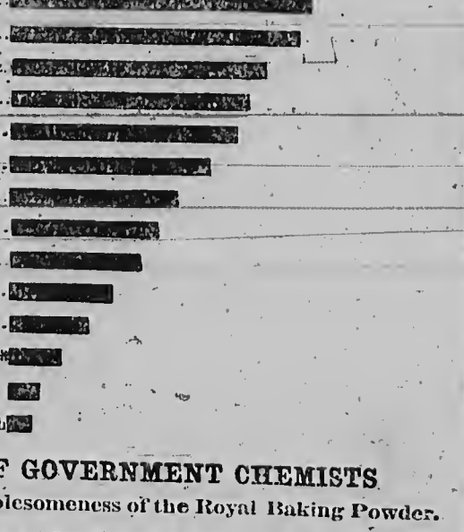
COMPARATIVE WORTH OF BAKING POWDERS.



REPORTS OF GOVERNMENT CHEMISTS

As to Purity and Wholesomeness of the Royal Baking Powder.

"I have tested a package of Royal Baking Powder, which I purchased in the open market, and find it composed of pure and wholesome ingredients. It is a cream of tartar powder of a high degree of merit, and does not contain either alum or phosphates, or other injurious substances. E. G. LOVE, Ph.D."

"It is a scientific fact that the Royal Baking Powder is absolutely pure. H. A. MOTT, Ph.D."

"I have examined a package of Royal Baking Powder, purchased by myself in the market. I find it entirely free from alum, terra alba, or any other injurious substance. HENRY MORTON, Ph.D., President of Stevens Institute of Technology."

"I have analyzed a package of Royal Baking Powder. The materials of which it is composed are pure and wholesome. S. DANA HAYES, State Assayer, Mass."

The Royal Baking Powder received the highest award over all competitors at the Vienna World's Exposition, 1873; at the Centennial, Philadelphia, 1876; at the American Institute, New York, and at State Fairs throughout the country.

No other article of human food has ever received such high, emphatic, and universal endorsement from eminent chemists, physicians, scientists, and Boards of Health all over the world.

NOTE—The above DIAGRAM illustrates the comparative worth of various Baking Powders, as shown by Chemical Analysis and experiments made by Prof. Schedler. A pound can of each powder was taken, the total leavening power or volume in each can calculated, the result being as indicated. This practical test for worth by Prof. Schedler only proves what every observant consumer of the Royal Baking Powder knows by practical experience, that, while it costs a few cents per pound more than ordinary kinds, it is far more economical, and, besides, affords the advantage of better work. A single trial of the Royal Baking Powder will convince any fair minded person of these facts.

* While the diagram shows some of the alum powders to be of a higher degree of strength than other powders ranked below them, it is not to be taken as indicating that they have any value. All alum powders, no matter how high their strength, are to be avoided as dangerous.

R GREEN GRASS UNDER THE SNOW.

BY ANNIE A. PRESTON.

The work of the sun is slow,
But as sure as heaven, we know:
So we'll not forget,
When the skies are wet,
There's green grass under the snow.

When the winds of winter blow,
Wailing like voices of woe,
There are April showers,
And buds and flowers,
And green grass under the snow.

We find that it's ever so
In this life's uneven flow;
We've only to wait,
In the face of fate,
For the green grass under the snow.

Young J. Allen's Address in New Orleans.

(The following report of Dr. llen's address, in Carondelet reet Church, in this city, came too late for our issue of last ek, but we gladly give it a ace now, that our readers, who ve not heard Dr. Allen, may dge of the character of the n and of the addresses he is king to the churches in behalf our missionary work.—ED.)

Dr. Allen began by saying, substantially, that, God in Christ, conciling the world to himself, s the grand central idea of the istian religion. It is a progressive idea; it is an assimilating idea; it is the supreme idea the Old and New Testaments. is the idea which to-day operes in the dispensation of the ly Ghost. It is comprehenve of all time—past, present, ture; and of all peoples, reaching out into the deep and dark gradation of the world. It has n in the world a long time. herever it goes it has as its timate object the extension of e kingdom of God and his rist. It is now realizing itself the world. What is Christenm but this idea embodied? o!" said our Lord. To-day have all the forces, sciences, ventions; discoveries concreted, t the Word of God applies to n the mandate, "Go preach gospel." Christendom is braeing the world. Its upach was at first slow. It ittedly a partial light. It s like the moon seen in its st-quarter. Steadily the light s been increasing. Christenm embodies more than mere urch edifices and a preached pel. It means heavenly power which the whole life is edid. It means intellectual enhtenment, physical expansion, d spiritual illumination.

When missionaries first went China they found that people ing in the blissful conceit that ere was but one country and e emperor, and that China was t country and her emperor world's sovereign. The etyology of the word "China" is, ll under the concave." They, t knowing whence the missionary came, said that he was an ean monster," declaring that had come up out of the sea. ina is a nation 4,000 years old. eir institutions, laws, religion, tem of education, antedate all t we can produce. Their system of education is, perhaps, the best in the world. They are a well-governed nation. Their officials are all picked men, trained and educated to the highest degree with the view of being ornaments in their profession. When the missionaries went there, few in number and insignificant of appearance, and began the work of teaching this ancient people, they were construed as upstarts. The existence of a treaty known as "The Exterritoriality," imposed upon China and Japan by European nations at the time of their weakness, has been a cause of much irritation among these peoples. "This Exterritoriality means the exclusive jurisdiction of the foreign legations and consulates over certain portions of the national territory, by which foreigners, resident or traveling in the country, are exempt from the native authorities and laws." This gave the missionaries only limited access to the country. Certain treaty ports were thrown open. In Shanghai all the nations are represented, and each has its consular and municipal government. China and Japan fret under this exaction. They want to throw it off, but realize their inability to cope with the great Western powers, though they are not behind the most advanced nations in the character of their military equipment. China's war with England, during which the English navy, with 3,500 men, conquered all the coast of China and held it, taught the defeated nation an important lesson. To-day China has a better navy than the United States, and her soldiery are equipped with the latest improved English and German guns. This Exterritoriality has brought China and Japan face to face with the Christian civilization of the West. They have thus, by comparison, learned their weakness. They are aroused from their long sleep, and determined that they will not remain inert. The consequence is that in Japan, especially, the nation may be said to be under a process of denationalization. In religion, food, dress, manners, and in all that appertains to national greatness, they recognize their amenability to the most advanced laws of Christian civilization. Thus these nations propose to assert their right to stand abreast of the leading powers of the world, and to suffer no discrimination against them by more powerful nations.

The demand is not for missionaries as such; but as teachers they are welcome. Japan and China are clamoring for instruction, and throw open their doors to the missionary teacher. Another clause in the treaty, designated "the favored nations," prescribes that the same terms shall accrue to all nations that are accorded to any one. This was effected purely in the interest of developing international commercial relations with the outside world. It prevented advantage of one nation over another. To England might be accorded the contract to build ships. Germany, France, Russia, Italy, etc., bid for other contracts, the equivalents of that made with England or any other government. But this treaty has another application. Two hundred years ago the Roman Catholic Church had large possessions in China—lands, schools, churches. The priests, by mismanagement, aroused the enmity of the Chinese Emperor, and were expelled the country, and the property was confiscated. By this treaty, under the French protectorate in 1860, this property reverted to Rome, and her priests were admitted into possession. But a privilege accorded the Romish Church can not be denied the Protestant Church. Hence the whole of China is to-day accessible to Protestant missionaries. A proclamation was recently issued, guaranteeing to all religious bodies the protection of the Chinese government.

Some think that China moves slowly. But it is not so. They are not a nation of "coolies," as they have been called. Among their four hundred million subjects there are all classes and grades, as, indeed, there are in our Western Continent. There are the day laborers, the farmers, merchants, professional men, literati. They have their schools, colleges, and universities. Their literary men will compare with our literary men. Their officers are, in the main, the equals of ours. Their merchants are quite as rich and enterprising as ours. In Europe only 106,000 students attend the colleges, while in China 1,500,000 students can be found within her college walls. But they are lacking in the knowledge of God. They do not realize that Christ is to rule over all, and that the Christian is, under Christ, the owner of this world. They worship the creature. Idolatry is prevalent. They create fantastic deities, representing the forces of nature, and fall down before them. Christian enlightenment is to lift the veil from their eyes. At Shanghai and Canton and other places the government has opened schools and secured Christian missionaries to superintend them. At these schools text-books used in the curriculum of European colleges are given the students. As the natives come in contact with the scientific triumphs of the West, many of their superstitions are exploded. The Christian missionaries are providentially the class to whom the work of translating European books has been assigned. By them the histories of the European nations have already been furnished the Chinese authorities, and are largely used in their colleges. Nine hundred and fifty maps, descriptive of other lands, have been prepared, and are now in use. Thus the ignorant multitudes in China and Japan are being prepared through the schools for the Christian religion.

The scheme of sending native young Chinamen and Japanese to European colleges, adopted some years ago by these respective nations, has proved unwise. They learned European and American manners, language, and ideas, and, on returning to their own country, were found to have forgotten their mother-tongue, and were rather unfitted than prepared for the responsible trust of official position. Hence the policy to-day is, to extend the advantage of Anglo-Chinese and Japanese schools to the natives in their own countries.

Our college in Shanghai, of which Dr. Allen is president, is patronized by some of the more influential classes, and will expand from year to year into a powerful agency, in connection with the missionary enterprises of Christendom. Thus it will be seen that we may hope through our schools to accomplish what we have in measure failed to effect through the more distinctive work of preaching the gospel.

The Educational System of Southern Methodism.

BY DR. W. F. TILLETT.

Has not the time come in the development and multiplication of the institutions of learning belonging to or controlled by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, when the interests both of the church and the cause of education demand that the institutions be correlated and organized into such a system as shall make them mutually helpful of each other, and thereby secure their highest efficiency? We think it has. With the immense and rapidly increasing number of institutions under our control we stand in danger, unless some such system be adopted, of wasting much of our educational energy for want of a wise distribution of labor. There are four, and but four, well-recognized and easily defined grades of institutions. They are (1) the primary school; (2) the preparatory school; (3) the college; (4) the university. A great church, recognizing education as one of the greatest departments of its work in the world—next to preaching its most efficient means of doing good—should have all these institutions within its system of education. We have them, and now we need correlation, distribution of labor, organization into a system, something of uniformity throughout the church in our educational work.

The educational system of Southern Methodism should lack nothing in its provisions for the complete education of her youth. In this age of secular education, when much, especially of what is called higher education, is under the control of men and influences that are out of sympathy with evangelical religion, it is the duty of the church to provide a complete system of education which shall from the A B C of the beginner to the Ph.D. of the university be positively Christian. We want the highest scholarship, and must have it; but we want learning and scholarship that is consecrated to God, and in full sympathy with evangelical Christianity and Wesleyan Arminianism. Why should not a young Methodist find within the educational system of our church all that he needs fully to equip him for any profession in life?

We are on the threshold of a second century in our history, and are laying plans and building for the future. Methodism believes in machinery, in system, and in connectionalism. Let us not weaken our system by allowing petty rivalries to exist between institutions that ought to be mutually helpful of each other. Would it not help the cause for the educators of Southern Methodism to have a friendly conference, where our general superintendents (who have no merely local prejudices) could meet with them and advise for the best interests of the church at large and the cause of Christian education among us?

What say we, then? Let us have a conference of Southern Methodist educators, representing the preparatory schools and colleges and universities of the church. Let it be here at Nashville, in May, when our general superintendents are in session. Such a conference would accomplish important results and give an impetus to our educational work that would be felt throughout our bounds. It would attract public notice, and would help forward the grand movement that is now being made in all our Conferences to endow our Conference colleges. A free discussion and interchange of opinion among our church educators could but result in good. The great educational interests of our church call for such a conference. Its action need not bind any college except so far as each college might see fit to make it binding. The representatives of the leading colleges and preparatory schools of Tennessee have lately held such a meeting with most satisfactory results. A most admirable article from the pen of Bishop Galloway, advocating many of the points presented in this article, appeared about a year ago in the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE. It was worthy to have been carefully pondered by all our teachers. Would not much good be accomplished by such a conference of educators? Already some of our Bishops and several of our most successful and influential educators have signified their approbation of such a move.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

We gladly second the proposition of Dr. Tillett made in the above extract. It is a definite proposition, and can be easily understood. It is high time that the looseness in our educational work be "tightened up" somewhat. All great achievements in these days are accomplished by co-operative work carried on by systematic and co-ordinated efforts. The old plan—"Every-one for himself and the devil take the hindmost"—won't work now. We are in favor of the conference Dr. Tillett suggests. "It will attract public notice," and that is a good thing. It will bring together Southern Methodist educators of every grade; and a wise man of old has said: "In a multitude of counselors there is safety." By all means, let this conference of Southern Methodist educators be held next May, in Nashville.

The Week of Prayer and Self-Denial—April 1-8.

The Board of Missions, in session November 25, 1887, suggested the observance of a week of prayer and self-denial in 1888, and recommended April 1-8 as the time for those Conferences already held, leaving other Conferences to select a week best suited to their local circumstances. Several agreed upon the days fixed by the Board, two or three adopting another date. On many accounts it is best for the entire connection to adopt the same time. There is inspiration in the thought that more than a million Christians are specially praying the same hour for the same thing, and in concert are coining their self-denials into the currency of God's kingdom. But whatever the date appointed by a Conference, let the week be faithfully observed. It will insure spiritual enrichment to the church beyond possible computation, and add needed thousands to our missionary treasury.

The partial observance of the appointment for 1887 yielded about twenty-seven thousand dollars, besides stimulating the regular collections and quickening the spiritual life of the connection. If the offerings of each Conference had have been in proportion to a few that might be mentioned, that amount would have been increased by one hundred thousand.

Denying one's self for the Lord demands special grace. There is self-denial that is not of the Lord or for the Lord. We may deny ourselves for ourselves, and esteem it a Christian virtue. Rigid personal economy may be practiced to further an enterprise, laudable indeed, but not for the Lord. The Master magnifies motive. "For Jesus' sake" is at once the true inspiration to duty and the real measure of reward. A suggestive missionary motto for April 1-8, 1888, might be, therefore, "Self-denial for the Son of God." On the preparation for and observance of the appointed week I venture a few observations.

1. The offerings made should not be in lieu of or form a part of the regular missionary assessment. These gifts are special, and should be kept separate. If possible, "clear the decks" before that week. Every specific self-denial will then take special direction. Every dime redeemed will go on a distinct mission of redemption—reduction of "the debt" and enlargement of the work.

2. It is best to make the offerings daily. At the close of each service let the self-denials of the day be cast into the treasury. It will strain our faith to part at one time with the accumulated savings from self of an entire week.

3. The president of the Conference Board of Missions can magnify his office in making preparation for the special service. An early called meeting of his Board, some preliminary mass meetings arranged, the issuance of a circular or two, and diligent correspondence with pastors and leading laymen during the two months preceding will strangely warm his own heart and kindle the zeal of his entire Conference.

4. Upon our editors of church papers the success of this appointment mainly depends. Without exception they will be vigilant and diligent in broad-casting the connection with missionary information—learning a lesson from the politicians. I believe it would pay for each editor to adopt missions as a specialty, and make his a "red-hot campaign paper" from now until the eighth of April. And then pastors must see that the circulation of these papers shall increase by thousands—that not a Methodist family is unsupplied with an "Advocate," or "Methodist," at least "for the campaign." The substantial and permanent additions to each subscription list by such a policy would be gratifying to publishers and a benediction to the church.

If the week of prayer and self-denial is observed in the spirit of its appointment, by our great connection, after the eighth of April the missionary debt will be a "precious memory," and the candidates for foreign work now waiting to go will be hurried to the distant fields already white unto harvest. Mighty exigencies are upon us; sublime possibilities are before us! Dr. Allen brings to us stories of apostolic achievement in the East that are thrilling; but the prophetic vision he unfolds is enrapturing. The one strengthens faith, the other is a call to double diligence and more heroic effort. To meet an emergency in the Master's kingdom, we ought to be willing to convert our self-indulgences into coin for the Master's use.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY.

BROOKHAVEN, MISS., Jan. 19, 1888.

The Slater Fund.

In the Nashville Christian Advocate, of a recent date, Bishop McTyeire has quite an exhaustive review of the last report of the above fund by the agent, Rev. Dr. Haygood. We give an extract which will show our readers the general intention of the agent in the disbursement of this fund:

"Instead of investing money in brick and mortar, the management have wisely distributed the annual income of the fund among various and well-established negro schools and colleges, supplementing them with certain forms of education that would otherwise be neglected, or but feebly rendered. The advantage of this method is manifold. It withholds this strong fund from unfriendly competition with institutions already in the field. It gets at its beneficent work immediately, without the delay and expense of building, of organizing, and of experimenting. It is economical—one broad-minded and clear-sighted agent is enough, and one only is employed. There is yet a greater advantage: It stands as a generous bidder for good conduct, and thus quietly, but potently is felt in the teaching and government of the scores of negro schools, colleges, and universities that dot the land. Following the scriptural rule, 'to him that hath'—that is, who uses well and improves his opportunity—'more is given,' and he is enabled to do better. But the idle and ill-governed—who spend their time going through school motions, and training for elections and social competitions—get nothing. There are no sectarian or political tests; the only test is the work that is done, or proposed to be done. Is it practical? Does it really tend to fit the negro for living well? Does it look in the direction of sound morals and useful citizenship? If so, here's help. The Slater Fund comes in to supply that inch of leather that makes buckle and tongue meet!

"Thus administered, this fund is both helper and hostage, and we of the South ought to think exceeding well of it. It encourages, restrains, and directs—the product of this million does—the three millions already invested in the South for negro education. I ought to qualify and say, If properly administered; or if administered as it now is. A bad man, a weak man, a fanatical man occupying an influential position in the administration of this Trust would do vast mischief. That Dr. Haygood occupies such a position is a fact on which the friends of the Trust, and of the negro, and of the South may be congratulated."

ON HOREB'S ROCK THE PROPHET STOOD

On Horeb's rock the prophet stood;
The Lord before him passed
A hurricane in angry mood
Swept by in strong and fast.
The forests fell before its force,
The rocks were shivered in its course;
God was not in the blast;
'Twas but the whirlwind of his breath,
Announcing danger, wrack and death.

It ceased. The air grew mute—a cloud
Came enfolding up the sun;
When through the mountains deep and loud,
An earthquake thundered on.
The frightened eagle sprang in air;
The wolf ran howling from his lair.
God was not in the storm.
'Twas but the rolling of his car,
The trampling of his steeds from far.

'Twas still again, and nature stood
And calmed her ruffled frame;
While soft (from heaven a fiery flood
To drink) descending came;
Down to its depths the ocean fled,
The sickening sun looked wan and dead;
Yet God still not the flame;
'Twas but the terrors of his eye
That lightened through the troubled sky.

At last a voice, all still and small,
Rose sweet upon the ear;
Yet rose so clear and shrill that all
In heaven and earth might hear;
It spoke of peace, it spoke of love;
It spoke as angels speak above;
And God himself was here;
For, oh! it was a Father's voice,
That bade this trembling world rejoice.

Reminiscences of My Early Itinerant Life.

I will devote another paper to my second year in the ministry, illustrative of the wonderfully sustaining power of God to one of the most shrinking, fearfully timid ministers that ever occupied that awfully solemn place—the pulpit. This illustration was given on a memorable occasion in the experience of this year, at one of my appointments in a town on this circuit. There was a set effort on the part of a pretentious pettifogger, with more cheek than brains, to confound the young minister. There he sat before him with the impudence of an imp of Satan; his countenance "grinning horribly a ghastly smile," the embodiment of hellish devilry staring the minister in the face with a look as fearful to the preacher as if from the bottomless pit. How he got through the sermon is not remembered. But he can never forget the richness and fullness of the divine blessing that day in his itinerant round on his circuit. Meeting a son of Ham on the way, with no one else but his horse to share the religious fervor of his soul all aglow with the love of Christ, he gave expression to his joy by shaking his hand with a hearty grasp, and would have embraced him and his horse in the ecstasy and exuberance of the divine blessing. Thus it is, in ministerial life and trial the divinity of his mission is realized in the apportionment of divine grace proportionate to the demands and exigencies of the occasion for its bestowment. Blessed be God for this realization in the experience of God's servants! Thus the enemy is defeated in the hour of his triumph through the very instrumentality by which he hoped to achieve success.

In these early years of my ministry I learned the blessedness of pastoral visitation and preaching the gospel to the poor; and some of my happiest experiences were felt in fulfilling this obligation of the minister. Many a time then and since, during my life-long service, has my chiefest joy arisen in the pastoral work, visiting from house to house, and seeking in destitute places to proclaim the unsearchable riches of Christ, my heart melting with tender love for the subjects of ministerial solicitude, white and black.

The enemies of our Southern Methodism will never know until the revelation of the last day the trophies achieved by Southern ministers in their labor of love for the souls of men, for whose salvation they claim the exclusive prerogative, having entered into their labors and monopolized its fruits. I will here mention the names of some of my charge of this year whose homes were mine, and who cheered their pastor with kind hospitality and encouraging words: William Lupi, Gadi Gibson, Bro. Featherstun, Dr. Smith's family, with whom lived Sister Fisher (they all were very kind); Mr. Hardeman's family, near the ball ground appointment, Judge Mills' family, Mother Hill (a mother in Israel), Bro. Neely's family, and many, many others whose houses were open, and a hearty welcome extended to the young minister whose heart was touched by their kindness and hospitality.

I would say here what I have often said and felt: These friendships are the oases of the itinerant's life, and the affecting reminiscences that cheer him in his life's retrospections of self-denial and toil. The writer came to the close of this, his second year of the ministry, learning, to his surprise, in view of his weakness and great embarrassment, that he was desired and spoken of for the second year on this circuit. This being the expiration year of his trial for admission into the Conference, he passed an acceptable examination, Dr. Drake being the chairman and chief examiner, who awarded to him the honor of No. 1 in his studies, particularly Watson's Institutes. In passing the ordeal of the Bishop's (Andrew) crucial test of the itinerant's vows, there was one sinking and trembling heart that felt constrained to express his fears of inadequacy for the solemn responsibilities assumed in an affirmative response to the questions propounded. This saintly man of God, in the magnanimity of his great heart, commended the candor of this quailing soul, and uttered words of cheer that have never and never will be forgotten.

Thank God for blessing the church and world with such an example of a true Bishop of the church of God! No one more fit could have been selected, against whom the waves of Northern fanaticism could have rolled with all their momentum, with utter failure to move from the pedestal of granite foundation upon which he stood as firm as Gibraltar.

I would say to young ministers in the close of this paper what I have before said from my life experience. In entering upon the vast responsibilities of a minister's calling, there are only two questions to settle—your conversion and call to the ministry. Satisfied with these, you have nothing to fear. Neither men nor devils can jostle you in your great work. Fix your mind on it with intense solicitude, and prosecute it with undivided energies. Read, write, study with all the powers given you in the exercise of your individuality, aping no man on earth. Be yourself exercising your own gifts, and, as sure as you are the called of God, your mission will be successful in the achievement of the result contemplated by your ordination by the Holy Ghost.

H. M. BOOTH.

Popery.

MR. EDITOR: Is it not high time that this laudation of the Pretender at Rome by the Protestant world should cease? While he is receiving presents and congratulations from Protestant rulers, Protestant presidents, Protestant statesmen, and Protestant editors of the secular press, how would it do to call the attention of your readers to what Protestants believe some of the inspired writers said of him?—"Let no man deceive you by any means; for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition: who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshiped; so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, shewing himself that he is God." "For the mystery of iniquity doth already work." "And then shall that wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming; even him whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish." (II Thessalonians ii, 3, 4, 7, 8, 9, 10.) Again, under the figure of a woman: "So he carried me away in the spirit into the wilderness; and I saw a woman sit upon a scarlet-colored beast, full of names of blasphemy, having seven heads and ten horns. And the woman was arrayed in purple and scarlet color, and decked with gold and precious stones and pearls" (what a literal description of the man at Rome!), "having a golden cup in her hand full of abominations and filthiness of her fornication" (how exactly this accords with history!), "and upon her forehead was a name written, mystery, Babylon the great, the mother of harlots and abominations of the earth. And I saw the woman drunken with the blood of the saints, and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus." (Revelation xvii, 3-6.) "And he shall speak great words against the Most High, and shall wear out the saints of the Most High, and shall think to change times and laws." (Daniel vii, 25.) "And the king" (this Roman fraud wears a triple crown) "shall do according to his will; and he shall exalt himself, and magnify himself above every god, and shall speak marvelous things against the God of gods." "Neither shall he regard the God of his fathers, nor the desire of women" (celibacy of the clergy), "nor regard any god: for he shall magnify himself above all." (Revelation xi, 36, 37.)

Whatever interpretation Romanists may place upon these passages of Scripture, it is a settled fact that Protestants believe them to refer to Leo XIII. and the communion which he represents. If the adherents of Leo wish to celebrate his jubilee, let them do so; but let Protestants, at least, be consistent. And, furthermore, while the President of this republic is sending his congratulations and a copy of the Constitution of the United States—in a manner recognizing the arrogant claims of this Pretender—let some one send the President a copy of this portion of the Constitution of Heaven. When politicians and secularists have to do with things which concern religion, theology or church history, verily, they do display the veriest ignorance!

Preachers' Wives' Loan Fund.

AN APPEAL TO THE MEMBERS OF THE METHODIST CHURCH IN THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Miss Helm says, "If we can secure this loan fund, our success is assured for all time, as it will stand a perpetual parsonage builder." I want to know how many charges in North Mississippi Conference will make their preacher's wife a life patron of this loan fund. It takes only $5 to constitute a life patron. This will be a nice compliment to your preacher's wife, and especially so to those who shall occupy the parsonages built by this fund. The money raised will be loaned for the building of parsonages; and, when it is returned, will be loaned again, and so on for all time, thus making a continual stream of joy to gladden forever the hearts of our itinerant host.

All who desire to join in this glorious work will please send me $5 with the name of your preacher's wife. I will forward all money to Dr. David Morton; and will publish a list of charges which constitute their preacher's wife a life patron in the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

Carrollton and Greenwood station will begin by making Mrs. T. W. Lewis a life patron. I appeal to our women to take this work in hand. If we can get one woman in each charge to undertake the work, it will be done. Only $5 from your charge to make your preacher's wife a life patron! What a small amount from so many; yet how much good it will accomplish!

Yours for parsonages,

MRS. EVA R. BINGHAM,
Treas. for North Miss. Conf.

Rev. C. K. Marshall, D. D.

MR. EDITOR: Rev. H. M. Booth, in a recent article about men and things in Bringing to the front some of the early recollections of Methodism and Methodist preachers in the days of auld lang syne in Mississippi, makes complimentary mention of the gentleman whose name heads this article. But in doing so, unintentionally on his part, misleads the reader by speaking of the Doctor as if he was wholly absorbed in secular engagements, and lost to the lines of usefulness as a minister of the gospel. This does great injustice to the Doctor, and makes a wrong impression upon the minds of his brethren. It is true, that for some years he has been a local elder, but he never has permitted business to divert him from his studies or from filling appointments on the Sabbath all over the central part of the State, and in many ways assisting his brethren in protracted meetings. A good brother said to me, but a few days ago, that Dr. Marshall had dedicated more churches in Mississippi than any preacher in the Mississippi Conference. It is known that when special duties of a secular nature have made too large a draft upon his time he has employed paid agents to attend to the business, rather than so entangle himself with it, and thus cut him off from the higher and more useful purposes of his life. In fact, in looking over his past life and his great services to the church, it is by no means certain but that his life has been worth as much to the church in the local ranks as it would have been in the regular itineracy. Let anyone who chooses look in upon his elegant study, and he will find him still the diligent student, and spending his time with his books, in forging electric thunder-bolts with which to demolish the works of darkness and sin. Scarcely three hours in a week does he devote to secular affairs, and awaits the call of his brethren at any time to push the battle to the very gates. Whenever he is invited he goes, and works faithfully for the church, and has no higher aim in this life. He never was ambitious of place, office or power. He has oftentimes had political position and honors to seek him out, and press him for acceptance, but never once has he permitted his name to be used as a candidate for any office, although the highest have been tendered him.

We make these remarks to prevent the remarks of your correspondent from conveying an erroneous impression to others of the Doctor's mode of life and his aims as a preacher.

At the writer's invitation, the Doctor has filled his pulpit, and done glorious work for the Master that might fill an angel's heart with joy.

NOTA BENE.

Woman's Work.

The following from the Woman's Missionary Advocate will be interesting reading to many of our friends. Let our good women everywhere organize for work. Very little can be done without organization. See how Sister Johnston puts the result: "We are getting more subscribers for the Advocate and extending missionary zeal throughout the circuit." Of course, when the Advocate is read, missionary zeal is enkindled. Somebody will discern before long that the Advocate is a missionary paper!

"CLINTON, LA.

"Mrs. M. E. K. Johnston writes of a circuit auxiliary. This is a good plan as a beginning, but we hope each charge will soon take up the work.

"DEAR MRS. BUTLER: I have been wishing for some weeks to tell you and my friends, through the Advocate, that one great desire of my heart has at last been realized—that of a Woman's Missionary Society in our work. Last year we tried to organize at the different churches, but made a sad failure. This year we concluded to try a circuit society; so the announcement was made at each church that we would organize a Woman's Missionary Society at the East Feliciana circuit parsonage, in Clinton, La. All were invited to come and spend the day, as most of them live too far away to come and return in half a day. I must acknowledge that my faith was a little weak, but I waited patiently for the time, and my heart was made glad when the ladies begun to come in, on that notable day, most of them bringing their dinners of good things and substantials, some of them having read the leaflets, 'Crete Blake's Way,' and, like Mrs. Clark, we, too, are in our kitchen; but, I assure you, it was a most pleasant day. We organized with twelve members, and have now doubled that number. At each meeting I feel encouraged. We are getting more subscribers, too, for the Advocate, and extending missionary zeal throughout the circuit."

From the Work.

RUSTON, LA.

BRO. CARTER: I will say, "Bro. Carter," for if I begin, as letters generally are to the ADVOCATE, "Mr. Editor," my heart will quail, and I am afraid I will not be able to proceed. On the other hand, when I write the familiar name, "Bro. Carter," I can almost feel your presence, and I can imagine myself face to face with our much-loved editor and having a real tete-a-tete, for I assure you there is nothing in that face to produce awe. But you know when some people write to an editor, they feel called upon to do wonderful things. Well, if my thoughts are as cold, and my pen and ink are as chilled and frozen as the weather and everything we can see, I will not be able to write many lines.

Didn't we get back from Conference in good time? And how comfortable and easy we feel; but sad to think of those dear preachers and their families who have to pull up and go. How Bishop Key did win hearts—female hearts! If she just knew it, would his dear wife get jealous, I wonder? The weather has been so very bad—raining, snowing or sleeting ever since we returned from Conference. We have not been able to carry out any of those resolutions formed the last night of Conference. When Bishop Key was giving us that good fatherly talk just before reading the appointments, we promised the Lord we would go, if sent, without a murmur, and try to do better service for the church than we had ever done in all the years that have passed. And God being our helper, we will. This is a working church; all we need is unity of action. If our people would unite and make a long pull, and pull altogether, we could "do wonders."

We have a ladies' prayer meeting which meets every Monday evening. We also have a "Home Workers' Society," a Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, and a Woman's Christian Temperance Union—each of which meet once a month. Our prayer meetings are helpful. I don't see how we could get along without them. When I miss one, I feel that I have been a great loser. Our ladies raised, last year, in their different societies, something over $275.

Last, but not least, I will tell you about our Juvenile Missionary Society. The first Sunday in July last, at the close of the Louisiana Woman's Foreign Missionary Convention, Mrs. Fullilove, our worthy State president, and Miss Eliza Logan, of Mansfield, organized our Juvenile Society—between thirty and thirty-five members were enrolled. At the close of the year, December, 1887, we had 132 members. Christmas eve night we, myself as lady manager, Mrs. Col. Kidd, lady manager of music, and Mrs. Dr. McCormick, assistant lady manager, gave a missionary entertainment and Christmas tree, which was pronounced a success. The children performed their parts extremely well. Since then our roll has gone up to 139 members. I have not space to tell you about the many handsome and beautiful things which adorned the tree, but must tell you about the nice silver service—four pieces, with initial on each piece; also a set of silver forks, which this writer received.

Our Baptist brethren have had a series of meetings for two weeks or more. Eleven were to have been immersed yesterday, but they were frozen out. Bro. Hatch, who is assisting Bro. Friley, the pastor, is an earnest worker.

We have a fine school in Ruston. Prof. T. S. Sligh as president, his accomplished wife as vice-president, and a corps of teachers in the literary department, with Miss Eva Slaton, of Cincinnati Conservatory, as principal of music department, we could not ask any better advantages for our children.

Now, Mr. Editor—I can say that now as I am nearly through—I have told you, in part, what we have done. If you are not disgusted with this effort, I will tell you, when we get fairly launched with our new year's work, what we are doing.

Very truly,

E. PENN PARKER.

HOMER, LA.

MR. EDITOR: We have had, and are having, most unmitigated weather and roads. Our people, not suspecting such unprecedented rainy, snowy weather, are short of wood. Just think of a wood famine in the midst of woods! The snow on the earth, thoroughly water-saturated and frozen, makes it hard for animals to pull loads of wood. A wagon was seen yesterday in front of the Methodist Church with only three sticks of wood on. What a reproof against improvidence! "Take no thought for the morrow" run wild. Our railroad is running in four miles of this place. We will soon be connected with the main arteries of travel and commerce by steam. Amen! These good people receive us kindly; and we have reason to expect a better year than even last, which was a year of great prosperity in our Zion. Pray for us.

T. B. WHITE.

MORTON AND FOREST CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: January 14 and 15 was the appointed time for our first Quarterly Conference, which was also the first in the Brandon district. Our new presiding elder was on hand, and preached on Saturday and held the Conference. We had a nice dinner on the ground. A liberal assessment was made, and a very encouraging part of it was paid. Sunday was such a cold, rainy day that we had no public services. The elder remained in the community until Tuesday. He certainly brings into his district work the entire might of the man. The writer had the usual Christmas turkey sent him by one of the stewards. We are pleasantly situated, and hope to have a prosperous year.

Fraternally,

C. M'DONALD.

MORTON, Miss., Jan. 20, 1888.

SANDERSVILLE CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: I reached my circuit in time to fill my first appointment, which was the fifth Sunday in January. I find this circuit composed of many good people, who are living on hills surrounded with rocks. When I mounted the first rocky hill I thought of the blessing pronounced upon the man that humbled himself. The good book says he shall be exalted. I am exalted among this people when I get off of these hills and descend down upon lower ground and find true wishers to the cause. I find people in the bounds of this work that are anxious for me to preach to them any time during the week. This is a good sign of a revival if the preacher will be faithful. Just after I arrived here a good friend, who does not belong to the church, hailed at the gate with a large hog, ready to slay away. Directly here comes one of my stewards with a large hog, other stewards giving more and some asking about the condition of their preacher, which is a sign of more. Pray for us.

L. J. JONES.

SHILOH CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: We are moving on well on the Shiloh circuit. This is my second year, and the people received us kindly, with many tokens of love. We are working and praying for a successful year. Pray for us. We expect to work for the ADVOCATE with some degree of success. May the good Lord bless the ADVOCATE, with its editor and publisher, is the prayer of your brother in Christ,

A. D. MILLER.

Notice.

Please correct. Instead of what you published, insert the following:

The Woman's Missionary Society, of Iuka, raised during their week of self-denial $63. Iuka station raised last summer during the week of self-denial ordered by the parent Board of Missions, $65. So the church at Iuka during the two weeks has collected $128 35. We shall have on hand in April.

D. L. COGDELL.

IUKA, MISS., Jan. 23, 1888.

(We published the former just as it was written. If brethren would be a little more careful, there would be no need for cards of correction.—ED.

A Correction.

MR. EDITOR: I notice in the Journal of the North Mississippi Conference two mistakes. In the statistical report of Winona district, Belzoni is reported to have expended for churches and parsonages $1,200, instead of $12. Just below this it says Belzoni was assessed for presiding elder $33, and paid $23, instead of $33, as assessed. Now, if the brethren will make the calculations, they will learn that only these two mistakes have been made—two more.

D. M. GEDDIE.

ALCORN'S FLAT, Mississippi.

HEAD—HEART—HAND.—The trinity in man's composition should be taught to work harmoniously for his own individual welfare, and for the good of others. The head should be instructed in whatever tends to prepare the man for earth properly for himself in body, mind and estate, not neglecting any talent with which God has intrusted him, but employing each in due proportion for the furtherance of the whole, and be thoroughly furnished for every good work. His heart should be cultivated that it may be brought, by the influence of God's Holy Spirit, to love God supremely, to curb its passionate affections, to extend its sympathies to the suffering, the needy and distressed, and to embrace the world in its benevolent grasp. The hand should be trained to be the ready instrument in the performance of deeds of charity and of mercy, and in seeking to win souls to Jesus by pointing, like another Baptist, "to the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world." While the whole man in his every part should be dedicated to the service of God in whom he lives and moves and has his being" these three—head, heart and hand—should be, as it were, a special anointing for their several uses in carrying out the purposes of their Maker.—Pulpit Treasury.

Southern Temperance Publishing House.

The want most keenly felt just now by all temperance workers in the Southern States is that of tools to work with. We need books and more even than books; we need an organ, a strong, well-edited journal devoted specifically—I may as well say, exclusively—to our cause—a paper that will take up the distinctive features of our Southern work and press them home to the people in manner at once as pleasing as to command attention, and as forcible as to insure conviction. A journal, that while it will defend our work and workers when attacked, with blows weighty enough to cause repentance, will also be strongly and persistently aggressive. In short, we need a first-class temperance paper, attractive in form, brainy in matter, and of circulation as extensive as to reach the masses.

Our newspaper friends tell us that we can not hope to secure all of these qualities in any single State—that whatever may be the advantages in having such a journal all to ourself, it simply can not be done. More than this: the wisest, or, at any rate, the most experienced of them, say that it is very doubtful whether even the combined efforts of temperance workers in several Southern states will ensure the success of such a journal as the cause demands unless backed up by some other enterprise more certainly remunerative. Fortunately for our cause, such an enterprise is not only at hand, but is even pressed upon our attention by the very necessities of the situation. We need not merely a paper; we need also books and pamphlets.

We are told that publishers of books are just opening their eyes to the fact that in the South there is a rich and almost unoccupied field for the sale of their publications. The negroes, yielding ready to the solicitations of the proverbially adroit "book agent," are readily induced to buy almost any kind of a book, more easily attracted, perhaps, by the showiness of the binding than by the contents of the work presented to them.

This richly remunerative field will soon be occupied with enterprising agents furnished with books calculated to retard rather than advance the cause of temperance; and every consideration of prudence and philanthropy urges us to pre-empt a vein so rich in promise of speedy return.

We should place cheap, attractive temperance books in the hands of the colored people; first, for the moral effect upon them, and, second, because by so doing we can secure the "sinews of war" so much needed for other departments of our work.

Our white population also need such literature and will readily purchase it when it is brought home to them at their houses.

The business of making and selling books has undergone such processes of division and subdivision within a few years past as to render it possible for one acquainted with its details to operate quite extensively on very small capital. The would-be "publisher" secures his manuscript by purchase, or writes it himself if he can, and has it stereotyped and an edition of say, five hundred copies printed by those who do nothing else but stereotype and print, and then he has them bound at a separate bindery all on easy terms if he has credit, advertises for agents in the want column of the leading papers in the territory he seeks to cover these agents pay for the books as delivered to them, and press the sale with an earnestness that recalls the story of "the boy and the gopher," and the margins above first cost are so very liberal that even in this wasteful style of doing business, they all make money. Now we need to avail ourselves of just such opportunities and possibilities as these in the prosecution of our temperance work, though in more business-like form, of course, than the one just outlined; and the object of the present article is to set the thoughtful among us to thinking, and the talkers among us to talking, and the writers among us to writing, upon the ways and means of doing it.

We offer the following scheme as tentative merely: Let it be discussed fully, and dissected and improved upon until the right scheme is developed.

We propose, first, to incorporate under the laws of this State, "The Southern Temperance Publishing Society." The objects of the society should be fully set forth in its charter and such restrictions thrown around it as will prevent misuses and nonsense. We must so fortify ourselves in our Act of Incorporation that the enemy can not capture us. It has been suggested that the sum of ten thousand dollars should be subscribed as capital stock placed as follows: Five hundred dollars each to ten men, two of whom should be citizens of Louisiana, and two of Mississippi, three of Texas, and one each of Alabama, Florida and Georgia. This disposes of one-half the stock. The remaining five thousand should be taken by the various W. C. T. Unions in the States above named, giving Louisiana the preference, so as to keep the stock near home and in small amounts, so as to enlist the largest possible number in the work.

The ten men above suggested should be beyond all question devoted friends of the cause, and the stock should not be transferable except by consent of the Executive Board. This will protect the society against a danger by no means to be overlooked of capture by purchase of stock by those unfriendly to the movement. The Unions, it is thought, could be induced to purchase the stock in shares of, say, twenty-five dollars, not alone by an appeal to their general interest in the cause, but also on purely business grounds. For, in the first place, it is in contemplation to so conduct the business of the association as to make the investment remunerative to all concerned in it, and then it is further intended to supply the Unions with temperance literature at fifty per cent. discount from retail price, and upon the deposit of their certificate of stock, to give them a standing credit to its face value, and to require all agents operating within their territory to purchase what they sell through the local Unions at forty per cent. discount, leaving a margin of ten per cent. profit to the Union—thereby not only directly interesting them in the profits of the sales, but also affording to the Publishing House the best possible protection against bad debts. It is also thought that the work thus offered will prove congenial and profitable to many worthy members of the Unions in all parts of the South.

The character of the books to be published or handled by the house should be determined by an Executive Board, composed of the ten men holding one-half of the capital stock, with as many more men or women to be selected in such a way as to properly represent the Unions holding the balance of the stock, which Board should have also full executive functions in all other matters relating to the conduct of the business.

Our men and women of talent and ready pens—and there are many such all around us—should be put at work here at home, producing attractive temperance tales and sketches, and readable articles of the right sort for publication, all of which, if approved by a committee, should be paid for either by direct payment or [illegible] as might be [illegible] arrangement could [illegible] publishing houses [illegible] their works [illegible] basis and thus a [illegible] perance literature brought to the doors and placed upon the tables of our people.

With such an organization as this actively at work on strictly business principles entirely self-supporting, it would be comparatively an easy matter to start such a paper as the wants of the situation now so loudly demand.

The agents handling the books could, by a suitable commission, be enlisted at once in the work of obtaining subscribers and advertisers for the paper. The paper would reciprocate by advertising the books. Each enterprise would foster and strengthen, morally and financially, the other.

I have an offer in writing from one who has given the matter much thought couched in the following terms:

"If you will raise the above $5,000 from ten such individuals, and from States named, I will obligate myself to raise the other $5,000 in the manner named, or spend equal to $500, in knowing why it can not be done. The first requisite is, however, to dispose of the first $5,000 to such individuals and effect a permanent organization. When this is done then I will follow with good results."

Who will help me "pick up the glove?" As I have stated, the foregoing scheme is offered to invite discussion; but let me insist that no one shall point out a defect in it unless he at the same time suggests a remedy. I am not wedded to this scheme, but it will do no good to destroy it unless replaced by a better.

W. H. GOODALE,
Chair'n Prohibition Ex. Com. of Louisiana.

How to Improve the Prayer Meeting.

1. Think about it all day, and anticipate it with pleasure.
2. Be sure to be in time, if at all possible, and take your seat close up to the platform.
3. Sing cheerfully; bright, joyous singing wonderfully helps to make a lively prayer meeting.
4. If the meeting is left open for any brother to pray, rise quickly and testify how highly you value the privilege of joining in the prayers of the church.
5. When you rise to pray be sure to be brief, burning and believing.
6. When you pray, be thankful to God for every token of blessing he has given the church and the Sunday-schools.
7. When the meeting closes, give a hearty shake of the hand to the stranger, and speak a kindly word to your brethren. Try and make the prayer meeting as much like a family gathering as possible.
8. When you mention the prayer meeting during the week, tell how good and pleasant you found it to be.
9. If this does not improve the prayer meeting, then be more earnest in private prayer on behalf of the church, and resolve, whoever else may be absent, you will not forsake the opportunity of assembling yourselves together with brethern, in earnest waiting on God, until he is pleased to command the blessing. At any rate, resolve, if the prayer meeting be not in a healthy state, it shall not be your fault.—British Workman.

A General Tie-up of all the means of public conveyance in a large city, even for a few hours, during a strike of the employees, means a general paralyzing of trade and industry for the time being, and is attended with an enormous aggregate loss to the community. How much more serious to the individual is the general tie-up of his system, known as constipation, and due to the strike of the most important organs for more prudent treatment and better care. If too long neglected, a torpid or sluggish liver will produce serious forms of kidney and liver diseases, malarial trouble and chronic dyspepsia. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets are a preventive and cure of these disorders. They are prompt, sure and effective, pleasant to take, and positively harmless.

How to Form a Library.

A well-known author recently commended the following rules to be observed by youthful readers who are beginning the collecting of books:

1. Set apart a fixed sum, weekly or monthly, as the case may be, in proportion to your income, and spend that and no more for books.
2. Always devote a portion of your money to acquiring works of reference.
3. Never buy a worthless book or edition.
4. Take care not to buy too many books of one class.
5. Do not, at least until you have a well-stocked library, be deluded into buying sets of an author.
6. Do not spend too much on magazines.
7. Be particular as to the binding of your books.
8. Keep a catalogue of your books, entering in pencil inside each the date of purchase and the cost, and in the catalogue all particulars as to loans.
9. Take care to read what you buy, and buy only what you will read.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Tutt's Pills
REGULATE THE BOWELS.
Habitual Costiveness
Causes derangement of the entire system, and begets diseases that are hazardous to life. Persons of a costive habit are subject to Headache, Defective Memory, Gloomy Forebodings, Nervousness, Fevers, Drowsiness, Irritable Temper and other symptoms, which unfits the sufferer for business or agreeable associations. Regular habit of body alone can correct these evils, and nothing succeeds so well in achieving this condition as Tutt's Pills. By their use not only is the system renovated, but in consequence of the harmonious changes thus created, there pervades a feeling of satisfaction; the mental faculties perform their functions with vivacity, and there is an exhilaration of mind, freedom of thought, and perfect heart's ease that bespeaks the full enjoyment of health.
SECRET OF BEAUTY
Is health. The secret of health is the power to digest a proper quantity of food. This can never be done when the liver does not act its part. It is the driving wheel in the mechanism of man, and when it is out of order the whole system becomes deranged, and Fever, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Constipation, Jaundice, Bilious Colic and General Debility ensue. To restore the functions of the Liver and impart that henalthy which always attends a healthy constitution, Dr. Tutt's Liver Pills are recommended. They are not a cure-all, but are designed solely for the disordered Liver and the diseases which it produces.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Is a peculiar medicine, at present unequaled in curative power, prepared from Sarsaparilla, Dandelion, Mandrake, Dock, Pipsissewa, Juniper Berries, and other well-known and valuable vegetable remedies, by a peculiar combination, proportion and process giving to Hood's Sarsaparilla curative power not possessed by other medicines. It effects remarkable cures where other preparations fail.
Hood's Sarsaparilla
Is the best blood purifier before the public. It eradicates every impurity, and cures Scrofula, Salt Rheum, Boils, Pimples, all Humors, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Sick Headache, Indigestion, General Debility, Catarrh, Rheumatism, Kidney and Liver Complaints, overcomes that tired feeling, creates an appetite, and builds up the system.
Hood's Sarsaparilla
Has met peculiar and unparalleled success at home. Such has become its popularity in Lowell, Mass., where it is made, that whole neighborhoods are taking it at the same time. Lowell druggists sell more of Hood's Sarsaparilla than of all other sarsaparillas or blood purifiers. Sold by druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

Briefs.

We begin to see the "beginning of the end" of the church lottery business. We read the other day this sentence in the Chautauquan "Editor's Notes": "The New York Society for the Prevention of Crime has warned church fairs and charity enterprises that they must suffer the penalty for all chance work." We advise our friends who are so prone to propose such methods of raising money for the Lord's treasury that they had better beat a retreat while the way is open to the rear.

Dr. Young J. Allen's proposition to be one of one hundred persons to give $500 each for the immediate relief of our Mission Board stands as a challenge to the whole church. Are there not several—yea, many—Christians in Mississippi and Louisiana who have grace enough to accept the challenge? If so, send your name to the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE right away, and pay the money to your pastor or to Secretary John, at Nashville, by May 1. Who will be the first to respond to this generous offer of our veteran missionary?

We desire to put our young ministers on their guard at one very important point. Our business as preachers is to study the Word of God, so that we may be able to explain the great facts and doctrines of redemption to the edification of our hearers. We do not undervalue commentaries, but we have found out that a man may study commentaries without studying the Bible. The best commentary on the Bible is the Bible itself, and the best interpreter is the Holy Spirit, who inspired it. Cowper's line is as true of Revelation as it is of Providence:

"God is his own interpreter."

Don't go to the study of God's Word, young brother, handicapped with an extra weight of commentaries. Consult as many commentaries as are in reach, but study the Word that you may be "thoroughly furnished" for the sublime work of preaching the "glorious gospel of the blessed God."

To the young minister who is looking around for a commentator to explain the Word of God, we would say, Be careful not to pass by the greatest of all commentators. He who inspired the Scriptures is alone competent to explain their meaning; and Jesus, referring to the coming of the Holy Spirit, said that one of his special works would be to "take of mine and shew them unto you." The Spirit glorifies Christ by teaching the meaning of his words and works. Redemption, in all its phases as affecting this life and the life to come, is the great lesson for a preacher to learn; and he can only learn it from the Holy Spirit, for only he knows its immense meaning. Therefore, young brother, wait on the Spirit continually, and you will be an effective preacher; and effective preaching will win souls here, and will win a star-gemmed crown hereafter. The instructions of the Holy Spirit put forth from the pulpit constitute the only real power in preaching. "In the power of the Spirit," is followed in Luke's gospel by: "He taught in their synagogues, being glorified of all."

The Boston School Board has appropriated $20,000 to maintain the Kindergarten in connection with the public schools this year.

Our Assessments.

Some of our people are chronic grumblers on the subject of assessments. They regard them as always too high, and nearly always unequally distributed. They forget that there is always a difficulty in adjusting the assessments to the ability of those who are expected to pay, for the simple reason that the assessors have no correct knowledge of that ability, and no definite rule by which to gain that knowledge. The rule which those assessed are accustomed to apply to the case is very misleading. That rule is generally this: "Others are more able to pay than we are." While this may be true in some special cases, it is very untrue when applied generally: for if so applied, it would result in cutting down the assessments to a minimum, of which the most penurious would be heartily ashamed.

For the enlightenment of all, we here give the assessments laid upon the church in our three patronizing Conferences; and we trust our readers will study and pray over the matter. We take the figures from the published Minutes; so that if any mistake occurs, it is not ours.

The North Mississippi Conference has 36,234 members; and, according to the Minutes, the assessments by the Conference Boards amount to the sum of $18,339. This is just about fifty cents per member. That fifty cents represents what each Methodist in the bounds of that Conference is expected to do for his "neighbor" during the coming year. Surely we do love our neighbor fifty cents' worth!

The Mississippi Conference has a membership of 34,205; and the assessments amount to $17,930. This is about fifty-two cents per member. The Methodists of the Mississippi Conference are expected to "love their neighbor" to the enormous amount of fifty-two cents' worth each. They ought not to grumble at that!

The Louisiana Conference has 16,315 members: and the assessments reach $15,880. This is about ninety-seven cents per member; and that ninety-seven cents is the value the Boards put upon the "neighbor love" of the Louisiana Methodist. We can scarcely call that heavy!

Put this all together, and we find that the 86,754 Methodists in Mississippi and Louisiana are expected to pay this year, for carrying on the work of the church outside of their own church walls, the sum of $52,149, which is just sixty cents per member. How that can be burdensome we can not see! That God tolerates those who grumble at these low assessments is one of the evidences that infinite patience yet dwells in his heart.

In contrast to our assessments, Dr. Allen, in his address here, stated that the China Mission Conference, with a membership of only 276, had been assessed for missions alone $700, which is $2 50 per member for missions!

Verily, are we to learn liberality from recent converts from heathenism? Have those converts a religion which prompts them to give $2 50 for missions while our religion grumbles at having to give about thirty cents? As far as we can see, there is nothing to hinder every Methodist in our constituency from giving one whole dollar to missions this year. That small thing can be done; and it would put $80,000 into the missionary treasury, and nobody feel it but the Treasurer. Will it be done? It depends upon the pastors. If each pastor will work earnestly and judiciously to collect $1 for missions from each member, the result at the end of the year will open everybody's eyes!

During the last twenty years the trustees of the Peabody Education Fund have distributed in the Southern States $1,967,749.

Boldness of Speech.

"Boldness" is the word which the Revised Version has in place of "plainness." Having some knowledge of Paul's character, we do not hesitate to believe that this word contains the idea he intended to convey. Plain speech may be very timid speech; and we can not conceive of Paul speaking timid words. Sin, in the church or out of it, is never a timid thing. It is as bold and aggressive as a bold and aggressive Satan can make it. To attempt to overthrow it by timid words is a useless, hopeless task. There is needed a courage born of heaven, and a boldness of speech inspired by the Omnipotent Spirit to qualify and fortify for the battle against sin. Fearful souls are not wanted in the Lord's army. Like the hangers-on and camp-followers of an army, they impede progress and multiply the risks and endanger victories, and actually invite defeat. The church needs preachers of great "boldness of speech;" not rashness, not brag, but true and calm courage that speaks out on all proper occasions.

We believe that such men are coming more and more to the front. They are multiplying in all the denominations. It is a blessed token for the future. Sin, in the church or out of it, will no longer be condoned or squinted at. The principles of righteousness are in eternal opposition to unrighteousness. Religion can make no compromise with wickedness. The more the great Book is read, the plainer and more emphatic do these truths appear; and, as a consequence, the more "boldness of speech" is heard from the pulpit, and the more aggressive becomes the advance column of the Lord's great army. We give our readers a sample of "boldness of speech," which we think is the preaching needed for this day. It is the close of a sermon by Rev. Mark Guy Pearse, in St. James Hall, London, December 16:

"I heard of a man, some years ago, who occupied a position of great responsibility and influence as manager of one of the largest companies in England—as sturdy a bit of honesty as ever God made. A merchant called upon him one day, anxious to sell some steel, and quietly set down before him a roll of notes amounting to £500. "What are these?" asked the manager, taking them up. "Oh!" explained the merchant, in an undertone, "if you will be good enough to accept them with the compliments of the firm." Then it flashed upon the good man that it was a bribe. Crumpling the notes together as so much waste paper, he flung them out of the office door, and said, indignantly: "Sir, if you are not gone after them in one minute, I will kick you there!" That is the Christianity for the nineteenth century—that resoluteness in the soul, in the hand, aye—and in the foot, too, if need be! The Christianity of Jesus Christ is a power stronger than the power of money.

What is the good of all our churches and chapels, our sermons and services, our preachings and prayings, if we can not find in them all a power that can make honest men? What is the gospel of Jesus Christ for if it is not a power to make men keep their hands clean, to make men speak the truth exactly, whether it pays or whether it does not pay? If we can not find in Christianity a power that can secure that, then let us have done with it. Turn the churches and chapels into lunatic asylums, or to some other purpose, and send all ministers at least to earn an honest living. The Christianity of Jesus Christ is a power to make men honest, true, upright, and to keep them so, or it is nothing, and worse than nothing.

Does somebody suggest that you can not do business on those principles? So it has been said. Very well, if that be so, what then? There was a time when men could not be Christians and live; so they were Christians still—and died. If it come to that stern necessity, there is no good reason why we should not go and do likewise. At least be one thing or the other. If the world be what you want supremely, choose it, and make the most of it; but do not call yourself a Christian. If Christ be King, and you profess to be his servant and soldier, then be true to him. No man can serve two masters. "Ye can not serve God and mammon."

Christ is the King. He must reign. Will you bow before him now? Will you, in his strength, gird yourself afresh for his service? kneel at his feet, and pledge yourself to be true and faithful to him, his brave soldier, at all times, and in all places, and in all companies, and amidst all perils, carrying unmurmured this awful trust—the glory of the Lord?

Pulpit Effort.—Pastoral Labor.

BY "JEAN PAUL."

1. Heard preachers, whose pulpit efforts were intolerably monotonous and dry, sneer at the noble endeavors of others who understand the art of attracting, charming, moving audiences, derisively remarking that pulpit pyrotechny would not convert the world.

2. Preaching is sacred oratory. Yes; oratory. Alas! of the superabundance of pedagogism in the pulpit. Teaching is not preaching. Many eloquent exhorters, whom sickly æsthetics denominates "ranters," accomplish more for Christ than the exquisite disquisitions of pedants Many preachers I wot of would not be deemed beside themselves by King Agrippa.

3. We must preach a positive gospel. Since our Christian religion is a matter of faith—beyond the precincts of logical deductions—exclusively, argumentative preaching has a tendency to beget infidelity. "Thus saith the Lord." Then amplify, illustrate, apply. We have to do with the conscience and will, not so much with the understanding of men. Our Master's preaching was didactic throughout.

4. Preachers usually overestimate the intelligence of their hearers. Costly mansions, diamonds and silks are not invariably an index of exquisite culture on the part of their possessors. At any rate, bank presidents, professors of famous universities, lady correspondents of metropolitan newspapers, etc., are all alike miserable sinners. By all means enlist their religious interest, quicken their conscience, precipitate their volition into proper action.

5. Scrupulously avoid slang, coarseness and vulgarity. Our thought must be transparently pure; our language, chaste. "Apples of gold in vessels of silver." On the other hand, we should not assume an elevated position as to literary excellence, trying to raise the masses to our plane. In the pulpit we have nothing to do with literary and educational elevation. Rescue the perishing.

6. Much of the preaching of our day partakes of excessive censoriousness. Loveless tirades against sin and folly abound, making it appear that the preacher finds pleasure in laying bare the wounds, without any anxious desire of healing the same. "Comfort ye, comfort ye my people."

1. For a preacher to say that he has no gifts as a pastor is to stultify himself. God has not called men to the pastorate who have not the ability to do its work.

2. Men of constitutionally social disposition—habitually "thinking with their mouths," the embodiment of the motum perpetuum—are usually not the best pastors; whereas, on the other hand, those naturally averse to much intermingling with men frequently excel. The latter visit from a sense of duty; do their duty; are brief, pertinent and earnest.

3. Intimacy breeds contempt. While cordiality is inevitable, a dignified reserve should always be maintained.

4. Noticed a physician in the sick-chamber. Entering, he at once weighed the surroundings, read the eye of the invalid, felt the pulse, glanced at the tongue, inquired in direct phraseology as to the ailment. Then followed the prescription, and, sans ceremonie, he bowed himself out. Imagine he had spoken of politics or a neighbor's affairs!

5. Those under our pastoral care must be impressed with the fact that we truly love them—love them for Christ's sake; that we are greatly interested in their spiritual welfare.

6. The only prerequisites to make a useful pastor are good common sense, and a heart overflowing with the love of Christ.

NEW ORLEANS, Louisiana.

Imputed Repentance.

Not long ago I heard this question—"Did Christ Repent?"—raised, discussed and answered in the affirmative, with a great glow of enthusiasm and satisfaction, as if some near and new route had been found into the kingdom of God. The speaker, full of earnestness and zeal, seemed very anxious to find some easier way to Christ than the old one. The old way lay through a valley, dark as the shadow of death, where the water was bitter as wormwood and gall. If one could only repent by substitution, or in the person of a substitute, it would make the new way to Christ nearer and less painful than the old one. The conclusion reached was, that Christ Jesus, our substitute, repented with a perfect repentance; and this repentance of Christ was imputed to us, or was counted as our repentance when we believed on him, and, thus, we were wholly relieved from the painful and, to us, impossible task of repenting perfectly for our sins. It was wonderful to see with what greediness some poor souls gulped down this morsel of food. They claimed that it was the most comforting and reasonable view of the doctrine of repentance they had ever heard. I noticed, too, that those who were the least inclined to give up sin and to live without sin were most pleased with this, to them, new and clearer view of repentance.

I need not say that this theory of Christ repenting, and of the imputation of his repentance to those for whom he died, was wholly unsupported by a single quotation from the Word of God. So far as the Word of God is concerned, this theory was as the "baseless fabric of a vision." I observed that those who grasped it so eagerly were the least read in the Divine Word. They took it for granted that it was true because so earnestly and pleasantly uttered by a minister in the sacred desk. The other preacher who, on the next Sunday, undertook to present the doctrine of repentance, as set forth in the Word of God, was berated by some of his own flock as too doctrinal, too theological, wanting in liberality, and all of that sort of stuff. The time has come—perhaps, always was—when there are some who will not endure sound doctrine; but they take in and take on whole cart-loads of unsound doctrine, and cry, "Eureka." Some people may not want it, may decry it; but the church needs, and ought to have, the fundamental doctrines preached now with the same earnestness, power and unction that characterized the apostles and the fathers of our Methodism. It takes strong meat to make strong men and women. Underneath every strong religious character there must be a solid substratum of sound doctrine.

Say what you will, but the church needs strong doctrinal preaching. It need not necessarily be acrimonious or controversial. Shilly-shally, namby-pamby, anecdotal, pathetic, story-telling preaching will the church with a generation dwarfs. Giants, mighty and women of God can not reared on that kind of preaching.

Yours, GILDEROY.

SENATORIA, Mississippi.

Notes.

The city brother who spends seventy-five to one hundred dollars year for car-fare, in riding on Sunday past a weak and struggling church his own faith in order to reach a and wealthy church, where he is specially needed, will have some puzzling questions to answer in one of days to come.

When Dr. Livingstone was complimented for the heroic sacrifices he had made in order to open Africa to Christian missions, his reply was:

People talk of the sacrifices I made in spending so large a portion of life in Africa. Can you call that sacrifice which is only a small payment on that great debt to God which can never be fully discharged? Say, rather, that it is a privilege. I have never made a sacrifice.

How is it with you, brother? Haven't you rather boasted sometimes of what you have endured in Christ's cause?

The great thing for the church to do is to face bravely the terrible facts by which she is surrounded, and work earnestly and heartily to bring those facts to an amicable adjustment to her own machinery for propagating the religion of our Lord. There is too much truth in what a great preacher said the other day: "Ninety-nine hundredths of the church would, if they were comfortably buried, be missed only by the baker and the tailor." What is needed is, every man at work for Christ.

The London Methodist Times, giving an account of the first love-feast of the West End Mission, held recently in Wardour Hall, says: "After the meeting was opened, without a moment's hesitation, men and women spoke all over the building briefly, to the point and with wonderful power. For two hours the testimony went on without a break, except to sing from time to time with indescribable energy and enthusiasm." When the leader announced the time to close, three "pleading brethren were all on their feet together." The building was crowded to its utmost capacity. Would not such a love-feast be a wonderful thing in your church?

Paul's celebrated passage in II Corinthians iii, 18, is rendered in the Revised Version in this manner: "But we all, with unveiled face, reflecting as a mirror the glory of the Lord, are transformed into the same image from glory to glory, even as from the Lord, the Spirit." The idea is quite different from the old version. The minister, having Christ in him the hope of glory, his very countenance catches the glow of that inner glory and as a mirror reflects that glory out upon his hearers, and in the repetition of this process he is transformed from glory to glory as from the Lord, the Spirit. How wonderful is the ministry committed to men!

Class meetings seem to be no better attended in England than in this country. A writer in the London Methodist Times says that during two quarters he attended twenty-six class-meetings. There were 405 names on the class books, and the total attendance was 159. He traveled eighty-one miles to attend these meetings, and holding them took fifty-two hours of his time. We have been hearing for a long time of the popularity of the class meeting among the Wesleyans. But an average attendance at meeting of six shows that our information was hardly correct. The leader in the above meetings seems to have had some zeal, for we think not many leaders in this country would travel three miles to hold a class meeting and then spend two hours in holding it.

The St. Louis Advocate, speaking of the itinerancy and making appointments, says: "Never favor the man at the expense of the church—Christ first, the church next and the preacher as servant of both." If that rule were followed by the appointing powers, wouldn't it raise a ruction? If it had been followed during our past history, wouldn't we have been fifty years ahead of where we are now? Would not such a practice beget in the ministry that ancient esprit de corps which seems to be almost lost, viz: the martyr spirit? Would the appointing power now send a man to a place, when there was a certainty that he would be killed for Jesus' sake? And, if the man were appointed to such a place, would he go? That is the spirit which prevailed in the early days, and it is the spirit which always wins. Paul said, "We preach ourselves your servants for Jesus' sake;" and Jesus said, "He that loseth his life for my sake shall find it." The whole difficulty in adjusting appointments to works lies in that maxim of the common law of our church, that "every man must have an appointment."

Personals.

Rev. T. W. Dye, formerly of North Mississippi Conference, sends us greetings from the Land of Flowers, which we highly appreciate. His address is Clear Water Harbor, Fla.

A brother in Mississippi writes these encouraging words: "The dear old ADVOCATE gets better all the time. I read it with increased interest every week." One of the ancients said: "A word fitly spoken, how good it is!" And we may add, How much good it does.

We will give a reasonable price for an office cat that can eat a certain class of poetry, and at the same time survive long enough to give our readers the beneficial results of such valuable service.

A writer in Southwestern Methodist says: "We do not believe that there are 500,000 Southern Methodists, and, perhaps, not that number by one-fourth off, who read our church literature, or take any interest in the benevolent enterprises of the church!" We had occasion, a few weeks ago, to examine the Newspaper Annual for 1887, and found that the whole number of subscribers to all our church papers does not exceed 140,000. How is that for a reading church?

A large circle of friends will be grieved to hear of the death of Mrs. Annie M. Handridge, of Como, Miss. She died January 21. An excellent Christian woman has received her reward.

One of our young preachers writes: "I have reached my new field of labor safe and stood after a ride of 231 miles on horseback." Verily, the "circuit rider" still goeth about over the land.

Two ladies in Livingston parish, say in a note to the editor: "We wish to make it known through the ADVOCATE that we solicit help from a good temperance lecturer." Who will respond to this call? Temperance work is a need all over the land; but these ladies think it needed most in the above parish.

Rev. R. A. Durham, of the Texas Conference, and recently appointed to Huntsville station, died at Dallas, January 18.

Dr. Kelley, having heard that somebody said he had made his retraction to the Board of Missions because he was afraid of losing his office, has published a card in which he retracts his retraction, and we suppose that he stands now where he did before the Board meeting in November. In all probability the Board will ask him to resign his office, and in all probability he will decline to resign and then—what?

A good sign of Methodist progress in Mississippi Sound is in the fact that Bay St. Louis is now a station, whereas five years ago it received just a part of the fifth Sunday.

Rev. David L. Hunn, the oldest graduate of Yale College at his death, died in Buffalo, January 29, aged ninety-eight.

At the court ball, the Czar invited the Austrian embassador to open the first quadrille. That is the latest from Russia, and it is regarded as an augury of peace!

A family of negroes in Texas have just come in possession of $18,000,000, inherited from a Mexican grandmother. There are six of them, and they drew the money from the Bank of England, where it had been on deposit. We learn all this from the Galveston News.

A good sister who had the misfortune to break her ankle, says the ADVOCATE was like "the visit of a friend, coming every week in my lonely hours, cheering and comforting me." Those two words describe the mission of our paper—it cheers and comforts.

A private note from Bro. Bowen gives the intelligence of the death of Mrs. Theobalds, of Greenville, Miss. She was a decided Christian, and a devoted Methodist for seventy-five years. Her beautiful faith was strong, and her testimony perfectly satisfactory to the last. A suitable memoir will be furnished by her former pastor.

Notice.

Rev. C. C. Campbell has been removed from Union circuit and appointed to Paulding circuit; and Rev. R. S. Gaven, local, has been placed in charge of Union circuit, both of Meridian district.

R. D. NOUSWORTHY, P. E.

"What ye sow, that shall ye also reap." If we sow good seed, we may confidently expect good results; hence, he knows every man and woman to carefully consider where the best seed may be obtained. Seed that is warranted pure, fresh, and raised on his own farms, is what the veteran seed grower, James J. H. Gregory, of Marblehead, Mass., offers the public, and is well-known integrity makes his warranty a valuable one. Send for his 1888 catalogue.

"How Can I Go?"

Here is a paragraph from a letter just received by the Missionary Secretary from Dr. Allen: He says:

Please announce, 1. That I am now calling for one hundred subscribers of $500 each—the object being to relieve the Board of its embarrassments, and thereby secure, beyond a peradventure, the re-enforcement and relief of all our mission fields. 2. That I propose to lead that subscription, not that I am able to give that amount, but because I, more than any other perhaps, appreciate the urgency and the relief that such a measure will bring to our work—the whole work. Other subscriptions of lesser amounts, of course, will be gladly received, but it is hoped that in no case will this special call be allowed, to interfere with personal contributions on account of regular assessments at the respective churches or charges. Let us take courage, my dear Dr. John, and press this matter. Let subscribers send their names direct to me, and the money with names to you. I want the names for the list. We can relieve the Board and the work by God's grace; so let us work a campaign in earnest. I wish to make this call through the papers, because I can reach so few personally, and I know there are one hundred men in our church who can respond to such a call. This special call met, the Board will then have no difficulty in meeting the calls for re-enforcements, now so urgently made from all our fields. Help! help! my soul cries. How can I go back to China—to prison and chains?

Yours cheerfully, hopefully,

YOUNG J. ALLEN.

It is a moving call. "How can I go back to China—to prison and chains?" his great soul cries. These are not strained words, uttered for effect; we have talked with him, and know how he feels that the present limitations upon our mission work in China make it painful as a prison to the earnest workers crying for help there. Who will answer this cry? Who of them able to respond is hard-hearted enough to refuse?

Items of Interest.

The names of thirty-six widows of soldiers, who served in the Revolutionary War, are still on the rolls of the pension office. The average age of the pensioners is eighty-two years.

Recent legislation in Washington Territory has given the ballot to the women.

The Senate of Mississippi, by a unanimous vote, has passed a bill prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors within five miles of Whitworth Female College, Brookhaven, Miss.

Dr. Cuyler's church paid last year $2,550 for city missions, a little more than one dollar per member. This item is for our church members in cities.

In twenty-four Presbyterian colleges reporting 2,180 students, 1,478 are reported as church members, and 2,058 are engaged in Bible study.

Dr. Tiffany, of Philadelphia, attended five funerals in three days, and the united ages of the persons buried were 390 years!

Our brethren of the Methodist Episcopal Church have fixed the downward limit of their missionary figures this year at $1,200,000! Why can't we do as well in proportion?

A judge in Pennsylvania has decided that it is unlawful for a camp meeting association to charge an entrance fee on Sunday.

It is said that all the business houses put together in Pittsburg outnumber the saloons by only forty-four.

City Mission.

The Board of Managers of the City Mission will please meet in the pastor's office of Carondelet Street Church, at seven P. M., Tuesday, February 7, 1888; and the Association monthly meeting will be held in the basement of Carondelet Street Church the following Monday, February 13, at seven P. M.

Rev. James J. Billingsley, the city missionary, will be present. Let there be a full attendance.

700 ALBUM VERSES. J. S. OGILVIE & Co., publishers, 57 Rose Street, N. Y. By mail, postpaid, for fifteen cents in stamps.

We have just received a book with the above title which we recommend to our readers as being a great help to all who may be invited to inscribe a sentiment of affection or regard in a friend's album, as it contains seven hundred excellent selections.

GOSPEL HYMNS NO. 5. BY MESSRS. SANKEY, MCGRANAHAN, STEBBINS. Published by Biglow & Main, New York. Price $30 per hundred.

This is equal in merit to any of the numbers of the Gospel Hymns Series.

THE HEREAFTER. 12mo. cloth, sixty cents; paper, twenty-five cents.

An interesting case of the readiness of an unbiblical newspaper to settle almost any question of heaven or earth is that of the Boston Herald, on Christmas Day, propounding: "What Are the Strongest Proofs and Arguments in Support of the Belief in a Life Hereafter?" and printing short answers from twenty-three religious teachers, mostly Boston clergymen. The Herald estimates its readers that day at a million. D. Lothrop Company make a book of the answers, connecting each with the author's autograph signature, title, church and seat: almost instructive book, the effect of which is to show what leading ministers say when suddenly called on for proof of their central doctrine. The book is all the more useful for being short. It illustrates also the newspaper way of treating a question even of faith.

PERIODICALS.

—Cassell's Family Magazine, for February, has a table of varied contents, among which almost everyone may find something of interest. The "Gatherer" department is specially interesting. Cassell & Company, 739-741 Broadway, N. Y. Price $1 50.

—The Chautauquan, for February, is fully up to its high character as to choice reading matter. Dr. Buckley, Miss Willard, Bishops Hurst, Merrit and Hendrix, Joseph Cook, Maurice Thompson, Julia Ward Howe, all appear in this number. Theodore L. Flood, editor. Meadville, Penn. Price $1 50.

—Popular Science Monthly is crowded, from cover to cover, with scientific articles on several very important subjects. Those interested in these matters will find this monthly an interesting one. D. Appleton & Co., New York. Price $5.

—The Converted Catholic Monthly is edited by Father O'Connor, and is designed for the enlightenment of Roman Catholics and their conversion to Evangelical Christianity. James A. O'Conner, publisher, 50 Bible House, N. Y. Price $1.

Mr. Philip Werlein has in stock a beautiful selection of organs. Anyone thinking of purchasing should call and see them before purchasing. Mr. Werlein's terms are moderate; he sells cheaper than ever before, and guarantees his instruments as first-class in every respect. There is no better judge of an organ, and anyone in the country can safely leave such a matter to him, and be assured that their order will receive prompt attention and prove satisfactory in every respect.

138 Gravier street.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of this company, held on the tenth instant, it was unanimously resolved to pay to the stockholders, ON DEMAND, the regular semi-annual interest dividend of FOUR PER CENT. on the capital stock.

SCOTT MCGEHEE, Secretary.

New Orleans, Jan. 11, 1888.

Another Extraordinary Offer.

After this date we will include in our club arrangement the New York Weekly World, the price of which, including all postage, will be three dollars. This amount will entitle the subscriber to one copy of the "World's History of the United States," post paid.

This history is on a new plan. It is the record of the events of our history in the order in which they happened. There are no moralizings, no opinions put forth, no criticisms offered in regard to anything. It is not a political record merely, but one of all sorts of facts that have contributed to make our history. Discoveries, inventions, financial and literary matters, are all noted. One merit of the work is, that it can not grow old. The date of an event, when once ascertained, is fixed for all time. The book has twenty-four very good illustrations. We regard it as a valuable book for every student.

Old and new subscribers are entitled to the premium. Subscribers who have already paid will receive the History and the Weekly World one year by sending one dollar. Cash to accompany all orders.

EDUCATIONAL.

Mansfield Female College.

THE FALL TERM will open Wednesday, September 15, 1887.

The Faculty has been strengthened by the accession of Rev. M. S. Watts, of Virginia, who will have the discipline of the College, and Prof. D. F. Buddle, also of Virginia, who will manage the lingering department. Both these gentlemen are experienced in school work, and they, with their families, will add much to the social advantages of the pupils.

Other highly qualified teachers have been secured for the Literary, Music and Art Departments.

Annual rate for board and tuition from one hundred and sixty-five to one hundred and eighty-five dollars, according to class. Music, instrumental or vocal, and art lessons, five dollars per month of four weeks each.

Instruction in French, ten dollars per year. Use of piano for practice, ten dollars. Total expense for the year for board, tuition, and single course in music or art, paid in advance, two hundred dollars.

A deposit of five dollars for each term, must be made for purchase of books and stationery.

Pupils must furnish their own bed-clothing and pillows, towels and toilet articles.

The College is the property of the Louisiana Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the daughters of members of this body receive free tuition in the Literary and Music Departments.

Owing to the steadily increasing patronage during the past four years, the Board of Managers have made arrangements for increasing the capacity and comfort of the buildings, and beautifying the grounds.

1888. GREGORY'S SEED CATALOGUE. 1888.

Warranted Seed. I have founded my business on the belief that the best seeds are grown directly from the grower, having a large proportion of my seed crop grown in the Northern States and put by, as you see my Vegetable and Flower Seed Catalogue for 1888, FREE to every second daughter of Adam. It is profusely illustrated with engravings made directly from photographs of vegetables grown on my seed farms. Besides an immense variety of standard seed, you will find in some valuable new vegetables not found in any other catalogue. As the original introducer of the Beet, Burbank and Early Ohio Potatoes, Hubbard Squash, Deerhead Cabbage, Very Corn, and a score of other valuable vegetables, I have the confidence of the public.

Our Young People.

LOST BABY'S NAME.

BY ANNA F. BURNHAM.

"I'm losted! Could you find me, please?"
Poor little frightened baby!
The wind had tossed her golden fleece,
The stones had scratched her dimpled knees,
I stooped and lifted her with ease,
And softly whispered, "Maybe."

"Tell me your name, my little maid,
I can't find you without it."
"My name is Shiny-eyes," she said.
"Yes, but your last name?" She shook her head.
"Up to my house they never said
A single word about it."

"But, dear," I said, "what is your name?"
"Why, didn't you hear me told you?
Just Shiny-eyes." A bright thought came:
"Yes, when you're good; but when they blame
You, little one, is it just the same
When mamma has to scold you?"

"My mamma never scolds," she moans,
A little blush ensuing,
"'Cept when I've been a-frowing stones,
And then she says (the culprit owns)
'Mehhitabel Sapphira Jones,
What has you been a-doing?'"

The editor takes pleasure in introdneing to the "little cousins" a young Corean, who is attending the Anglo-Chinese College in Shanghai, China. The letter is one written to Dr. Allen, the president of that college, now traveling through the bounds of our church in the interests of our mission work, and by him given to the editor to publish for our young readers, that they may see that even a boy born a heathen may become as one of them. Some of our little folks may know Miss Lipscomb of whom he speaks so favorably. The editor hopes that all our young readers will take a deep interest in our missionary work, and give all they can to insure its continual progress. Here is the letter:

Dr. Y. J. Allen—

My Dear Sir: I have the pleasure to write a few lines to express my sincere wishes for your happiness after the long voyage which you have recently made. I am happy to say that I am in good health, and that the teachers and pupils of the college are all well. The temperance society works very well, having now more than forty members. Miss Hamilton and Lipscomb, who have won the regard and esteem of all the boys in the college, labor very earnestly for the welfare of the society. Recently, six boys expressed their desire of being saved, and three of them are to be baptized next Sunday. Wishing you a happy New Year, and hoping to see you before very long, I am, sir, Yours affectionately,

T. H. YOUNG,

ANGLO-CHINESE COLLEGE,
SHANGHAI, CHINA, Dec. 8, 1887.

MR. EDITOR: As I have never written to your good paper, and I do so enjoy reading the many letters I see from the little cousins, I am going to write you a short letter. We have a good pastor and a nice Sunday-school, and I think I have the sweetest and best teacher in the Sabbath-school. I will answer that problem, and hope I am right. The numbers to be added are:

59 38
40 76

100

The addition of the fractions give one, which, added to the whole numbers, make one hundred. I will close by asking a question: Whose is the word "gold" first found in the Bible? Hoping my letter will escape the waste-basket, I am,

Your little friend,

ALICE F. WHITEMAN.

VICTORIA, Texas.

(This is also a correct solution of the problem.—ED.)

MR. EDITOR: I will write you a short letter this morning, as it is too cold to go to school. My mother takes your paper and likes it very well. I live about a mile and a half from Aurora. I used to live in Crystal Springs, Miss. I have relatives there. My Grandpa Barnes lives there. I have two grown sisters. One of them lives at Dallas, Texas, and the other at Decatur, Texas. My oldest brother lives at Whitney, Texas. I have two nephews and one niece: Their names are Irene Tinsley, Clarence Edgar Momand and Alwin Barnes Momand. Edgar will soon be two years old. We all think he is the smartest boy in the world. He says his prayers and asks the blessing. I had another niece, but God saw fit to take her to heaven; she was too pure for this wicked world. Her name was Willie Laurie Tinsley. I will close by asking one question: Why did Adam call his wife Eve?

Your little friend,

BERTIE B. BARNES.

MR. EDITOR: I will write you a short letter this morning. This is my first letter to your dear paper. It is very cold this morning; the ground is all covered with snow and sleet. My Grandma takes the ADVOCATE and likes it very much. My mother was raised in Crystal Springs, Miss. Her maiden name was Miss Willie Barnes. I am visiting my Grandma Barnes, and mamma don't know anything about my writing this letter. Where is the word "gold" first found in the Bible? I will close for this time.

Your little friend,

ETTIE TINSLEY.

DECATUR, Texas.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl eleven years old. I would like to join your little band. I have never written a letter to your valuable paper, but my elder sister and brother have. I feel like I would be proud to see my letter in print. Please do not let it find the waste-basket. I will answer Rhoda Bush's question: "Rhoda" can be found in Acts xii, 13. Wilna M. Chichester's question: "To the Unknown God" can be found in Acts xvii, 23. I will ask some of the little band a question: What did Zechariah prophesy of Christ?

Your little friend,

MINNIE HOLT.

BENTON, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl ten years old. I have two sisters and two brothers. I go to Sunday-school twice a month. My uncle, Philip Ballard, is superintendent. Papa is teacher of my class. Papa takes your paper; that is, he takes the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. I hope you will put this in your paper, and if this one letter escapes the waste-basket, I may write again. I remain, Your friend,

MAY E. BALLARD.

AMITE CITY, Louisiana.

The Model Girl.

Cheerful, but never boisterous, happy, but never thoughtless, our bonnie lassie is the peacemaker, the universal helper, the sympathizer, the active worker of her home. Whatever is wanted she can supply; and she can do all that is needed for the comfort of every one. She is eyes to the blind, feet to the lame, hands to the incapable. If anything is to be done for grandma, it is she who does it. When mother is ill, it is she who waits on her, who looks after the little ones—and does the housekeeping. Loving, unselfish, energetic, industrious, she has no ambition outside the circle of home and its affections; and she does not pretend to intellectual merit. She adores her mother and lives in perfect peace with her sisters, which does not prevent her giving her whole heart to her lover, nor make her less than helpful and tender to a comparative stranger. She is of the most perfect type of womanhood, content to live in the shade of home and a strong man's love. Wherever she goes she will carry peace and create happiness—her influence will be essentially pure and gentle. She will know nothing of "burning questions," so she will not be able to discuss them. The deeper riddles of life and morality, of society and humanity she will not touch, nor will they trouble the serene loveliness of her thoughts. All that she knows or ever will know is, that life is sweet because of her affections and her duties—because her conscience is void of offense before God and man—because she knows neither idleness nor repining, neither the pangs of unsatisfied ambition, nor the fiery pangs of passion, of jealousy, of envy, or of hate. Love with her is sunshine, not flame, and home is her altar, not dungeon.—St. James Gazette.

Household.

A Bright Home.

Nursery and play-rooms should have plenty of sunshine. The ancient Athenians attributed much of their beauty and health to sun-baths which were taken regularly. In some hospitals there is a uniform system of "sun cure," where the patient is subjected to the direct rays of the sun for different lengths of time. Little children should have plenty of sunshine. It is just as necessary in order to make them strong and healthy, as to insure the growth and strength of a plant.

We live too much in the dark. It is fashionable to have the shades drawn down, and so we draw them down regardless of the fact that we are shutting out health and freshness and sweetness, and inviting mustiness and gloom and disease to our homes.

Have the walls of the nursery painted or kalsomined; never paper them, for paper often contains poisonous coloring matter. An instance of its effect was recently shown in the little child of a friend. Mischievous as all babies are, he secured the wash-rag in his mother's absence and industriously washed the wall-paper (which was of a brown and gold color), sucking the rag at intervals. Though the mother was away but a few minutes, the child had taken enough poison into its system to throw it into convulsions and seriously endanger its life.

See that your house is furnished so that every part can be used, and so that the children will feel at home and at liberty to play and enjoy themselves.

The happiest home I know, is one that is comfortably and tastefully, but not luxuriously furnished, where the boys have their corner and plenty of places to put things and where they can invite their friends. A part of their bed-room is fitted up in winter as a shop, where they can enjoy themselves without fear of spoiling or breaking things. They are the envy and their mother is the admiration of their boy friends, all of whom say they like to visit here better than any place else. The home is not as showy as many another, but from its door will issue men that will be nobler, gentler, better men, for the kindly interest and thoughtfulness of the mother's love that could make "a place for the boys."—George Egbert Symonds.

SAVE SOMETHING.—Young man, young woman, put something away for the days which are coming. Times may not always be so good as now. Your health and ability to earn may not be so vigorous a few years hence as they are now. The decay which comes with age is the lot of all. Therefore, save while you are young and strong and thrifty. What spectacle is more sad than frail old age struggling from day to day for the necessaries of life? And what an innumerable number of such misfortunes could have been averted, if the fruits of younger years of industry had been garnered!

According to the census of 1880, the aggregate wages paid in Allegheny county alone amounted to over $22,000,000 yearly. It is probable that they amount now to $30,000,000. The reports of the savings banks show that not only a goodly number of wage-winners save a portion of their earnings, but that many of these are small earners. This verifies the old saw that "where there's a will there's a way."

Now, let everybody try the experiment of saving something. Start with a dollar; if you have no more, it will be a nest-egg. The savings bank will take good care of it, and pay interest on it. Then add another and another, as often as you can. You will find it a pleasure while in progress, and an individual comfort in old age.—Pittsburg Penny Press.

The Coloring Comet.

It is fancied by a grateful patron that the next comet will appear in the form of a huge bottle, having "Golden Medical Discovery" inscribed upon it in bold characters. Whether this conceit and high compliment will be verified, remains to be seen, but Dr. Pierce will continue to send forth that wonderful Vegetable compound, and potent eradicator of disease. It has no equal in medicinal and health-giving properties, for imparting vigor and tone to the liver and kidneys, in purifying the blood, and through it cleansing and renewing the whole system. For scrofulous humors, and consumption, or lung scrofula, in its early stages, it is a positive specific. Druggists.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Luxuriant Hair

Can only be preserved by keeping the scalp clean, cool, and free from dandruff, and the body in a healthful condition. The great popularity of Ayer's Hair Vigor is due to the fact that it cleanses the scalp, promotes the growth of the hair, prevents it from falling out, and gives it that soft and silky gloss so essential to perfect beauty.

Frederick Hardy, of Roxbury, Mass., a gentleman fifty years of age, was fast losing his hair, and what remained was growing gray. After trying various dressings with no effect, he commenced the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. "It stopped the falling out," he writes; "and, to my great surprise, converted my white hair (without staining the scalp) to the same shade of brown it had when I was 25 years of age."

Ten Years Younger.

Mrs. Mary Montgomery, of Boston, writes: "For years I was compelled to wear a dress cap to conceal a bald spot on the crown of my head; but, now I gladly lay the cap aside, for your Hair Vigor is bringing out a new growth. I could hardly trust my senses when I first found my hair growing; but there it is, and I am delighted. I look ten years younger."

A similar result attended the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor by Mrs. O. O. Prescott, of Charlestown, Mass., Miss Bessie H. Bedlue, of Burlington, Vt., Mrs. J. J. Burton, of Bangor, Me., and numerous others.

The loss of hair may be owing to impurity of the blood or derangement of the stomach and liver, in which case a course of Ayer's Sarsaparilla or of Ayer's Pills, in connection with the Vigor, may be necessary to give health and tone to all the functions of the body. At the same time, it cannot be too strongly urged that none of these remedies can do much good without a persevering trial and strict attention to cleanly and temperate habits.

MILLSAPS—MRS. PINK MILLSAPS, nee Davis) was born in Copiah county, Miss., November 22, 1858; married to Mr. W. F. Millsaps, December 22, 1877; died October 28, 1887. Reared by parents consecrated to God—the pride, the pet, the almost idol of the entire household—she grew up as pure and bright as a sunbeam. At the age of fourteen she took upon herself the vows of the church, which she faithfully kept and magnified by her consistent life and triumphant death, and has now gone to receive her spotless robe of immortality. Graduated from Whitworth College, 1876; here she won the admiration of all by her dignified and lady-like bearing, smiling face and sweet disposition. Talented and accomplished in no ordinary degree, beautiful in person and character, she was well prepared to adorn her place in life. Her home life was beautiful. This was her kingdom, and she ruled with the sceptre of love; she brought all the love of her affectionate nature. Her husband's interests and friends were hers. How nobly she met the duties in every relationship the fearful vacancy speaks only too audibly. She was indeed no ordinary woman, always bright and courageous; everything was always for the best. When first stricken she was hopeful of recovery, adding, "The Lord's will is my will." It was a hard struggle to leave the loved ones—the jewels which God had given her; but by the aid of an unseen hand she gave up all. Soon after she became unconscious, and so continued until all the glories were revealed in the beautiful "city of God," and thus passed away like a beautiful dream.

What pen can picture the desolation in that once happy home! The sweet voice silenced, the sweet smile faded—all so lonely and desolate? May God send the Healer to comfort the bereaved, for truly it is no ordinary trial to lose such a character. Such a wound can not be bound up save in the "balm of Gilead," and by a Savior's hand. God never loves us more than when he sends us bitter troubles. May they see the mercy-drops on their cup of sorrow and be able to love more and more the hand which is too wise to err, too good to be unkind! Heaven is so much nearer and dearer when filled with those we love. A FRIEND.

EDMUNDS—On Friday night, August 12, 1887, at the home of Mr. Wes. Hope, near Farmersville, Collin county, Texas, WILLIAM HAMMON EDMUNDS passed away. He was born in St. Helena parish, La., May 10, 1859, and was twenty-eight years, three months and two days old. Though born and raised in Louisiana, he was far away from the home of his nativity and those who loved him best in a strange land, but not among strangers. He was with dear friends who tenderly and attentively nursed him, and, with the assistance of an eminent physician, did all that care and attention could; but God claimed him for his own, and his young life went out forever, and those who loved him best will mourn his death as only a fond mother and loving sisters and brother can mourn.

Oh! the anguish of that mother's heart when the sad news came to her that her boy was dead! And the burning tears that were shed when the letter came that told the sisters their dear brother was dead! Bereaved, broken-hearted mother, cease your weeping. Christian faith rises superior to earth's sorrow. The sufferings of this present time are not to be compared to the further glory. Be faithful to the great trust the Master gave you, and some bright morning in eternity, in that sun-bright clime, away beyond the sorrows of earth, above the starry skies your dear boy may come again into your loving arms, garlanded in immortality and eternal life. Though not a professor of religion, we sincerely believe that this dear boy's soul has rest. He believed in the Bible and its teachings, and in all his dealings with his fellowmen he showed a Christian spirit; and his devotion to his mother and sister, whose comfort and happiness was his heart's delight, would commend his soul to the mercy of God. He came to Mr. Hope's just one week before his death, and, though sick, not one word of regret ever escaped his lips, and when the end came his gentle spirit passed away without a struggle, without a murmur, and grief-stricken friends wiped the death-damp from his manly brow, and when all was over buried him quietly, reverently in the little graveyard at McMinn Chapel. A FRIEND.

HARRINGTON—Died, in Lauderdale county, Miss., near Cooper's Normal College, December 11, 1887 HELEN LOTTIE ESTELL HARINGTON, daughter of Bro. and Sister Hally P. and Mary E. Harington, aged fourteen years, five months and nineteen days. The deceased was an interesting, intelligent and lovely young woman, who was admired and loved by all who knew her, as the anxious and paternal care manifested by many watchful friends throughout her illness would clearly prove. Many sleepless nights were spent by weeping parents, brothers and sisters and consoling friends around her bed of suffering; and nothing was spared that could be done to stay the afflicting hand of an all-wise Providence, who is to wise too err and too good to do wrong. That fluttering pulse that seemed so long to waver on the eve of an eternal separation, creating in turn hopes and disappointments, finally quivered away, as the declining rays of a western sun, into that calm that wafted the gentle spirit of precious Lottie into the bright realms of eternal day. Weeping parents, mourn not for your departed idol. She is gone forever from this earth; but she is at home in heaven, where pains and tortures will never more be felt. Dry your tearful eyes, and let the remembrance that our heavenly Father does all things for the best be your consolation. He that afflicts will heal your sorrows, though your loved in death is sleeping.

H. P. LEWIS.

COLLIER—In Wesson, Miss., January 4, 1888, JAMES P. COLLIER died. His parents were Mrs A. E. and the late M. T. Collier. He was born December 20, 1869, and was "born again" before he was fifteen years old. During a revival, conducted by the Rev. Thomas Cameron, at Black Hawk, Miss., Jimmie professed conversion and joined the church. He had before that time been dedicated to God by his pious parents and brought up "in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." His mother says of him, that "he never wavered in his faith, which grew brighter and brighter as his sweet, patient spirit plumed its wings for its heavenward flight." For a long time he was an invalid, and through many weary months he suffered much, but was sustained by divine grace. A few days before his death he assured his mother that he had no fear of death, for his trust was with Jesus. God kept him in perfect peace. The frail body was laid away in the grave in the hope of a glorious resurrection. He has joined the many loved ones gone before, and with them is waiting and watching for those who yet remain to work for Jesus.

T. L. MELLEN.

RICHARDSON—Died at her home, near Grand Cane, La., November 16, 1887, MRS. M. A., wife of J. R. Richardson, aged sixty-seven years. She was a woman of marked refinement, dignity and devoutness of character. Her former years her home was famous for the elegant hospitality which it dispensed, and for the bright and cultivated companies which used to gather beneath its roof. She was a wise and self-forgetful mother. Happy in the faithful love of her husband, she was ever watchful for the purity, culture and piety of her children. Almost from their infancy there existed between her children and herself the sweetest and most trustful intimacy. It was her high ambition to see them well established in useful positions in life. Christ was ever her Rock, and upon him she nestled in quiet hope, until the death-angel came and then she passed away as she had lived, leaning upon the staff of her faith. Her loved ones took her silent dust and buried it in the cemetery near this place. Sleep, dear one, till Christ shall call thy body back to life, and give the crown that knows no fading.

A LOVING DAUGHTER.

General Geary, while Governor of Pennsylvania, wrote Dr. Shallenberger: "I regard your Antidote as a public benefaction. In my case, as well as in many others known to me, it has proven an invaluable remedy for chills; not only prompt in curing, but singularly pleasant and beneficial in its general effects upon the system."

Race and Language.

A striking and, indeed, crucial test of the decisive value of language in ethnological classification is found in the case of Madagascar. In seeking the origin of its inhabitants we should naturally turn first to Africa; and there, in fact, we find, among the Nubians and the Hamitic tribes of the eastern coast, people bearing sufficient resemblance in shape, features, complexion, and hair, to the natives of Madagascar, to warrant the opinion of their relationship, in the absence of any stronger evidence to the contrary. Remembering, however, that the Arabians in early times had much intercourse with the great African island, we turn to their country and find in the tribes of Yemen a similar resemblance. We then, perhaps, consider how readily the swarthy and curly-haired Dravidians of Southern Hindostan might have found their way to Madagascar, with the help of the northeast monsoon. To decide from which of these probable sources the ancestors of the Madagascar natives were derived, we have recourse to their language, and we ascertain, beyond the shadow of a doubt, that they were neither Africans nor Arabians nor Dravidians, but Malays. To reach their new abode they had to cross the entire width of the Indian Ocean, a distance of three thousand miles. This origin is a fact which no ethnologist now thinks of questioning; and the only decisive evidence to establish it is the language of the islanders. It is true, that when we have ascertained this fact by the linguistic evidence, we find ample material in the character and customs of the people to confirm it; but without the positive test of language this subsidiary evidence would be altogether insufficient as proof of such derivation. No one who considers the case of Madagascar can reasonably doubt that in language, and language only, resides the true distinction of races.—Popular Science.

Origin of the Telescope and Pendulum.

It seems scarcely credible that that wonderful, far-seeing instrument which brings the most distant worlds under our envious ken, should have had its origin in child's play; yet so it is. The children of a spectacle-maker in Middleburgh were allowed at times—probably on wet days—to play in their father's workshop. On one of these occasions, as they were amusing themselves with some spectacle-glasses, one of them placed two together, one before the other, and looked through them at a weathercock on a neighboring steeple. To the child's astonishment, the vane appeared larger and nearer to it than when seen through one glass only. The father was called to see the sight, and, struck with the singular fact, resolved to turn it to advantage. His first plan was to fix two glasses on a board by means of brass rings, which might be brought nearer to each other or further off at pleasure. He was thus enabled to see distant objects better and more distinct than before. The next improvement was the glass in a tube, which may be termed the first telescope. Galileo soon heard of it, and applied it to astronomical purposes.

The mention of this great man recalls to mind his accidental discovery of the pendulum. A correct time measure had long been a desideratum in the world. Water-clocks had been tried and found wanting; Alfred's candles would not do for the world at large. Another lucky accident must supply the want; and it came as follows: The future great astronomer, though then only a young man, was in the cathedral of Pisa. One of the vergers had been supplying a lamp with oil, which hung from the roof, and left it swinging to and fro. This caught Galileo's attention, and, carefully noting it, he observed that it vibrated in equal times, and first conceived the idea of applying it to the measurement of time. It cost him fifty years to complete his pendulum.—Selected.

If you have catarrh, you are in danger, as the disease is liable to become chronic and affect your general health, or develop into consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla cures catarrh by purifying and enriching the blood, and building up the system. Give it a trial.

CHRISTIAN CONVERSATION.—It is startling to think what Christian conversation might be, of what it ought to be, and then of what it is. Why should such power for good be wasted, or far worse than wasted? Why should our Christian development be retarded by the misuse of the marvelous gift of speech? It were far better that one were born dumb than that, having a tongue, one should use it to scatter evil and sorrow, or to sow the seeds of bitterness and pain. Our Lord said we must give account of every idle word; and if for the idle words, how much more for the words that stain and injure, or fall as a destructive blight into other hearts and lives!

When we give ourselves to Christ, we ought to give him our tongues; when we are regenerated, our tongues ought to be regenerated. It was not without significance that, when the Holy Ghost came down on the day of Pentecost, the manifestation was in "tongues like as of fire." One of the first results, too, of this heavenly baptism was that the disciples spake with other tongues. It is not a mere fanciful interpretation that sees in all this an intimation that true conversation transforms the speech, and that a Christian should speak with a new—a Christian—tongue.—Congregational Magazine.

News in the Country, Confirmed in the City.

A bright-eyed lady from Brooklyn came into the New York office and cheerfully gave her experience. There had been a time when she thought Compound Oxygen "just a thing to advertise." But she had been boarding with friends in the country who thought very differently, and had the best reason for thinking so, as three or four members of their family had been cured of lung trouble and catarrh by it. So, on their recommendation this Brooklyn lady procured a "Home Treatment." She had been suffering from insomnia, nervousness and indigestion. Her husband was a sufferer from catarrh and bronchitis. She had now been taking Compound Oxygen for only two weeks, but already felt so much benefit from it that she gratefully said, "I am a new woman. I have found so much benefit from it that nothing shall hinder me from taking it regularly. I can now sleep with comfort; my digestion is better, and my nervousness is going away. My husband, too, is materially better, and very much encouraged."

All that you want to know about this Compound Oxygen is to be found in the "Treatise," which will be freely mailed to you by Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa. Write for it.

DYING IN THE LORD.—Frances Ridley Havergal, during her last illness, while suffering intensely from a high fever, in sweet submission said, "God's will is delicious; he makes no mistakes." Bidding one of her physicians good-bye, she asked, "Do you really think I am going?" He answered, "Yes." "To-day?" she enquired. "Probably," was the reply. Then she exclaimed, "Beautiful! too good to be true!" and looking up with a smile, added, "Splendid! to be so near the gates of heaven!" Later, as the time of her departure came, she nestled down into the pillows, folded her arms upon her breast, saying, "There—it is all over! Blessed rest!" Her countenance became radiant with the glory seemingly breaking in upon her soul, and those who watched her thought she appeared as if she was conversing with the King in his beauty. She tried to sing, but after one sweet note her voice failed, and she was gone to be with her Lord.

Woman's Work.

There is no end to the tasks which daily confront the good housewife. To be a successful housekeeper, the first requisite is good health. How can a woman contend against the trials and worries of housekeeping if she be suffering from those distressing irregularities, ailments and weaknesses peculiar to her sex? Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a specific for these disorders. The only remedy, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers. Satisfaction guaranteed in every case, or money refunded. See printed guarantee on bottle wrapper.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

A terrific explosion occurred in a dynamite factory at Behlyar's Station, in Pennsylvania. Four men, engaged in the manufacture of dynamite cartridges, were blown into the air by an explosion of the deadly stuff, and landed torn and bleeding many yards away. One man killed and the others dangerously injured.

David Whitmer, the last of the witnesses to the authenticity of the Book of Mormons, died at Richmond, Mo., January 26.

The funeral of Viscount das Nogueiras, late envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of Portugal, was held in Washington, on January 26.

The fisheries negotiators, who have held daily sessions at the State Department for a week, adjourned on Saturday, and met on Monday, January 30. It is understood that they are nearing the end of their deliberations.

Dr. P. M. Mell, chancellor of the State University, and for many years president of the Baptist Association, died at his home, in Athens, Ga., January 26.

The Irish Volunteers held a meeting in New York City, on January 29, at which O'Donovan Rossa and Frank O'Byrne were the principal speakers. The use of dynamite was advocated.

A defective flue was the cause of a three thousand dollar fire in Pittsburg, Pa., January 29.

The representatives of the sugar region of Louisiana have prepared a letter to the Ways and Means Committee setting forth the present condition of the sugar planting industry in Louisiana; that notwithstanding a period of great depression it is beginning to revive and that with the introduction of new and more effective methods of dealing with the cane there is a fairer prospect for the planters keeping up this industry, but they deprecate and protest against the reduction of the present duty.

One of the largest fires that has occurred in New York for many months took place on January 30. Loss estimated at $1,500,000.

Of the 256 patents and designs issued last week by the United States Patent Office, citizens of Alabama received one, Arkansas one, Louisiana one, Mississippi one and Texas three.

H. C. Minor, who was nominated for lieutenant governor by the Republican Convention of Louisiana, has written a letter of declination. Judge Wyly and ex-Gov. Flanders have also declined the nominations offered them on the same ticket.

Prof. Asa Gray, the eminent botanist and professor of botany at Harvard College, died January 30, aged seventy-five.

Earthquake shocks were felt in Massachusetts and Rhode Island on January 30.

FOREIGN.

Ex-Queen Isabella will be permitted to live in Seville.

The Czar has refused to permit the Orleans princes to join the Russian imperial guard.

Messrs. Kennedy and Fitzgibbons of Tarbert, county Kerry, have been sentenced to six weeks each at hard labor for acting as president and secretary, respectively, of a proclaimed National League meeting.

The Catholic press in Germany announces a new clerical campaign, the object of which is to sever the schools entirely from government control.

The Paris Court of Appeals has decided that priests in France are entitled to enter into the married state.

A circular issued from Florence by Mr. Gladstone, on January 21, addressed to his followers in Parliament, says the state of public affairs appears to render it certain that important discussion may be expected to rise immediately upon the meeting of Parliament.

Messrs. Sullivan and O'Brien will shortly address a mass meeting at Leeds.

Advices from Tonquin say eighteen French soldiers were shot for desertion.

It is stated that the diplomatic negotiations recently opened between Prince Lobanoff, the Russian ambassador to Austria, and Count Kalnoky have been abandoned; that the condition of affairs between the two governments is simple that each is lying in wait for the first chance to strike.

An entente cordial has been effected between Germany, Austria and Roumania.

Dr. Mackenzie declares himself as satisfied with the condition of the Crown Prince's health, and says there is a decided improvement in every respect on the part of the Prince's throat where the previous growths developed.

In speaking of the public gifts presented to Pope Leo, a correspondent says they have come in so rapidly that two additions have already been made to the building in which they are to be exposed. So far 7,000 cases of articles have been handled, and the end is not yet. Up to January 13, presents to the value of $10,000,000 have passed through the hands of the Vatican inspectors. Even that sum has been exceeded in money.

The communal elections in Switzerland have resulted in a complete victory for the liberals.

Galician papers confirm the reports of continued movements of Russian troops toward the Austrian frontier.

Southern Cultivator and Christian Advocate.

By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer to new subscribers the Southern Cultivator and Dixie Farmer, combined with the ADVOCATE, for $2 50 for the two publications for one year. Commencing with this date, the price to old subscribers will remain the same as heretofore—$2 75—with only twenty-five cents extra to either of the above amounts for "Dickson's System of Farming." These rates are postage prepaid. All orders must be accompanied by cash in full; no allowance for commission to agents, and both papers must be ordered at same time. We will, however, fill orders to subscribers who failed to take advantage of the club rate when they last renewed for $1 for the Cultivator for one year.

OUR BREAD IN DANGER.

The United States Government Chemists, in their examinations of articles of food offered for Government use, have developed the alarming fact that almost all the brands of baking powders upon the market are made from alum or phosphates, or contain large quantities of lime or other adulterants. As a matter of fact, of the samples analyzed, the Royal was the only baking powder found free from all of these deleterious ingredients, and absolutely pure.

Alum is used as a substitute for cream of tartar to produce a cheap baking powder. It costs less than two cents a pound, whereas pure cream of tartar costs forty. The effect of alum upon the system has been ascertained to be poisonous, and over-doses have been attended with fatal results. The phosphate are next to the alum powders in cheapness. They contain a large amount of lime. The baking powders sold with a gift are of the alum or phosphate class.

Lime is the most useless adulterant yet found in baking powders. It is true that when subjected to heat it gives off a certain amount of carbonic acid gas, but a quicklime is left, one of the most powerful caustics known. Chemists have found twelve per cent., or one-eighth of the weight, of some of the baking powders advertised as pure to be lime.

The absolute purity and wholesomeness of the Royal Baking Powder—now affirmed by every chemist and food analyst of prominence, and conceded by all manufacturers of other brands—arise from the exclusive use of cream of tartar which is specially refined by patent processes that totally remove the lime and all other impurities. These facilities are possessed by no other manufacturer.

In his report, the United States Government Chemist says: "The Royal Baking Powder is absolutely pure, for I have so found it in many tests made for the United States Government. I will go still further and state that, because of the facilities that company have for obtaining perfectly pure cream of tartar, and for other reasons dependent upon the proper proportions of the same, and the method of its preparation, the Royal Baking Powder is undoubtedly the purest and most reliable baking powder offered to the public."

The Saying Worthy of All Acceptation.

BY J. B. WALKER, D. D.

(1 Timothy 1, 15.)

No saying from any human ure has ever been so import-t, interesting, and worthy of acceptation as this inspired ying, "Christ Jesus came into e world to save sinners." His-ry and biography record the yings of great men. Longinus, celebrated Greek critic and iter, said the sublimest sen-nce he had ever read, was, od said, Let there be light, d there was light." Cæsar's lletin of his campaign to the oman Senate, "I came, I saw, conquered," was grand as la-nic. Bacon said knowledge is wer. Daniel Webster said, in greatness of his nationality: know no North, no South, no st, and no West." Andrew ckson said, "The Federal nion must be preserved." eiry Clay said, "I had rather right than be President." any statesmen and philosophers ve uttered many great sayings out man and his complex re-tions; but none of them are so rthy of acceptation as our xt.

There are many good reasons r the universal worthiness and ceptation of this divine saying. nd, first, because it is a true ying, for Christ came not to ll the righteous, but to seek d save the lost, to call sinners repentance. When come, he as to be called Jesus, for he ould save his people from their ns. Unless Christ came to ve, and to bear our sins in his wn body, his life and death are enigma, for which there is no lution. No other purpose be-nd saving sinners can be found his history. All his life was rayer and love.

Second, because it is a saying universal interest, for all are nners, and each incapable of ving himself. There may be reat truths in science, in poli-es, in finance, in medicine, of ttle interest to millions; but is is a saying that comes home all our needs, and to our hopes nd fears. We can say of many ings: "It's no affair of mine; 's nothing to me;" but none of us can say this about this great saying. It is as interesting to us as the dread of death and the de-sire of life can make it.

Third, it is worthy of all ac-ceptation, because of its uni-versal adaptation. It is suited to each and to all as no other saying can be. Some sayings are adapted to the poor, but not to the rich; and some to the rich that do not suit the poor. So some sayings are for the learned, and some for the unlearned, and some for the young unsuitable for the old. But no matter who I am, or where I am, or what my condition may be, it is a saying worthy of all acceptation to me.

Fourth, it is worthy of all ac-ceptation because of the blessed nature of the statement: Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners. Can anybody de-mur to this statement? Can anybody say, This saying ought not be said? Can anybody give this saying other than a hearty acceptation? It would surely seem they ought not. It should be as food to the starving, water to the famishing, as light to those who have watched through the darkness and storm for the coming of the morning.

Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners; but the statesmen, the law makers and the rulers have seemed to come into the world to warn, restrain, and punish sinners. So they en-acted penal codes, have built jails and penitentiaries and scaf-folds. They appointed police, sheriffs, judges and courts; but Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners.

The philanthropist, philoso-phers and humanitarians expend their talents, time and energies in illuminating ignorance with schools and books. Others, by various charities, have sought to relieve the pressing wants of needy and dependent millions. Again, others seek by useful in-ventions and labor-saving ma-chines to lighten the toils and in-crease the comfort of weary thousands. And many have de-voted themselves to the amelio-ration of suffering, like Howard, Elizabeth Fry, and Florence Nightingale, in hospitals, infirm-aries and asylums. All these ef-forts have been well meant and good so far as they went; but they have come short of man's deepest and greatest needs. Sin is man's greatest evil, and de-liverance from it his greatest ne-cessity and best benefit. But mere philanthropist and humani-tarians can do nothing to save men from sin; but Christ was manifested that he might destroy the works of the devil, and save man from sin, its guilt, its de-filement, its condemnation, and its awful penalty.

The wise sayings and maxims of the world's teachers, outside of Bible authority and Bible methods, have looked most al-ways to the material and tempo-ral aspects of man's condition and wants, and have left out of their consideration man's spirit-ual and immortal needs. It is true that the gospel word looks in outward working to our mate-rial and temporal good; but it looks immeasurably deeper and higher, and beyond this tempo-rary state. The world's wisdom is shallow, and does not reach down to the root of the matter. It busies itself with some prun-ing and lopping among the branches, but does not make the tree good, that it may bring forth good fruit. It filters the waters of the stream, but does not make the fountain pure, so it comes short of our needs; but this faithful saying proclaims that Christ came to save sinners, to save them from their sins.

Most of the great conquerors and empire builders have seemed to come only to grasp and wield power, accumulate wealth, to revel in sensual pleasure, and win earthly fame; in short, they have, in the worldly sense, been "lovers of their own selves;" but Christ came to seek no earth-ly good for himself. Indeed, he became poor, he humbled him-self, and took upon himself no reputation, for he came to save sinners.

The saying is worthy of all ac-ceptation, because it is most comfortably and gloriously true that Christ can save sinners, for he has all power in heaven and earth. By him all things were created, by him all things con-sist, for all things are upheld by the word of his power. All dis-eases were cured by his saving touch or omnipotent word. The lame leap for joy, the deaf hear his voice, the blind behold their Savior come, and even the dead felt the quickening energy of his power. He burst the bars of death, rose from the dead, and, self-buoyant, ascended on high, leading captivity captive. He can save to the uttermost, and can save forever. He has the infinite merit; he is our sin-offering; he has made it just in God, in the sight of angels, and all intelligences to pardon the guilty. The truth of the all-worthy saying has been vindicated countless times in the salvation of a great multitude no man can number—out of all the tribes and kindreds of men.

Let us ask you, reader, "Are you a sinner?" Then Christ came to seek and save you from your sins. He can save you now, for it is the accepted time, and the day of salvation. Would you be saved? Does your heart cry out, "Save me, Jesus, save now?" If so, you are not far from the kingdom of God.

Christ in Gethsemane.

BY REV. Q. A. OATS.

In the ADVOCATE, of January 12, Rev. J. D. Cameron discusses the Savior's agony in Gethsem-ane. By a comparison of views we may gain light on the subject.

That our Savior was not suf-fering the measure of the penalty man's guilt would cause the whole race, if lost, to suffer, or that he was not undergoing a last desperate conflict with Satan, or that he was not enduring the wrath of God, are conclusions both scriptural and reasonable, as Bro. Cameron well shows us. But, if I understand him, with his conclusion that the "cause of the agony" was "a full realiza-tion of the relation of his conde-scension, humiliation, teachings, miracles, and now his death, sus-tained to the work of redemp-tion, with a consciousness of the full meaning, magnitude and consequences of the work in its relation to sin as a terrible fact in the moral universe, and much more terrible in its disastrous consequences upon the moral character of man here, and his eternal destiny hereafter," I can not agree.

That, in Christ's human mind, his consciousness of these great facts was "emulative," there can be but little doubt, after due consideration; but that this consciousness had just reached its perfection is not evident. The testimony of Scripture seems sufficient to show that these facts relating to the effects of his entire work on the tem-poral and eternal destiny of man, were fully revealed to him during the thirty years preceding his entrance upon his public minis-try. This full comprehension was probably necessary to pre-pare him to perform the essen-tial work as example and teacher of righteousness in a world of perverse men, that he might be that full light to shine in all future darkness, and light every man that cometh into the world. Did he not realize his conde-scension and humiliation when, in his conscious divinity, he de-clared that all power in Heaven and earth was his, and yet, in his conscious humanity, he de-clared his poverty to be greater than that of the foxes with their holes, and the birds of the air with their nests? He was Lord of all, yet became the servant of all.

He must have apprehended the influence of all he was, did, and taught, when he declared that he must taste death for all; that he did not come to send peace, but a sword, and to divide house-holds; to make known a strait gate and narrow way leading unto life, and few would find it; that many would not believe his teachings, and, therefore, would be lost; that wicked unbelievers would be turned into hell, and into everlasting punishment. These are facts that he taught and impressed in all their full-ness before the hour of his cru-cifixion.

I will venture an opinion. It was the terrible ordeal of physi-cal suffering at the hands of his enemies he was about to undergo, which, perhaps, is almost with-out a parallel, and the thought of being forsaken by his former friends, and the violent death of the cross, that caused the great agony of the human soul of the Christ. In the absence of any explanation of the cause of the agony, in the Scriptures, either before or after the event, we must look for it in the narration, if we find it at all. The cause of the agony we must find in his prayer. He prayed that the hour might pass. What hour but the immediate hour of his peril in being betrayed into the hands of his enemies? The hour peculi-arly his as foretold to his dis-ciples. He prayed that the cup might pass—i. e., the cup of his suffering. In John xiv, 27, the same fact is recorded as being foretold to all the disciples, and it is there unquestionably con-nected with the declaration of his death and its necessity, with his dire suffering.

In the consciousness of Christ's divinity we are disposed to lose sight of his humanity. His hu-manity is as much a revealed fact as his divinity, and faith in it, and a proper understanding of its importance in the plan of re-demption is as necessary as in his divinity. "A man of sor-rows, and acquainted with grief." He was verily a man, with man's complete nature, sin only ex-cepted, having all man's mental and physical ability to suffer pain and wrongs. With this fact before us, there is no incon-sistency in the conclusion that he was overwhelmed with sorrow at the presence of that "wine press" which he must tread alone, and of the bitter cup he must drink. Not even the divinity, though present in sustaining power, could partake of this suffering. Do we not hear him in the mo-ment of the culmination of phys-ical agony, cry; "Eloi, Eloi, lama sabachthani?" which, being interpreted, is, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" A man, and man of sor-rows, as well as divine, possess-ing all power. It can be no breach of good judgment to say that he was overwhelmed with agony in presence of such dire physical suffering.

Are we told that this view at-tributes cowardice or unmanli-ness to Christ? Not so. It shows sublime courage and true manliness. No dreaded suffer-ing, no sorrow in his persecu-tion. Where the cross? Where the crown? Where the glory? All fully revealed to him, and a consciousness of humanity's weakness, he could go to his heavenly Father, and say, "Not as I will, but as thou wilt," and thus become obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. May we, by the same help, and in the same spirit, drink every cup re-quired by our heavenly Father! He "being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross." All this was needful for us, and was submitted to because he loved us. May we be ready to give him our bodies, a living sac-rifice, holy, and acceptable unto God, which is our reasonable service.

Another thought worthy of note, is that the divine foresight of Christ enabled him to fully realize the suffering, which could not have been the case with a mere human being. With men there is hope of relief in the face of threatening calamity, arising from inability to know that it will certainly come, and they can not know what the reality is till it is born. All was fully a true reality to the agonizing Christ.

Best Methods for Revival Work.

BY REV. E. G. KILGORE.

As the revival season will soon be upon us, and the battle cry will be heard all along the line, a few observations as to the best methods for conducting a revival meeting may not be out of place. The only apology I would make for offering a contribution on this subject is, that it has ever been considered profitable for persons representing the same interests to exchange views. I do not presume to know more about this class of work than many of my brethren; but I may speak that I do know, and testify that I have seen. There is evi-dently some ecclesiastical skill necessary in order to successful revival work.

In the first place, then, we would suggest that in order to accomplish a genuine work along this line, we have found the gospel indispensable. No clip-trap arrangement will take the place of preaching the Word. Evangelists, and (as for that) anyone else engaged in this kind of work, may count con-verts in the absence of preach-ing; but time will reveal the fact that a great deal of this is but surface work. The young dis-ciples have received nothing upon which their souls can feed after the sensation is over. Hence they do not develop, but, on the other hand, dwarf, and sometimes soon perish. Inspi-ration has declared the gospel the power of God unto salvation, and we should not try to substi-tute it with anything else. Be-sides this, it is not all the work of a revival to make converts. The flock of God must be fed. This can only be done by preach-ing. A large majority of the people read but little; hence all the religious information they get is from the pulpit, and, as a great many, even of our own people (I mean church mem-bers), never attend divine serv-ices (be this said to their shame) except on protracted meeting occasions, it is quite important for us to utilize the opportunity thus afforded us of feeding their souls. Evidently such members need to be fed. Let us not, then, on revival occasions, at-tempt to dispense with preach-ing; but let the great cardinal doctrines of our church be plain-ly and powerfully set forth. God will see to it that his Word will not fail, but will crown the gos-pel with success. We may not be able to see immediate results, but the Lord will take care of the seed sown, and the harvest will be sure.

In the next place, in revival work we must guard the sing-ing. There is, indeed, a great deal of gospel in song. Hence singing is a very important factor in the work. The gos-pel having been faithfully preached, many awakened souls may be sung into the kingdom, and many believing hearts made to rejoice under its power. There should, therefore, be great care taken as to the selection of music. First as to adaptability. The song should be suited to the occasion. We are taught in God's Word that we should sing with the understanding, as well as in the spirit. I remember to have heard a stirring sermon once, on a revival occasion, at the conclusion of which the min-ister called for a suitable hymn (he expected to call mourners), and some brother led off on, "Blow ye, the trumpet, blow." The effect of the sermon was, in a great measure, lost. On a similar occasion, "Hark, from the tomb," was raised. The preacher's plans were all defeat-ed. At still another time, a brother started, "The day is past and gone." A hymn suited to family prayer thus being sung over penitents. The singing should also be with animation. Some people sing (during an altar service) as though they were at a funeral. Our singing should be on quick time, and full of the spirit, thus making melody to the Lord in our hearts.

In the third place, we should not disregard propositions. Keep the people engaged. Have them kneeling at the altar, or shaking hands; standing in the "con-gregation, or talking to the penitents; doing anything that will keep them busy. Some of our preachers sometimes suf-fer themselves to be intimidated because of the presence of some one who might think their meth-ods indelegant or out of order. What should we care for the opinions of others, if we can but win souls for Christ, and reach heaven at last ourselves? Let the world and even some of the brethren criticise. We are work-ing for immediate results, and should conduct all our services accordingly. "There is nothing succeeds like success," has been wisely observed by some one, and they will all raise a shout of victory after the work has been accomplished. Hence we should not hesitate to make any kind of reasonable propositions that will give the people something to do. And when we can think of noth-ing more for them to do, dismiss the audience at once. We should spend but little time at church unemployed. Some one has wisely said: "Don't let the devil have time to get breath," while conducting a revival service. There is point in this, if it is a little rough.

In the next place, we should give due attention to prayer. We must never lose sight of the fact that our help comes from God, and, in order to secure his aid, we have been taught to pray. The Lord would be inquired of. We should ever keep ourselves in the spirit of prayer. Pray in public and in secret. Make general prayers and special prayers. It is a good idea to single some one out, and keep him constantly before God. The Lord hath said: "Whatso-ever things ye desire when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them." Thus our Lord has promised to answer faithful prayer. Let us, then, be prayerful, especially during revival efforts, ever re-membering that though "Paul may plant, and Apollos may water, it is God who giveth the increase."

Last, but not least of all, let the leader keep the people constantly inspired with confi-dence. This he may do by reminding them frequently of God's promises, and of his power and willingness to grant a blessing. A great deal depends on the minister's faith. If he becomes discouraged, and so ex-presses himself, his people will imbibe his spirit, and the inter-est will decline. Our Moses must be strong and of good cour-age, even though the children of Israel do murmur. Let the leader, then, keep himself re-minded of the promises given, and so let him encourage the people. Much more might be written, but I forbear at present.

THE BIBLE.—Two things may be said about the Scriptures which can be said of no other book in the world.

One is that if the Bible is ad-mitted to be what it claims, viz., the Word of God, then it solves every problem, whether moral or historical, which the origin and progress of the race as a whole suggests to the mind of man; while if this claim be rejected, there are multitudes of problems, many of them of vital import, which become at once wholly in-soluble. The other is that while the Bible has declared to us from age to age great truths of ever increasing importance con-cerning God and our own souls, the whole human race during the centuries since the canon was closed has not added to our stock of knowledge one solitary truth on these subjects; nay, it has not even, during the forty centuries since the revelation was given, stated the smallest of the truths touching God and our souls as distinctly as they are all set forth in the Word. If this be so, the Scriptures are the product of a superhuman intelli-gence.—Christian Intelligencer.

ALL NIGHT IN PRAYER

All night in prayer,
The evening and the morning met with them in prayer,
The evening stars arose in bright, and still the night was spent in prayer,
All night in prayer,
All night in prayer with God;
No heeding ear of mortal caught the pleading prayer,
No weary disciple, sleeping, watched the gateway there,
All night in prayer,
All night in prayer with God;
The sobbing of a mortal heart echoed with the words of the,
The burning of the holy fire to the pure heart spoke,
All night in prayer,
All night in prayer with God;
The wandering angels come and on the mystic ladder climb;
The lowly One on earth is heard, while faithful is sure Christ,
All night in prayer,
All night in prayer with God;
Petitions hour with hour, thus in secret Jesus pleads,
And burdened hearts are lightened as Godward leads,
All night in prayer,
All night in prayer with God;
Adoring praise breathes forth unbidden prayer at last,
Sinks into silence, and with earliest dawn is past,
All night in prayer,
All night in prayer with God.

Number of Societies reported during the quarter, 25; whole number of societies, 187; whole number of members, over 3,000.

We can not exactly or correctly estimate number of members, because many societies failed to report number of members; but allowing any members at all to the societies not reporting the number, would carry the total number far beyond 3,000. I hope our secretaries will note how this failure brings down our general report.

SABBATH-SCHOOL WORK.

Our societies are beginning to understand more fully the meaning of our efforts to extend the church in each pastorate. Bear in mind, when you use the word "church extension," that the word "church" is used in its spiritual sense.

We are to make every effort to bring those around us to Christ, the Head of the church. Invite strangers to the other church services, besides trying to bring all you can into the Sabbath-school. The suggestion made in a previous report that our societies should form mission classes, or have Bible readings for those who could not be induced to attend the regular Sabbath-school, has been adopted in several places. A Sabbath-school of forty-seven members is reported as organized by the Conference secretary, Mrs. E. D. Jones, at Middle School House, Claiborne county, Miss.

Brethren and sisters, look [illegible] Look over the unconverted of all ages [illegible] above all, pity the little [illegible] who are straying from [illegible] bring them back to our Father.

WHAT HAS BEEN ACCOMPLISHED.

We can not now give a full and exact report of the number of parsonages built, nor of finished and [illegible] by reason of full reports [illegible] not been sent in, and it is [illegible] not to make an imperfect report. We can only say two parsonages have been helped by the General Board at Vinita Station and the District of Muskogee, in Indian Mission. The Parsonage Society at Vinita, besides sending in the dues regularly, raised, by hard work, over $100, as a special donation for the local work.

Several Conferences, where the work has prospered, have helped parsonages within their bounds from the fifty per cent. of the funds remaining in the Conference; but how many and what places have been helped we have not yet learned. All this, with full account of finances, will be given in our annual report in April. If the presidents, secretaries, and treasurers of the societies will see that the blanks calling for reports for the year, from March 1, 1887, to March 1, 1888, are perfectly filled and promptly sent in to the Conference secretary, they will find the annual report more satisfactory.

"THE PREACHERS' WIVES' LOAN FUND."

Over $1,600 have been subscribed to this fund; exact reports of the actions of the Conference not yet received.

This fund, which is not to be donated, but loaned, will stand a monument to our efforts, and should commend itself to the zeal of every member of the society. This fund is to be managed by the General Board of Church Extension, and will be loaned to any charge filling the conditions of the contract. All money given for this "Loan Fund" must be sent to Rev. David Morton, D. D., 520 West Chestnut, Louisville, Ky., accompanied by the names of those to be made patrons. The patrons of this fund are to be considered the founders of it, their names put upon record, and published in that connection in the annual report. Anyone may be made a patron by the payment of $5, but we would be glad to have it specified if the patron be a preacher's wife. Three hundred dollars or more make an honorary patron of the loan fund.

THE CHILDREN.

We have heretofore depended principally on mite boxes to enlist the children, but we hope they will now be thoroughly organized everywhere into societies called "Home Builders"—each member paying twenty-five cents per year. I will also send mite boxes to all who wish them.

NOTE.—Do not fail to read in the societies the report above; also that to the children.

"Jack the Peddler."

Not long since, while crossing the Mississippi river at the Third District Ferry, New Orleans, an old man walked up and down between the seats, and handed each passenger a leaflet with the above title. It was a dismal, rainy day, and not many passengers were aboard. But that old man had a work to do; and he was "faithful over a few things." His head was "silvered o'er with age," and the furrows on his face may oft have been "the channel of a flood of tears;" yet there was a pleasant smile upon his wrinkled visage, as if it was a pleasure to him to do a little work for the Blessed Master. Who can estimate the result of that simple work?

Glancing at the title of the tract—I held nine in my hand—I scanned the faces of the other passengers to see if I could read their thoughts concerning the incident. One lady, after reading the title carefully, stuck it under the string of a package she held; another carelessly glanced at it, and held it in her hand; another put it in her satchel, while several read as long as they could. Not having a spare moment to read mine that day, and not desirous of straining my eyes while traveling on the train, I did not peruse the leaflet until a few days afterwards. Then I found it was an extract from one of Spurgeon's sermons, of which the text was, I Timothy i. 15; St. John vi. 47.

"Jack" was a poor peddler, with only sense enough to peddle a book; but Jack was a great man "for a' that an' a' that." He was a great swearer and drunkard, but God loved him, and led him in the way where he heard a poor woman singing:

"I'm a sinner, and nothing at all:
But Jesus Christ is my all in all."

So it took hold of him like a vise. He went home repeating the words and put his trust in him who was able to save, and was really converted. He then applied to the elders of the church, and said: "I want to join your church." The elders, knowing his antecedents, said: "You have been a great sinner; and you are unconverted." "Well," said poor Jack, "I don't know if I'm unconverted, but I do know that

"'I'm a poor sinner, and nothing at all:
But Jesus Christ is my all in all.'"

That was all the testimony they could get from him, and they could not refuse him; so they took poor Jack into the fold, and after that he was always happy.

Recalling the incident and the good that many tracts have been the means of accomplishing, I wondered much why more tracts were not distributed. Here is an open door to do a vast amount of good in the cities, and on all the lines of travel; but the children of this world are wiser in their proceedings than the children of light; for they are indefatigably employed, in season and out of season, circulating, spreading and disseminating the devil's own literature. It pays to have his emisaries on the march all the time. Carloads of "yellow-backed" literary trash are sent out to beguile the unwary; and some of it in such attractive style as to deceive "the very elect," if they do not keep both eyes open. Why could not the churches in cities employ tract distributors, to travel on all the trains and other public conveyances, and sell and give away those soul-catching tracts, like "Jack the Peddler" and hundreds of others? Where we now count by the hundred such a distribution of good seed sown by the wayside, there should be millions upon millions. The seed would bring forth a billion-fold for the blessed Master's garner.

A friend who is much on the trains told me that on one train upon which he was traveling a young man passed up and down tearing a leaf from a Bible he had in his hand, giving each passenger one leaf. He carefully preserved his leaf, and said they were well received. Who knows what a power there was in those leaves from God's book?

MRS. L. CRARY SADLER.

Report of Special Committee on Paine Institute, Appointed by Louisiana Conference.

Your committee to whom was referred the communication of the Commissioner of Education, relative to the work of our church in establishing training-schools for the "Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America," would state that we have had the same under prayerful consideration, and ask to make the following statements and present the subjoined resolution:

The organization of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America, by authority and under direction of our General Conference of 1870, was clearly, in the light of these succeeding years, under the guiding hand of the great Head of the church. These people have remained true to us, in the singleness of purpose, for which they were set up as a church. From their Bishops down, they have remained singularly free from all political alliances, and have held steadfastly to the one end of giving the gospel in Methodist simplicity to their people. Moreover, they have maintained their church in harmony with us in keeping the two races apart, socially, and in the marital relation. They stand for the purity of their African as we do for our Anglo-Saxon blood. Again, we can rely upon their preaching everywhere against the whisky power. They teach their people to be quiet and law-abiding citizens, and to cultivate the closest friendships with our church and the Southern people as their natural and providential allies. Their progress and enlargement are amazing, considering their start and the unavoidable drawbacks, not the least of which was the almost gross ignorance of many of those they seemed to [illegible] send out as ministers to preach the gospel and organize societies.

While all other negro churches in the South have been either directly or indirectly connected with the people North, and, as a consequence, have shared in the educational benefits by reaching unto themselves a more or less [illegible] the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America has had no one to look to for help, except the Southern Methodist Church. Your committee is profoundly impressed with the supreme opportunity that God has opened to our church to do a great missionary work for the negroes of the South by the establishment of these training-schools. Instead of one, and that one jeopardized for the want of a few thousand dollars, we ought to have at least three, thoroughly organized and equipped for efficient work. One of these institutes ought to be west of the Mississippi river; and we are glad to know from the commissioner that such is the purpose of the Board. We respectfully submit the following for your adoption:

Resolved, That in view of the fact that Paine Institute is jeopardized on account of the non-payment of amounts due, and the liability to failure in securing the $25,000 conditionally promised by Rev. Moses U. Paine, we heartily commend the Rev. W. C. Dunlap, Commissioner of Education, to the favorable consideration of those of our people who feel able and disposed to assist in this noble work.

Resolved, That in order to give publicity to our action, we respectfully request that this report be published in the NEW ORLEANS and Nashville Christian Advocates.

T. J. UPTON, Chairman.

The Cross.

No fact is better established than the reverence shown to the sign of the cross in almost all ages, and among almost all people. Apart from any distinctions of social or intellectual superiority of caste, color, nationality or location, it appears to have been in the possession of every people—the elastic girdle which embraced the most widely separated; the most significant token of a universal brotherhood to which all the families belonged. Diversified forms of the symbol are delineated on the ruined walls of temples and places, on natural rocks and the rudest statuary; on coins, medals and vases of every description.

There has ever been a peculiar sanctity attached to these symbols of the cross. All nations vied with each other in their efforts to show sanctity for the cross. Oh! that there was such a strife among the nations of earth in these days of so-called civilization! When the Spanish missionaries first set foot on the shores of America, they found the cross worshiped by the Indians. In every nation the cross directs the mind backward to some lost blessing, to some glorious enjoyment. It also points forward to the time when these glorious blessings and enjoyments shall be more than regained in the glorious morning of the resurrection. It looks into the background of man's vision, and sees a lost paradise of holy joy; it sees in the future more than a paradise—a heaven of eternal joy. Let us say, in the inspired language of the great apostle: "God forbid that I should glory save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ."

V. DE SKIPPER.

"Praise the Lord."

DEAR READERS: We feel like singing:

"Awake, my soul, in joyful lays,
And sing the Great Redeemer's praise;
He justly claims a song from me:
His loving Kindness, oh, how free!"

Yes, this wonderful, boundless love constrains us to let others know of God's dealings to us. As the glad-some new year is upon us, let us each fill our spheres, doing all with an eye single to the glory of God. We need more of this "wisdom from above, which is pure and peaceable," and that "love which passeth knowledge." We rejoice to know that our heavenly Father alone knows us altogether.

We are oftentimes tried to choose between life or death, and prefer to live and "endure as seeing him who is invisible." It makes us tremble and quake when the King of kings comes to us, and we feel our nothingness. The cross is presented to us in various ways, to make us willing to bear it for Jesus' sake. But the ministering spirits from our home above come to us, in our trying hour and link us nearer Heaven. Those ties are strong; but earthly ties bind us here to work and wait our Father's bidding. We can only say: "Thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven."

[illegible] only through
The spirit [illegible] May,"

[illegible] with us he always [illegible]

Yesterday I finished reading "The Tongue of Fire," a volume which many of you have read. We find it plainly recorded in Acts ii. The descent of the Holy Ghost was truly a power; and those 3,000 souls saved was without a doubt the best camp meeting on record. We feel and realize the effects of that meeting yet, and look forward with rejoicing when "they shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain." How delightful to know that the "earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea!"

Truly, no prayer has ever contained, or can contain, any form or feeling from our hearts as the Lord's Prayer. When we can pray it all with a sense of our helplessness and utter dependence upon One "who holds us in the hollow of his hand," then it is that all is well.

Then let us all, as ministers, editors, members of one body, ever bear with one another. Let us judge nothing before the time, and remember that we are all "unprofitable servants," doing only our duty, and give all the praise and glory to God. May we never forget to remember one another at a throne of grace, and be always found serving the Lord! With heartiest wishes to you all,

ANNA.

—JOHNSTON STATION, Mississippi.

West Monroe, La.

MR. EDITOR: At the last session of the Louisiana Conference I was placed under the revolving wheel of the appointing power, and rolled from Floyd to West Monroe, over some of the worst roads imaginable, for twenty miles, where we boarded the Vicksburg, Shreveport and Pacific railroad for this place. We moved to Floyd through as heavy rains as we generally have, and from Floyd through rain, snow and sleet. Two good brethren moved us from Floyd free of charge, for which we feel grateful. We left many kind friends at Floyd that we shall remember with the kindest of feeling. However, we meet many kind friends here who have received us kindly, and have already endeared themselves to us by the kind manner in which they received us. We found, after our travel through the sleet, on our arrival at the parsonage, a load of wood awaiting us, which was hailed with joy, especially as wife was shivering with cold. In addition to the wood, a wagon drove up, bringing a barrel of flour, a pail of lard, some sugar, rice, coffee, meal, soda, pepper, spice, bacon, a ham. Four dollars and five cents for wife to lay out, for the supplying of any deficiency for the parsonage, and a small purse for the preacher.

Now, Doctor, will it be asking too much that I ask, Would you pray that while these people minister unto us in temporal things, the Lord would enable us to minister unto them in spiritual things? Pray that the Lord will pour out his Spirit in a special manner on this charge.

Yours in Jesus,

C. T. MUNICLAND.

A Correction.

In the address to the Louisiana Conference, in behalf of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, recently published in the ADVOCATE (January 19), is the following: "Our work is confined to a small territory—Shreveport district." The MS. was written with no view to its publication, and "Shreveport district" was a marginal note in pencil, only written to remind the speaker to mention that "the Shreveport district, under the management of its efficient district secretary, Miss Eliza Logan, is constantly increasing in new auxiliaries and renewed interest." In justice to the earnest labors of some of the ministers in extending our work, I beg to call attention to the following list of auxiliaries, only mentioning that several new societies have been recently reported to the corresponding secretary, adult and juvenile: New Orleans district, 7; Shreveport district, 13; Alexandria district, 0; Opelousas district, 0; Delhi district, 3; Homer district, 13.

Mississippi Brotherhood.

TREASURER'S STATEMENT.

Association No. 8 was called on the death of Rev. J. L. Forsythe, who was an active member of the Mississippi Conference Brotherhood. The following amounts have been collected: From beneficiary members, $300; from non-beneficiary members, $12—total, $312.

Our Brotherhood received a fine class of young men during the session of our late Conference. Let the honored laymen come to our help.

The Last Page in a Presiding Elder's Diary.

Jan. 30—5 P. M.—One month of the new year almost gone. Have visited eight pastoral charges of my district. Preachers at their post, entering with energy upon their duties. One of my young men says, by the grace of the Master, he intends to do a year's work that will tell in eternity. He is near fourscore, but moves around in the pastorate like a boy. I understand the Bishops want some active young men for the work in the West. I think I will tell them of him. In visiting around, he walks me down, but I am getting up in years, and that usually makes a difference. I am now fifty-three, and I don't want to be a year younger. I have visited some less this month than usual. I am afraid to walk too much; perhaps it is best, for I am apt to talk too much. I have visited eighty-seven families; prayed with many of them; have preached thirty times; read 1,000 pages in books, three pamphlets; half-dozen little poems, from twenty lines to two or three pages in length; the newspapers; the Gospels of Luke and John; some in the letters; some in Revelation; some in the Old Testament; a few hymns. I feel a little wearied, but I get home to-night at eight P. M., and will have three days to rest. Bless the Lord! I have not seen my family this year—that is the hard part. But if men leave their families, for a month to make bread for them, shall we who break the Bread of Life to the flock complain at a month's absence from our loved ones? Lord, save me from whining around about self-sacrifice and privations. Bless the good people how kindly they treat me! The Lord reward them! They honor thee through me.

I have one preacher, that a Presbyterian brother, who is visiting here, says ought to be in Congress.

The Jackson District Parsonage.

The Building Committee met in Canton, Miss., January 25, 1888. The district parsonage was located in West Jackson. The committee must have $1,500 besides lumber and lot. An assessment has been made, and the proper collectors notified. Child's play must cease, and every Methodist in the Jackson district should come to the help of the committee. The chairman has spent all his "pocket money" going to places to preside over the committee.

The decree has gone forth that the sheriff of Madison county shall have full power to collect and receipt all moneys. Send your money to Hon. R. H. Kemp, Canton, Miss. The necessity for building is upon us. The presiding elder has an orthodox family. The chairman was appointed to visit the saw-mills on the Illinois Central railroad, and solicit contributions of lumber.

L. W. COOPER, Chairman.

An Earnest Appeal.

An opportunity is now offered for an investment in a Christian work, next akin germane to Mexico, viz.: the building of a church for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in one of the centres of Romanism in Louisiana. Let each one whose eye shall providentially fall upon this notice, and who loves Methodism and our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, send me promptly one dollar, and speedily a Protestant monument—a church of God—will be erected in a community where Romanism now greatly predominates. The name and the amount will be acknowledged in the ADVOCATE.

LEWIS A. REED, P. C.
GROSSE TETE ASSUMPTION
RIVER CIRCUIT, ARTHUR P. O., LA.

"Let your light so shine," says the Master. The first condition of letting a light shine is having a light. To be luminous is the first duty of the Christian. There are some people who impress you by their rectitude while they equally repel you. They send out their virtues not as the sun sends out rays of light, but as a hedgehog sends out quills. They are irritatingly good. The little girl who did not want to go to heaven if grandpa was going there, only spoke out what a great many people have felt. You have consecrated yourself to Christ, and want to begin at once Christian service. What can you do? Be a Christian. If you are a thorough Christian you will be an attractive one.—Christian Union.

TO PARSONAGE SOCIETIES.

February is the time for your annual meeting. Do not fail to hold it. Remember much depends upon your filling, as perfectly as possible, the blank calling for your annual report and sending it promptly to your Conference secretary. If you shall have held your meeting before these blanks reach you, be sure to call another meeting, and fill out the blank. Urge your treasurer to forward immediately after the meeting, the funds to be sent to Conference treasurer. Be particular upon these points, and let your reports be in the hands of your Conference secretary and treasurer before March 1, that your society may be properly represented in our annual report.

TO DISTRICT SECRETARIES.

Let each district secretary do her best to organize at least one, if not two, societies in her district in time to be reported to Conference secretary by March 1. We must have a good report at the close of this constitutional year. Let each one bend her energies to that point. Remember it depends in a great measure upon your efforts whether we shall be able to relieve the many cases of suffering before us and send the gospel to places now without it. This is then no light responsibility laid by God upon your hearts.

TO THE TREASURERS.

If you intend at any time to organize an auxiliary to the Woman's Department of Church Extension, it will greatly encourage us if you will make an effort to do so in time to report the society to the Conference secretary before March 1, that we may have a good start for the next year.

Blanks, quarterly reports and leaflets are sent regularly to Conference secretaries for circulation, and for the use of the societies. Societies not receiving these things should write their Conference secretary for them.

I wish to call the attention of all to my change of address. It is now 1500 3d avenue, Louisville, Ky.

Temperance.

What Prohibition Aims at.

"Prohibition aims at a thing, not a man. It would smite a traffic, not a personal indulgence; annihilate grogshops, but not invade homes. See who this works in other matters. A mob is a bad thing. Prohibition says, 'Repress it.' But to repress it, it may be necessary to seize private property and destroy life; nevertheless, the mob is what prohibition is after, not the life and property. A conflagration is a bad thing. Prohibition says, 'Stop it.' But to stop it may require seizure and destruction of property in the path of the fire; nevertheless, the fire is what prohibition is after, not the property. A contagious disease is a bad thing. Prohibition says, 'Fence it in,' the house don't 'be quarantined.' But that is an interference with personal liberty; nevertheless, the contagion is what prohibition is after, not personal liberty. So the saloon is a bad thing. Prohibition says, 'Abolish it.' But to abolish it, it may be necessary to interfere with some private drinking usage; nevertheless, the saloon is what prohibition is after—not the private usage.

"Can interference with personal liberty be pleaded as against the repression of the mob? No. Can the plea of individual right of property bar the effort to stamp out a conflagration? No. Can the right to go in and out of our houses at pleasure be urged as against the restraints of quarantine? No. Neither can a private drinking usage constitute a good reason for opposing a prohibitory liquor law. If the law smites the usage in smiting the saloon, it does so only incidentally. Good citizenship will willingly bear an incidental evil for the sake of an essential and universal good. Life, in the end, will be more sacred if we repress the mob. Property, in the end, will have better securities if we put out the fire. Personal liberty, in the end, will have complete safeguards, if we stamp out the contagion. So, every interest of society and of the individual, in the end, will be better shielded, if once we say, determinedly and effectually, 'The saloon must go!'"

The Saloon and the Sabbath.

There is nothing small or modest about King Alcohol. He is not satisfied with the legal establishment of his trade, the expressed support of one great political party, and the practical allegiance of the other. The greedy monarch is now determined upon the open corruption of the Sabbath, the dearest of American institutions.

The conflict is beginning in the Eastern States. The "Personal Liberty" party has been organized by the liquor men, who claim to control many thousand votes, in New York and Pennsylvania. They aim to bring about the election of such men as shall carry forward their measures in the Legislature, the present objective point being "open saloons on Sunday." These saloon men are in earnest. They have selected as candidates for their support at the coming election, those of the Republican and Democratic nominees who are known to be in sympathy with saloon interests. And it was not difficult to secure a full ticket from both the old parties of men whom they could trust and indorse.

This plain assault upon the American Sunday has aroused the clergy, and many of them are earnest in striving to offset the efforts of this liquor organization. But where have these indignant clergymen been for the last decade? Why have they delayed so long to "come up to the help of the Lord?" The saloon has always been hostile to our Christian Sabbath. It has labored steadily, though stealthily, to corrupt and destroy it. As early as 1867, the Republican State Convention at Syracuse N. Y., passed a resolution, declaring that "No person should by law be deprived of the right of public or private recreation or pastiming on any day of the week." Why did we not hear from the clergy at this juncture? Again, in 1872, that famous Raster resolution, (explained by its author to mean the unsettling of Sunday laws), was embodied in the platform of the same political party. There was no great opposition to this next onward move of the saloon against the Sabbath. No wonder our precious institution is in danger. The liquor power is crafty. It has firmly intrenched itself on American soil, and will not go until the might of prohibition sentiment forces it to go. I am glad the battle is being put in array. There can be but one result from the final conflict, and that the "survival of the fittest". Who will stand by the Sabbath and the home?—A. K. Ehey, in Free Methodist.

The Saloon in Politics.

The [illegible] finds itself solid with [illegible] is indispensable [illegible] self solid with [illegible] saloon keeper. [illegible] obtain the votes [illegible] ment the saloon element [illegible] the vanity of the [illegible] there. Take it [illegible] obtain the votes [illegible] sion, the criminal classes. He must become familiar with all the ward "strikers" and loafers. He must be represented at the caucuses which are always held where drink abounds. He must defer to the views of men of the lowest intelligence. He must submit to platforms drawn up by demagogues and politicians. Is it any wonder that self-respecting men so often shrink from these ordeals, and prefer the obscurity of private life to a political career demanding such sacrifice and such debasement? The foreigner who lands in this country obtains his first ideas of its governmental system from the saloon. There he is introduced to the lowest intrigues of factional politics. There he is taught that the chief end and aim of politics is to make as much as possible for the "workers." There he is enlisted into one of the other of the great organizations which have reduced party politics to periodical battles for plunder, to contests for the opportunity to misgovern. There he learns that honor and principle are simply "molasses to catch flies," as a notorious politician once expressed it. There he is made to understand that he is not expected to think for himself, but that he must obey implicitly the party mandates, reverence the saloon keepers of his ward, submit himself humbly to his "boss," and on election day be thankful that he can sell his vote for a couple of dollars or a debauch on bad whisky. This is no fanciful picture. There is no considerable city in the United States in which purchased votes are not cast by the thousand at every important election, and these votes are almost invariably bought and paid for in and through the saloon.

It is absurd to expect, under such a state of things, politics can be anything but corrupt. It is absurd to look, in parties dependent upon the saloon, for enlightened patriotism, progressive politics, or any real care for the welfare of the nation.—Atlantic.

"What Shall We Say Then?"

Shall we continue and multiply saloons, in order that temperance may abound? "God forbid?" Shall government, through voters, led by political bosses, authorize and protect this foul business of liquor selling? Shall our homes and our land still be the prey of this vulture that feeds on carnage and death—on the blood and fame of our brightest and best? Have not restriction (?) and regulation been tried long enough? Are not the results appalling? Dr. Talmage says drunkenness has multiplied itself in Brooklyn five times in the last five years.

If we would see this tide of death and destruction arrested, must we not try some more positive measures? And what but prohibition of manufacture and sale can reach the case? As a practical beginning, we must remove temptation. Our method must include prevention as well as cure. We are our brother's keeper. Look at the poor victim of alcoholic thirst. Take only one case of the millions—our noble and lamented Gough. A near neighbor, one summer's day, found him on the sofa, his face buried in his hands, his wife near with a look of agony on her face. Asking what was the matter, Mr. Gough grasped his hand like a vise and said: "You think I care for you, Edward?" "Yes, you have given me many proofs of it," the friend answered. "And you think I love that little woman?" pointing to his wife. "I am sure you do, John, better than your life." "And yet," said Mr. Gough, and the beaded drops on his forehead told how great was his agony, "I would see you both dead at my feet for a glass of whisky." It was such a battle as that he met.

Is it not infinitely better to remove temptation before the appetite is formed? Whoever helps make laws or sentiment that perpetuate this curse, is more guilty than the man who stands behind the bar, than the men who make and sell. These do it with the sanction of the voter and under the protection of government. They are less culpable in part, from the lower moral plane of their education and surroundings.—Zion's Herald.

Great Safe Cure.

[illegible] Some of the greatest cures of [illegible] have been effected by the use of small sizes of [illegible] ordinary appearance. The reader will readily recall such instances, with which are Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, but these are far more effective than the large, old-fashioned pills which are so difficult to swallow and so harsh in their action. The "Pellets" are gentle and never cause constipation. For Dyspepsia, stomach and bowel derangements, they have no equal.

An enlivened heart which worships God alone, and finds Him its all, is raised above anxiety for earthly wants.

Peculiar

To tell in few important particulars, Hood's Sarsaparilla is different from and superior to any other medicine.

Peculiar in combination, proportion and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the curative value of the best known remedy of the vegetable kingdom.

Peculiar in strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can be said, "100 doses one dollar." Medicines in bulk and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Peculiar in its unparalleled record of sales, unequaled by any other preparation. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla and be induced to take any other preparation. Insist upon it.

Tutt's Pills

REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Habitual Costiveness

Causes derangement of the entire system, and begets diseases that are innumerable to life. Persons of a costive habit are subject to Headache, Defective Memory, Gloomy Forebodings, Nervousness, Fevers, Drowsiness, Irritable Temper and other symptoms, which unfits the sufferer for business or agreeable associations. Regular habit of body alone can correct these evils, and nothing succeeds so well in achieving this condition as Tutt's Pills. By their use not only is the system renovated, but in consequence of the harmonious changes thus created, there pervades a feeling of satisfaction; the mental faculties perform their functions with vivacity, and there is an exhilaration of mind, freedom of thought, and perfect heart's ease that bespeaks the full enjoyment of health.

SECRET OF BEAUTY

Is health. The secret of health is the power to digest a proper quantity of food. This can never be done when the liver does not do its part. It is the driving wheel in the mechanism of man, and when it is out of order, the whole system becomes deranged, and Fever, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Constipation, Jaundice, Bilious Colic and General Debility ensue. To restore the functions of the Liver and impart that beauty which always attends a healthy constitution, Dr. Tutt's Liver Pills are recommended. They are not a cure-all, but are designed solely for the disordered Liver and the diseases which it produces.

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

Briefs.

"The only being who ever had any choice in the circumstances of his birth chose the poorest lot and the hardest fare that ever befell any man." Jesus Christ lowered the greatness of wealth by passing it by, and uplifted and hallowed the life of poverty by deliberately accepting it." That is what Rev. Mark Guy Pearse says, and it is worthy of being remembered forever.

The preacher who spends breath and consumes time in "answering objections" to Christianity would, perhaps, have better success in preaching if he would study to present the great truths of religion in plain language, and thus give the Holy Spirit a chance to make his hearers feel that there is a mighty reality in the Christian faith. Truth in plain words is the mightiest of powers.

One of the foremost evangelical preachers of our day said, not long since: "There was much danger that we might sit snugly at home, singing, 'My God, I Am Thine,' and forget the miserable millions outside." One of the most subtle and powerful temptations of the devil is on the line of turning our experiences in religion into the enjoyment of selfishness. All the tempter wants is to turn the flow of religion inward. Selfishness flows in—love flows out. The test of religion these days is in the second table of the law: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

A writer in the Pall Mall Gazette, speaking on the subject of "Books Which Have Influenced Me," says: "Take them all around, the Psalms are probably the best reading in the world when you are hard-hit and ready to perish." Every Christian who has seen any trouble, or who has suffered any pain of body or distress of mind, will agree to that. For consolation and comfort in trial there is no reading equal to the good old Psalms. They touch every feature of human experience in suffering; and the touch sends a current of soothing comfort through all the soul. Glorious old Psalms! What would the people of God do without them!

The Minutes of the second session of the China Mission Annual Conference is at hand, a neatly printed document published at Shanghai. From it we learn the following facts: The Parent Board has 7 mission stations, and the Woman's Board has 9 stations. Native church members, 198—probationers, 51; foreign church members, 18; ordained preachers, 3; unordained preachers, 6; total membership, 276 churches owned, 7—value $10,046 churches rented, 9; sittings, 1,575; hospital (male), 1—value, $10,000; female hospital, 1—value, $6,000; adults baptized, 40; infants baptized, 5; Sunday-schools, 10; Sunday-school teachers, 69; scholars, 653; contributed for foreign missions, $105; domestic missions, $131; parsonages (foreign), 7—value, $26,635; parsonages, native, 5—value, $3,895. In all, there are 30 day-schools, with 45 teachers, and 729 pupils. Value of school property, together with foreign teachers' residences, $106,578.

Dr. Cuyler's Church in Brooklyn has 2,309 members, and their contributions to benevolent enterprises last year amounted to $21,407.

Worldliness in the Church.

The church is in the world and for the world, but not of the world. Christ's words on this point can not mislead nor can they be misunderstood. He said, speaking of his church: "My kingdom is not of this world." Speaking of his followers, he said: "They are not of the world, even as I am not of the world." In these words not only is a plain line of demarkation drawn between the church and the world, but the nature of this separation is clearly stated, and an eminent example of it is put forth: "even as I am not of the world." The nature and example of unworldliness are both found in the life of our Lord. He was in the world, yet he kept himself free from its contaminating influences by building around himself a barrier which the world could not pass. He was in the world, yet he held it off by the strong arm of holy courage, and kept himself above its temptations by the censeless operation of an implicit faith in the sustaining presence of the Father.

The world and the church are as opposite as light and darkness! Indeed, light and darkness are in Scripture used as the symbols of the Church and the World. Christ said: "I am the light of the world;" and Satan is called "the prince of this world," and "the prince of darkness." The maxims and laws of the kingdom of God are the direct opposites of the maxims and laws of the world. The man who is governed by the maxims and laws of the one can not be governed by those of the other. His adherence to either government necessarily severs his connection with the other. Hence it is that our Lord said not, "Ye must not serve God and mammon," but, "Ye can not serve God and mammon." The thing is an utter impossibility. Conformity to the world unchurches everyone who practices it. Worldly people may be nominal church members, but their worldliness has already cut them off from Christ. They may attend church services and give of their money to support church institutions, but they are the withered, dead branches hanging on to the vine till a season or two more shall come around, when they will rot and fall to the ground.

Are there really such people in the church? Well, when a man can be a good church member and nobody ever suspect that he is a church member, it looks as though the church and the world had become tolerably well mixed. The conditions of membership in the church are so loose that men seem to occupy the anomalous position of being of the church and of the world, too. But it is only in appearance. The real fact is, that worldly people are not members of the true church. "Ye can not serve God and mammon." This maxim is the battle-ground where the interests of the soul for eternity are to be decided. It was on this very ground that the devil hurled himself upon the Son of God with a shock that startled the universe. And just as he took Jesus to the mountain-top and showed him all the kingdoms of the world and promised to give him all for one act of worship, so to-day he leads unwatchful people up the elevations and lifts the curtain, and fascinating worldly pleasures and the charms of worldly honors and the promises of worldly wealth blind the eyes and benumb the senses, and the dreaming soul believes the old lie—"All this will I give thee"—and falls in worship at his feet; and mammon is accepted in place of God.

How painful is the fact that people who say they are Christians do not believe the Word of God! The Scriptures say: "If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." The Scriptures say: "Whosoever will be the friend of the world is the enemy of God." If these sentences are not utter nonsense, they teach that worldly conformity is incompatible with true Christian living; that a man can not be united to Christ and live a worldly life; that a woman can not be a member of the body of Christ and yet have a spirit contrary to the Spirit of Christ. These things being so, the apostle's exhortation is eminently pertinent: "Wherefore come out from among them and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and I will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty."

The Real Danger.

We are accustomed to hear that, in these days, the church is surrounded by very great peril; that the dangers which environ her are imminent and numerous. Perhaps her foes were never more numerous, nor more alert, nor better organized than to-day. But he who looks around for the perils that threaten the existence of the church has not read church history aright. The greatest dangers to the church are not her outside foes, no matter how many they may be, nor evil outside influences, no matter how strong they may be. The history of the church is the simple record of her deliverance, through the providence of God, from all these things. Often and over again has she been assailed by the most powerful earthly adversaries; and in every such conflict she has won honorable victory. To the outward foe she presents an impregnable bulwark; and her existence now is sure proof of it.

The danger to the church is not in the fact that there are outspoken infidels in the world, but that there are infidels in the church. The danger is not in the open enemy, no matter how full of deceit and rage and power he may be. The danger is in the professed friend who is wanting in moral courage and Christian fortitude. There is not half as much danger in a quick-sighted foe as there is in a sleepy friend. The assaults of a raging world, led on by the prince of darkness, have burst in froth and spray against the bulwarks of Zion. The legions of hell have been thrown back in terrible recoil upon themselves whenever they have charged the ramparts of the church. Gibraltar stands impregnable. All the destructive engineery which the genius of man can invent; all the appliances which art and science can bring to bear; all the sapping and mining of experienced and skillful engineers; all the blazing bombs and screaming shells and whistling balls which an enemy's guns can throw can not capture it. So of the church.

There is but one thing that can capture Gibraltar. That is treachery within. It is so with the church. Nothing but treachery to her interests will ever pull down the standard of the cross. So that now, instead of watching too anxiously our outside foes, it becomes us to "search Jerusalem with candles." Let the garrison be inspected, and put upon most rigid discipline and exercised in the most rigorous training. The church, in this year of grace 1888, is going forth upon a campaign of larger aggressions upon the kingdom of evil than ever before; and what she needs is to put every soldier in her camp immediately upon the daily drill in the manual of heavenly arms. The undisciplined, undrilled soldier is of no more value in the battle than a civilian. He is ready to run at the first shout of the foe.

The real danger to the church is in the innumerable horde of people within her walls who do no work and no fighting for the great cause of Christ. They are the impedimenta whose transportation costs the outlay of the whole power of the army. Ease-loving Christians clog the chariot wheels and impede the triumphal progress of King Immanuel in his march to regain possession of his original inheritance. They are a curse.

"Curse ye Meroz, said the angel of the Lord. Curse ye bitterly the inhabitants thereof; because they came not to the help of the Lord, to the help of the Lord against the mighty."

Setting Out on the New Year.

We are just getting fairly under way, as the sailors say, in the voyage for the year of grace 1888. The weather, till the last few days, has been much against itinerant and every other kind of work, unless it could be carried on within doors. The weather has much to do with man and his achievements every way. What constitutes climate but the habits of the weather; and what has more to do with the nature, powers and being of men than climate? Life is a fire which must be kept perpetually burning at almost the same heat. A change of a very few degrees in the warmth of that furnace, which every man carries within him, is fatal to the earthly partnership between soul and body. How awful to think of being swept into instantaneous death by the freezing blast, as a number of persons recently were in the Northwest! Our personal generalship is nowhere in higher demand than in combating the combined powers of the elements. We talk much of malaria, contagion and the like, but mere temperature kills as many as almost any other cause. The insidious and persistent effects of cold, damp air carry thousands to untimely graves. The patent-medicine man warns us, not without reason, to "look after that cough." But whether all his remedies are half so good for the cough as the habitual use of common sense and acquired skill in the prime art of self-preservation, is a question not difficult to decide. We should beware of getting under the weather, as the old-time folks used to say. We should keep the body well braced by a good supply of wholesome food, a plenty of sound sleep, and by habitual vigor of movement. The power of God works in us both bodily and spiritually in exact proportion to the constancy and energy with which we conform to the laws of our being.

The roads in many parts of the country have been for some time well nigh impassable, and have been no small hinderance to our traveling preachers. Still, as a militant army, they have not been inactive, but have been on the ground, and ready to give the enemy battle at many a time and place where he did not put in his appearance. But such movements on the part of an attacking army have often as great moral effect upon an enemy as would a successful battle against him. The presence of a preacher, at the time and place for preaching on a very unfavorable day, is not without its effect upon the absentees.

If much depends upon the weather and the roads, more depends upon the workers and the spirit with which they enter upon the campaign. The first impressions and the first expressions of a newly appointed pastor are apt to have a powerful effect upon him and the people to whom he is sent, and often decide the success or failure of his year's work. The people will usually be found ready to help their pastor to realize his expectations, whether good or bad. As he is to them, so they will be to him. The shadow of a disappointed preacher's face falls over all his circuit before him, and, with his half-suppressed words of dissatisfaction, prepares his people to regret us much as he that he should have been sent to them. That shadow sometimes stretches from the Conference-room across the far-off field of pastoral work. Much, very much, grows out of the mood of mind in which any work is begun.

A young preacher writes thus to his presiding elder: "I am well pleased with this circuit, and like the people very much. They all seem to be satisfied. I am doing my best, and, by the grace and help of God, I want to add many souls to the kingdom of Christ." If he does not walk in the light this year, it will not be because he is walking in the shadow of his own gloomy anticipations. For a preacher to form or express an unfavorable opinion of his work before he sees it, or after, till he has thoroughly tested its character by personal acquaintance with every part of it, is to obstruct one's own way and sow briars in one's own path. Our expectations have much to do with what we realize in both senses of the word "realize."

W. L. C. H.

Straining in Giving.

The following from the last Wesleyan, by "X. Y. Z." is so pertinent that we beg our readers to give it much prayerful thought:

This phrase—"strain them"—sticks by me. It will not be a new thing in the church—for people trying to do God's work to be strained. The best men and women through the centuries have strained themselves to do the work that had to be done for men and God. More people ought to strain themselves. I doubt whether religion has gone down to the very roots of life in any man who has not at some time "strained himself" to do good. Why should not laymen strain themselves as well as preachers, missionaries, college presidents, professors and others in like case? Why is one called to self-sacrifice and another may feel free with his "goods" and his "barns?"

It is a sad business indeed—this terrible necessity of begging the church to do its duty to Christ's kingdom—to do what it would love to do if it were truly consecrated.

One thing is certain, God's work will go on. If we will only do for this work what is easy for us to do; what costs us pin-money only; what costs no self-denial, no "strain," then we are unfit for the Master's use at such a time of the world as this; and it will come to pass with us, as has happened with others before our day, we will be counted unworthy, and our crown will be given to another.

We can't go on much longer at the old rate of giving money to God's cause in any department of Christian enterprise. In mission work and in school work we, of these Southern States, are far behind. For a million and more of members we are doing but "a very little thing." Our colleges are being strangled; our missionaries in full march are "halted" for lack of money. Oh, for revivals that open people's eyes to see what are the "signs of these times;" revivals that make men afraid of loving money as well as afraid of hell!

Heaven pity us—the million of us; most of us at ease; a few "strained" unto death; colleges hindered; the church, for the most part, asleep—"enjoying its religion!"

We suppose our Northern brethren, of the Methodist Church, understand themselves, but the composition of their General Conference is a curious mixture to us. A Bishop, or rather bishop, as a lay delegate and women as lay delegates are some things extra in the make-up of a Methodist body. The news comes now that ex-Gov. Pattison, of Pennsylvania, has been elected lay delegate by the North India Conference! Would it not save a good deal of money for all the foreign Conferences to elect their lay delegates from the United States?

According to the last statistics there are in the United States 4,601,416 Methodists and 3,729,745 Baptists.

Notes.

The opening of so many fields [illegible] Christian work, at home and abroad, is one of the sublimest acts of [illegible] providence that has ever been recognized by the world. It is an invitation to Christian consecration to [illegible] the wide range of Christ's benevolence, and to push its earnest work into every nook and corner where sin hides itself. These open doors, standing calls to every Christian man and woman to a work which gives employment to the noblest powers of the mind, and brings out the grandest results of life.

Solomon has this: "Say not thou what is the cause that the former days were better than these? for thou dost not inquire wisely concerning this. In making comparisons between these times and the preceding times we are apt to overlook the fact that this is an advertising age, and that the devil is one of the most skillful advertisers on earth. He has his achievements "blazoned all abroad," and his plans "deceive the very elect." His exploits are "trumpeted to the farthest ends of the green earth," and he would have us blindly believe that the whole land is ready to proclaim him king, but the sober fact is, he is losing ground every day, and Christ's army is receiving daily recruits from every nation under heaven."

There are some people who are always "harping" on the better times that are gone forever, and the better Christians of other ages, the like of which we shall never see again. We commend to the consideration of such—if the ADVOCATE has among its readers—the following sentence from Prof. Fisher's new Church History. Speaking of the effect of Christianity in reforming the lives of its adherents in the earliest period of its existence, he says: "While the early writers laud Christianity for the effects wrought by it, in contrast with the influence of paganism, the complaints which they make of the faults of Christians show that ideal perfection is not to be claimed for the church, even in the days of its comparative purity."

Two college presidents have recently given in the Advance their opinions concerning the "Christian Influences in the Colleges of To-day." President Bartlett, of Dartmouth, says: "On the whole, the steadily increasing religious influences of the college are a matter of rejoicing, and we feel that a young man can be nowhere more safely placed, among a great company of other young men than in the college." President Seelye, of Amherst, gives his testimony as follows: "I am sure that the religious life in this college is steadier, stronger and more persuasive than it was forty years ago when I was a student here. A little more than half our number are church members when they enter, and this proportion steadily increases until generally from eighty to ninety per cent. have made profession of faith before leaving."

To the people and preachers who are looking forward to "hard times" during this year of grace, we commend the following from an exchange:

Many of our readers have Wesley's works at their finger ends, and will therefore, remember that in one of his sermons he states that for several years he subsisted on potatoes, and found that doing so conduced largely to promote that splendid health which he enjoyed. And, what is still more remarkable, in the same sermon he mentions the case of a man known to him, and connected with the foundry, who actually supported himself on a weekly pennyworth of parsnips, and with the addition of the water in which they were boiled, was all the food and drink he consumed during the entire week. It is clear that if it be impossible for the people to increase their incomes, it is possible enough for them greatly to reduce their expenditure, and at the same time really improve their health, to the nothing of their morals.

There is a thought which came while meditating upon our Lord's parable of "The Vine and the Branches," which is a thought of some moment. A person acquainted with vines knows that a dry, sapless, dead branch may retain its connection with the vine for a long time after its life is gone. He knows, too, that the agencies which contribute vigor to the living branches are the very agencies which bring rottenness to the dead branch. The flow of life is from the vine to the branches. When the channel is open, then, showers and dews and sunny days bring increased vigor and fresher life. If the channel is closed, then, showers and dews and sunny days are the messengers of decay. In the true religious life faith keeps the channel open, and the life of Christ in the soul eliminates from the means of grace and the ways of Providence whatever can be assimilated by the spiritual nature, and growth and fruit are assured. But where this supreme faith is wanting, these very means of grace and ways of Providence hasten the decay to the "very rottenness and repulsive horror of spiritual death." Hence we ought to be sure that we have a vital connection with him who said, "I am the Vine, ye are the branches."

Personals.

When Bro. McCoy, of the Alabama Christian Advocate, advertised for a poetry-eating cuty, we thought it was a joke, but the way original rhyme has been pouring into this office lately shows that Pegasus is on a rampage equal to any he ever took in the olden time. Is this to be a year of poetic affliction? Shades of Parnassus!

We learn from the Greenville Democrat that Sister Theobold, whose death was reported last week, left by her will $1,500 to the Methodist Church in Greenville, Miss., and $1,000 to Grenada Female Collegiate Institute, and $250 to a religious fund in Louisville, Ky.

The postoffice address of Rev. R. P. Mitchell is Durant, Miss.

Mrs. Cornelia S. Anderson, of the Weston Auxiliary, of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Mississippi Conference, is teaching in the Laredo Seminary, Laredo, Texas. She is the daughter of Bro. Sharborough, formerly of Mississippi Conference, and sister to Rev. M. Sharborough, of California. This auxiliary hopes to furnish workers for the Japan mission.

Prof. Asa Gray, the eminent botanist and professor in Yale College, died of paralysis, January 30.

W. W. Corcoran, the venerable philanthropist of Washington City, was born the year before Gen. Washington died, and has known all Presidents from Jefferson down to Cleveland.

The English Baptist Union have at last been compelled to accept Mr. Spurgeon's withdrawal, as he persists that when he withdrew he just meant to do that thing.

This sentence from a private note of a brother who has gone an entire stranger to a new work sounds exceedingly well: "The Lord is blessing these good people. Well trained by former pastors, they provide liberally for the preacher in charge. I love these people and this work." That brother has religion enough to see the good in his new field, and we predict he and his people will have a year of grand success.

L. D. Palmer, business manager of our Publishing House, has resigned his position, and David M. Smith has been appointed in his place.

Edward W. Winfield, son of the late Dr. A. R. Winfield, has been licensed to preach by the Quarterly Conference of the First Church in Little Rock, Ark.

Bro. Bowen reports a fine revival in progress at Greenville, Miss. Several have been converted, and the meeting is going forward with good prospects.

Bro. Gotshall, the Kansas City missionary, has brought us under obligations for copies of the Kansas City Times, in which are given accounts of the great revival under Jones and Small. Read what that paper says of that meeting on this page.

To-morrow—February 10—is the birthday of the ADVOCATE. We received a lyric for the occasion; but it came too late for insertion.

A new book, on "The Evolution of Episcopacy and Organic Methodism," is about to be issued by Rev. T. B Neely, D. D., of the Philadelphia Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Your poor wearied wife losing sleep night after night nursing the little one suffering from that night-dread to children and horror to parents, croup, should have a bottle of Taylor's Cherokee Remedy of Sweet Gum and Mullein, an undoubted croup preventive and cure for coughs, colds and consumption.

Items of Interest.

Four thousand boys, from nine to fifteen years, have been incarcerated in Cook county jail (Chicago) since 1881!

Sixty-five years ago the friends of Christ agreed to unite on a certain day in concerted prayer for the revival of religion in our colleges, and the day has been observed ever since.

The Pension Appropriation Bill, introduced in Congress the other day, calls for $80,275,500, an increase of $4,000,000 over last year.

The average salary of the ministers of the Southern Presbyterian Church last year was $552.

Dr. John Hall's Church, in New York City, supports three missions, for which the church recently raised $12,000. Some churches ought to be imitated by some other churches.

The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church will meet May 1, in the Metropolitan Opera House, New York City. It numbers about 450 members.

According to Dr. Dorchester there are in the United States, 112,711 churches, 81,851 ministers and 12,132,651 communicants. Since 1850, the population has increased 152 per cent., and the communicants 213 per cent. There is one church for every 518 people and one minister for every 692 people.

The value of the gifts and money received by the Pope in honor of his jubilee, it is thought, will reach $20,000,000, and will be used in propagating the Romish faith.

The high license law in Minnesota has closed the doors of 1,600 saloons. St. Paul's drinking places have dwindled to one-half their former number.

A Mrs. Spring, of Liverpool, has gotten up a jubilee petition of the women of England to the Queen on behalf of closing the saloons on Sunday. The petition is seven miles long, and contains 1,132,608 signatures of women above sixteen years of age. There is no telling what a woman can do.

The mineral out-put in the United States in 1887 was the largest of any country in the world, reaching the enormous sum of $462,000,000.

The printer's bill for publishing the Louisiana Conference Minutes is due, and preachers are expected to forward at once their pro rata for its settlement.

The Kansas City Times has the following in regard to the meeting of Jones and Small, recently closed in that city:—

The Georgia revivalists, Sam Jones and Sam Small, have just concluded in Kansas City the most remarkable series of meetings in their experience. They have been here twenty-nine days and the attendance has averaged over 10,000 daily. The total attendance has been not less than 300,000. The conversions can not be reckoned because an unknown proportion did not come forward openly at the meetings.

It can only be said that the number runs up far into the thousands. Something which has probably not happened in connection with any other revival is that hundreds were converted by reading the newspaper reports of the sermons. All through Missouri and Kansas and in other States where the circulation of The Times is extensive, the effect was felt.

Accounts and comments have been pouring in, telling of the wonderful hold the sermons have taken on the popular mind. It is not beyond the fact to state that a million people have read them. The ministers of the city have indorsed the work and have lent their aid in every way. It has been a general, united, fruitful crusade for Christianity.

The work of Sam Jones is less temporary than that of any revivalist we have had here. The sentences he hurls out catch and stick. People go away and repeat them, think over them and preserve them. They become proverbs and remain for good.

Educated men, who have gone to scoff, if they did not remain to pray, at least were impressed with the earnestness of the eloquent Georgian. Many of them went again, some more than twice or three times. They felt the effect of straight, unartificial speech.

The meetings have been phenomenally successful and the effect seems likely to be phenomenally durable. The Times feels that the visit of these men has been an unmixed blessing to our city.

Books and Periodicals.

BOOKS.

AUNT PEGGY, AND OTHER POEMS. By T. A. S. Adams, D. D. Published by L. D. Dameron, St. Louis.

This is the second edition of this little book, and is evidence of the appreciation of the reading public. Dr. Adams is too well known to the readers of our paper to need any commendation from us at anything he writes, whether prose or poetry.

OUT OF EGYPT INTO CANAAN. By Martin Wells Knapp. Cranston & Stowe, Cincinnati. Price, eighty cents.

The author spiritualizes the journey of the Israelites from Egypt to Canaan, and applies it to the Christian course on earth. The book is good to the use of edifying, and will doubtless be helpful to many sojourners in this vale of tears.

CHRISTIAN GROWTH. By Dr. Fitzgerald, of Nashville Advocate. Price, ten cents.

This is a helpful little book for devotional reading, and will stimulate you and encourage you and benefit you in several other ways.

THE PREACHER AND THE RECTOR—TOKEN RELATION. By Rev. R. Abbey. With an introduction by Bishop Galloway. Southern Methodist Publishing House, Nashville. Price, five cents.

This is a companion to the author's "Priest and Preacher," which was published some months since and extensively read. This tract is a convincing argument against the pretensions of high churchism, and should be read by everybody.

LETTERS, SENTENCES AND MAXIMS. By Lord Chesterfield. With a critical essay by C. A. Sainte-Beuve. G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York; Eyrich's book store, 150 Canal street, New Orleans.

This beautifully gotten up little book belongs to the "Knickerbocker Nuggets" Series. Lord Chesterfield's letters have been before the public for more than a century, and are still the standard upon many points of good breeding. While the morality of many of his teachings is very questionable, on some points he is as strong against wicked practices as the most moral could wish. Take this: "People who swear never contribute in any degree to give the company they are in the denomination of good company. The practice, besides that it has no one temptation to plead, is as silly and as illiberal as it is wicked."

PERIODICALS.

—The Mouteaglean, for January, is late, but has a good table of contents. R. A. Clark, Nashville, Tenn. Price $1.

—The Book Buyer, for February, has a fine summary of the latest American and foreign literature. It is published by Charles Scribner's Sons, New York. Price $1 a year, 10 cents a copy. This is a valuable monthly to all who are getting up libraries, whether they be individuals or societies.

—Pulpit Treasury has sermons, editorials, exegesis, pastoral work, Sunday-school cause and many other interesting matters. This monthly is growing in favor with us. J. Sanderson, D. D., is the managing editor, E. B. Treat, 771 Broadway, N. Y., is publisher, and the price is $2 50 Clergymen, $2.

—From William F. Johnston, 308 Decatur street, New Orleans, we have received the following pieces of sheet music adapted to piano or organ: Golden Spray, fifty cents; Mary's Delight Mazurka, thirty cents.

—Minutes of the third session of the Mexican Border Mission Conference. Edited by Robert W. MacDonell.

—Wide Awake, for this month, is as splendid a number as we have yet seen of this superb monthly for young folks. The editors seem to know exactly what sort of reading young people need; and D. Lothrop & Co. know exactly how to get it up in attractive form. D. Lothrop Company, Boston. Price $2 40.

—The Forum, a monthly review of living subjects. Contents for February, 1888: I.—The Government and the Telegraph. Senator S. M. Cullom.—An argument for a telegraph system controlled by the government, but not for a government monopoly. By the author of the bill now pending in the Senate. II.—What Shall the Public Schools Teach? Prof. W. T. Harris.—An argument for the public school system substantially as it is, from the point of view of the practical public instructor, being the second article in this series. III.—How Protection Protects. Representative William D. Kelley.—A thorough statement of the protectionists' position in the approaching campaign, and the reasons therefor. IV.—The Sky. Prof. John Tyndall.—The result of his recent observations taken on the Alps, with special reference to atmospheric colors. V.—Books That Have Helped Me. Judge Robert C. Pitman. The concluding article of this series. VI.—The Mechanism of the Singing Voice. Dr. Austin Flint. The result of many years' especial study of the organs used in singing. VII.—My Religious Experience. Monsignor T. S. Preston.—An explanation of the unusual transition in middle life of a man reared in Protestantism in New England to the Romish faith. VIII.—The Torrid Zone of our Politics. Murat Halstead.—An argument, and statistical tables to show that the Southern Democrats are not national in their aims or tendencies. IX.—Bribery and its Near Relatives. Rev. Dr. C. A. Bartol.—An argument to show that certain methods for the suppression of vice are indefensible. X.—The Cause of Irish Discontent. Julian Sturgis.—A statement from an English point of view to show that the cause of Irish discontent lies deeper than dissatisfaction with the landlord system. XI.—Impediments to our Domestic Commerce. Darius Lyman, late Chief of the Navigation Bureau of the Treasury Department.—An explanation of the unnecessary impediments to our coastwise trade imposed by our navigation laws, and suggestions concerning their removal.

There is no important public question that will come forward during the presidential campaign but will be discussed on both sides by the highest authorities in the pages of the Forum.

St. Nicholas, for February, will capture all the young folks and not a few of the older people. Mrs. Burnett finishes "Sara Crewe" in this number, and John Preston True begins "Drill—A Story of School-boy Life." Mary Mapes Dodge makes a first-class monthly for boys and girls. Century Company, Union Square, N. Y. Price $3

—The Pearl of Days is a monthly devoted to the protection and interests of the Sabbath, and proves its devotion in a strong and attracting manner. W. B. Ketcham, 71 Bible House, N. Y. Price $1.

—The Eclectic Magazine, for this month, opens with an admirable article from Nineteenth Century by the Duke of Argyll, on "The Power of Loose Analogies," in which the Duke gives the scientific unbelievers some nuts to crack, and some things to think about. Following this are twenty or more articles, of more or less importance, from authors who have a large share of public attention. This monthly always presents a good resume of foreign literature, and is well worth its price ($5). Published by E. R. Pelton, 25 Bond street, New York.

—We have received Gregory's Annual Illustrated Retail Catalogue of Warranted Seeds. James J. H. Gregory, Marblehead, Mass. Free to all.

—Appleton's Literary Bulletin contains a large list of new books and forthcoming books. D. Appleton & Co., New York.

The Revised Version gives an entirely different meaning to an oft-quoted passage in Psalms lxviii: "The Lord giveth the Word: the women that publish the tidings are a great host." Now, we suppose that all who favor women preaching will favor an early adoption of the Revised Version, and all who are opposed to it will say, "Let us stick to King James' Version."

Mr. Philip Werlein has in stock a beautiful selection of organs. Anyone thinking of purchasing should call and see them before purchasing. Mr. Werlein's terms are moderate; he sells cheaper than ever before, and guarantees his instruments as first-class in every respect. There is no better judge of an organ, and anyone in the country can safely leave such a matter to him, and be assured that their order will receive prompt attention and prove satisfactory in every respect.

A cat's eyes are said to be largest at midnight. We never made any examination, but we are positive that its voice is about seventeen times larger at that hour than at any other period during the twenty-four.

CHANGES.—We have quite a number of orders to change the address of subscribers; some without signatures, and others who do not give the former address. Under these circumstances, change can not be made.

"Can February March?" asked the punster, with a sickly smile. "Perhaps not," replied the quiet man, "but April May."

We would again call the attention of subscribers and agents that, in making remittances, to make them payable to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. Please keep this in remembrance.

EDUCATIONAL.

Mansfield Female College.

1887-8.

THE FALL TERM will open Wednesday, September 15, 1887.

The Faculty has been strengthened by the accession of Rev. M. S. Wade, of Virginia, who will have the discipline of the College, and Prof. D. F. Bobille, also of Virginia, who will manage the boarding department. Both these gentlemen are experienced in school work, and they, with their families, will add much to the social advantages of the pupils.

Other highly qualified teachers have been secured in the Literary, Music and Art Departments.

Annual rate of board and tuition from one hundred and eighty-five dollars, according to class. Music, instrumental or vocal, and art lessons, five dollars per month of four weeks, extra.

Instruction in French, ten dollars per year. Use of piano for practice, ten dollars. Total expense for the year for board, tuition, and single course in music or art, paid in advance, two hundred dollars.

A deposit of five dollars for each term must be made for purchase of books and stationery.

Pupils must furnish their own bed-clothing and pillows, towels and toilet articles.

The College is the property of the Louisiana Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the daughters of members of this body receive free tuition in the Literary and Music Departments.

Owing to the steadily increasing patronage during the past four years, the Board of Managers have made arrangements for increasing the capacity and comfort of the buildings, and beautifying the grounds.

Mansfield is on the line of the Texas and Pacific R. R., 288 miles from New Orleans, and forty miles from Shreveport.

ARTIFICIAL EYES

Are Now Perfectly Made That No One Can Tell Them from the Natural Eye.

The Artificial Eye is not only a beautifier, but it restores its wearer to excellent usefulness.

It enables the eyelids to move freely as ever.

It moves in all directions of the feet passages.

It prevents the eyelashes from turning within, causing irritation.

It prevents distortion of features, as happens always in case of a young person who has the misfortune to lose an eye—and sometimes in the case of older persons.

Mr. W. Bonn, our Optician, has made a specialty of selecting and inserting them.

"THE DOT UPON THE I."

By M. W.

Dr. Tyng related the following incident to his Sunday-school in the Epiphany Church, Philadelphia, many years ago:

In Russia's far-off frozen clime
There lived a lovely child;
The Lord in deeds and words of love
His tender heart inclined.

He loved to hear his parents read
In God's most holy Word,
And treasured up within his breast
The blessed truths he heard.

This little boy was very sick.
And when about to die
He called his father to his side,
And said, "I want to buy

"Bibles to send to heathen lands,
Where they know not the Lord;
That they may all read for themselves
In his most holy Word.

"I can not send whole Bibles there,
Perhaps not one sheet word;
But I would like to give some help
To spread its truths abroad.

"Those three bright pennies in my box
I think a type would buy
To print in Christ's most holy name
The dot upon the i."

The stricken father did not fail
Those little coins to send.
O children, think how many coins
In wanton waste you spend!

Christ will receive the smallest gift.
When dollies tempt your eye,
Think of the little Russian boy's
Small dot upon the i.

—Children's Work for Children.

MR. EDITOR: Having seen so many pieces published in the young folks' column of the ADVOCATE, and seeing none from this part of the country, I resolved to see if you would publish a few lines from me. I do not feel that I have anything to interest any of the little correspondents of the ADVOCATE. I live on the Chicasawhay river, near the little town of Leakesville, which I think is a very beautiful country, which is one of the most beautiful pine regions. We have a Sunday-day-school at Leakesville. Our preacher for this work is Bro. J. B. Baldwin. He was on this work last year; and we all like him very much. I will answer Bettie Carruth's question: Where in the Bible is the most beautiful chapter found? It is Psalms xxiii. I will ask the young folks a question: Where is "gold" first spoken of in the Bible? I will close with many good wishes to the ADVOCATE.

Respectfully,

EUGENE BRELAND.

LEAKESVILLE, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I enjoy reading the cousins' letters so much, and as no one has written you a letter from here, I thought I would write and tell you about a quilt Aunt Annie is making to get money for the church. She calls it an autograph quilt, and anyone who pays a dime will get their name on it. I am helping her to get the names. She says when she gets it finished she is going to give it to the preacher's family at Edwards, Miss.; so, now, if any of the cousins, or any of your readers, who feel an interest in church work, will enclose a dime to Miss Annie Bolls, Smith's Station, Miss., she will put their name on the church quilt. I hope you will print this, so grandma will see it, as it is my first letter to a paper.

Your little friend,

ALICE LEE BOLLS.

SMITH'S STATION, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: Here I am again seeking admittance to your columns, this time to return thanks to the kind friends who have contributed to my missionary quilt. The names I've placed on my roll of honor, which you will please publish:

Mrs. R. B. Woolfley, New Orleans, La.: Mollie and Bernie Doyle, Serepta, La.: Miss Ella Barkham, Markesville Miss.; Miss Mattie Decker, Jackson, La.: Miss Judson Hill, Carrollton, Miss.: Lea D. Jones, Refuge Miss. Now, in conclusion, I'd ask if there are not other friends of the missionary cause who, not having seen my other letter, would like to contribute to my quilt? To them I would say that scraps of silk, satin and velvet will be very acceptable, and also embroidery silk.

Your little friend,

MADIE R. MOSS.

WINONA, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: Conference sent my grandpa back here. My mamma, sister and I live with my grandpa and grandma. We like this place very much. It is filling up with nice families. I want to tell the little cousins what a nice present my grandpa gave me Christmas. A nice box of tools; and I have been trying my hand on some toy furniture; and Mr. Editor, if you get in a tight for a carpenter, you may telegraph for your little friend,

OSCAR HUNTER.

GALLMAN, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: The dear old ADVOCATE is a weekly visitor to our home. I love to read the children's column. I am going to school now. I have eight studies. I will tell you the names of them: Arithmetic, grammar, geography, physiology, history, algebra, composition, rhetoric and spelling. My teacher's name is Mrs. McCormick. I like her very much, she is so good and kind to me. I am a member of the Methodist Church. Bro. J. S. Parker is our pastor. I like him very much. I will ask the cousins a question: What is the shortest chapter in the Bible? I will close. Wishing to see this in print, I remain,

Your friend,

ANNIE H. MIDDLETON.

BENTON, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: It has been some time since I wrote to the dear ADVOCATE, so I thought I would write again. I am going to school, and like to go very much. I study arithmetic, geography, spelling and reading. I have a brother going to Kavanaugh College. He is studying for the ministry. I will be so glad when school closes, so he can come home to see us. Hoping he will see my letter in print, I remain,

Your little friend,

PEARL H. MIDDLETON.

BENTON, Mississippi.

THE OLD-FASHIONED GIRL.—She was a little girl until she was fifteen years old, and then she helped her mother in her household duties. She had her hours of play, and enjoyed herself to the fullest extent. She never said to her mother, "I can't—I don't want to," for obedience was to her a cherished virtue. She arose in the morning when called, and we do not suppose she had her hair done up in curling papers and crimping pins or banged over her forehead. She did not grow into a young lady and talk about her beau before she was in her teens, and did not read dime novels, nor was she fancying a hero in every plow-boy she met. The old-fashioned girl was modest in her demeanor, and she never talked slang nor used by-words. She did not laugh at old people nor make fun of cripples. She had respect for her elders, and was not above listening to words of counsel from those older than herself. She did not know as much as her mother, nor did she think that her judgment was as good as that of her grandmother. She did not go to parties by the time she was ten years old, and stay till after midnight, dancing with chance young men who happened to be present. She went to bed in season, and doubtless she said her prayers and slept the sleep of innocence, rose up in the morning happy and capable of giving happiness. And now, if there is an old-fashioned girl in the world today may, Heaven bless and keep and raise up others like her.—Bishop Cosgrove.

NELLY'S WORK.—All by herself lives old Mrs. Webster. She is almost blind, and her limbs are drawn up with rheumatism, but she is a good woman, and has many friends who like to visit her and carry food and put her room in order. Among these is Nellie, who goes every day as soon as school is out. She doesn't make the bed or sweep the room, for she has not learned to do that work yet, but she carries a little Psalm-book in her hand, and sits down on the cricket at Mrs. Webster's feet, and reads the sweet, comforting words.

"It is better than my daily bread," the old lady says. "Yes, it is my daily bread!"

And when Nelly goes away, she lays her hand upon her head, and prays, "God bless you!"

What to Teach Our Daughters.

The Charleston Dispatch relates that at a social gathering some one proposed this question: "What shall I teach my daughter?" The following replies were handed in:

Teach her that one hundred cents make a dollar.

Teach her to arrange the parlor and the library.

Teach her to say "No," and mean it, or "Yes," and stick to it.

Teach her how to wear a calico dress, and wear it like a queen.

Teach her to dress for health and comfort as well as for appearance.

Teach her to cultivate flowers and to keep the kitchen garden.

Teach her to make the neatest room in the house.

Teach her to have nothing to do with intemperate or dissolute young men.

Teach her that tight lacing is uncomely as well as injurious to health.

Teach her to regard morals and habits, and not money, in selecting her associates.

Teach her to observe the old rule: "A place for everything and everything in its place."

Teach her that music, drawing and painting are real accomplishments in the home, and are not to be neglected if there be time and money for their use.

Teach her the important truism: That the more she lives within her income the more she will save and the further she will get away from the poor-house.

Teach her that a good, steady, church-going mechanic, farmer, clerk or teacher, without a cent, is worth more than forty loafers or non-producers in broadcloth.

Teach her to embrace every opportunity for reading, and to select such books and periodicals as will give the most useful and practical information in order to make the best progress in earlier as well as later home and school life.

A STORY FOR WIVES.—A wife once retired for the night, worn-out and petulant because of her many cares and her husband's absence when she thought he might have been at her side. After a time he came home, sat down to his desk, and worked long and hard at his accounts, while she lay looking out at him, and feeling angry that he seemed wholly unmindful of her. When he had laid away slate and books she saw him unlock a drawer, and take from it a picture, which he lingered lovingly over, tenderly kissed, and then replaced. Her woman's curiosity was roused, and she determined to know more of the matter. So, while he was getting ready for bed, she feigned sleep. He soon slept soundly, and then she crept from her place, like a thief in the night, took the keys, unlocked the desk and drawer, and found that her husband had been kissing a picture of herself, which was taken when they were first married. Then she was chagrined and mortified because she had not been a more loving wife, and went back to bed with new resolutions formed. In the morning she put on a wrapper that was clean and very becoming, a collar and bow, and carefully brushed her hair. When her husband came in to breakfast, he looked at her, caught her in his arms, and kissed her. Then he asked the children if the little mother didn't look pretty. She was wise enough not to forget the lesson.

THE SECRET OF SUCCESS.—I was conversing with a clergyman, who I knew had been very successful in his ministry, and I asked him something as to his methods, and as to the principles he had found most effective. His answer was a modest and remarkable one. He said: "You know I do not consider myself an eloquent man; you know I am not; I do not think I have any particular kind of talent, but I have an unlimited belief in the power of the Word of God. Any instrument I endeavor to wield, I make it, by constant prayer that I shall always wield it discriminately, carefully, pointedly, and, as the consequence of being able to do that, I have had it said to me, 'That text went through me like a knife.'" That is what we want to produce, that the "sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God," should be a sword to the heart.—Observer.

Why You Feel

So weak and exhausted is because your blood is impure. As well expect the sanitary condition of a city to be perfect with defiled water and defective sewerage, as to expect such a complicated piece of mechanism as the human frame to be in good order with impure blood circulating even to its minutest veins. Do you know that every drop of your two or three gallons of blood passes through the heart and lungs in about two and a half minutes, and that, on its way, it makes bone and muscle, brain and nerve, and all other solids and fluids of the body? The blood is the great nourisher, or, as the Bible terms it,

"The Life of the Body."

Is it any wonder, then, that if the blood be not pure and perfect in its constituents, you suffer so many indescribable symptoms?

Ayer's Sarsaparilla stands "head and shoulders" above every other Alterative and Blood Medicine. As proof read these reliable testimonies:

G. C. Brock, of Lowell, Mass., says: "For the past 25 years I have used Ayer's Sarsaparilla. In my opinion, the best remedial agencies for the cure of all the diseases arising from impurities of the blood are contained in this medicine."

Eugene L. Hill, M. D., 381 Sixth Ave., New York, says: "As a blood-purifier and general builder-up of the system, I have never found anything to equal Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It gives perfect satisfaction."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla proves equally efficacious in all forms of Scrofula, Boils, Carbuncles, Eczema, Humors, Lumbago, Catarrh, &c.; and is, therefore, the very best

Spring and Family Medicine in use. "It heals all," says Mr. Cutler, of Cutler Brothers & Co., Boston, "hence

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

does sell." Prepared by

Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Price $1; six bottles, $5. Worth $5 a bottle.

PARKER—GEORGE W. PARKER was born in Jackson, Miss., August 18, 1835. At the age of twenty-one he moved to Vicksburg, but soon after the war, he moved to Yazoo City, where he lived until his death, which occurred November 15, 1887, at the residence of his father-in-law, about seventeen miles above the city. About fifteen years ago he united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and continued a member until his death. He always responded liberally to every call of the church made, and always seemed glad that he was able to meet these demands. While the writer was pastor, Bro. Parker was one of the stewards, and always tried to be at his post of duty. He was twice married—both times was very fortunate in securing excellent Christian ladies for his companions. He leaves one child by each marriage. He was an affectionate father, and a most devoted husband; thoughtful and generous, he provided liberally for all their wants. Nothing that money could procure was wanted to complete their happiness. Bro. Parker has gone, never to be seen in his accustomed places again. But of his last days the writer knows but very little, as he has met him only once since he closed his pastorate in Yazoo City several years ago; but he trusts all was well with him in his last days. And may the grace of God sustain the widow and orphans in this their bereavement!

W. B. BALLARD.

BRADLEY—A. A. BRADLEY was born October 15, 1854, and died January 1, 1888. Born! Died! The history of the generations "gone before." Heart-strings broken; tears shed; many endured; spirits ripened for glory by being permitted to become partakers with their Lord of his sufferings. A father's staff removed, a mother's idol overthrown, a brother's companion taken, a sister's pride laid low in the dust! And such is life here! The morning breaks on the other side. There the hill-tops are already resplendent with its glimmering light. When we enter, "through the gate," into "the city," we will know as we will know. Some beams of that light divine reached here. The storm brightens; heaven draws near. Look up, sorrowing ones! Onward, forward. The rainbow of hope is the way, and soon, if faithful, we will, with the loved and lost, come to the joy of your Lord."

C. D. VAN VALKENBURGH.

ROSE—Died Sunday, January 29th, at the parsonage, the infant only son of the pastor of the Church in Tyler, Rev. H. Rose, aged twenty-one months. He was not the idol of his parents. His presence was sunshine in their home. He was beautiful in form and, intellectually, he was bright for his age; such a child parents would be grateful to God for. When I heard of the death of the darling boy, I was fearful the mother's tender heart would break. But in rare instances such as the parents the spirit of resignation. They have one, a little girl, left. She is quite sick. We trust our heavenly Father will spare to them. We ask the prayers of the church for them in their bereavement, and the recovery of their daughter. W. N. BONNER.

WALKER—Died at his residence, Laurel Hill, La., on January 18, EDWARD HOWARD WALKER, aged forty-two years. This announcement will bring sorrow to the hearts of many who knew Eddie in happier and brighter hours, and who loved him for those generous, forgiving traits of character, which marked his intercourse with his fellow-men. In manhood's prime he has laid down life's duties with the full assurance that there is rest beyond the river, "He in whom he trusted doeth all things well." G. A. W.

Christian Work in Colleges.

The largest and most widely organized college society to-day is the College Young Men's Christian Association. It exists in nearly three hundred institutions in the United States, Canada, Japan, China, India, Ceylon, Syria and Turkey. Over eleven thousand Christian students are connected with these organizations. Each association has a two-fold purpose: the strengthening of Christians, and the salvation of the unconverted.

The most valuable method of work employed, however, is visitation. In 1877, I. D. Wishard, of Princeton College, began a tour of visits, which has extended to about three hundred points. In 1885 he was reinforced by C. K. Ober, of Williams College. These men are the college secretaries of the International Committee of Young Men's Christian Associations, and serve as the representatives of the committee and the college students in extending and developing the work. They have personally addressed over one hundred thousand students in nearly every State and in Canada.

The year which has passed since the last annual Day of Prayer for Colleges has been an eventful one in connection with Christian work in the student world.

The interest awakened in foreign missionary work, at the first Summer School, resulted in a special tour among the colleges during the winter of 1887 of two members of the school consecrated to the work. Through their efforts over 2,000 students were led to express a willingness and desire to enter the foreign work. Some of these have already gone, but the great majority have yet a course of preparation before them.

A number of new College Young Men's Christian Associations in foreign lands have been reported since the last Day of Prayer. There are now three in Japan, four in China, two in India, two in Ceylon, one in Syria, one in Persia, and three in Turkey. The work in those associations is very similar to that in the American College Associations.

As a result of this Christian intercollegiate work, now just ten years old, thousands of students have professed Christ and followed him. Multitudes of these men have been scattered throughout the world, and are making their lives tell as Christian business men, ministers and teachers. The close contact which this work has established between the young men in the colleges and those in the city associations has resulted in making the former more practical in their methods. It has also impressed them with their responsibility to the work of the church for young men generally; and many of the leaders in this work in cities and along railroads were first interested in it while in college. Never before have so many young men been desirous of entering the great work of foreign missions as are now offering for that work.

Churches and Christian people everywhere are urgently requested to offer earnest and frequent prayers for God's blessing upon this work for students, both at home and abroad.

Catarrh is caused by scrofulous taint in the blood, and is cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, which purifies and enriches the blood and gives the whole system health and strength. Try this "peculiar medicine." It is prepared by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

TACT AND TALENT.—Talent is power, tact is skill. Talent is weight, tact is momentum. Talent knows what to do, tact knows how to do it. Talent makes a man respectable, tact will make him respected. Talent is wealth, tact is ready money. Talent is pleased that it ought to have succeeded, tact is delighted that it has succeeded. Talent toils for a posterity that will never repay it, tact throws away no pains but catches the passions of the passing hour. Talent builds for eternity, tact for a short lease, and gets good interest.—Paul Chatfield.

Consumption Surely Cured.

To the Editor:

Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the above-named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy FREE to any of your readers who have consumption, if they will send me their Express and P. O. address.

Steel Armor at Its Best.

The finest armors were made from 1440 to 1460. They were marvels of suppleness, lightness and elegance. The iron shell was modelled on the body beneath it, and followed every movement of the torso and limbs, protecting without confining them; the steel envelope had become individual, and was, like hose and jerkin, made for its wearer, instead of the clumsy greaves of the fourteenth century made to fit any man. In these leg-pieces, carefully articulated at the thigh and above the knee, personal peculiarities appear—legs slightly bowed and more or less heavily unsieved at the calf; in the flexible corselet the body enjoyed comparative freedom; under the armet or round helmet the head turned easily; the pointed toes of the sollerets could be unfastened in a moment if the knight was obliged to dismount; the gauntlets were as supple as silk gloves, and the weight of the whole armor, composed of very thin plates of well-tempered steel, was so carefully distributed that it appeared comparatively light. This armor, moulded on the forms of the body beneath it, composed of polished steel, was the "white harness" so often mentioned by the chroniclers. In France it was worn without ornament, but the Italians decorated it with lions' heads and antique masks; a little later the armorers of Nuremberg, then very popular in France, introduced fluted steel—it was stronger, not heavier, and offered more resistance to lance-thrusts than the smooth metal. Many beautiful specimens remain of this Maximilian armor, as it was called.

No further progress was possible; comparative lightness, resistance, convenience and elegance of form had been attained. After this time the shape of helmet and corselet was varied according to individual caprice or the latest fashion, and the steel was gilded and ornamented; but armor, having attained its complete development, steadily declined.—E. H. and E. W. Blashfield, in Scribner's Magazine.

DECEPTIVE SENSATIONS.—The evidence of our senses is correct in nearly all cases in which two of them are called into play, so that the testimony of one is checked by that of the other. But when we have to rely upon one sense alone, we are sometimes liable to curious deceptions. This is the case with some of the feelings of touch. In hip-joint disease the pain is often referred to the knee, while it is really in the hip. This is because the nerve which conveys sensation from the knee also sends a branch to the hip-joint. The experience of those who have lost a limb are familiar. For some time afterward they feel sensations and pains of all sorts in the member that is gone, so that they can hardly convince themselves that it is not still there, itching or aching or smarting. This is because the nerve which used to convey feeling to the foot, extremity is affected by some temporary accident. The feeling, which may be real as to the trunk that remain, is still, by force of habit, referred to the extremity whence it used to come. Another experiment in deceptive sensations may be made by crossing the second finger over the first, and then placing a marble between the tips of the fingers, when it will be almost impossible to convince one's self that there are not two marbles. This is because two points in the fingers are touched simultaneously, which, in the ordinary position, could only be touched at the same time by two marbles. Acting upon its previous knowledge, the brain says that there are two.—Popular Science.

Famous Women.

It is a significant fact that most of the women who have achieved fame in art, literature, or "affairs," have enjoyed vigorous health. This shows that the mind is never capable of the severe and continued application necessary to creative work, unless the body is at its best. The woman who aspires to fill an exalted place among her associates, must be free from nervous debility and female weaknesses. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will banish these, and it is warranted to restore those functional harmonies which are indispensable to health. As a specific for all those chronic weaknesses and ailments peculiar to women, it is unequaled.

The working thread which is unmanageable as the Lord presents it, becomes knotted and twisted with a dozen more by our neglect.

DESTROY OR BE DESTROYED.—This seems the only alternative between the country and the liquor traffic. Those engaged in this ruinous business are mustering their forces, which are both many and strong, to resist all efforts for even the curtailment of their business in any particular. They seem not not only conscienceless with regard to the results of their trade on the civilization of the age, on the best interests of society and the welfare of the individual both for time and eternity; but also in the methods employed to defend, strengthen and enlarge their traffic. They do not hesitate to use any means to corrupt or remove from office any who oppose their projects, and they have formed combinations for that purpose. These means are many, varied, shrewd and generally successful. By these means the popular will is often defeated, popular morals corrupted and their own nefarious ends gained. The outcome of such unscrupulous organizations can only result in a contest some day which will shake the country from its centre to its circumference, and the end be the annihilation of the rum traffic or the destruction of civilization. Politicians must become Christian statesmen or be branded as Iscariots.—Pulpit Treasury.

Hearts.

Until within a few years the diseases of the heart and of the system were in nearly all cases reached through the stomach, for the doctors said, "We can not, of course, reach the heart directly. How can we?"

This question, asked twenty-five years ago, was only partially answered—it was only guessed at—until the discovery of "Compound Oxygen." Drs. Starkey & Palen, the physicians who have been so successfully administering this remedy, answer the question by telling of their experience. They call attention to the fact that on the completion of the circuit of the system, all the blood which has been thrown out by the heart comes back to the heart by the way of the lungs. Here it finds a great field for aeration, exceeding in area the entire outer surface of the body; here, with the air, the oxygen reaches the blood." "The returning blood, entering the heart incarnadined, adds new vigor to that organ, and, with less effort, a greater volume is sent forward, carrying vigor and comfort through all the arteries and veins in its circuit." This is a very brief statement of the method of cure by Oxygen. But a reading of the letters of patients who speak of the comfort the Treatment gave them, of the relief of heart trouble, and of the ability to sleep, after being for months or years deprived of it by palpitation or fluttering of the heart, will be the best evidence that could be produced that the right method of cure for disease has been found in "Compound Oxygen." And the value of the statement will not be decreased by its brevity.

The curiosity as to what Compound Oxygen is may be gratified by any one who will take the trouble to write a postal card or letter of request to Drs. Starkey & Palen, at 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia. They publish a brochure of two hundred pages, entitled Compound Oxygen—Its Mode of Action and Results, which will be sent free.

Dress has had given to it more thought than it deserved. If there be a rule, it is to dress in accordance with our means, but so as not to attract attention. St. Peter tells the women of his day in effect: they are to minimize personal adornment: dress is not to be an element of attraction so much as moral qualities. Worldly women will, of course, go on in this matter of adornment as they have for long centuries: but Christian women "the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit." If moral adornment becomes women, so it does men. To see men under provocation patient, this is an ornament in the sight of God of great price. In other words, what God cares for us in are moral qualities; these, and these only. Which we may make a note of.—Southern Churchman.

The Common Lot.

There is a place no foe can reach,
There is a home no voice can touch;
There is a chain no power can break,
There is a sleep no sound can wake.

Sooner or later that time will arrive, that place will wait for your coming, that chain must bind you in hopeless death, that sleep must fall on your eyes. But thousands every year go untimely to their fate, and thousands more lengthen out their days by heedful, timely care. For the failing strength, the weakening organs, the wasting blood, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a wonderful restorative and prolonger of strength and life. It purifies the blood and invigorates the system, thereby fortifying it against disease. Of druggists.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

J. H. Oglesby, president of the Louisiana National Bank, died on the second instant.

The Secretary of the Treasury has received a letter dated Pittsburg, Mass., inclosing a twenty-five cent silver piece, which the writer desires to have placed in the Treasury to the account of the conscience fund.

The famous Quinpa ranch, in the Texas Panhandle, has been purchased from Lady Adair, of Ireland, by Messrs. L. B. Moore, of this city and Charles Goodnight, of Texas. The ranch comprises forty thousand acres and the purchase price was $700,000.

The American Publishers' Copyright League, embracing all of the prominent publishers of the United States, have issued an address asking the co-operation of all who deal in and all who read books, in obtaining an international copyright law.

A director of the Philadelphia and Reading railroad estimated, February 3, that at least 5,000 miners had returned to work during the week, and said that there are enough mines being worked to avoid any inconvenience to the company or the consumers.

A petition has been received at Washington from the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association of New Orleans and the Chamber of Commerce of Mobile, in favor of a bill to provide for an international marine conference for securing greater safety of life and property at sea.

It is stated that Sir Charles Tupper has succeeded in still further extending the scope of the fishery negotiations and has informally suggested a bold alternative scheme of reciprocity between the United States and Canada, as a satisfactory method of permanently settling the constantly recurring difficulties between the two countries.

A colored boy, ten years of age, was made drunk by some parties, near Longview, Tex., February 3, and, going to the home of his brother, killed three children.

The shutting down of so many furnaces in Pennsylvania for want of coal has caused much misery. There being no demand for ore, many of the iron ore mines along the line of the East Pennsylvania railroad have already closed down. Many of the miners, with their families, have been compelled to seek admittance to the county poor-houses until work is resumed.

The United States revenue cutter "Albert Gallatin" collided with the revenue cutter "Dexter" in Wood's Hall harbor, on the Fifth instant. The "Gallatin" had two of her boats stove in, her rigging was torn out by the "Dexter's" bowsprit, and other damage was done. The "Dexter" was not damaged.

FOREIGN.

A sharp shock of earthquake has been felt in Scotland. It caused no damage. Shocks were also felt in different parts of England.

Mr. Cox, M. P., who is in prison at Limerick, put on the jail dress without protest and went to work in the prison yard chopping wood and doing the ordinary prison work cheerfully.

The treaty between Germany and Italy stipulates that if France attacks either country, the other shall send an army of 500,000 men to the French frontier.

The National Zeitung has telegrams from St. Petersburg and Vienna stating, under reserve, that Count Schouvaloff, the Russian ambassador to Germany, who is now returning to Berlin, will bring conciliatory proposals from the Czar.

It is stated that Germany's treaty with Italy is analogous to the Austro-German treaty, the name of France being substituted for Russia.

A mob of Rio Tinto miners, in Spain, now on a strike, being ordered to disperse, refused to do so, and was fired on by the troops. Several persons were killed and five wounded.

In the Chamber of Deputies, February 3, M. Cassaignac asked leave to interpellate the government in relation to the Legion of Honor decoration scandals. M. Fallieres, Minister of Justice, expressed a willingness, and also agreed to immediate debate on the interpellation.

The trial of Thomas Cullad and Michael Harkins, in London, who were charged with being connected with a dynamite conspiracy, was brought to a close February 3. They were found guilty, and were both sentenced to fifteen years' penal servitude.

Sir William Vernon Harcourt will open the attack on the government when Parliament meets, by offering an amendment to the address in reply to the Queen's speech condemning the enforcement of the coercion act.

Agents of the Panama Canal Company are negotiating for the promotion of a bill allowing the issue of a lottery loan of 775,000,000 francs.

Almost all papers discussing the Austro-German treaty predict that its publication will not intimidate the Czar, or induce him to depart from the pacific reserve which he has hitherto maintained.

Le Temps expresses the hope that Bismarck's coming speech in the Reichstag will dispel all uneasiness.

The King of Portugal will make a tour of Northern Europe for his health.

Bismarck, who spoke in the Reichstag on February 6, was received with great enthusiasm. Among other things, he said the warlike tendencies of Russia and France had driven Germany to defense; that Germans fear God, and nothing else, and that while striving for peace, they were prepared for war.

Mr. Parnell has summoned his party to a meeting in the Parliament buildings on Thursday morning prior to the opening of the House of Commons.

WANTED.—Agents for the marvelous work, "Fifty Years in the Church of Rome." Address I. Q. REYNOLDS, 333 Lafayette street, New Orleans.

Southern Cultivator and Christian Advocate.

By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer to new subscribers the Southern Cultivator and Dixie Farmer, combined with the ADVOCATE, for $2 50 for the two publications for one year. Commencing with this date, the price to old subscribers will remain the same as heretofore—$2 75 with only twenty-five cents extra to either of the above amounts for "Dickson's System of Farming." These rates are postage prepaid. All orders must be accompanied by cash in full; no allowance for commission to agents, and both papers must be ordered at same time. We will, however, fill orders to subscribers who failed to take advantage of the club rate when they last renewed for $1 for the Cultivator for one year.

The Blood

Is the source of health: therefore, to keep well, purify the blood by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. This medicine is peculiarly designed to act upon the blood, and through that upon all the organs and tissues of the body. It has a specific action also upon the secretions and excretions, and assists nature to expel from the system scrofula, humors, impure particles, and effete matter through the lungs, liver, bowels, kidneys, and skin. It effectually aids week, impaired, and debilitated organs.

A trial will convince you that it does possess peculiar curative powers.

To Our Agents.

Do not fail to read and clip out for reference our new rate for the Southern Cultivator and Dixie Farmer. These prices should enable you to get new subscribers with the greatest ease. Try it. Some time later there will be a good offer made for the benefit of agents.

Not a Customer of Vick's.

"That's not a Sunflower. I what you to understand I don't grow Sunflowers. That's a Mammoth, its more like a Dahlia than a Sunflower." Such were the words of an Indiana woman when told she had a specimen of the Double Dwarf Sunflower, growing in her front yard. One acquainted with this flower (Helianthus multiflorus plenus) will not be surprised at the old lady's mistake; growing about four feet high, covered with golden-yellow double flowers about the size of a Dahlia it resembles that plant very much. This little incident shows clearly how important it is that every one having a garden or even a shrub should own and study Vick's Floral Guide, published at Rochester, N. Y., price ten cents, and a due bill for ten cent's worth of seeds accompanies the book.

W. ATLEE BURPEE & CO., the well-known and extensive Seed Growers of Philadelphia, Pa., have now ready for mailing, gratis, to all interested in Gardening, BURPEE'S FARM ANNUAL for 1888. This popular catalogue is bigger and better than ever before. It is a handsome book of 128 pages, with hundreds of engravings, two elegant colored plates and an artistic cover. Besides carefully accurate descriptions of all standard Garden, Farm and Flower seeds, Bulbs, Plants, etc., it also describes many rare, new Flowers and valuable Improved Vegetables, now first introduced by this enterprising firm. W. Atlee Burpee & Co. have earned such a reputation for the high quality of their seeds that they fill over three thousand mail orders a day in their busy season.

Another Extraordinary Offer.

After this date we will include in our club arrangement the New York Weekly World, the price of which, including all postage, will be three dollars. This amount will entitle the subscriber to one copy of the "World's History of the United States," post paid.

This history is on a new plan. It is the record of the events of our history in the order in which they happened. There are no moralizings, no opinions put forth, no criticisms offered in regard to anything. It is not a political record merely, but one of all sorts of facts that have contributed to make our history. Discoveries, inventions, financial and literary matters, are all noted. One merit of the work is, that it can not grow old. The date of an event, when once ascertained, is fixed for all time. The book has twenty-four very good illustrations. We regard it as a valuable book for every student.

Old and new subscribers are entitled to the premium. Subscribers who have already paid will receive the History and the Weekly World one year by sending one dollar. Cash to accompany all orders.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER.

Free from Lime and Absolutely Pure.

The Royal Baking Powder is made from Cream of Tartar specially refined and prepared for its use by patent processes, by which the Tartrate of Lime is totally eliminated.

This highly important result has been attained only with great care, labor and expense. In money alone a quarter of a million dollars has been invested in patents, machinery and appliances by which the crude Cream of Tartar, being procured direct from the wine districts of Europe, and subjected in this country to these exclusive processes, is rendered entirely free, not only from the objectionable Tartrate of Lime, but from other foreign substances.

This adds greatly to the cost of manufacturing Royal Baking Powder; but, as all its other ingredients are selected and prepared with the same precise care and regardless of labor or expense, an article is produced that is entirely free from any extraneous substance and chemically pure in all respects.

No lime, earth, alum or impurity of any kind can, by inadvertence or by the use of adulterated articles or otherwise, be introduced into the "Royal," and it contains no ingredients except those certified by the most eminent chemists necessary to make a pure, wholesome and perfect baking powder.

It costs more to manufacture the Royal Baking Powder than any other, but it is, as shown by chemical analysis, the only absolutely pure Baking Powder made.

Royal is the only Baking Powder made that is free from both lime and alum.

And sought in vain, for peace. I sought in vain
In dreamy woods; among th' enchanted plain;
a lowly hamlets. Then with books I wrought, eeking for peace in toil, which only brought Dull discontent and weariness of brain.
"Where art thou, Peace?" I cried: "Oh, soothe this pain Of fearful longing and of throbbing thought!"
weet voice answered. Laughter, glad and clear,
Be the idols slughter.—Beautiful bright eyes
Made a new dawn. A sweet voice answered:

Letter from Nashville.

BY W. M. LEFTWICH, D. D.

SUNDAY NEWSPAPERS.

The Nashville pastors are just ow wrestling with the Sunday ewspaper. They have undertaken a heavy contract. But hey take the enemy in detail. As I am not now a city pastor, looked on this morning and istened, with amused interest, while they discussed the single proposition: "Should preachers make announcement of their hurch service in the Sunday ewspaper?" Some speeches were wise, some wild, some noncommittal, some strong on the evils of the Sunday paper, but lary of the real question in sue. It was a little curious to ee how many side issues they ould raise without committing emselves to any of them. One rother hit it when he said that he use of the Sunday paper ould be made to subserve the reaching of the gospel, for he ound that after he had preached o the people awhile, he could ncrease his congregation very uch by advertising somebody lse to preach. Another pastor aid that he had made up his ind to say to his session, that f they persisted in patronizing he Sunday paper by announcing is services, he would resign. s he would not be the pastor of people who used the Sunday apers in that way. Of course, e had no Bishop behind him, nd no fear of a Conference beore him. There were over hirty preachers present, the most of them lookers-on, as was his scribe. The pastors, after much talk, though but little discussion of the subject, finally assed a resolution that they would not do so any more—that s, they would not make their ulpit notices in the Sunday morning papers. This was adopted by a vote of 11 to 6. When we think of the increasing Sabbath desecration in this country, we may well believe that it is coming to be one of the greatest questions with which we have to deal. That the secular press has, of late years, come to be not only friendly to Christianity, but a powerful auxiliary to the gospel, none can question. While this fact can not atone for one of the many evils of the Sunday newspaper, yet it can not be ignored. Sunday papers, Sunday trains, Sunday street cars, Sunday mails, Sunday theaters, Sunday base ball, Sunday pleasure driving, Sunday dinners, Sunday parades and beer gardens, etc., have well nigh made us a nation of Sabbath-breakers. Who is a wise man to know what Israel ought to do in this great and growing issue? Let him speak.

THE NEW HYMN BOOK.

I have the best reason for believing that the new hymn book will be on the shelves of the Publishing House in May—that is, if it is permitted to stop on the said shelves. The demand for it will be so great that it will go from the bindery to the mails and express offices for many months. The little cheap song books that have been rushed in on us while we have been in waiting for this new hymn book, ought now to be rushed out from us without regard to the order of their going.

No doubt this revised hymn book will be worthy of its great predecessor, the Standard Hymn Book, and it will meet the wants of the church; and, while the carping critic will still fulfill his mission, it will go on down the ages singing the doctrines, the experience, the faith and hope of Methodism.

GARDEN OF EDEN.

Some years ago Dr. Warren, of Boston, published a very readable book, in which he located the Garden of Eden at the North Pole. If it were important to know the location of the original Garden of Eden, I suppose that Dr. Warren would be high authority. But then comes Bishop Keener, the satirist of the South, and claims for Charleston, S. C., the great distinction of being the garden spot of the world, or of Eden.

But not content with the Garden of Eden, with Adam and Eve, the serpent, and the tragedy of the fall, he must have Noah and the ark, with the mammoth fossils of the post-diluvian animals that failed to get into the ark and perished about there. With what marvelous stretches of imagination and skill of description does he trace the course of the ark from Charleston, on the great Gulf Stream, across the Atlantic to Asia and Ararat. Let him that reads run. Could we not prevail on these voracious champions of the first preacher to compromise on Nashville?

These writers, the one from the extreme North, the other from the extreme South, must know that the North Pole was too cold for the first fashion that prevailed in Eden, and that the lagoons of South Carolina could not produce the fruits that were needed in those piping times of peace, to say nothing of the value of the insect tribes as a stimulus to the healthy circulation of the blood. In the new town of West Nashville all the best conditions are met as to climate, soil, fruits, trees of every kind bearing fruit, and especially favorable for the existence and work of the serpent. I do not propose a third location, for Eden had but one, but offer a compromise between these two champions of the North and South, if possible, to prevent the two sections from rushing to arms again, each in defense of its own paradise. It is hinted that the good Bishop is preparing another article on the same subject. Perhaps he has discovered another location somewhere in Mississippi, and intends to try the sweep of his exuberant imagination on another field. But, seriously, can the Bishop not be induced to give the church and future generations the benefit of his marvelous gifts with the pen? He is the Jeremy Taylor of the church, and could serve his own generation by the will of God more substantially and permanently by writing a few books on the subjects for which he is so eminently endowed by nature and grace.

STATISTICS.

The increase in the membership of the church the past year was very large, reaching 45,000. The membership of the church now is something over 1,100,000. This membership ought to contribute not less than half a million annually to missions. Perhaps the visit and labors of Dr. Young J. Allen will open the eyes and enlarge the heart of the church to see and appreciate the call of Providence as never before. May God speed the day!

Our English Letter.

The Ecumenical Conference, of 1881, was an occasion of great interest to the Methodist people, not only in England, but throughout the world. Representatives of the different Methodist bodies met in old City Road Chapel, and for about two weeks discussed matters of the utmost importance. Before adjournment it was decided to hold another Conference in a few years. After discussion it has been resolved to hold the Conference at some point in the United States, in 1891. In order to facilitate matters the Rev. John Bond, secretary of the Eastern section, wrote to Bishop Harris, of the Northern Church. After waiting twelve months and receiving no reply, Mr. Bond accidentally learned that the Bishop was dead. He then wrote to Bishop Bowman; but he must be dead also, as no reply has been received to the secretary's important communication. If the Conference is to meet in three years from now, it is time the churches in the United States were taking preliminary steps. Would a communication from the English secretary receive attention if addressed to the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South?

Some of the most talented preachers in the English Conference are tied up in the departments—that is, colleges, publishing houses, mission rooms, etc. The Methodist Times, in its last issue, indirectly refers to the matter, and gets off the following hit. It may be applicable to both hemispheres. The superintendent minister of a large circuit in the north of England was recently holding a love-feast, when a fervid brother complimented the minister on the improvement which had taken place in his preaching. The excellent man told his pastor that some years ago, when he used to hear him preach, he feared that he was pursuing a course which would lead him to a professor's chair at one of the colleges. Happily, however, that catastrophe had been averted, and the minister, instead of dwindling into a college tutor, had developed into an earnest and effective preacher of the gospel.

In the recently published "Life of W. Morley Punshon, LL.D.," to which reference was made in a former letter, I find an account of the Doctor's visit to New Orleans, and, thinking it may be of interest to your readers, I copy: "It is the festival of Mardi Gras (February 25, 1873). The morning is dull and cloudy, but the people are already astir. It is computed that there are 25,000 strangers in the city. All the hotels are full, and they are chartering berths in steamers which are lying at anchor in the river. New Orleans has the finest river front in the world. Its broad and fine levee extends for fourteen miles, and it is not uncommon to see a thousand or fifteen hundred steamers lying there, most of them cotton laden. The streets are very wide. Superb magnolias are in front of the principal houses, and here and there we came upon orange trees laden with last year's fruit. The peach and plum trees are one mass of blossom. Our vessel arrived at midnight on Sunday, and I preached in the saloon on Sabbath morning to the gayest company I have seen, who had danced until midnight on Saturday evening. When they knew I was here, they promptly put a notice in the evening papers, and I preached last night to some seven hundred people. I am treated with warm Southern hospitality by a gentleman whom I never saw before, but to whom I had a note of introduction."

Speaking of Dr. Punshon reminds me of an incident that occurred in 1859. The Doctor was then at the height of his popularity as a religious lecturer. His fame reached the ears of P. T. Barnum, the American showman, who at once made the reverend gentleman an offer of two thousand pounds a year to accompany him to America and lecture under his direction and supervision. Mr. Punshon replied by quoting Acts xiii, 10: "O full of all subtilty, and all mischief, thou child of the devil, thou enemy of all righteousness, wilt thou not cease to pervert the right ways of the Lord?"

A Methodist layman, Mr. George Hazlehurst, of Rhyl, North Wales, has recently patented what will doubtless be one of the most important discoveries of the age. Especially will it be of benefit to them "that go down to the sea in ships; that do business in great waters." It is nothing less than the conversion of sea water, by the use of a simple powder, into water thoroughly suitable for drinking. The new discovery has been named thalassion. The time will soon come when all vessels will be supplied with this powder, and we shall hear no more of crews perishing for lack of water. Not only is thalassion a pure drink, but also an invigorating tonic. Verily, the world moves!

Mr. Spurgeon has returned from France in greatly improved health. He has resumed his "loved employ," and is again preaching to admiring thousands. A committee from the Baptist Union has waited upon him and asked him to reconsider the question of withdrawal, but he still adheres to his views and refuses to again enter the Union.

O.

"Worth Saving to the Church."

This text is not taken from the Bible, but from an expression used in a conversation heard by me not long since. Two preachers were talking about a question of church discipline, with especial reference to a member of one of the charges, a man of some fine qualities of head and heart, but irreligious, worldly-minded, devoted to money making, and not knowing or caring whether there be any Holy Ghost—not seeking to lift himself up, but to drag the church down. One of the preachers said of him: "I am quite sure he is worth saving to the church." This remark set me to thinking, and suggested the cause of many a problem confronting us in our Zion of more than a million members.

"Worth saving to the church." Is not that the motive that has too often prompted us in persuading people to join the church instead of saving them to Christ? Have we not been too zealous about members and not zealous enough about conversions?

"Worth saving to the church." Did not Rome start on the downward career just in that way when it was thought Constantine was worth saving to the church, although he continued to be Pontifex Magnus to the heathen world till the day of his death? Did not the Established Church of England start out on the same line and, in the course of less than two centuries, reach that point where you could not tell the difference between a sermon in a so-called Christian Church and an oration in a heathen temple? And does not imminent peril to our Zion lie in the policy which formulates such an expression as, "Worth saving to the church?"

"Worth saving to the church." True it is, they are of the world, worldly; they go to the ballroom and indulge, ad libitum, in "hugging set to music;" they are experts at progressive euchre; they take a hand in poker, invest in faro, or an occasional lottery ticket; they go to the circuses and frequent theatrical exhibitions of all sorts; they treat the General Rule as a dead letter and defy the discipline of the church. Some of them profane the name of God. Some of them drink unto drunkenness, and some desecrate the Sabbath day; but they are respectable people, move in the best—i. e., fashionable—society, talk a vast deal about culture and refinement, and pay with what passes for liberality to support the ministry, and are willing that the preacher should "pitch into sin, but not mention particular sins, lest somebody's feelings should be hurt." They are "worth saving to the church," though there is little or no hope of their salvation, and though they are continually an example of evil unto others. Like the Samaritans of old, "they fear the Lord, but serve their own gods." A rich man's purse is worth a hundred poor men's souls!

"Worth saving to the church," so thought another denomination of a man of social position and money, who was permitted, without reproof, to send a challenge to mortal combat to a man who had insulted him and aspersed his honor, while a poor girl, without money and without influence, was expelled for dancing. Why not hold the most prominent to the most rigid accountability?

Let us turn the thing around and say the church is worth saving and no man is worth saving to the church unless he be like Saul of Tarsus, earnestly asking, "Lord, what will thou have me to do?" Save the church by saving men to Christ.

Thanks, Mr. Editor, for your editorial of February 9, "Worldliness in the Church."

In Memoriam.

REV. J. LANDRUM.

BY REV. W. WIMBERLY.

Rev. Jeptha Landrum, a member of the Louisiana Conference, was born in Pike county, Ala., August 25, 1825; served in the Mexican War; graduated in the Law Department of the University of Louisiana in 1851; was for some time in the Confederate service as chaplain; was happily married to Miss Missouri C. Butterworth, of Mansfield, La., January 21, 1861, and died, at his home, in West Melville, October 18, 1887, of heart disease. He had suffered intensely for about two months; therefore, death was not unexpected by his friends or himself. Though he suffered so long and so intensely, yet he never complained or murmured at the providence of God. He expressed himself that it was "a glorious privilege to suffer for Christ's sake." He was ready—yea, anxious, to go when death came, with a smile on his face, and with the name of Jesus on his lips. While, with "admiring gaze," he looked up to heaven, he fell asleep in Christ.

Bro. Landrum had committed many of our old standard hymns to memory, and during his illness he would repeat them. They seemed to give him comfort. His choice hymn was:

"He dies! The Friend of sinners dies!
Lo! Salim's daughters weep around;
A solemn darkness veils the skies;
A sudden trembling shakes the ground.
Come, saints, and drop a tear or two
For him who groaned beneath your load.
He shed a thousand drops for you,
A thousand drops of richer blood."

"Yes," he would say, "bless his holy name! He dies! He dies for me!" A few moments before his death he exclaimed: "Washed! washed in the blood of the Lamb!" and just as death seized him in its relentless grasp, and nature was yielding to the "old monster," he raised both hands, pointing upward, and said, "Up, up, up, rejoice!" His hands let down slowly, and he was dead.

How grand, how glorious to die such a death! What a precious, consoling thought that the gospel he had preached to others comforted and sustained him in suffering and death! Some one asked just before his death, "Does Jesus save you now?" He answered, "He does that." Oh! that every doubter could have seen the victorious triumph and death of our deceased brother! Such a death is calculated to encourage and strengthen the Christian. We see that death has no terror to the true Christian, and that heaven is a grand reality. Oh, may our death be like his!

Bro. Landrum was a forcible, logical preacher, and his theology was Methodistic. He studied Watson and Wesley closely, and, if any brother, preaching in his presence, should preach a sermon that did not accord with the standard, he knew it, and would give the brother of "modern thought" Wesley and Watson by the page from memory. Few men had such a memory as Bro. Landrum had. He told me that his memory was too good, and had always been in his way.

Bro. Landrum loved his brethren. He was always ready to make allowance for a brother who made a wrong step. He was charitable, forgiving and liberal to a fault. I knew him intimately, and conversed with him freely, and never heard him speak unkindly of anyone.

He was a loyal, faithful Methodist preacher. His works were the hardest in the Conference from the beginning to the end; yet he never grumbled. He considered it a great privilege to preach the gospel to the poor. He delighted to go into the "highways and hedges" and invite sinners to the gospel feast.

The last year of Bro. Landrum's life and ministry was the most successful year of his ministry. He seemed to work as if he knew that would be his last year. Many sinners were brought to Christ, and many Christians strengthened and edified during his last year on earth. He also started a church, in West Melville, which is nearing completion now, and will be worth fifteen hundred dollars when completed. This church will stand as a monument to his self-denial and untiring zeal for Christ and the Methodist Church.

Bro. Landrum has laid down the cross to receive the crown. The battle is fought and the victory won. He is now free from sorrow, pain and death, and with his glorified energies and faculties he can enjoy God and understand the mysteries before which he stood dumb and amazed in this life.

He is safe in the house of many mansions, that has "God for its maker, immortality for its walls, and eternity for its days." He dwells in that temple "filled with the divine presence, streaming with divine beauty, and peopled with divine monuments of God's goodness, mercy and grace."

Ah! what immunities and happiness are his! Farewell, brother, till we meet in the streets of the city of God.

STRONG DRINK. For thirty-five years I have been priest and bishop in London, and I now approach my eightieth year, and have learned some lessons, and the first is this: The chief bar to the working of the Holy Spirit of God in the souls of men and women is intoxicating drink. I know of no antagonist to that good Spirit more direct, more subtle, more stealthy, more ubiquitous, than intoxicating drink. Though I have known men and women destroyed for all manner of reasons, I know of no cause that affects man, woman, child, and home with such universality of steady power as intoxicating drink.—Cardinal Manning.

THE VILLAGE CHOIR.

Half a bar, half a bar,
Half a bar onward!
Into an awful ditch
Choir and precentor, pitch
Into a mess of pitch;
There lie the "Old Hundred."
Trebles to right of them,
Tenors to left of them,
Basses in front of them,
Bellowed and thundered.
Oh! that precentor's book
When the sopranos took
Their own time and took
From the "Old Hundred."

Screeched all the trebles here,
Boggled the demors there,
Raising the parson's hair,
While his mind wandered.
Their's not to reason why
His psalm was pitched too high;
Their's but to gasp and cry
Into the "Old Hundred."
Trebles to right of them,
Tenors to left of them,
Basses in front of them,
Bellowed and thundered.
Storming they will shout and yell,
Not wise they sang, nor well,
Drowning the sexton's bell,
While all the church wondered.

Dire the precentor's glare,
Flashed his pitchfork in air,
Sounding fresh keys to bear
Out the "Old Hundred."
Swiftly he turned his face,
Reached he his hat from rack,
Then from the screaming pack
Himself he sundered.
Tenors to right of him,
Trebles to left of him,
Viscerals behind him,
Bellowed and thundered.
Oh! the wild howls they wrought!
Right to the end they fought!
Some time they sang, but not—
Not the "Old Hundred."

Here and There.

I left home December 30, 1887, and returned January 26, 1888. During the trip, Winona, Grenada, Courtland, Sardis and Pleasant Grove charges were visited; and the best work done that could be considering the very inclement weather.

I found the preachers all in place, and at work. Bros. Wyatt, at Winona: Wier, at Sardis; and O'Bryant, at Pleasant Grove, were cordially received back into their former charges, and seem determined to do more and better work this year than the preceding.

Bros. Thomas, at Grenada, and Casey, at Courtland, have had warm receptions into their new fields of labor. I had the pleasure of being present when the latter arrived with his family at Pope station, where a good parsonage had recently been purchased. The brethren and sisters helped during the day to get them into their new home; and at night we held a religious service in it, by which the parsonage was dedicated to the Lord, and ourselves given anew to his service. It was good to be there; and that preacher and that people begun well with each other.

The quarterly meeting at Courtland, the following Saturday and Sunday, was an occasion of much interest; and if the plans laid and purposes expressed there be carried out in good faith, great good will result.

At Sardis and Pleasant Grove we were so snowed in that no meetings could be held; but I hope that good was accomplished by those fireside readings, talks and prayers that we held so pleasantly together in the parsonages and other Christian homes.

Rev. S. M. Thames has entered upon his second year on the Sardis district. For five years he has proved himself worthy and well qualified for the honorable and responsible office of presiding elder. His wise words and earnest spirit give animus to religious services and to business meetings; and he endures hardness as a good soldier.

Rev. J. E. Evans, the new presiding elder on the Grenada district, is domiciled in a newly purchased district parsonage at Water Valley. Some one said of him before Conference that he was "good presiding elder material" (I suppose the speaker was a competent judge): and now we predict that he will so magnify the office as to prove that there was no mistake made in the appointment.

Rev. R. P. Mitchell is serving his third year on the Winona district. He is acceptable everywhere and efficient in every department of the work. I attended his quarterly meeting at Weir, January 28, 29. It was a profitable occasion. The preaching of both days, and the dedication of the new church, and the liberal collection on Sunday, with other things, were encouraging to Bro. Cogdell and his people.

As to myself and the work committed to my charge, I have nothing special to write now, but will have something to say in the near future. So far, I have been much encouraged by the cordial co-operation of the brethren and the help they have afforded me where I have gone, and the increasing demand for good reading matter. I am anticipating a pleasant and successful year in each department of my work. Brethren of the North Mississippi Conference, help your humble servant by your prayers, book orders and information as to time and place where he can serve you ministerially or officially. By so doing we will be workers together, and the Lord will own and bless our labors with abundant success.

I report for December and January as follows: Books sold, $97; collected for church papers, $90. This does not include sales at the Conferences. More anon.

The Relation of the Heathen to Christ.

Mr. Editor: We often hear people speaking of the condition of the heathen and their chance for salvation. Some seem to doubt their salvation; others think their chances good—better even than ours; still there are others who say that they can not understand this question at all. I am sure such persons do not understand the relation of the heathen to Christ. The Book of Ruth is a key to this question. Let everyone who reads this study this book in this light: "A certain man of Beth-lehem-judah went to sojourn in the country of Moab—he and his wife and his two sons. The name of the man was Elimelech, and the name of his wife was Naomi, and the name of his two sons Mahlon and Chilion." While in Moab, Elimelech died. Mahlon and Chilion both married, and lived but a short time, and died. Then Naomi arose to return to her own country, expecting to leave Ruth and Orpah in Moab. Both of them were heathen girls. Naomi told them to go back to their gods. Orpah returned, but Ruth followed Naomi back to Bethlehem. So we see now a heathen girl in Beth-lehem-judah.

This girl (Ruth) came to the place, where Christ was born 1,312 years afterward. Naomi and Ruth arrived in Bethlehem in the beginning of barley-harvest; and Ruth went into the field of Boaz to glean. Boaz became acquainted with her, and, after a strange kind of courtship, they were married. A man of the tribe of Judah marries a heathen girl! "Well," says one, "what of that?" Let us see. She gave birth to a son, whose name was Obed; he became the father of Jesse, the father of David. Obed was one-half heathen, Jesse was one-fourth, and David was one-eighth, if no more. He might have been one-fourth, as we do not know who his mother was. Ruth was the great-grandmother of David, and one of the great-great-grandmothers of Jesus Christ, the Savior of both Jews and Gentiles.

Twenty-eight generations from David, Jesus was born, in the line of David, of the tribe of Judah, in Bethlehem of Judea.

Who can doubt the sacred relation of the heathen to Christ while heathen blood ran in his sacred veins, dripped down from the cross, and helps to fill that fountain of which we so often sing,

"There is a fountain filled with blood
Drawn from Emmanuel's veins;
And sinners plunged beneath that flood
Lose all their guilty stains"?

All can claim an interest in Christ, because all were represented in his person and death. With this inspiring view of the subject, let us offer Christ as the Savior of all.

VIRGIL D. SKIPPER.

A Correction.

Mr. Editor: Will you please allow me to correct an error in the Minutes of the Mississippi Conference? They give the pastor in charge on the Shiloh circuit, Brandon district, $454 60, when it ought to be $465 10. And by this correction you will see that Shiloh is the leading circuit, in the way of preacher's salary, in the district.

I expect the mistake was my own fault, and not the fault of the secretary, as I received some money after handing in my report, and promised to give him a report, but failed to do it; so I make this correction in justification of my circuit.

"The Agony in the Garden."

The Rev. J. D. Cameron and "Gihlergy" have written upon the subject of the above heading, setting forth some interesting thoughts. Though there is ground for it, yet I do not wish to start any controversy regarding it. Should any occur, let it be between those two sons of Ajax, in a conflict of giants. I wish to be far enough away to be able to find myself after it is over.

Of the theories enumerated by Bro. Cameron, the second has something of the one I once entertained in my immature theology, but so differently stated that mine might be added as a fourth. It was that in the garden Christ Jesus felt in his own great heart all the weight of all the sins of all the ages—those of the past and those of the generations yet unborn. In my subsequent Bible reading I learned there was no Scripture nor reason for such theory. Indeed, the world might have been redeemed without such agony; but his life was necessary, and the agony entered into his life, and, as all other incidents in that life, it has its lesson, which may be made profitable to us by associating certain experiences with it coming up in the life of every truly pious man and woman. To do this we must never lose sight of the fact that he was real man; was born, grew, was hungry and ate, was thirsty and drank, tired and rested, weary and slept, suffered, bled, and died. In the work of redemption there was a sense of responsibility in saving souls upon the broadest and grandest scale man can conceive. It was this finely wrought, sensitive model of humanity which was susceptible of realizing and of keenly feeling that the world must be redeemed, the Father honored and glorified in the Son, the dignity and grandeur of the Godhead sustained, as it met manhood in humiliation upon the cross. It was the man preparing for this work. Paul says he "feared." "In the days of his flesh, when he offered up prayers and supplications, with strong crying and tears, unto him that was able to save him from death, and was heard in that he feared."—(Hebrews v, 7.)—The cup did not pass from him, but the man "strengthened" that he might be able to drink it, and he went forth to do the divine will, not his own, not man's will, but the will of him that sent him. What devoted Christian has not felt an agony when he realized in heart and conscience that immortal souls were required at his hand? What devoted preacher, when coming to the tremendous responsibilities of a certain hour in which souls were to be saved or lost, has not felt genuine throes of agony? How many pulpit seats in the humble preacher's few moments of private prayer before service have witnessed agonies along the very line of our Savior's soul-saving work? It was the divine nature in Christ Jesus which wrought him up to the agony and sense of the vast responsibility, and it was the divinity in his manhood by which he was strengthened to accomplish the immensely great work. It is the divine nature in us by which we take on such agonies, and by that divine nature in us we succeed in our weighty responsibilities. "If a man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his."

J. D. NEWSOM.

Parsonage Society, Mississippi Conference.

The suppressed and buried tears and heartaches of our parsonage households are being unearthed by our great and much-needed parsonage movement. Touching appeals for help come to the department. Shall we heed this providential revealing? The Lord has heard the cry, and is now ready to multiply the "loaves."

In my visits during the past year my heart was sorely touched at the exhibition of meekness and submission by our noble band of ministers and their loved ones. Shall we boast of a Christian land and Wesleyan Methodism and permit the martyrdom of our missionaries at home? With them

"The fiercer the blast, the sooner 'tis past:
The troubles that come
Shall come to our rescue, and hasten us home."

With us, "Is it well?" Do "we march hand in hand," and hope with them to wear immortal crowns? Then shall we not with them wear crowns of thorns, if need be? Would it not be wise economy to preserve and render more effectual the laborers we have? Then we can, in the exercise of greater faith, pray the "Lord of the harvest" for more laborers. To how many of us will it be said, "Come, ye blessed; inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me"? Have we lost sight of, "Depart ye; inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me"?

The payment of $20 constitutes a life member of the Parsonage Society. How many congregations and individuals will make the pastors or others life members? Those who do not now enter the work will be blessed by giving money. Every member of the church, and every child, should give something, be it ever so little. The Lord will surely bless the widow's mite of to-day. Will not one or more women in each charge attend to this, and forward money, not only now, but hereafter, to the treasurer, Mrs. O. S. Robbins, Vicksburg, Miss.? This fund is given to build parsonages. Remember one-half is for use in the Mississippi Conference.

Oh! that there would be an outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon the heart of everyone, that money may flow into the treasury, especially during the month of February, to enable our Board of Church Extension, at their meeting in April, to send relief at once to God's messengers who are sorely in need of help!

There are twenty-three life patrons of the Preachers' Wives' Loan Fund in the Mississippi Conference. We hope more will be added, especially by March 1, that their names may be enrolled in the Annual Report of Board of Church Extension as the honored founders of this fund. This is not confined to preachers' wives. Anyone by the payment of $5 becomes a life patron. Those who subscribed at the Annual Conference, who have not paid, will please send the money by March 1, that their names may be in this Annual Report among the founders.

MRS. E. D. JONES,
Miss. Conf. Sec. W. Dp't Ch. Ex.

A Pounding.

Mr. Editor: I have seen this heading often, and have read much about how and how much preachers were pounded; but never knew about the matter as I wished until recently—I mean experimentally. I have tried to content myself with the hope that the sun would shine some time. Some one said:

"Now, there is no use of repining,
For where there's a will there's a way.
To-morrow the sun may be shining,
Although it be cloudy to-day."

It would not be best for us that the sun should shine all the time. If it were never cloudy, we would not appreciate and be thankful for sunshine. The same Lord who made the sun to pour forth his effulgent rays upon the evil and the good, made the clouds, too.

At first thought it seems rather strange that some people—yes, some people, not all—know so well what a preacher and his family needs. The good people of Taylor—not only my people, but all—have supplied us with everything that we needed in the grocery line from a package of soda to a barrel of flour. I have been asked, "Aint you afraid you will starve?" for this portion of my charge has once been abandoned; but why should I be afraid? The outlook is favorable, and I have committed my way unto the Lord, and trusted in him, and purpose to continue to do so. The Lord's Word is pledged for my support, and that is enough. Bless the Lord these people are a Christian people, and this is a dry town. Yours fraternally,

J. H. BROWN.

A Hint to Church Members.

Your pastor has come to you now, and you have heard him preach, and you desire to do something this year that will result in leading souls to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world. Do not let these good desires and impulses pass away unheeded. Your pastor has need of you in his work, and his success or non-success will depend largely on what you do. It may be that you have a brother or sister or a very dear friend out of Christ; and are you not willing to work for their salvation? Are you willing then, as a soldier of the cross, to enter into this work with a glad heart and a willing mind? Will you do it?

1. By earnestly desiring to attain yourself unto the fullness of the measure of Christ, by growing in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ, so that when you speak of the joys of the Christian religion to your friends you may realize that they do give comfort in "deed and in truth."

2. Will you show your pastor that you are interested in church work and the regular services of the church by being present at all the services, thus encouraging him; and will you go in the spirit and pray that he may speak such words as shall arrest the heedless, and cause them to reflect; and when called upon to do something, will you enter into the performance of your duty with a "glad heart and a willing mind"?

3. And will you hold up your pastor by your means, sympathy and prayers, praying God to open the Scriptures to him that he may bring forth from the words of eternal life things both new and old? Then, if you will, God's richest blessings will be poured out upon you, and, then, when you thus consecrate yourself wholly, you shall realize that to wait upon the Lord in the public sanctuary will be to sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus.

If we will ponder the above, and give ourselves to the Lord that he may work in us as he pleases, we shall see many souls converted: and then we shall begin to wonder why we did not do it long before. Brethren, sisters, God's promises are "yea and amen" to us; and if we will reach forth, we can secure his blessings upon us.

Who Are Proper Persons to Present Infants for Baptism?

This question imports that any and everyone is not a proper person to present infants for baptism. If this be true, we, as conscientious ministers of Christ, should refuse to baptize infants presented by improper persons. But who are proper persons to present infants for baptism? Those who have renounced the devil and all his works, the vain pomp and glory of the world, with all covetous desires of the same, and the carnal desires of the flesh, or, in other words, those who are endeavoring to live as God's Word directs. In our Discipline, page 239, persons presenting children for baptism are first obligated to teach them to renounce the devil and all his work, the vain pomp and glory of the world, with all covetous desires of the same, and the carnal desires of the flesh, so that they may not follow or be led by them; to believe all the articles of the Christian faith, and to obediently keep God's holy will and commandments all the days of their lives. Great, therefore, would be the inconsistency of any of our ministers in obligating a person, as our Discipline requires, who has not renounced the devil, etc., himself, besides. Great would be the inconsistency of him who has not renounced the devil, etc., to obligate himself to teach his child to renounce him. We, therefore, conclude for two reasons why an ungodly person is not a proper person to present children for baptism:

First, because he is not competent to take the obligation required (Discipline, page 239). Secondly, because in the days of the apostles no household was baptized until after the chief of the household believed or himself became a Christian.

From the Work.

AMITE CITY, LA.

Mr. Editor: I am at my post of duty with my work fully in hand. I have made the round, and find that my predecessor has left the work in fine condition. What a privilege to follow such men! Our first Quarterly Conference has been held. The presiding elder was with us, and preached two fine sermons, which were well received. The elder held a love-feast for us. We all got happy, and a real good old-fashioned time was experienced. Dear Sister Montgomery is with us, working faithfully to bring on the "nation's abolition." Sister Maggie Ellis, the secretary of the Woman's Department of Church Extension for the Woodville district, is endeavoring to get the attention of the ladies of this district directed to the importance of this department. Let all the preachers assist her in this noble work by bringing it prominently before their congregations. The good ladies of this place proved their fidelity to the church, and appreciation of the situation of a newly married itinerant, by furnishing the cozy little parsonage with everything essential to "keeping house" in royal style. May the good Lord establish the work of their hands upon them, is the prayer of their pastor. As I am not a member in full connection, of the Conference yet, I did not vote for those resolutions endorsing the Advocate, but I will endorse it anyway by doing all in my power for it on my work this year. Pray for me, brother. I feel that if I want to honor our blessed Savior with the most faithful and successful service possible during this year.

Very truly,

FRANK M. KEEN.

M'COOL CIRCUIT.

Mr. Editor: The first quarterly meeting for McCool circuit, Winona district, North Mississippi Conference, was held at Weir, last Saturday and Sunday. The weather was fine; attendance, large, and preaching most excellent.

Our presiding elder, Rev. R. P. Mitchell, delivered, Saturday at eleven, the only sermon I ever heard preached to stewards. It had the right ring, and, no doubt, will bear fruit for good. The brethren took it as from the Lord, and went home with new resolutions to work for the church. Now and then you find a steward who is worthless; but take them as a whole, they are as noble a class of men as live.

Saturday night the pulpit was filled by our Conference book agent, Rev. G. W. Bachman. He is looking after Sunday-school cause, selling books and getting subscribers to our church papers, etc.

On Sunday, after an appropriate sermon by our elder, the officers of the church were stepped forward, and said: "We present to you this house, to be set apart from all unhallowed and common uses for the worship of Almighty God." Then followed the "Sentence of Dedication" and prayer, and our beautiful new church was fully given to the Lord. The sacrament was administered, penitents called, and a collection taken. They were so devout at the "sacramental board," and so liberal in the collection, that a thrill of joy was sent to the hearts of elder and pastor—yea, the sweet pervasive peace of the hour "lingers with me still."

Last year this district paid up everything on Conference collections, and $154 over for foreign missions. This year the assessment is more than last, but, no doubt, by the untiring efforts of our elder, the district will come out in flying colors again.

D. M. COGDELL.

PEARLINGTON, MISS.

Mr. Editor: Pearlington has received its pastor in the spirit of the gospel. Her ladies have improved and so neatly arranged the parsonage that we are confident that they will not be satisfied until they have so improved and so adorned it that the preacher's wife will be glad that her lot has been cast among such a people. According to the custom, they left enough of the necessaries of life to keep the preacher from enquiring the price of sugar, flour, grits, rice, and coffee, for a fortnight.

I have determined to "know nothing among them save Jesus and him crucified." The fields here are "white unto the harvest." Pray for me, that I may do faithful work. I am inquiring about the Advocate, and hope to increase your subscription list, and thereby increase the usefulness of the PREACHER IN CHARGE.

STARKVILLE, MISS.

Mr. Editor: We move steadily on in the work of the church here, notwithstanding the severe weather and the deep, deep mud. The church in Starkville I found to be in good condition when I came, showing the impress of faithful predecessors in the pastorate. A live, working Sunday-school, under the superintendency of Bro. Dabney Lipscomb, gives great interest to the work.

Yours faithfully,

T. CAMERON.

Dead at Last.

On February 4, 1888, the last saloon in Rankin county, Miss., departed this life. Just three years ago the saloons of the county, and especially in the town of Brandon, seemed to be in fine health, and bid fair to live a long time; but they are gone, and we hope forever. This is my fourth year at Brandon. We feel very much at home with the people here. Our church is in good condition, congregations good, peace and harmony prevail. We hope for a good year.

Christ's Idea of Christianity.—Is It Ours?

BY REV. MARK BUY PEARSE.

The one supreme idea which Jesus Christ lived out to the full, was this—a true brotherliness. For the first time in all the ages Jesus Christ brought into the world a reverence for humanity. Everything in the life of the Lord Jesus Christ lights up his brotherly kindness, his deeds, his words, his manner, his look, his death, all grew out of it. His gracious familiarity, his simplicity, his perfect approachableness and homeliness all proclaimed it. If so varied and many-sided a life can be put into a single word, this is the summary of its earthward aspect—it was perfected brotherly-kindness. This inspired his teaching and his actions; and his fiercest indignation was kindled by all that made light of this great law of love. His parables, alike in their sweetest tenderness and in their most lurid terror, set it forth again and again. His revelations of the Father established a new relationship amongst men—of old-time neighbors only, now all were brought nearer to one another, and now they are brothers. The very word "humanity," and the idea which it expresses, came in with Christ; never before had the oneness of the human race been thought of. It is the sacredness of human nature, its greatness, its dignity, which is declared and secured by the mystery of the incarnation—that God should dwell in man; by the Crucifixion—that for man he should lay down his life; by the resurrection—that Man should be exalted above all principalities and powers, and should sit upon the throne of heaven beside the Majesty on High. This reverence for humanity constantly meets us in the utterances of Jesus Christ. "What shall it profit a man," he asks; "a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" He set up the balances, and on one side he put the round world and all that therein is—wealth, dominion, glory, honor, all things—and the man outweighs them all. Though the man be stamped and branded with vice; though he be too bad for earth, and fit only to be nailed to the cross, yet he is so dear to Christ, that such an one is reckoned worth dying for.

And now his followers go forth into a world redeemed, not with silver and gold, but with the precious blood of Christ. Now was there an awful sanctity and preciousness investing every man and woman and child. No man was any more a mere beast of burden—he was made in the image of God. No woman, whatever her position, was a toy for the passing whim of lust—the great love of God held her dear, and thus endeared her to all his children. Every little child was sacred by the childhood of their Lord and Master, hallowed by that hand which blessed the children, bound to the hearts of his disciples by the love that had called them his little ones. Of theories, theologies, definitions, these disciples, perhaps, knew very little; but love is truest knowledge, and with them love to everybody was supreme. What a great outburst of love fills those early chapters of the Acts? Before Peter had seen his vision, a great revival had set Samaria—above all places—in a blaze, and burned up all old feuds, and melted all into a blessed brotherhood. Need and poverty thrust no man down into suspicion or neglect; but as with the Master, so with the disciples—in this very need they found their opportunity for service. He who was rich, and for their sakes became poor, was their example as well as their Savior; and they could be Christians only as they had the mind, which was in Christ.

O, for a breath of this Christ-like Christianity! O, for a gale of it, like the mighty rushing wind of old! Where is it? We ask what a man is worth, and count the answer by his income. We reverence not men, but the accidents of their position, titles, liveries, circumstances. The only Christianity which Jesus Christ acknowledges is that which treats every man as a brother. The man's worth is himself, not his gifts. How we are rent and torn asunder for want of this one thing—true brotherliness, reverence for humanity! We hear of the sacredness of property, and it has its sanctities, for that, too, is of God; but we want to hear infinitely more of the sacredness of humanity. And this must reach upward as well as downward. It is not Christianity which blames or hates a man for being rich. The poor man has to love the rich as well as the rich man love the poor. It seems a hopeless thing that men should ever come to believe it, yet it is most true that all men are bound by the love of God and the brotherhood of Christ into a closer union than any ties of social position can ever bind men. All sorts and conditions of men need this great brotherliness. We are marked off from all other creatures, not only by our need of God, but by our need of one another. It is the wild beast only that is independent. The highest are as often shut off from other people by their height as the poorest by their poverty. There are as many sad hearts and burdened lives in the West-end as in the East. And there is an awful mockery in weariness and want amidst such abundance. To have so much and to find so little in it! The rich need sympathy, and they get envy—that cruelest regard. The poor, too, need sympathy, and they get it from one another, which the rich do not; but alas! how often are they dreaded, scorned and suspected! The great middle class, certainly the happiest of the three is exposed to the envy of those below them, and the scorn of those above them—whilst genius too often sits mocking the wretchedness of all.

Now for every man and woman who calls Christ, Master, the question is this: What can we do amidst such a state of things—scattered individuals, without any great influence?

Well, do not wait until things are set right for us—these early disciples certainly did not do that. They believed that they served One who was come, not coming to set things right, who was manifested already to destroy the works of the devil. Do not wait until we can find some definite plan that commends itself to everybody's judgment. What we have to do is to give ourselves up to Christ for the fulfillment of his great purposes in us and through us. We have in his strength and for his sake to live the life of a Christ-like brotherliness. Do not begin to think of such a life as a lofty ideal, too high for commonplace and busy people—that, too, is what these disciples did not do. "Ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you," is a promise to us. Let us boldly ask for the glorious portion of good that is ours, and then having the power, we, too, can follow in the Master's footsteps.

Let us consider the poor. Think about them tenderly, resolved to help them as wisely and as well as you can. Here, too, does the proverb hold good that necessity is the mother of invention, and the necessities of love alone have omnipotence for their designs. God is love; and it is good as it is true to think that as every sun-ray that touches the earth has the sun at the other end of it, so every bit of love on God's earth has God at the other end of it. Love, true love, is the only law. When love, true love, says it must be, everything in God's universe waits to carry out the budding, loving, Christ-like, tender consideration is mainly needed in the world.

One result that would follow immediately from such considerateness, is that every church and chapel would have some place open every night, warmed, cheerful and attractive, as easily got at as the public-house, as comfortable as the bar parlor, where men and women and young people could sit and read, without being either lectured or patronized.

I believe school-rooms, too, should be opened as workships, warmed and to which girls could bring their work. One good man in the East-end of London has set the example, and by getting the workgirls thus together has got rid of the terrible middleman. It would be a simple matter to have such a "church parlor" in connection with every place of worship. "The streets, the music-hall and the public-house stand to these people in the relation of much that is called home in the country. They have no other resort from the one room, the heat of summer, the fog and cold of winter. The churches, chapels and schools are generally closed, except for purposes in which the mass of people feel no interest. It is a terrible thing to say, but to many it is no wonder that these men bless the public-house which curses them, and bitterly oppose those who would shut it up."

In an article in The Nineteenth Century, of February, 1887, the writer, an authority on the subject, says: "They (the artisans) see the churches well built, and nearly always shut up; they see the public-houses towering above their own small houses, blazing at every turn, and always open; they see their own small rooms, often badly built, always too small for even the little furniture and often large families."

Some time ago I was going down a main thoroughfare of the city in which I then resided, when I saw some twenty or thirty men who were at work in some way about the road, laying drains, or something of that sort. It was the dinner-hour, and there in the pelting rain they sat eating their provision—about as dreary and cheerless a set as one could see. In that road within a mile there were no less than five places of worship; but the very nearest was that of which I was then the minister. I at once got the school-room opened and bade the men welcome, promised it should be at their service so long as they were anywhere near, and had a fire at which they could warm their coffee and themselves. I told them that they were at perfect liberty to smoke after dinner, but the whole time not a man lit his pipe within the walls—it was the instinct of a true gentleman awakened by a little act of kindness. When their work lay further down the road another place was similary opened to receive them. Now comes the interesting part of the story. On the Sunday some of these men walked a long way and endured the infliction of a sermon from me, because, as one explained: "You see, one good turn deserves another." I certainly much appreciated the kindness of that good turn. Of this he sure, though it was so little a matter—a cost of half-a-crown for extra cleaning covering the whole outlay—those men will henceforth carry a more kindly feeling towards the religion of Jesus Christ.

Let us pray earnestly for the Christ-like brotherliness toward men, and opportunities of service will not be lacking.

Another thing which assuredly should be seen to, and that very speedily, is the neglect of the godly poor by the churches. Surely Christ our Master is alike astonished and indignant at the extent to which we lavish money upon the fabric in which we worship him, and leave the poor members of his church—by their very religion, refined and sensitive—to the miseries of pauperism. It takes a vast advocacy, which is but slightly successful, to rouse the church to think about consecrating one-tenth of the income to all religious uses. The Jew gave three-tenths; and one-tenth was wholly for the poor. The only direction in the New Testament about "laying by" is in relation to the poor. The three religious organizations that wholly support the poor are the Jews, who are a great deal nearer to the religion of Jesus Christ than are most Christians in this respect, at any rate; the Friends and the Plymouth Brethren—the three that spend least upon luxurious worship. May we not insist upon this as the mark of a true church—since Jesus Christ has made it again and again the test of our religion? How immediately this Christ-like care for the poor followed upon the baptism of power! Turn to the fourth chapter of the Acts of the Apostles, the 33rd and 34th verses: And with great power gave the apostles witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus: and great grace was upon them all. Neither was there any among them any that lacked: for as many as were possessors of lands or houses sold them, and brought the prices of the things that were sold, and laid them down at the apostles' feet: and distribution was made unto every man according as he had need.

The first appointment of officers in the Christian Church was to this care of the poor: and the seven deacons were appointed "to serve the tables."

How significant is the contrast in St. Mark's record that, whilst the disciples were marveling at "the manner of the stones," Jesus was far more interested in a certain poor widow who came bringing her gift to the treasury. The fabric, however costly and beautiful, has little charm for Jesus beside a living, loving heart.

Well may we ask, startled and alarmed: Is it the church of to-day which shall stand knocking at the closed door vainly crying, "Open unto us, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name have cast out devils, and in thy name done many wonderful works"? Is it to these that he will say: "Depart from me. I was an hungered, and ye gave me no meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me no drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me not in. Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me"?

When once—and only once—Christ lifted the veil of the world beyond, it is to see one tormented in the "white-heat of God's indignation"—whose offense was not that he was rich. Abraham was as rich as Dives, perhaps richer. His sin was in this—that he found life's good in his goods and not in doing good, and that he left his poor brother at his gate unpitied, uncheered.

Our only safety, as well as our only salvation, lies in the full surrender of ourselves to the Lord Jesus for the fulfillment of his most gracious purposes, and that through us his brotherliness may flow forth into the midst of men.

Jacobi wrote, "I know no deeper philosophy than that of St. Paul in the seventh chapter of the Epistle to the Romans." Coleridge said, "I think St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans the most profound work in existence." Dr. Shedd says, "The Epistle to the Romans is the Novum Organon of the Christian religion, and whoever understands it is a theologian."

The Very Toughest of All.

So tough, so hard, so difficult to drive out is that hateful old malady, rheumatism, that people sometimes endure its torments for years and years, under the mistaken idea that nothing can overcome it. Just what a mistake such people make may be inferred from the case of Miss Whitree, of Lynchburgh, Va. She had been afflicted with rheumatism since she was four years old. When she was thirteen her father thought it would be a good idea to try Compound Oxygen on her.

What was the effect on this rheumatism of nine years' standing? For the first few days the young lady was discouraged: was pale, and had little strength; thought it affected her heart.

But how was it after five weeks. Altogether a different experience. Her father wrote:

"Within a week from beginning the use of the Oxygen she began to show signs of improvement: since then her recovery has been remarkable. I have never seen anything to equal it. The action of the heart is quiet and soft; there has been no sign of rheumatism; she sleeps soundly all night; has fine appetite; has gained many pounds of flesh, and has considerable color; can walk all about the house, and has paid two or three visits in the neighborhood."

Some one decisive victory for Compound Oxygen, and send for the treatise about it. Write to Drs. Starkey and Paleu, 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa., who will send it free.

Do not unite in marriage with a man of bad habits with the idea of reforming him. If now, under the restraint of your present acquaintance, he will not abandon his bad habits, after he has won the prize you can not expect him to do so. You might as well plant a violet in the face of a northeast storm with the idea of appeasing it.—Talmage.

Dyspepsia

Makes many lives miserable, and often leads to self destruction. Distress after eating, sick headache, heartburn, sour stomach, mental depression, etc., are caused by this very common and increasing disease. Hood's Sarsaparilla tones the stomach, creates an appetite, promotes healthy digestion, relieves sick headache, clears the mind, and cures the most obstinate cases of dyspepsia. Read the following:

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced. It relieved me of that faint, tired, all-gone feeling. I have felt so much better since I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, that I am happy to recommend it." G. A. PAGE, Watertown, Mass.

Tutt's Pills

REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Habitual Costiveness

Causes derangement of the entire system, and begets diseases that are hazardous to life. Persons of a costive habit are subject to Headache, Detective Memory, Gloomy Forebodings, Nervousness, Fevers, Drowsiness, Irritable Temper and other symptoms, which makes the sufferer far business or agreeable associations. Regular habit of body alone can correct these evils, and nothing succeeds so well in achieving this condition as Tutt's Pills. By their use not only is the system renovated, but in consequence of the harmonious changes thus created, there pervades a feeling of satisfaction; the mental faculties perform their functions with vivacity, and there is an exhilaration of mind, freedom of thought, and perfect heart's ease that bespeaks the full enjoyment of health.

SECRET OF BEAUTY

is health. The secret of health is the power to digest a proper quantity of food. This can never be done when the liver does not act its part. It is the driving wheel in the mechanism of man, and when it is out of order, the whole system becomes deranged, and Fever, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Constipation, Jaundice, Bilious Colic and General Debility ensue. To restore the functions of the Liver and Import that beauty which always attends a healthy constitution, Dr. Tutt's Liver Pills are recommended. They are not a cure-all, but are designed solely for the disordered Liver and the diseases which it produces.

Briefs.

Is there any significance in the fact that the first city mentioned in the Bible was built by Cain, and the last one mentioned "descended from God out of heaven"?

The Revised Version makes very little change in Psalm lxxxiv, but what it makes is perfectly delightful. Instead of reading, "In whose heart are the ways of them," it reads, "In whose heart are the highways to Zion." That is both beautiful and suggestive.

This is also suggestive, but far from being beautiful: A steward from one of the circuits in the Mississippi Conference said to us the other day: "The preachers do not work for the spread of the ADVOCATE as they ought to." Alas! my brother, does he mean you? How much have you done since Conference on that line? Honor bright, now!

"God holds us responsible not only for what we have, but for what we might have; not only for what we are, but for what we might be." In other words, the most fearful responsibilities are our possibilities! Our Savior's words on this point are simply awful: "To him that hath, shall be given; from him that hath not, shall be taken that which he hath."

From Minutes of South Carolina Conference, just to hand, we gather the following statistics: Local preachers, 152; members, 62,970; infants baptized, 2,465; adults baptized, 1,580; Sunday-schools, 682; teachers, 4,558; scholars, 38,135; collected for Conference claimants, $7,988; foreign missions, $8,482; domestic missions, $5,686; by Sunday-schools for missions, $1,524; church extension, $2,075; number of churches, 648—value, $724,288; parsonages, 127—value, $166,125; number of colleges, 2; Conference school, 1—value, $128,272.

Prof. Tillett's proposition of an educational Conference of the educators of our church is meeting with favor all around. Several Bishops approve. The following distinguished college men approve of the project: President Carlisle, President Corprew, President Hopkins, President Batson, President Crowwell, President Andrews, Prof. Woodward, Prof. Miller, President Newell, and some others. These men represent Randolph-Macon, Emory and Henry, Trinity, Wofford, Emory, Central, Kentucky Wesleyan, Southern University, Grenada Collegiate Institute, and some others.

"The chief duty of a Christian is not to spend every Sunday listening to a great preacher. Every Christian ought to be himself a preacher and witness and missionary, and should go forth to seek and to save the lost." So writes one of the foremost men of the day—a man who is full of work. Is it not strange that so many Christian people have not learned the meaning and value of the church services? How many think they meet all the requirements of the gospel by attending church twice on Sunday and prayer meeting Wednesday evening! A man who eats three times a day and never works is in the same category, and everybody says, "He is too lazy to live."

The Week of Prayer and Self-Denial.

The success resulting from the observance of the "Week of Prayer and Self-Denial" last August has encouraged our Board of Missions to ask the church to repeat that observance this year. The success was apparent on two most important lines. Wherever the week was duly observed, there was a quickening of the conscience of the church, which developed, in many places, into gracious revivals of religion, bringing many souls "out of death into life." The other result was a manifest increase in the missionary offerings, there having been raised not only a large sum for a special purpose, but the ordinary collection was augmented by the reflex influence of the special collection. It is now a matter of record that those churches which contributed most for self-denial were the churches in which the increase in the regular missionary collection was the largest. This is no matter of surprise to us—in fact, this ADVOCATE predicted that very result.

Last year the matter was wholly an experiment, and, of course, the church could not go into it with the abandon of a perfect faith in a successful outcome. There was in everyone a fear that it might end in a failure; and that fear acted as a damper upon the ardor of zeal. It was also something entirely new in our method of work; and new things never do work as smoothly as those that have been tested and proved. But now we are called to the same observance with a successful result at a former period to quicken our zeal and to encourage our faith. We are not now traveling a new and untried path, but one which we have trod before, and along which we have, in the past, won victories. The experiment last year is no longer an experiment. With all our ignorance as novices, we turned that experiment into a great fact; and we enter upon the same work this year with that fact to back us. From all this we argue and predict that, if our people will observe the "week" this year with as much faithfulness as they did last year, the result will be much greater. And there is no reason why we should not expect greater results. The time is much more suitable. The first week in April is in every respect a much better time for collections than August. Besides, we know that the thing can be made a success, which we did not know last year; and that very knowledge will act as a powerful incentive. When we know that we can succeed, to anticipate or expect failure is to disgrace ourselves in advance. And, then, the true Christian believes in progress, and, if he accomplished a little last year, a holy ambition inspires him to the effort to do much more this year. So, by all the tokens, we expect the constituency of this ADVOCATE, who did so well in this business last year, to do a great deal better this year. There is no doubt about our having come out in the lead last year; and, however much others may do, let us determine to come out in the lead again. Remember the "week" is appointed for the first week in April.

The Sunday Law.

Every good citizen is interested in the maintenance of the Sunday Law. Every good citizen ought to take pains to show its opponents the benefits which have already accrued from its observance throughout the State. Every good citizen will see to it that those who are elected to the General Assembly to make our laws shall be men who are outspoken in favor of the present Sunday Law. The enemies of the law are not dead, nor are they asleep. They are moving stealthily and silently to capture, if possible, the next Legislature, and, through it, to repeal or modify the law. We want no repeal. We want no modification in the direction they propose to modify. The law is good for the people, and the people know it: and the people must maintain it against all enemies. We say, then, to the people, Know who you are sending to the Legislature.

While on this subject, we place before our readers the conclusion of an article in the Journal of Education, by Prof. R. H. Jesse, of Tulane University, on "Sunday Books and Sunday Law:"

It is scarcely a departure from logical unity, in an article that deals so largely with Sunday, to close with a word in favor of our Sunday Law. Nothing seems clearer than the proposition that every citizen of the State, provided that he do no wrong, has a perfect right to work or rest on Sunday, according to his own pleasure. If by working he violates merely divine law to his Maker and his Master alone, is he accountable therefor? And it is just because I do believe this with all my heart that I advocate earnestly the maintenance and enforcement of our present Sunday Law. Nothing is farther from the truth than to imagine that but for this law the inhabitants of this city would be free to labor or to rest. Tens of thousands of them are dependent in this respect upon the whim of their employers: and how many thousands were once forced by the cupidity of their employers to work seven days in the week is still remembered by all, saving the willingly forgetful.

If it be asked why these people did not get them other employers, an answer is not hard to find. Thousands of men and women in this city are running every day an even race with hunger, homelessness and nakedness. To all such, the loss of even half a week's wages is a household calamity. Under these circumstances, the loss of even a wretched employment is perilous, and the finding of another position is always a precarious thing.

It was a merciful protection to these defenceless creatures to enact a Sunday Law that, wresting one day in seven from the rapacity of their employers, and bestowing it upon the employees themselves, does yet leave them free, according to their own choice, to spend it in rest or amusement or household work for the comfort of themselves and their families. Let us welcome, then, a law that abridges the liberty of hundreds, it is true, but only to enlarge and secure that of thousands. But the Knights of Labor have already spoken on this question in no uncertain terms.

This law is, furthermore, demanded by the orderly element of our agricultural communities. To them it is an important police measure. It closes on Sunday the cross-road groceries, and so makes it easier to restrain and control the heterogeneous multitude of idle laborers. A law that is equally good for city and country is good for the entire State.

It is not strange, on the other hand, that hostility should be shown to the law by the keepers of whisky shops and beer saloons and all their friends and admirers. In other departments of business, the trade lost on Sunday comes on other days. But not so with these toilers with bottle and faucett: the trade they lose on Sunday—and it was their best day—is permanently lost. For men can not drink beyond a certain quantity before twelve o'clock on Saturday night, neither do they make up on Monday for the arrested portation of Sunday. Clearly, therefore, the enforcement of our Sunday Law diminishes the sale of beer and whisky. No wonder, then, that the tapsters are in arms and their friends and compatriots and the attorneys and legislators that bow and gape before them for the honorable meed of—"trink-geld." But let the good citizens strive, in spite of these people, to maintain and enforce this excellent law.

The Baptist College, at Mount Lebanon, in this State, has 255 students, and the Baptist College, at Keachie, La., has 130 students, and the Methodist College, at Jackson, La., has less than 100 students. Some people are wide awake and some other people are sound asleep.

Bible Work in Mississippi and Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: I desire space in the columns of your excellent paper to lay before the readers thereof, in Mississippi and Louisiana, the following appeal, recently made, to the churches, pastors and lovers of the Bible in New Orleans by the Board of Directors of the Southwestern Bible Society, and to urge the churches, pastors and lovers of the Bible all over the two States above-named to do what those in New Orleans are urged to do in the appeal referred to:

Dear Christian Friends:

The Southwestern Bible Society has a large and important field which it is unable adequately to supply with the Scriptures. Under these circumstances the American Bible Society, notwithstanding the generous grants it has made us in past years, now offers, with our co-operation, to make a thorough canvass of the whole State, including New Orleans. The work in this city will be commenced at once, and we now appeal to pastors, churches and the friends of the Bible, to assist the American Bible Society in this important work.

It becomes the more important that there should be a generous response from our friends, because the receipts of the Parent Society for several years have not met its expenditures. The surplus which it had at the beginning of the re-supply now in progress is almost exhausted, and its work must shortly be curtailed unless the churches and Christian people come promptly to its aid. We, therefore, solicit from all the churches in this city liberal collections, so that the expense of this canvass may make as little draft as possible upon the generosity of the American Bible Society.

Church collections and individual gifts for this object may be sent to any one of the undersigned, or to the treasurer of the Southwestern Bible Society, and the assurance is hereby given that they will be remitted promptly as a donation to the Parent Society at New York.

M. M. GREENWOOD,
Chair'n Board Directors.
JNO. R. JUDEN,
Record'g Secretary.
FRANK N. BUTLER,
Correspond'g Secretary.
EDW. BOOTH,
Acting Treasurer.

This appeal is proper and right, and it should be heeded not only by the Christian people of New Orleans, but by all the Christian people in the two States referred to. Some of the pastors and churches have already responded to the call made to them for help; and it is to be hoped that all the rest will follow their noble example. Certainly the Christian people of this country ought to render more aid than they have been rendering the American Bible Society in the grand work that it is doing for our common Christianity, both at home and abroad. No work should lie nearer the Christian's heart than the one that is being done by this noble institution. Its sole object and aim is to put God's Holy Word in the hands of all people, and especially in the hands of the destitute. Then let all who would help in one of the grandest religious works under the sun come forward and contribute something to this noble cause.

Collections can be sent either to the undersigned at the Bible House, 163 Camp street, New Orleans, or to William Foulke, Jr., Bible House, Astor Place, New York.

All the papers in Mississippi and Louisiana that are in favor of Bible distribution are requested to copy this notice.

Letter from Japan.

MY DEAR BROTHER: The year 1887 has passed; but we can not forget it—so full of interest to us in Japan, and to all Christian people in all parts of the world. It has been an eventful year to us, as a mission, and to our church. The Lord has owned and crowned our efforts far beyond our expectations. It has been a happy year to us; and the Lord has filled our hearts with great rejoicing. The closing months of the old year, and these few days of the new year, have been full of encouragement to us.

Just before the close of the year, a man came from Nwajima to see me; said he was studying the Bible with some fifteen others. They were meeting in a rented house several times a week to read together the Word of God; but they met with many difficulties, and begged that we go or send some one to teach them. He remained with us and attended our Sunday services, and earnestly implored help from us for his people. Dr. W. R. Lambuth visited them in a few weeks, and was received by them in the kindest manner. He found what had been told was true. He remained with them a few days, baptized two men, received seven on probation, and appointed one of them as leader. To-morrow he returns, and takes with him one of our young men, who is an exhorter, to remain a few weeks teaching them. Only yesterday we had an earnest appeal from the native Christians of our church in Hiroshima to come, live in their midst, and preach the gospel to them. They are anxious to work for the salvation of others.

Many young men here in Kobe have come to us asking to be taught the Word of God. Some of them have declared their determination to preach the gospel to their people. Some have said to us: "The Lord has greatly blessed us during these closing months of the year, and we want to invite our friends to your Bible class."

The outlook all over Japan is very encouraging. The people of Japan are moving in the right direction. Their schools everywhere use our English readers, such as Wilson's and others, full of Christian teaching; and reprints of these are being made in many parts of Japan. We can not afford to be idle. As they move, we must keep abreast with them, aiding them all we can to obtain that true wisdom from Heaven which shall elevate them and fit them for the kingdom of Heaven.

We need men and women fully consecrated to God to help us. There is plenty of Christian work everywhere for Christian men and women to do; and just at this time a most glorious work can be done by Christian people for Japan. It will not do to postpone our efforts, but the work must be pressed with all the faith and energy of which we are capable. The Buddhists see that their religion is in danger, and they have employed a foreigner (an Englishman, I think), who has espoused the Buddhist faith, to come to Japan and aid them in reviving Buddhism. Christians of America, shall we remain inactive? Shall we not go in the strength of our God and do battle in his name? Shall we not, with united hearts and earnest prayer, seek the blessing of his Holy Spirit? Much depends now upon the efforts of the Christian people of America.

The Lord is working in a wonderful manner in the hearts of many in this land. A great revival is going on in Tokio, and many hundreds are being blessed and filled with the Holy Spirit. Let our people help us now and hold us up in their prayers before God, and a great blessing will surely rest upon the work here this new year.

Pray for us. Ever your brother in Christ, our Lord,

J. W. LAMBUTH.

KOBE, Japan, Jan. 12, 1888.

Giving, when rightly done, is one of the most beautiful things on earth. Cheerfully done, it brings the smile of God beaming into the soul and makes a spiritual feast in the heart. To be ready to give when occasion arises is a very high degree of grace. To be glad to give puts the giver upon the highest plane. When Hugh Price Hughes remarked in one of his mission meetings that he needed a hundred pounds to start a Receiving House in which unemployed people could be sheltered for the night, until he could find employment for them, a stranger said he would be glad to contribute that amount, and handed in his cheque. "Glad to contribute!" There's religion of the right sort. "Glad to contribute!" The majority of our people, are they anyways near that degree of grace?

Notes.

As their General Conference approaches, our Northern brethren are again vigorously discussing the time limit of the itinerancy. Several of their Bishops have spoken out on the subject, saying that it would be impossible to run the machinery without it. There does not seem to be much concern among the Bishops as to the length of the limit, but limit there must be.

We enjoy a humorous phrase as much as anybody can, and the following from the Independent has tickled us no little. The humorous and the ludicrous come together in such an unexpected way, that the more we think it over the more we are tickled at it.

The last new witty phrase evolved in the political discussions of England is from Sir Henry James, who characterizes noisy pretense which covers no real power, with the expression, "Samson with a wig on."

Don't that sort of Samsons sometimes get in the pulpit?

The editor of the Irish Christian Advocate having asked for suggestions for the improvement of his paper, received the following:

1. Never print a leading article longer than a column, and never more than one a week. Let the rest be short "subs."

2. Never print a sermon longer than three columns, and that only occasionally. Hardly one in fifty is worth printing, and hardly one in a hundred reads it.

3. Keep out of theology and politics. On the former, we're all sound; of the latter, we're all sick.

4. Shorten circuit reports at all cost. Take it for granted that we appreciate the performance of Miss Rose at the tea table and Miss Lilly at the piano. Sir, give us news.

The Methodist Church in this country has grown to be a great host. A church numbering over four millions of communicants is no inconsiderable body. When we remember that four millions of communicants means at least sixteen millions of adherents to that form of church polity and doctrine, we stand amazed at the responsibilities that have come upon us. There is one special danger that threatens us now. Our history having been such a grand one, there is danger of our trying to live upon that history. Bragging about our achievements will tempt us to halt in the march to conquest and thus dampen our zeal. Earnest, thorough, faithful, zealous evangelistic work, adapted to the necessities of the masses of the people, especially in the cities, is the only way to continued progress. Failing in this, our millions will turn defeat into an utter rout.

Rev. Mark Boatner Chapman, in his "Lands of the Orient," speaking of "dropping a day out of the calendar" in crossing the Pacific Ocean, has this comment our friends, the Seventh-Day Adventists: "If all the Seventh-Day Adventists would make this voyage around the world, going west, conscientiously observing every seventh day, and making no change in their calendar, when they again reached home they would find themselves in harmony with the rest of the Christian world, and we would, perhaps, hear no more about their scruples for the particular seventh day of the week." This leads us to surmise that, maybe, the founder of this sect made the journey around the world, going east, and conscientiously observing every seventh day. When he got around, lo! his Sunday was on Saturday. Either of these, and a host of other facts, show the absurdity of the scruples of these Seventh-Day people.

Dr. Steel, of Louisville, has given an interesting account of Mr. Moody's meeting, in that place, in the St. Louis Advocate. During the progress of the meeting he stumbled upon a fact which was made apparent to some here when Mr. Moody was in this city. The doctor says: "This meeting has brought to light the fact that in our best churches there is but few who understand how to use the Word of God in leading souls into the light." And he says truly: "The greatest need of the church to-day is men and women trained in the Word of God, who can teach sinners what they must do to be saved." The need the Doctor speaks of is the natural result of the lamentable fact which he learned in Mr. Moody's meeting. When every Christian ought to be a worker, the fact is there are but few who are workers. It is a sad fact, but it is true. When will our people learn the meaning of Paul's statement: "The manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal?"

A writer in the New York Christian Advocate has this sentence, which some preachers would do well to lodge in their minds: "The same sermons delivered in the same manner to congregations differently circumstanced is one of the chief causes of pulpit inefficiency."

Personals.

Are you a subscriber to the Woman's Missionary Advocate? It is published monthly in Nashville, Tenn., by the Woman's Missionary Society, of our church, for the small sum of fifty cents a year. Send the money to Mrs. P. A. Butler, editor, and "read up" on missions, and your religion will not only be broadened, but its quality will be improved.

If you fail to read the sermon on the third page, you will miss one of the best things in this paper. That sermon is worthy of the study of every reader of the ADVOCATE.

It is said that Francis Murphy intends to enter the Methodist ministry.

William George Robert Viscount Offington in the peerage of the United Kingdom, and Baron Craven of Hampstead-Marshall, county Berks, in the peerage of England, and "the fourth Earl of Craven," has been spending the last week in this city.

The Evening Democrat, a new daily published at Meridian, Miss., has made its appearance. The editor is T. Dabney Marshall, with Percy Gambrell as city editor. It is supposed to be the organ of the prohibitionists.

This expression in a private note from the country tells a deplorable tale: "Think of a leap year ball with twenty-two lady managers, thirteen of them members of the Methodist Church, and five of the thirteen married women."

Rev. H. B. Browne, of Charleston, S. C., brings us under obligation for a copy of the Minutes of the one hundred and second session of the South Carolina Annual Conference.

Bro. McCoy, of the Alabama Christian Advocate, makes a mistake in his surmise that Rev. M. B. Chapman, of Missouri, is a native Alabamian. We have known Bro. Chapman from babyhood. He is a native of Clinton, La. Alabama has the credit of educating him at the Southern University.

From the Texas Christian Advocate, of February 9, we learn that Rev. Daniel Morse died at Marshall, Texas, February 6.

Joseph Cook began his Boston Monday lectures February 6. The course of eight lectures will treat of "God in the Bible."

A reporter, interviewing an English preacher, asked: "I have heard that your rule is, on receiving a new member, to inquire what Christian work he proposes to do. Is that so?" Answer: "It is. We expect every member to be a working member!" Would not that be a good rule with preachers in this country?

Bro. Briggs, of the Texas Christian Advocate, after a wrestle with the Kelley-Candler-Abbott giant, that would have won a crown of evergreen in the Olympic arena, has at last confessed that he is "exhausted."

Rev. R. Randle, presiding elder of the Homer district, Louisiana Conference, writes: "The people seem to be in a better condition financially, morally and spiritually than for years, and the Boards of Stewards show a greater readiness to make liberal allowances than I have ever observed before." That is a piece of "good news," and it gives us pleasure to send it abroad.

A presiding elder writes: "Hard winter has hindered work, but I have been at every appointment and found the preachers on hand." Our Lord says: "Blessed is that servant, whom his Lord when he cometh shall find so doing."

Rev. Z. T. Bennett, of the White River Conference, has been elected editor of the Arkansas Methodist in place of the late Dr. Winfield. We offer Bro. Bennett our sympathy and prayers.

Gen. W. S. Harney has been in the army service since February 13, 1818. In length of service he ranks with Emperor William and Gen. Von Moltke.

Dr. F. S. Patton has been elected president of Princeton College, in place of Dr. McCosh, resigned.

The State of New York spends $15,900,000 a year on its public schools, and yet the superintendent of education declares that there is a large and constantly increasing illiterate class.

Felicity Tabernacle.

We learn that on Sunday last, after an able address by Rev. J. W. McLaurin, a collection for the American Bible Society was taken, resulting in a total of $169 21. That is certainly doing well, considering that the Felicity congregation are erecting a new and beautiful church.

We learn also that, counting all the money realized from insurance, last year's entertainment and subscriptions to date, there still remains some $4,000, or more, to raise in order to pay for the new church, inside and outside. No one having subscribed over $500, it is supposed that a number of those who have already given will either double their subscriptions or, at least, greatly increase them. There are many who have not yet given, but from whom something may be reasonably expected. All things considered, we can not see why all the money should not be raised during this and next month, so that in April this tasteful sacred building may be dedicated to God wholly free of debt. We can not believe that the Methodists and their friends will be so backward in their contribution as to compel the taking of a collection on the day of dedication to meet a balance not raised. Let the brethren who have given give again, and let those who have not given do so without delay.

Be prompt in sending amount due for your quota of Louisiana Conference Minutes, as they are ready for distribution.

BOOKS.

THE LANDS OF THE ORIENT. By Rev. M. B. Chapman. Southern Methodist Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn.

This book contains the letters published in the St. Louis Christian Advocate while the writer was making the tour around the world, to which has been added much new matter in regard to missionary affairs; and it closes with an invaluable appendix of missionary statistics. When Bro. Chapman wrote to us in July, 1886, that he purposed making this trip, we knew then that the church had a rich treat in store from his easy-going pen. Having known him from his babyhood, we knew that he had both eyes open to see with, and was one of the few persons who could accurately describe what he saw. His style is clear; his arrangement of facts, natural; his reflections, just; and here and there sparkles of humor flash unexpectedly before the reader. Altogether this is one of the most enjoyable books of travel we have met with in many a day. Get it and read for yourself, and you will be both instructed and interested.

Here are nine sketches of remarkable women, and they are very readable. Dr. Wise has a fine literary taste, and his power as a writer is of the first order; and these sketches will be read with untiring interest by all who try the book. There are some remarkable names on his list, such as Elizabeth Prentiss, The Bronte Sisters, Mary Lamb, Felicia Hemans, Frances Havergal, Carolina Herschell, Hanna Adams, Sister Dora and the Two Grimke Sisters. We compend this book to all our young women.

PERIODICALS.

—The Century, for February, is the mid-winter number of this most popular monthly, and has as fine a table of contents as was ever presented within the cover of one magazine. Its frontispiece is an elegant engraving of Walter Savage Landor. "Ranch Life in the Far West," by Theodore Roosevelt, is a capital description of Western life among the cattlemen. "A Song of the Mocking-Bird," by Maurice Thompson, is as unique and beautiful a piece of poetry as we have read in many a day. George Cable and Edward Eggleston continue their serials in this number. Dr. Buckley, of the New York Christian Advocate, contributes a strong and intensely interesting article on "Astrology, Divination and Spiritualism." Frank Stockton concludes "The Dusantes." Gen. Sherman writes of "The Grand Strategy of the War." "The Life of Lincoln" continues. Other articles there are; and all make up a magnificent number. The Century Company, Union Square, New York. Price, $4.

—Woman. The February number of this monthly is full of articles about women and her work and her possibilities. The "Home Department" is good. The Woman Publishing Company, 122 Nassau street, New York. Price, $2 75.

—Christian Thought, for February, has this fine table: "Physical Theories of Mind," by James T. Bixby, Ph. D.; "Depravity and Its Cure," by G. E. Strowbridge, D. D.; "Monism," by B. L. Dabney, D. D.; "Bible Account of Creation in the Light of Modern Science," by E. A. Davies, F. R. G. S.; Views and Reviews, Monthly Meetings, About Books. Published by W. B. Ketcham, 71 Bible House. Price, $2; clergymen, $1 50.

—Babyhood, for February, is packed with good things for mothers and their children. This monthly is worth a great deal to every household. The price is a mere nothing. Babyhood Publishing Company, 5 Beekman street, New York. Price, $1 50.

—The Converted Catholic Monthly is published by James A. O'Connor, 60 Bible House, New York. It is bent on showing up the true character of the Papacy, and it does it without stint and in true colors. Price, $1; ten cents a number.

An utter failure.—The inability to make a speech.

Mr. Philip Werlein has in stock a beautiful selection of organs. Anyone thinking of purchasing should call and see them before purchasing. Mr. Werlein's terms are moderate; he sells cheaper than ever before, and guarantees his instruments as first-class in every respect. There is no better judge of an organ, and anyone in the country can safely leave such a matter to him, and be assured that their order will receive prompt attention and prove satisfactory in every respect.

EDUCATIONAL.

Mansfield Female College.

1887-8.

THE FALL TERM will open Wednesday, September 16, 1887.

The Faculty has been strengthened by the accession of Rev. M. S. Watts, of Virginia, who will have the discipline of the College, and Prof. D. F. Biddle, also of Virginia, who will manage the boarding department. Both these gentlemen are experienced in school work, and they, with their families, will add much to the social advantages of the pupils.

Other highly qualified teachers have been secured for the Literary, Music and Art Departments.

Annual rate for board and tuition from one hundred and sixty-five to one hundred and eighty-five dollars, according to class. Music, instrumental or vocal, and art lessons, five dollars per month of four weeks, extra.

Instruction in French, ten dollars per year. Use of piano for practice, ten dollars. Total expense for the year for board, tuition, and single course in music or art, paid in advance, two hundred dollars.

A deposit of five dollars for each term must be made for purchase of books and stationery.

Pupils must furnish their own bed-clothing and pillows, towels and toilet articles.

The College is the property of the Louisiana Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the daughters of members of this body receive free tuition in the Literary and Music Departments.

Owing to the steadily increasing patronage during the past four years, the Board of Managers have made arrangements for increasing the capacity and comfort of the buildings, and beautifying the grounds.

Mansfield is on the line of the Texas and Pacific R. R., 288 miles from New Orleans, and forty miles from Shreveport.

JOHNNY AND TOBY.

BY M. D. BRINE.

'I looked from my window one bright, sunny day,
And watched little Johnny with Toby at play.
They were having a jolly good time there together,
And Johnny's blue eyes were as bright as the weather.

For Toby and he had been having a race,
And a good bit of color flushed Johnny's fat face,
And now came a pause, Johnny knitted his brow,
And seemed to be thinking, "What shall I do now,
My wonderful Toby, to prove, etc. that you
Are just what a dog should be, watchful and true?"

Meanwhile, there stood Toby, his ears lifted high,
A look of "I'm ready!" in each watchful eye,
A sort of "expectancy" written all o'er him,
As waiting—not knowing just what was before him—

His master's decision, his master's command,
To run, or to jump, or on hind legs to stand.
He was on the alert to be quick and obey,
Whatever his duties might be for the day.

So when, by and by, Johnny came in to me,
And seated himself, with a kiss, on my knee,
And told me of Toby, and all he had done,
I tucked a wee sermon right into the fun.

And whispered, "I wish that a boy whom I love,
In some little ways like your Toby would prove,
As faithful to please me, as Toby to you
Proves faithful and clever and watchful and true.

I wish he would sometimes for mother's own sake
Be 'on the alert' for her wishes, nor make
Her scold him, and coax him, and make him obey,
And be watchful and ready, and willing each day."

Little Johnny looked queer, when my sermon was o'er,
But his arm round my neck he threw loudly once more;
And—"I'll be like Toby, mamma," answered he,
"Always ready and watchful to mind you, you'll see!"

—Churchman.

A Letter to the Little Cousins.

MR. EDITOR: I want to talk to the children especially, and any grown folks who are interested in mission work about, and in behalf of our Mexican Border Mission School, Laredo Seminary. This seminary is on the Texas side, just across the river from Mexico, and is superintended by a lovely Christian lady, Miss Nannie Halding and her assistants. She began with a small school, the country all being Catholics and bitterly opposed to Protestantism. She had to undergo much to gain a foothold. The little Mexicans are taught to despise Protestants and call them ugly names when they meet them on the streets; but this pious lady overcame prejudice, and her house began to fill with pupils from all classes, until it would hold no more. "Squeeze them in as she would to make room," there came a day when not one more could be taken. She then laid the case before the Lord, in prayer to open the way for her to get the means to build a larger addition to her seminary, that she might accommodate all that came. The Woman's Board could not help her much, to their sorrow. Only a third of what was really needed could they give her, but she has faith to believe she will get it, so has gone to work trusting the Lord to provide it. A dear old lady in Meridian, one of the first members of our society, while on an invalid's bed, embroidered an infant's cloak and gave it to the society to be sold. Several years after she had been in heaven, her daughter gave the cloak to Mrs. Juliana Hayes to sell for the society, which she did, while in Wesson, for $10 in gold. It was to go where it was needed most, so I was instructed to send it to Laredo for the new building; and it was turned over to Mrs. Park, the superintendent of the school buildings, and the fund, to acknowledge. She says: "You have my most hearty thanks for the kindly part you have taken in this matter. Due credit will be given on our books to the Meridian Auxiliary. The handiwork of the dying will be perpetuated in brick and mortar. We lack fifteen hundred dollars of having sufficient to pay for the new building. We need it so much; this house is crowded, the present school and class rooms are needed for sleeping apartments; so many have to be sent away. Week after week this is done. We are receiving little sums every week. This amounts in the end, but it will take many littles to make $1,500. Could you not interest the ladies in this work; the children, too. One dime will purchase twenty bricks, fifty cents one hundred. I have been glad to acknowledge sums as small as $1 25. Help us all you can. I went into Mexico Christmas week, two hundred and fifty miles in the interior—Monterey and Saltillo; went into the homes of the various classes; then in all the degradation of the lowest. I came back to the seminary, realizing deeply that this work is of God; that it is to be the instrument in his hands for the elevation of this people. It is Protestantism or infidelity. God help us all to do our duty."

Now, dear friends, you have heard what an eye-witness has to say. These little girls are just like you all, they are God's little children, and he wants you to save your dimes and nickels, and help buy brick to build a school, where as many of these little ones as will, may be educated to be good women, and learn of the precious Savior who died for them as well as you. Many of them in the school are Christians, will lead in prayer whenever called upon. They love Miss Halding devotedly. Let us deny ourselves: and we will get good Dr. Carter to be our treasurer, to receive all the dimes or any amount you can give for this cause. Who will respond to this call? Dr. Carter will keep an account and let you know how much is collected. Don't lose any time, but send at once. Yours faithfully,

ANNIE LINFIELD.

CRYSTAL Springs, Mississippi.

From Aunt Loretta.

My Dear Nieces and Nephews: A happy New Year to you all. How many of you made new resolutions to do better this year than ever before? One month has already gone the way of all months. Have you been any better? Did you keep those good promises?

You have all heard the old adage that, "Promises, like pie-crusts, are made to be broken;" and the logic of that proverb is that one had better not make promises. I must say I differ with the author of that "old saw." I like good promises, even if they are broken sometimes. It proves that we have an aspiration to rise to the level of a higher life. So do not be discouraged if you have not kept all the good ones you made. And in future, if you make a good promise, ask the Savior to help you keep it. The Bible is full of promises that God made to his dear children. If they were all written out, they would make a large book.

Dr. Adam Clark, the great man who wrote the Commentary, selected the promises from the Bible, and had a book published called "Clark on the Promises;" and it is so full of comfort you could not put any more comfort in it if you tried. All the promises are classified just like a Sunday-school. Each class has a teacher, and the teacher is Jesus, and his promises never fail. One of the sweetest is that he will "be with us even to the end" of our days on earth, and then we will be with him forever in heaven.

Some of the cousins have troubles as well as the aunts and uncles, and I always feel so sorry for a girl or boy who has rough roads to travel; but if they would go and tell the Lord all about their troubles, and then open their Bibles and read, the Lord would speak to them through his Word, and say: "Let not your heart be troubled," and then give you a promise that he would "come again." How comforting that is.

I want all of my nieces and nephews to find a promise in the Bible, and then write it out in their own language. And that reminds me of a promise I made to send you another puzzle, so here it is:

Give a thousand for odd sums, and add one more;
Give fifty to "heathen that are at your doors;"
To this add five hundred, and then you will see What all the ADVOCATE Cousins should be.

God bless you all!

Household.

The Influence of Home.

The New York Herald says that an eminent financial authority in that city, in speaking of the defalcation of one of his clerks, made this suggestive remark: "This clerk was always most exemplary and competent, an excellent paying teller, cool, methodical, and imperturbable. Had I known he had not a happy home, I would not have kept him as paying teller. I would not have any man in such a capacity who did not live happily at his home."

Here is food for reflection. There is a truth involved which is of the greatest importance and widest application. The home-life is the basis of all life, and a happy home is essential to safety and success in any department of life. Occasionally a man, or a woman, is strong enough and sufficiently self-contained to endure disquiet and unhappiness at home without flinching at any point of duty. But the majority are not so. They become discouraged, lose heart, and at last break down. Many of the sudden and surprising lapses are to be traced to this cause. Indeed, when one finds himself tied for life to a home and has become convinced that there is no rest or happiness for him in it, it is not surprising that he becomes discouraged and breaks down. That is the natural result, however much we may deplore it. And it is no more true of the man than it is of the woman.

On the other hand, a man is prepared to stand almost any storm, meet any foe, endure any hardship or suffering which may fall to his lot in the world, if he only has a good home, full of sympathy and love, into which he may retreat. Therein he grows strong. In it he has something for which to endure and fight. Many a man's success, many a woman's triumph, are to be attributed to the happy homes in which they live. There is no other place so much like heaven, this side of heaven, as a happy home.—Pittsburg Advocate.

TWO VERY DIFFERENT YOUNG MEN.—"What a marked difference there is in young men," remarked a suburban matron the other day. "I have two nephews who alternately 'run out' from the city to see me, generally staying all night. It almost gives me the shivers to allot that spare room to one of them, he is so exceedingly careless. It looks the next morning as if Bedlam had been loose. Everything is out of place. The towel rack is overturned, the pillow shams are crushed, the wash-bowl is left full of water, the windows are flung open to the incursive flies, and everything generally is at sixes and sevens. But there's the other nephew—Bless my soul, its a pleasure to have him come! Why, you'd think the daintiest lady had slept in the room. He removes the shams and spread, washes the soap before he returns it to the soap dish, puts the towel squarely on the rack and the comb into the brush, refixes the tidy on the bureau, and hows the shutters before he comes down, and all that. Why, I've got nothing to do scarcely but remake the bed, and one would hardly know he slept in it. I can not see why there should be such a marked difference between the young men when they are so much alike in almost every other respect. It's more likely born in them than bred in them."

Leave hope behind,
All ye who enter here!

So ran the dire warning which Dante read on the portals of the Inferno. So runs the brief verdict of your friends if you are overtaken by the first symptoms of that terrible disease, consumption. "No leave hope behind! Your days are numbered"!! And the struggle against death is given up in despair. But while there is life, there is hope. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has cured hundreds of cases worse than yours; and it will cure you, if taken in time. But delay is dangerous. No power can restore a wasted lung; the "Golden Medical Discovery," however, can and will arrest the disease.

It is for life—not so much even for death—that we are to be "ready." Ready for God's call, that comes to us in an hour when we think not, and demands all the strength we should have grown to, to enable us to decide and act.—Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney.

THE KIDNEYS grow inactive prior to becoming diseased, there is no safer or more effectual means of impelling them to the performance of their functions than Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Balm.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Hon. C. Edwards Lester,

Late U. S. Consul to Italy, author of "The Glory and Shame of England," "America's Advancement," etc., etc., etc., writes as follows:—

New York, August 1, 1887.
122 E. 27th st.

DR. J. C. AYER & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Gentlemen:—A sense of gratitude and the desire to render a service to the public impel me to make the following statements:

My college career, at New Haven, was interrupted by a severe cold which so enfeebled me that, for ten years, I had a hard struggle for life. Hemorrhage from the bronchial passages was the result of almost every fresh exposure. For years I was under treatment of the ablest practitioners without avail. At last I learned of which I used (moderately and in small doses) at the first recurrence of a cold or any chest difficulty, and from which I invariably found relief. This was over 25 years ago. With all sorts of exposure, in all sorts of climates, I have never, to this day, had any cold nor any affection of the throat or lungs which did not yield to AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL within 24 hours.

Of course I have never allowed myself to be without this remedy in all my voyages and travels. Under my own observation, it has given relief to vast numbers of persons; while in many cases of pulmonary inflammation, such as croup and diphtheria in children, life has been preserved through its effects. I recommend its use in light but frequent doses. Properly administered, in accordance with your directions, it is in any house. I speak earnestly because I feel earnestly. I have known many cases of apparently confirmed bronchitis and cough, with loss of voice, particularly among clergymen and other public speakers, perfectly cured by this medicine. Faithfully yours,

C. EDWARDS LESTER.

TOWNSEND—Died January 2, 1888, EMMA FLORENCE, sweet and attractive little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Townsend, of Smith's Wells, Miss. Florence was next to their youngest child, aged five years, two months and twelve days. Her young life was like the summer flowers, quick to wither and die under the severe winter's blast. She leaves her sweet little image indelibly stamped within the hearts of all. Her short mission on earth, while touched with suffering, was yet one of gentle patience and love. She was severely burned several years back, which seemed to endear her the more, if possible, to the hearts of her fond parents.

During her last sickness she lingered and suffered two weeks ere the angel of death freed her little spirit from its earthly habitation. All could but note with what heroic sensibility she bore her suffering; and talked so rationally; at times of her school, books and cards, frequently telling her older sister, Jimmie, that she would give them to her as she could take better care of them.

My very heart bled in sympathy with the tender parents and loving sisters when the hour came for them to bid our little darling good-bye. Her little feet are no more heard pattering close behind her mother's footsteps. Her seat at table is vacant, and we miss so sadly her many little merry tricks, and ringing laughter. Her sweet, playful disposition made her at school, as she was elsewhere, a general pet.

Her parents have still her printed letters to remind them of the little fingers which did the task. Oh! fond parents, had we the power to call your little darling back from her beautiful mansion above, who would be the first to give the signal? She is your angel child. Beautiful in death, pure as the flowers that lay on her cold little breast, we leave thee, little Florence dear, to the care of the loving Savior who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, for of such is the kingdom of Heaven."

TWEEDIE—JOHN ROBERT TWEEDIE, only son of Dr. R. E. and Mrs. Mary Tweedie, was suddenly killed by the kick of a mule, on the evening of January 4, 1888. He was born in Fairfield, Ala., January 1, 1873; was, therefore, just fifteen years and three days old, and was verging into the state of manhood. In one moment the prospects of his young, buoyant and joyous life were cut off in this sudden and ruthless manner. "Johnnie Bob," as he was familiarly known, was the subject of pious training, and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Hebron, under the pastorate of Rev. B. F. Phillips, when he was ten years old. He was of bright, inquiring habits of mind; was courteous in deportment, and did fair to reach a popular and useful manhood. He was the stay on which the hopeful doting parents rested for declining years, and the pride of an only sister, who by his untimely death are deprived and sore bereft.

May they feel that the "Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away," and in that faith which lends its realizing light be able to say, "Blessed be the name of the Lord!" Q. A. OATS.

WOODWARD—The Rev. J. O. WOODWARD, son of James and Luvira Woodward, was born in Fairfield district, S. C., July 1, 1820; moved with his widowed mother to Winston county while a youth; was educated in the common schools of the country; was converted in 1847, licensed to preach in 1849, and was admitted on trial into the Mississippi Conference the same year; admitted in full connection in 1853, and ordained deacon same year by Bishop Andrews; was ordained elder by Bishop Pierce, November 30, 1856. He was married to Miss C. Adaline Porter, December 15, 1853. We are not able to give the different works traveled by Bro. Woodward. From exposure his health failed him early in life, and for several years he has been a superannuate. His membership in the Mississippi Conference continued until the fall of 1870, when at the organization of the North Mississippi Conference he became a member of that body. Bro. Woodward's life was singularly pure and consistent. He was quiet in his religious profession, but his religious experience was deep and abiding. Bro. Woodward was what we call a good preacher. His thoughts were clothed in plain, simple language, and he sought the baptism of the Holy Ghost as the highest and best preparation for his work. The community in which he lived never tired of hearing Bro. Woodward preach. Bro. Woodward was no croaker. Often was he heard to say: "These are the best times the world has ever seen." He loved to talk of the many noble enterprises of the Church and State for the relief and elevation of mankind. He was safe in council, and there are few on whose judgment you might more unhesitatingly rely. He was the soul of honor, and his words could always be taken at their full meaning. Bro. Woodward was purely gifted in prayer. How simple and childlike his faith and how unctious his appeals at the throne of grace! You felt when he prayed that he had met God and talked with him face to face. His last sickness was very painful and protracted, yet he was perfectly resigned. He longed to be at home. He gave his family to God in the church, and when the final summons came, January 3, 1888, he died as a good and faithful soldier of the cross.

J. A. LEACH.

WOODWARD—The following resolutions were adopted by the first quarterly meeting, Louisville charge, Columbia district, North Mississippi Conference, held at Louisville, Miss., January 28, 1888, in reference to the death of REV. J. O. WOODWARD:

Resolved, That to the death of our brother, the Rev. J. O. Woodward, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has lost one of its most exemplary members, and the ministry an earnest advocate; one who by a deeply pious walk and godly conversation, exerted all his moral force and spiritual power for the support of the same, for a number of years; always earnest and faithful in his Christian duties, upholding the gospel of Christ with commendable zeal, and proclaiming its truths by an honest, faithful and steadfast walk and upright conduct in all the avocations of life. A good neighbor and true friend—a kind husband and tender father; ever full of tender sympathy for those of his neighbors and friends who were out of Christ.

Resolved, That we greatly deplore the loss of Bro. Woodward to the church, to his friends and neighbors, but most of all to his family, and especially to his afflicted and bereaved companion; yet we bow in humble submission to the will of him who doeth all things well, believing, as we confidently do, that our loss is his eternal gain, for he rests in hope.

Resolved, That we will cherish his memory, emulate his Christian virtues, and commend his devotion to Christianity; and we fondly tender our sincere condolence to his grief-stricken family, and pray that God may grant them his sustaining grace.

W. J. NEWSOM, for Com.

FOIST.—The subject of this notice, BRO. WILLIAM FOIST, died December 10, 1887, in his right mind and full of hope, in God. (Illness, partial paralysis). He was born in Randolph county, N. C., in 1810; married his present wife in said county, in 1830; moved to West Tennessee, in 1837, and lived there two years; thence to Mississippi—Lafayette county—near the town of Oxford, where he died, being seventy-eight years old. He professed faith in Christ and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church South, in 1823, and lived a consistent member for fifty-five years. No man in any community, according to ability, did more for the church than he. His pocket, like his heart, was converted. The writer knew Uncle Bill forty-odd years himself, and knows whereof he writes. Midway Church, where he was a leading member, as a class leader and an exhorter, and the community at large will realize great loss in his death. He leaves a wife and eleven children, all members of the same good old church—one a minister doing faithful work in the Louisiana Conference for his and his father's Master. Wife and children all glory in the fact that husband and father have gone to heaven, when he told them a short time before he died they could find him if they would live right here. "Glory to God for such a Savior as I have; I feel no pain, not even the sting of death. Jesus, my Savior, is with me, bearing them all." These were his last words, and the good old man went to sleep in Jesus. May God bless the aged wife, watch over the children and save them and the writer all in glory!

T. L. HARRIS.

DENNIS—ANNIE SPENCER, aged four years, eight months and twenty-eight days, died January 8, 1888. Oh, how sad to see little Annie die—to mother, father, brother and sister! She was a beautiful, amiable child, and gave promise of a sweet Christian woman. But, like the bud that is withered by the frost or scorched by the sun before it bloomed, so little Annie was taken suddenly by diptheria. But the consoling thought is, that her spirit is with God and the angels in the "sun-bright clime." Farewell, precious little Annie, till we meet in the "land of pure delight."

W. W.

WHITE—MAGHIE MAY WHITE, the daughter of Walter and Mary White, of Abbeville, La., died of diptheria, January 15, 1887. Her battle with disease and death was worthy the hero in the field of conflict. In the sixth year of her age "the silver cord was loosed," "the golden bowl was broken," and "the pitcher was broken at the fountain;" and her spirit, no longer bound by earthly elements and laws, entered into the future state, not enshrouded in mystery, but revealed and glorified by the presence of him who reigns forever and ever. As the setting sun throws back its golden rays upon the tablets of the sky, so in her last moments her face was lit up with a celestial radiance. This sweet little girl, like the beautiful flowers in autumn, faded away from the darkness and dreariness of this world into the bright and splendid form of angelic beauty. While the sky was obscured by lowering clouds, and piercing winds chilled our bodies, we laid her precious remains in the silent grave to await the glory of the resurrection. She sleeps sweetly in the arms of the Savior who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of God."

J. F. SUDLOCK.

DENNIS—WIMBERLY GLOVER, infant son of Dr. H. S. and Annie Dennis, aged two years, three months and thirteen days, died January 12, 1888. Just four days from little Annie's death, little Wimberly crossed the "cold stream," and no doubt they met at the beautiful gate of gold. And little Annie, with the angels, conducted little Wimberly into the "house not made with hands." While the redeemed hosts sang the "new song," and the angels struck their harps of gold, the new-born child in the "city of God" received his palm and crown. "Oh, heaven, sweet heaven! What a reunion of loved ones when our feet strike the golden shore."

W. WIMBERLY.

HOME POLITENESS.—A boy who is polite to father and mother is likely to be polite to everybody else. A boy lacking politeness to his parents may have the semblance of courtesy in society, but is never truly polite in spirit, and is in danger, as he becomes familiar, of betraying his real want of courtesy. We are all in danger of living too much for the outside world, for the impression which we make in society, coveting the good opinion of others and caring too little for the opinion of those who are in a sense a part of ourselves, and who will continue to sustain and be interested in us, notwithstanding these defects of deportment and character. We say to every boy and to every girl, cultivate the habit of courtesy and propriety at home—in the kitchen as well as in the parlor, and you will be sure in other places to deport yourself in a becoming and attractive manner.

Thousands of people have found in Hood's Sarsaparilla a positive cure for rheumatism. This medicine, by its purifying action, neutralizes the acidity of the blood, which is the cause of the disease, and also builds up and strengthens the whole body. Give it a trial.

WOMAN.—A tribute to woman's power is given by Charles Dudley Warner. He says:

"What limits is there to her ambition or performance? She drives a stage, plays a violin, sews, sings, dances, acts, paints (both in oil and water-colors), teaches, is a clerk, a type-writer, a type-setter, an editor, a marvelous producer of short stories (said by critics to be the most difficult art in the world), a telegrapher, and as a yeller through the telephone, probably will never have an equal.

A Dream of Fair Women.

Tennyson in his exquisite poem, dreams of a long procession of lovely women of ages past. This is all very well, but the laureate would have done the world a greater service if he had only told the women of the present how they could improve their health and enhance their charms. This he might easily have done by recommending the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Health is the best friend of beauty, and the innumerable ills to which women are peculiarly subject, its worst enemies. Long experience has proven that the health of womankind and the "Favorite Prescription" walk hand in hand, and are inseparable. It is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle-wrapper, and faithfully carried out for many years.

The best way to get more talents is to improve the talents we have.—Bickersteth.

For The Nervous
The Debilitated
The Aged.

Medical and scientific skill has at last solved the problem of the long needed medicine for the nervous, debilitated, and the aged, by combining the best nerve tonics, Celery and Coca, with other effective remedies, which, acting gently but efficiently on the kidneys, liver and bowels, remove disease, restore strength and renew vitality. This medicine is

Paine's Celery Compound

It fills a place heretofore unoccupied, and marks a new era in the treatment of nervous troubles. Overwork, anxiety, disease, lay the foundation of nervous prostration and weakness, and experience has shown that the usual remedies do not mend the strain and paralysis of the nervous system.

A MAN OF A THOUSAND.
A Consumptive Cured.

When death was hourly expected, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting with the many herbs of Culeutta, he accidentally made a preparation which cured his only child of CONSUMPTION. His child is now in this country, and enjoying the best of health. He has proved to the world that CONSUMPTION can be positively and permanently cured. The Doctor now gives this recipe free, only asking two 2-cent stamps to pay expenses. This Herb also cures Night Sweats, Nausea at the Stomach, and will break up a fresh Cold in twenty-four hours. NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

An epidemic of typhoid fever has broken out in Adrian, Mich., quite suddenly in the State Industrial Home for Girls, and thirteen or fourteen cases were reported February 9. The cases so far are comparatively mild.

Two men were digging up some dynamite which had been buried to protect it until wanted to use in a gas well near Bellevue, Ohio, February 10, when one of them struck the explosive material with his pick. The explosion instantly killed the two men.

A Bismarck (D. T.) special says: The physicians of Mandan are unable to check the spread of small-pox in that village, the first case of which was found two weeks ago. It is said that several new cases have broken out, and that people are already moving out of the infected district.

Seven negroes and six whites, convicted of petit larcenies, were whipped with from five to ten lashes each, at Newcastle, Delaware, on the eleventh instant.

Mr. B. F. Jones, chairman of the National Republican Committee, has received a letter from Mr. Blaine, declining to allow his name to be presented to the National Republican Convention as a candidate for the presidential nomination.

William Kelly, inventor of the pneumatic steel process known as Bessemer, died in Louisville, February 11, aged seventy-eight years.

Messrs. Moody and Sankey closed their work in Louisville, Ky., last week. Long before the hours announced for the beginning of the services, the immense auditorium of the Tabernacle was crowded, and thousands were turned away unable to gain admission.

A collection was taken up for the benefit of the mission in Louisville conducted by Steve Holcombe, the reformed gambler, and between $3000 and $4000 was raised.

The Semmes Monumental Committee in Mobile, Ala., has decided to secure the services of Alexander Doyle, the noted sculptor, of New York, to construct the bronze statue for the monument of the late Admiral Semmes.

The speech of Dr. McGlynn in New York City, last week, breaking away entirely from Henry George and declaring that he no longer wanted him as presidential candidate, has caused great excitement in the ranks of the United Labor party, and from the opinions expressed it is not improbable that a split will take place in the party.

At the Washington Artillery Hall, this city, on February 14, the veteran cavalrymen of the C. S. A. effected a permanent organization. Many distinguished veterans were present and made patriotic addresses.

A fire in St. Paul, Minn., on the thirteenth instant, caused a loss of $300,000.

The President expects to leave Washington next Tuesday for a short visit to Florida. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Cleveland and the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Whitney and Col. and Mrs. Lamont.

FOREIGN.

The Pope has requested Cardinal Simeoni to advise the Irish bishops to preach to the people of Ireland respect for the law, and to maintain a calm and prudent line of conduct.

The military bill was read the third time in the Reichstag and was passed en bloc.

Parliament was opened on Febuary 9. Everything was quiet. The Queen's speech opening the session was read by royal commission.

Dr. Braunnn successfully performed the operation of tracheotomy on the Crown Prince on the ninth instant. His condition rendered the operation necessary. The patient is progressing well.

In the Spanish Chamber of Deputies Premier Sagasta said the government was satisfied with the results of their policy. Internal peace was assured, and in regard to the situation abroad the government desired to remain neutral. While assuming respect for Spain and the colonies the government would continue the liberal programme.

The progress of the work on the structures for the coming International exposition in Paris gives assurance that the exhibition will be ready for opening May 5, 1889.

The British War Office has received an order directing that a statement be prepared at each military centre detailing the facilities for summoning the reserves and strengthening the battalions from the depots within forty-eight hours in the event of mobilization of the army being necessary. The order is a precautionary step to enable a new mobilization.

Various valuable offerings which were presented to the Pope as jubilee offerings, and which were on exhibition, have been stolen from the Vatican. Among the stolen articles was a chalice valued at £2,000, some gold snuff-boxes and slippers.

Mr. T. D. Sullivan, the Irish member of Parliament, who was recently imprisoned, on his arrival in London, received an ovation from 10,000 persons who had gathered at Euston square station to welcome him.

It is stated that Sir Michael Hicks-Beach will soon re-enter the British Cabinet.

Advices from Massowah say a railway has been completed to Dogali and regular trains are running over it. The Italian military depot has been transferred to Dogali, and Gen. Genes' brigade with artillery has taken up a position two kilometres west of Dogali.

In the Chamber of Deputies, February 13, M. Etienne, Under Secretary for the Colonies, stated that the actual expenses for the Indo-China account would not exceed 70,000,000 francs. By the simplified machinery of government, the number of troops could be reduced 10,000 men.

WANTED.—Agents for the marvelous work, "Fifty Years in the Church of Rome." Address I. Q. REYNOLDS, 203 Lafayette street, New Orleans.

Another Extraordinary Offer.

After this date we will include in our club arrangement the New York Weekly World, the price of which, including all postage, will be three dollars. This amount will entitle the subscriber to one copy of the "World's History of the United States," post paid.

This history is on a new plan. It is the record of the events of our history in the order in which they happened. There are no moralizings, no opinions put forth, no criticisms offered in regard to anything. It is not a political record merely, but one of all sorts of facts that have contributed to make our history. Discoveries, inventions, financial and literary matters, are all noted. One merit of the work is, that it can not grow old. The date of an event, when once ascertained, is fixed for all time. The book has twenty-four very good illustrations. We regard it as a valuable book for every student.

Old and new subscribers are entitled to the premium. Subscribers who have already paid will receive the History and the Weekly World one year by sending one dollar. Cash to accompany all orders.

KIDNEY and bladder troubles produce a feeling of utter despondency. A genial stimulant and tonic and an unfailing remedy for all such troubles, may be found in Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Balm.

Southern Cultivator and Christian Advocate.

By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer to new subscribers the Southern Cultivator and Dixie Farmer, combined with the ADVOCATE, for $2 50 for the two publications for one year. Commencing with this date, the price to old subscribers will remain the same as heretofore—$2 75—with only twenty-five cents extra to either of the above amounts for "Dickson's System of Farming." These rates are postage prepaid. All orders must be accompanied by cash in full; no allowance for commission to agents, and both papers must be ordered at same time. We will, however, fill orders to subscribers who failed to take advantage of the club rate when they last renewed for $1 for the Cultivator for one year.

Analyzing the Baking Powders.

Under the direction of the New York State Board of Health, eighty-four different kinds of baking powders, embracing all the brands that could be found for sale in the State, were submitted to examination and analysis by Prof. C. F. CHANDLER, a member of the State Board and President of the New York City Board of Health, assisted by Prof. EDWARD G. LOVE, the well-known United States Government chemist.

The official report shows that a large number of the powders examined were found to contain alum or lime; many of them to such an extent as to render them seriously objectionable for use in the preparation of human food.

Alum was found in twenty-nine samples. This drug is employed in baking powders to cheapen their cost. The presence of lime is attributed to the impure cream of tartar of commerce used in their manufacture. Such cream of tartar was also analyzed and found to contain lime and other impurities, in some samples to the extent of 93 per cent of their entire weight.

All the baking powders of the market, with the single exception of "Royal" (not including the alum and phosphate powders, which were long since discarded as unsafe or inefficient by prudent housekeepers), are made from the impure cream of tartar of commerce, and consequently contain lime to a corresponding extent.

The only baking powder yet found by chemical analysis to be entirely free from lime and absolutely pure is the "Royal." This perfect purity results from the exclusive use of cream of tartar specially refined and prepared by patent processes, which totally remove the tartrate of lime and other impurities. The cost of this chemically pure cream of tartar is much greater than any other, and it is used in no baking powder but the "Royal."

Prof. LOVE, who made the analyses of baking powders for the New York State Board of Health, as well as for the Government, says of the purity and wholesomeness of "Royal":

"I have tested a package of 'Royal Baking Powder' which I purchased in the open market, and find it composed of pure and wholesome ingredients. It is a cream of tartar powder of a high degree of merit, and does not contain either alum or phosphates or any injurious substances.

"E. G. LOVE, PH.D."

CONSCIENCE AND FUTURE JUDGMENT.

BY CHARLES W. STUBBS.

I sat alone with my conscience,
In a place where time had ceased,
And we talked of our former living
In the land where the years increased.

And I felt I should have to answer
The question it put to me,
And to face the answer and question
Throughout an eternity.

The ghosts of forgotten actions
Came floating before my sight,
And things which I thought were dead things
Were alive with a terrible might.

And the vision of all my past life
Was an awful thing to face—
Alone with my conscience sitting
In that solemnly silent place.

And I thought of a far-away warning,
Of a sorrow that was to be mine,
In a land that then was the future,
But now was the present time.

And I thought of my former thinking,
Of the judgment day to be;
But sitting alone with my conscience
Seemed judgment enough for me.

And I wondered if there was a future
To this land beyond the grave;
But no one gave me an answer,
And no one came to save.

Then I felt that the future was present,
And the present would never go by,
For it was but the thought of my past life
Grown into eternity.

Then I woke from my timely dreaming,
And the vision passed away,
And I knew the far-away warning
Was a warning of yesterday.

And I pray that I may not forget it
In this land before the grave,
That I may not cry in the future,
And no one come to save.

And so I had learned a lesson
Which I ought to have known before,
And which, though I learned it dreaming,
I hope to forget no more.

So I sit alone with my conscience,
In the place where the years increase,
And I try to remember the future
In the land where time will cease.

And I know of the future judgment,
How dreadful so e'er it be,
That to sit alone with my conscience
Will be judgment enough for me.

—London Spectator.

An Introduction to the Pope.

BY REV. W. H. HUNTLEY.

Perhaps an experience of the writer at Rome some years ago may not prove uninteresting. The memory is brightened by the recent stir in Roman circles, in which your hands have slightly, but emphatically dipped.

Pius IX. was Pope; the time, a year before his jubilee. This remarkably profitable celebration called jubilee, introduced in 1300 by Boniface VIII., should have accomplished more than it did, it seems. It sent a tide of treasure into the Vatican, supposably sufficient for all ordinary needs. But, then, extraordinary needs may have arisen, calling for proportionate outlay. It should, at least, have prevented the poor vicar of the Lord from vending indulgences from sin, past and future, which Luther made such a disturbance over.

Pius was more liberal than many Popes, not merely in his preservation and repair of many of the Roman relics which he found crumbling under the touch of time and from vandal hands. Many monuments to this virtue in him are now to be seen, and for future years. But I have the idea that he was less disposed than others of his office to impress upon Romanists the dogma of infallibility.

An incident in what is further said bears that way. No great difficulty, though some delay, attaches to the attendance upon a papal reception. We made application in due form to proper authority, and received tickets of admission. A room in the Vatican, called the Pope's Reception Room, is entered at each end. It is probably sixty to eighty feet in length, by twenty wide. Toward one end a door admits those ambitious to see His Holiness. At the far end a pair of rich curtains screen beyond, until drawn apart by avant couriers, when the Pope enters. In dress suits, our ladies veiled in black laces and silk, we were escorted solemnly along solemn corridors, and emptied into this chamber. There were fifty or more besides our party, to complete the reception, and in chairs arranged along the sides of the room we sat, making ourselves as comfortable as we could. The sight rested upon walls plainly, but elegantly frescoed, with ceiling high and matching in elegance. But far greater interest was found in regarding our neighbors. Opportunity to do this we had, as His Holiness kept us waiting, or we went too early. A number of nations had representatives there, features plainly marking nationality. Spanish and Italian predominated. The solid Germans, excitable French and inquisitive Americans were there in considerable numbers. Interest reflected upon all features, of different character. Ours was simple, while compound summed it up in others. The ladies' hands were filled with statuettes of St. Peter, as he sits in iron below, under the vast dome of the cathedral. And from their wrists and fingers, and across their bosoms from round the throats, hung rosaries in quantities. These were to be kept or sent, as by our mother, to Catholic friends, to be devoutly treasured with such extra blessings as the Pope's presence might endow them. One lady, with a face worn with trouble, and under evident excitement, sat, or knelt rather, a few chairs down from where we sat. She awaited, with ill-concealed impatience, the drawing of the crimson curtains at the Vatican end of the room.

At length these were parted, each one held back by servants, and, preceded by an interpreter, Pope Pius IX. entered the apartment. At once, from respect and custom, upon our knees went all the visitors. And in this position did we stay until those curtains closed behind the Pope. It seemed natural then to take the position. I am not sure it would seem otherwise now. At any rate, we were expected or required to kneel, and we knelt. Besides, there were soft carpets for the knees.

The language used by the Pope, in the few words he spoke, was French. The interpreter asked each one his country, and informed the pontiff. Then, perhaps, a word or two from the latter as he slowly advanced. He neared us, and I looked with interest upon his face. An old, but happy-looking old man. Face seamed with wrinkles that constant smiles had set there. Benevolent eyes, soft voice, a little red cap on the head. I have never seen a more interesting, kindly face. A scarlet robe, belted about the full waist, and red slippers. Such was his appearance, in few words. Not a presence to inspire profoundest reverence, but one to invite confidence; such impression remains in recalling his features.

Stopping before me, a healthy looking youngster kneeling then, the question of my native whereabouts was raised as usual by the interpreter. I said I lived in America. The Pope's face brightened visibly, and, without waiting to ask if I spoke French, he asked from what portion of America I came. I replied; when, placing a kindly hand upon my shoulder, he affectionately spoke for, perhaps, a half-minute. The honor of placing his hand upon me was not bestowed again. Perhaps I should have felt distinguishedly honored. Perhaps I did; I think I did. To others, moving on, the Pope spoke occasionally. But at no time did he show such pleasure and interest as to us Americans. We supposed it was because he looked to America as to the next stronghold of Romanism. Perhaps this was why he was so kind to me, and why he blessed me so benignly, his hand on my shoulder.

On reaching the excited woman before mentioned, he found a difficulty. She was now in a terrible excitement, and, with streaming eyes and extended hands, told him some harrowing tale. Then she held up a rosary, which she earnestly besought him to touch to the one that lay on his breast. He laughingly pooh-poohed, and gently tried to remove the eager hand and move on. But her distress increased, as also her pertinacity. She fell at his feet, and wet his scarlet slippers with tears. And her trembling hands held tight the hem of his robe. He could not move; she would not be shaken from her purpose and prayer. The Pope several times spoke in deprecating tones, to no purpose. And, finally, to humor her, he took the relic she held up to him, lightly laid it against his rosary, and handed it back to as radiantly different a woman as there was in all Italy, I reckon. She was fairly ablaze and lovely with delight. We supposed this precious thing she had obtained was meant for some unlucky son or husband who had got into trouble, and was banished or imprisoned, or in some other close place. Her joy was full, but the Pope was evidently disinclined to encourage her in her violent worship.

So, down one side and up the other, halting a little while before each kneeling visitor, Pius IX. finally reached the heavy divided curtains, ready held for his exit. Before disappearing forever from our view (we never saw him again), he faced his audience and, with a kind smile, spoke a few kindly words. I do not assume to present the mingled feelings in the breasts of those whose eyes regarded the old man with profound interest as long as he could be seen. Ending his remarks with a courteous wave of a soft, jeweled hand, he disappeared behind the falling curtains. And, with a breath of mixed feelings, his audience melted away, treading, under pilotage, a few of the many corridors of the Vatican, which contains 11,000 rooms, and soberly going to our separate abodes. This incident may not be thought worthy of publication, but it has left the impression, graven deep, in memory, and may be accepted simply as an incident—no more. I trust the old man has found his faith no fable, and is at home. In pace requiescat.

Good Resolutions—No. 2.

BY W. H. ANDERSON, D. D.

Good resolutions are of but momentary existence and value unless they crystallize into effort for immediate action. Regrets give their dark shades to the irrecoverable past, while hope of the future throws gladness around the present. A sense of personal responsibility associates with the idea of atonement for past neglect and present misfortune or degradation. An awakened conscience makes the mind active in estimates of resources and in the utilization of every available aid. Still the best resolutions formed under the most favorable circumstances are as liable to be broken as the beautiful, frail China vase, by some rude, unexpected blow. In spite of heart sincerity and honest purpose, often all that is left is a mass of beautiful fragments.

Human life may, generally, be divided into two great classes of repeated, frequent actions—the formation of good resolutions and regret over broken vows, penitence for repetition of wrong and its recalled punishment at the bar of reason and conscience. How many bright and beautiful a sunrise is lost in clouded sky!

Too great self-reliance is the cause of many a moral wreck. Of this the Apostle Peter was a notable example. No one can doubt Simon's honest, honorable intention when, in the gush of his untried love and his holy pride of association, he said: "Though all men forsake thee, yet will not I." Yet in how short a time did he quail before the words of a maiden, and his apostasy was announced by the crowing of the cock, and the bitter tears attendant on his sudden awaking to his fearful denial of his Lord! He denies with oaths even an acquaintance with Jesus of Nazareth. "God helping me," should be the frame in which every good resolution should be placed and kept. Tender exotics transplanted in a new soil require marked attention even to keep them alive. Intense moral heroism is necessary to lift one's self out of the ruts of habit and appetite—the strongholds of error and of sin. Immediate and persistent effort can alone, under the blessing of God, successfully perform the work of reform. Never did vestal virgin in classic mythological time watch the sacred fire with greater pious vigilance than must good resolutions, especially in their infancy and childhood, be guarded from contact with previous evil associates or associations. To throw off the anaconda's coil of long-indulged evil habits requires more than the strength of human purpose and effort. Certain, ultimate, perfect triumph is only secured and assured by the aid of divine grace. The first temptation to break good resolutions must be resisted with every energy. The victory or the defeat is usually determined in the seductions immediately consequent on the formation of purposes of amendment.

In addition to the employment of mind and body in some honest pursuit, association with the good and pure is a prime necessity to break up former courses of conduct. Companionship and sympathy are great allies for those endeavoring to throw off the slavish yoke of evil actions. Idleness affords all the time and opportunity Satan desires to secure mastery over the purest purposes for a better—a pious life. Those who rely on their own strength of will to resist temptation and to persist "in well-doing," build their houses in the sand, and when the winds blow and the floods come, there is a great wreck. Frail human nature is only strong and safe when the everlasting arms environ it. The pride of intellect not only ruined lovely Eden, and banished from it the original pure occupants, but that sad history has been repeating itself in every age, and will continue to do so until "the time of the restitution of all things."

These general principles connected with "good resolutions" are worthy of especial attention by the young convert. In the joy of his "first love," as it keeps time with the music of salvation, the quickstep of heavenly promise, how full the soul is of altars of consecration, and each one smokes with precious offering to God! Indeed, the entire being seems a grand cathedral full of melody and incense—praise and prayer to the Holy Trinity. Every ambition and joy, purpose and hope of this life and another life, with every pulse-beat of existence, are a sacrament, a doxology. How readily do good resolutions of fidelity till death swell up in the soul! "Their name is legion"—of gratitude and love. As God looked down from heaven on the new-made earth in its beauty, and pronounced it "good," so the eye of Christ kindles with joy over "the new creation," the grander creation of a soul "in the likeness and image of God." The newly washed in the blood of Christ is the wonder of angels, the joy of earth, the hope of heaven. Here is a truly consecrated soul. How often, however, after the heart has become accustomed to its new, gracious condition, and the glow of emotion begins to lessen, and the supports and excitements of the revival scenes and occasions have, for the time, been laid aside, does Satan select his well-adapted occasion to commence his fearful effort to lead the soul back from God? Doubts are created, evils magnified, fears arise, a veil of unbelief comes over divine promises. Old habits struggle out of their graves, though bound in their grave-clothes. The novelty of Christian duties begin to embarrass, friction is felt. Old appetites find, at least, a partial resurrection, and old associates endeavor to throw obstacles in the way of piety. A sigh comes up from the camp for "the leeks and onions" of old Egypt. Even the manna may become distasteful.

The close, fiery breath of the tempter will begin to scorch the frail, lovely flowers of young faith. Good resolutions will be put to the severest test. The arrows of the tempter will try every joint in the newly put-on Christian armor. Then there must be no delay in pious effort. Parley with the enemy is certain defeat. The soul must throw itself firmly and abidingly under the protection of God's Word and Spirit. The frightened, feeble child must find security in the strong, loving arms of its father. The house and family of God is the true home of the pious.

The habit of being consistently, regularly, constantly pious, from religious principle alone, is acquired slowly, progressively, in the school of Jesus. Stable religious character, like the pyramids, requires years of toil in construction. A sunflower, in its gaudy hues, is grown in a single season. The live oak requires divine care through many long years to reach its maturity.

My Birthday.

BY REV. H. J. HARRIS.

The sixty-sixth anniversary of my humble birth came on Wednesday, February 1. It found me not where I desired to be, in one sense. I am not where I was called to be almost from the time I was converted, October 22, 1838. Forty-eight years ago I was admitted on trial as a traveling preacher in the Mississippi Conference. I thank God there was never, upon the record of the Conference, a complaint against me; but, with all my unworthiness, my "character passed," and I was honored among my brethren. Notwithstanding I am now a "local preacher," having to combat with "the world, the flesh, and the devil," amid scenes and surroundings that itinerant life, begun before I attained my majority, unfits me for. I am compelled now, at nearly threescore and ten, literally, to make my "bread by the sweat of my face." Nevertheless, I have sweet moments of peace and joy unutterable. I have much to be thankful for, while I have much to repent of.

The late anniversary of my birth overtook me almost by surprise, and found my family of ten children all gone but one. Dear wife still lingers with me, after years of toil and sacrifice that preachers' wives of this day know nothing of. God forbid they ever should know. Three of our children are in heaven, I have no doubt. The others that live are scattered from Texas to Florida; some in Mississippi, and some in Louisiana. Only one, as I have said, the youngest—our baby girl, still nestles near our bosoms, and, like a ray of sunshine, gladdens our hearts amid the gloom that sometimes gathers over us as we feel the truthfulness and make the application of that song:

"Not one foot of land do I possess,
Nor cottage in this wilderness,
A poor, way-faring man."

There was no silver service presentation, no "pounding of the preacher" on my birthday anniversary; but there was heaven-born love. After the morning's toil, returning home, on entering our humble dining-room, I found a "birthday dinner" spread for "papa," without the slightest hint before. There was in front of me a beautiful cake, handsomely trimmed and ornamented by tender, loving hands. The following touching tribute of filial tenderness was pinned to the sweet bouquet that adorned the cake:

"PAPA'S BIRTHDAY."

(With your baby's love.)

More than half a century's passed away,
And my "papa" is sixty-six to-day:
He is bending low 'neath the weight of years,
Toil and sacrifice, labor and tears.
His hair is glistening, silver white;
His step is no longer buoyant and light;
But I love him each day more, we think,
For we know that he is nearing the brink
Of the river that's deep, dark, and wide;
His boat must soon be out on its tide.
How gladly we'd smoothe the wrinkles of care,
And steal the bright silver threads from his hair,
Oh! Father, look down from heaven's fair clime,
And stay, for awhile, the footsteps of time.
Help us to gladden his life here below,
As the flood-tide of years shall over him flow.

DAISY.

'Twas like an angel's song to me. I set out upon the journey of another year, trusting in God and comforted with the assurance that I have the "prayers of those I love." I hope many a dear brother has enjoyed as delightful an anniversary as mine, and that all who love Jesus will hereafter in heaven rejoice that they were born to be saved by his most precious blood.

HATTIESBURG, Miss., Feb. 10, 1888.

How many laymen can anyone of our readers name who are actually devoting themselves to God's service as many of the ministry are. We venture the assertion that there are few charges in the Methodist Episcopal Church where any layman can be found who gives as large a proportion of his income to the service of the church or charity as the pastor does. Why is this? Not probably because the minister is, in common term, a better Christian, but he better understands and cordially accepts the Bible doctrine of Christian stewardship. If the laity would follow the example of the ministry in the matter of giving, there would be little or no complaint in regard to the collections. But they will never do so until the subject is pressed on the conscience and they are made to feel that it is a duty which they owe to God, not to the church—that is, systematic and proportionate giving is not a church order or regulation. The church and its agencies may become, in large measure, the almoner of the bounty of its members, but this does not constitute the obligation to give. God has constituted the stewardship and holds us responsible to him, not to the church.—Central Christian Advocate.

A WORD TO THE RICH.—"What shall I say of the rich?" observed Canon Farrar in his hospital sermon at the Abbey, "I say that there are scores of men in London who could save our hospitals from anxiety almost without feeling it. Look at the very recent art sales—£2,000 for one dessert service, £1,200 for two flower pots, £3,000 for a chimney ornament, £10,000 for two rose-colored vases, £300 for a single lady's dress, £1,000 for the flowers of a single ball. I do not criticise this expenditure. I only say that if there be in London such a Pactolus of wealth for these gew-gaws of silk and clay, can there be, by comparison, only a drop or two to heal the bodies, to ameliorate the souls of men? Why should the runnel of charity dribble on as it does while the full tide of luxury is still at flood?"

SOMEWHERE.

BY H. T. R.

Dear the hour to sorrow may refrain.
Bethink thee skies e'en now are somewhere bright!
On others, the green leaves are dancing light.
And lovers meet where blossom in the lane
Flowers, the sky-children of the sun and rain.
And somewhere parents in their youthful might Scorning the smooth path, leap the dizzy height.
And mountain summits glisten pure of stain.
Somewhere for ghost-brows Fame twines her wreath:
Somewhere to noble purpose souls are won
By holy living or heroic death.
Brave hearts endure, nor quail at Fortune's frown:
And somewhere there is rest for all who breathe.
Somewhere a land where sorrow is unknown.

Mississippi Conference Brotherhood.

MR. EDITOR: At a meeting of the Mississippi Conference Brotherhood, held in Jackson, Miss., December 17, 1887, the following resolution was adopted, viz:

Resolved, That the secretary is hereby requested to furnish the editor of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE a copy of the Constitution and By-Laws of this Brotherhood, and ask that he publish the same in the ADVOCATE.

In compliance with the above resolution, I enclose you a copy. It will be a matter of interest to all your readers, and give information to any who may wish to know anything of the principles upon which the order is established. In this connection, please allow me space for a few statements: The charter incorporating our Brotherhood was granted February 23, 1884. We have at present eighty members, nine of whom are honorary. Suspended members may be reinstated by paying up the assessment upon which they were suspended, and those that have accrued during the past twelve months. Nine members have died since our organization. We have paid to the families of these nine brethren nearly $3,000. Who can estimate the relief thus given to dependent widows and orphans! And that, too, at a time when most needed. Honorary members are expected to pay only one dollar on each assessment, but may pay more if they choose.

I would urge all delinquents to come up promptly with their assessments and be reinstated. Send money to Rev. I. W. Cooper, treasurer, at Edwards, Miss. Rev. W. B. Lewis, president of the Brotherhood, has been requested to prepare and publish a pamphlet setting forth the object of the order. It will be ready for gratuitous distribution at an early date.

Yours fraternally,

B. F. JONES.

WOODVILLE, MISS., Feb. 6, 1888.

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS OF THE BROTHERHOOD OF TRAVELING PREACHERS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

CONSTITUTION.

"Article 1. This organization shall be known as the 'Brotherhood of Traveling Preachers of the Mississippi Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.'

"Art. 2. Every effective traveling preacher of said Mississippi Conference, in the regular work, shall be eligible to membership, provided that after January 1, 1885, no one shall be eligible to membership who have passed the age of fifty years.

"Art. 3. The membership of this Brotherhood shall not extend beyond the limits of said Mississippi Conference, except in case of the transfer of a member to another Conference, when said member, so transferred, may continue his membership by complying with the Constitution and By-Laws of said Brotherhood.

"Art. 4. Any person may become an honorary member of the Brotherhood with all its privileges and obligations, except to be a claimant on the mortuary fund.

"Art. 5. The officers of said Brotherhood shall consist of a president, a vice-president, a secretary, who shall also act as treasurer, and such officers as may be from time to time appointed.

"Art. 6. It shall further be the duty of the secretary and treasurer to notify each member of the Brotherhood of the death of any brother through our Conference organ and by postal card; to keep a correct roll of the members of the Brotherhood and their beneficiaries; to notify each member who fails to pay his dues within sixty days, of his suspension; to receive all dues from each member, and, immediately on receipt of dues, to forward a receipt to each member therefor by postal card; to keep a correct account of all moneys, remitting to beneficiaries so soon as he shall receive dues to the amount of one hundred dollars—thus remitting until full amount has been paid to beneficiary; to keep on file receipts of beneficiaries; to make a full exhibit at each annual meeting of all moneys received and remitted since last annual meeting, and shall execute a good and sufficient bond to be approved by the president.

"Art. 7. The officers of said Brotherhood shall be elected quadrennially at the time and place of the meeting of this Annual Conference by receiving a plurality of the votes cast by those present, and shall serve without compensation, provided they shall be reinbursed for all moneys expended in the faithful compliance of duty by an assessment of each member.

"Art. 8. It shall be the duty of each, upon official notification of the death of a brother, to remit to the treasurer by express, postollice money order or registered letter the sum of five dollars; and if any member shall fail to pay said mortuary dues within sixty days after official notice of the death of any brother, he shall be deprived, by suspension, of all the benefits of the Brotherhood; and if such dues shall not have been paid within four months, such delinquency shall work a forfeiture of membership. Immediately after the death of any member the beneficiary shall give notice to the secretary of said death.

"Art. 9. No part of the foregoing Constitution shall be changed or amended except by a majority vote of the beneficiary members of the Brotherhood."

BY-LAWS.

"Section 1. The officers of the Brotherhood shall be a president, vice-president, a secretary and treasurer. The last-named two offices may be held by one and the same person, unless the Brotherhood, by a majority vote of the members present at a regular meeting, after due notice, shall order otherwise.

"Sec. 2. The president shall preside at all times when present. In his absence, the vice-president shall preside, and in the absence of both, the Brotherhood shall, by the vote of a majority of the members present, elect a president pro tem.

"Sec. 3. The officers of the Brotherhood shall be elected quadrennially, by ballot, and hold their offices for four years, and until their successors are duly elected and qualified.

"Sec. 4. The duties of these officers shall be such as usually pertain to such officers in similar organizations, and, in addition thereto, the secretary and treasurer shall record, in a book provided for this purpose, a complete roll of all members of the Brotherhood, stating whether they be active or honorary members, whether or not they have paid their annual dues and all mortuary dues, and whether they have complied in all respects with the Constitution and By-Laws. He shall immediately, upon receiving information of the death of a member of the Brotherhood, notify each member through the mail and the columns of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE of such death, and call upon him for the mortuary fee of five dollars, as provided for in the Constitution. He shall keep a true and faithful account of all money received and disbursed by him. He shall, whenever the same is furnished him by any member, make a record of the name or names of the beneficiary or beneficiaries to whom the mortuary fee shall be payable at the death of such member. Furthermore, he shall make full reports of all his acts in the premises at each regular meeting of the Brotherhood, and at such other times as the Executive Committee, hereinafter provided for, shall require or demand of him.

"Sec. 5. The regular meetings of the Brotherhood shall be held at the place of meeting of the Mississippi Conference, on such day and at such hour as the president may designate, by giving due notice by proclamation in the Conference, as other notices are given; and the members of the Brotherhood present, after such notice is given, shall constitute a quorum to transact business.

"Sec. 6. There shall be an Executive Committee of five members appointed by the president within thirty days after each annual meeting of the Brotherhood, having reference to their contiguity and facilities for communication, whose duty it shall be to fill any vacancy that may occur in the office of secretary and treasurer especially, and in the event of the death of both president and vice-president said committee shall have power to elect one of their own number president ad interim. Said committee shall hold their office for one year, and until their successors shall have been appointed. They shall at all times have access to the books of the secretary and treasurer, and shall have power of removal from office for sufficient cause. All matters of complaint shall be referred to them, and said committee shall have power in the interim of the regular meetings of the Brotherhood to advise, direct and control the affairs of the Brotherhood within the restrictions of the Constitution.

"Sec. 7. Each and every member shall, within sixty days after his admission, notify the secretary of the beneficiary or beneficiaries to whom the mortuary assessment shall be payable at his death, subject to be changed at the pleasure of the member, provided that the beneficiary be either a wife, or children, or dependent relative.

"Sec. 8. Each and every person seeking admission into the Brotherhood shall have explained to him fully the terms and conditions of membership, and every beneficiary member shall take upon himself this pledge: 'I, ——, do hereby promise to comply with the Constitution and Laws of the Brotherhood of Traveling Methodist Preachers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, paying my annual dues and all mortuary assessments whenever notified and requested so to do, and to use all diligence in building up and promoting the interests of the Brotherhood; and in default hereof I agree to forfeit all my rights and privileges under said Constitution and Laws.'

"Sec. 9. The presentation of this pledge to the secretary, duly signed and accompanied by the admission fee of ten cents, at any time, shall entitle the applicant to be enrolled as a member, provided in other respects he is eligible under the Constitution.

"Sec. 10. Any member suspended for the non-payment of dues or mortuary fees may be reinstated at any time by paying to the treasurer the dues and assessments upon which he was suspended, together with those that have accrued during the past twelve months, and which he has failed to pay.

"Sec. 11. These By-Laws, or any of them, may be altered or amended by a majority vote of the members present at any regular meeting of the Brotherhood."

B. F. JONES,
Assistant Secretary.

Brookhaven District, Mississippi Conference.

To Pastors and People—

DEAR BRETHREN: There are some matters about which I would like to talk to each of you face to face, at the beginning of the new year. But, as this is impossible, you will please accept this family talk in a public way.

The total accession to the church in the district the past year was about 900. This gives us a net gain of 514, and a total membership of 5,481. Then, if we add to these all the preachers, traveling and local, we have a total of 5,542. How many souls shall we pray and work for this year? Is it too much to say 1,000? This would be less than one for every five workers. And can we not find more than this number in the homes of those now in the church? Let us join prayer to prayer, and effort to effort, to bring this number to Christ.

Then there is much work, self-denial and cross-bearing to be experienced, if all those we now have are established in the faith. There should not be a congregation among us without a prayer and a class meeting. These are helps to Christian life not found in any other means of grace. And if they are wanting in your community, will you not be one to resolve and work to execute your resolution, that both shall be established and perpetuated? It only needs concerted effort to succeed, and the success will more than compensate you for the effort. And, above all things, let me warn you of the danger, to yourself and to others, of the disorderly walk of a Christian. Whatever may be the pretended justification, you can not forget that you deal with the destiny of immortal souls. As a child of God, let this reflection weigh heavily upon your heart, while the head debates the rightconsness of any act.

HOUSES OF WORSHIP.

I congratulate you on the improvements you have made in this regard the past year. Old houses have been remodeled and refitted, and, in some instances, replaced by others of modern style at great cost. Yet, in some instances, they are comfortless, cheerless, and unkept. I beg of you to correct this evil. It will cost you something to repair or rebuild them; but it is an investment for you and yours that will be kept when all else has failed.

PARSONAGES.

Most of the charges in the district are now supplied with comfortable homes for the preacher. But there are a few that are not. And none but those who have experienced it know what a trial it is for a pastor to go to a work without a home for his family. Often weeks are spent in an effort to find one, and, when secured, it is comfortless and out of the way, and his are denied the privileges he is sent to give you and yours—the preached gospel. Such are forced to labor under the suppressed feeling that, while he accepts his appointment as from the Lord, he is not welcome. "I was a stranger, and ye took me not in. Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me," applies here.

One elect sister said to her pastor after morning prayer: "I was so troubled at the thought of our preacher and his family being homeless, I didn't sleep any last night; and now go and get your family and come to my house." God bless the good woman! Her name and that of her husband are known to all the brethren, and many of them will say, Amen! when the Lord shall say of them, "I was a stranger, and ye took me in." Brethren, I beseech you to bestir yourselves and make your preachers feel that they are welcome citizens of the kingdom among you.

SALARIES.

Last year you assessed for your pastors $7,723. Of this amount they reported at Conference $7,021 25. Since Conference your deficit has been reduced to less than $500. This may seem to you a small sum to divide among the fourteen men who served the district last year. But the conclusion is a mistake, for four of them reported their salaries overpaid, and one paid in full. So the remaining nine had to bear the burden of this loss. To you, as individuals and as churches, the little yet due the pastor may seem small; but not so with him, as he counts the deficit from several churches and as many scores of members. That which seems a little matter to you grows to be a heavy burden for him. I congratulate you that the assessments for the fifteen pastors now laboring among you will exceed $8,000. This indicates a healthy growth on your part, and faithfulness on the part of your pastors. See to it, my brethren, as individuals and as churches, that your pledge is fully redeemed. To do this you must not put off payment to the end of the year, but begin at once.

COLLECTIONS.

Last year we were assessed for foreign missions $1,005, and we paid $1,069 40. This year we are assessed $1,130. Last year we were assessed for domestic missions $235, and we paid $231. This year we are assessed $300. Last year we were assessed for Conference claimants $550, and we paid $544. This year we are assessed the same. Last year we were assessed for church extension $330, and we paid $246. This year we are assessed the same. Last year we were assessed for Bishops $168, and we paid $171 40. This year we are assessed the same. Our showing on education is very poor.

Thus you see our total assessment last year was $2,288, and we paid $2,261 80, leaving a total deficit of $26 20. Let us see to it, my brethren, that all these claims are met in full this year. They are the minimum obligation of the church in this district to these several causes; and with the assessment for education let us bring that we owe to our God without lack. Success at this point depends very largely upon the efforts and perseverance of the pastors. Begin at once, my brethren, and press all these claims until you have them in full.

THE ADVOCATE.

In conclusion, I wish to call attention to our Conference paper. You and your children need the weekly visits of the ADVOCATE next to that of your pastor. Two dollars is a small cost for what you are to receive. It will not only aid in the development for usefulness, but for heaven hereafter. I beg of you to make this annual investment in the present and future well-being of yourselves and yours. "The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you. Amen!"

JAS. M. WEEMS, P. E.

Church Finances—Other Matters.

MR. EDITOR: I am glad that Bro. Reed has given your readers the benefit of the excellent financial plan of the Jefferson Street Church, Natchez. It is the best system I have ever heard of, and our charges would all do well to adopt it. We used it partially in Jackson charge last year, and, as a result, $1,370 was easily raised for all purposes, as against $605 during the year previous. It is due the good people of Salem Church to state in this connection that they contributed about $160 towards this magnificent aggregate.

I wish to call attention to two facts which you failed to note in your report of our Conference. The first is that the next session of the Mississippi Conference will be held in Jackson, La. The committee have made a thorough canvass of the town, and have homes pledged for over 200 delegates. We are blest with a unanimous people, and the citizens of our town, famous for its hospitality, propose to entertain regardless of the distinction of creed. No pastor serves a more liberal or appreciative people. We are moving to repair our commodious house of worship ere the Conference convenes.

The second fact is the increase in our educational collection, being $601, as against $444 the year before. This indicates a healthy growth in this very important feature of our work. A president full of vim, enterprise and consecration, from the present prospect, could do a grand work at Centenary College for Methodism in the two States.

The district stewards met in Clinton, La., February 8. Bro. Ellis was delighted at the full attendance and the unanimous determination on the part of each to bring a full report from the respective charges next December.

Brethren of the district, it has been, I believe, over a quarter of a century since the Conference met within our bounds. Let us determine, therefore, by the grace of God, to signalize the event by making the Woodville the banner district of the Conference, by paying every dollar of every assessment. We can do it if we try. Then the Lord will open the windows of heaven and "pour you out a blessing, so that there will not be room enough to receive it."

MERIDIAN CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: I wrote a short piece in January, setting forth facts worthy of notice, but failed to mention the circuit for which the piece was intended. I see Sandersville has the credit of my services and of giving, during the month of January, when it should have been Meridian circuit; but the blame rests upon me as to the mistake. Mr. Editor, I hope the readers of our excellent paper will look over such mistakes when the writer is so overjoyed with such a good prospect before him. I reached home to-day after being gone for several days, talking and praying with my people, and found that some good brother had been here with his wagon, and left corn, molasses, fodder, meats of different kinds, for their preacher. I learn that our Baptist brethren were represented largely in the gift. I find every family that I have visited since I came on this work are anxious to talk on the subject of religion, and God blesses us to that great extent. We are enabled to weep with joy and praise his holy name.

Mr. Editor, I think visiting from house to house, and talking and praying with the people, as we pursue our journey, is the chord to touch to bring strangers to God. I have the promise of several subscribers for our paper, and those who are taking it have promised to renew. Pray for our success in the work. I often think of Bro. J. C. Brogan, who has laid down his arms and has crossed over the river, and is at rest among the saints of heaven. He will be followed by numbers of souls that were converted under his ministry. May God bless his afflicted family, and finally save them in heaven! My address is Enterprise, Miss.

L. J. JONES, P. C.

GREENVILLE, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: A good, strong, growing charge; people kind and liberal; all the interests of the church constantly cared for; spirituality of membership compare well with any of the best. The above speaks well for my worthy predecessor. We are in a gracious revival. Church revived; several professions; some accessions. Bros. J. W. Beville, J. W. Honnoll, W. W. Dorman and J. H. Shoemaker all doing work. Pray for us.

J. A. BOWEN.

GREENWOOD, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: My first quarterly meeting just over. Assessed for preacher's salary, $800. Paid a good per cent. the first quarter. Everybody in a good humor, presiding elder happy, and the Lord blessed us abundantly. Come up to the Winona District Conference at Greenwood.

T. W. LEWIS.

Help Asked.

MR. EDITOR: I write this note to see if anyone will help us to furnish our new church. We have only a few Methodists here; but the Lord has promised that if we are faithful, we shall be blessed. When we first came here, there was only one Methodist family living here; but since we came another Methodist family has moved in. And don't you think the Lord is blessing us? I hope all of the people that read this will give us something. Any sum will be thankfully received. Any sum from ten cents to five dollars. I am living with my grandfather, Rev. George Bancroft, and have been for eight years. He is the pastor of this church. Hoping some one will send us a little amount to aid us in furnishing our new church, I am,

Respectfully,

MAMIE HUNTER.

Send it to Rev. George Bancroft, Gallman, Miss.

A Correction Corrected.

MR. EDITOR: I have a word to say in reply to the card of Bro. D. M. Geddie, in reference to statistics of Belzoni circuit. He is right in correcting the errors, and it is also right that the public should know who made the errors. Bro. Geddie's report lies before me, and the printed minutes are an exact copy of that report. His report reads: "Expended on churches and parsonages, $1,200; paid presiding elder, $23." And these are the figures in the minutes. The mistakes are Bro. Geddie's, and not the printer's nor statistical secretary's.

Yours fraternally,

T. Y. RAMSEY, JR.

CORNELIA AND SUSANNAH WESLEY.—In the "Memoirs of Charles Reade," the novelist, we find this reference to the mother of the Wesleys: "The Gracchi, who were the moral politicians of republican Rome, the Wesleys, the moral religionists of monarchic England, both owed their superiority to formative influence of their mothers. And these phenomenal mothers were pre-eminently human creatures of flesh and blood, brain and force, as well as of sweetness and light. They were not nuns; they were not hysterical; nevertheless, they were much the reverse of commonplace, while their ambitions soared aloft, and were all the nobler because of being not for themselves, but for their offspring. They desired to see their sons both great and good—not great only, but great and good; not only good, but above their fellows in intellectual capacity. They have their reward. History speaks of no women in terms of such reverence. You must obliterate the records of the past before you can abrogate their fame; indeed, whatever Rome owed to the Gracchi she owed to the Spartan virtues of the woman who gave them birth; and our national debt to the Wesleys, the magnitude of which we hardly as yet can realize, may be carried back to the homely parson's wife, who trained them to be truthful and God-fearing, temperate and brave."

Above we have, as far as unencumbered and cold fingers tell the tale, the results of the week of prayer and self-denial. This I am ready to believe is even in money little more than half the true result—so many treasurers of Conference Boards have reported that they made in their reports no distinction between the self-denial fund and the regular collection for assessments—so many letters have come to this office from pastors, saying, "I have reported self-denial fund on assessment," that it must be true that half as much more was collected as a direct result of the week of self-denial. What has been added to the general collections from the spirit infused and information circulated must be large, though there is no means of reaching even an approximate estimate.

But better than all these is the fact that the principle acted upon is of the root and marrow of the gospel, and has as its primal source of protective power the promise, "My Word * * * shall not return unto me void." Out of seed-sowing like this we look forward in restful faith to harvests yet riper and fuller. No unhealthful excitement, no motive below love to him who gave himself for us has been appealed to. Every motive has been deeply spiritual, every method has been Methodistic and Christian; the Bible truth and missionary results, which were only "prospected" in this week's talks, recitations and sermons, are so rich in hidden wealth, so inviting to the humble, earnest Christian heart, that none who have realized their exhaustless character will hesitate to say, "Give us another such week."

This the Board determined to do, and has, after delay and consultation, fixed upon April 1–8.

Brethren, let us with one mind and heart begin to get ready for it. The Secretary will give tracts and programmes in abundance to all who need such aids in prosecuting the work of the week. Write to him for all you want. May we not invoke the voluntary aid of laymen to conduct the daily meetings at churches on circuits where the preacher can not be found? One of the benefits which we count as great, arising from the work of last year, is that Conferences have, as never before, met their assessments. Two fruits grow from this tree, both luscious. One, murmuring against assessments is changed to rejoicing in them; the other, a buoyant confidence that what has once been done can be easily done again. Payment in full once reported is an amazing tonic for the future.

We two days ago paid off our last eight per cent. note. Our debt, as shown by this month's report, is smaller than for years; what remains of it is at six per cent. By a united effort on the week of self-denial and prayer we can avoid going again into bank to obtain money at eight per cent. If the effort is not united and vigorous, the end of April will find us borrowers at the old rates. TREASURER.

Empty Pews.

BY REV. M. C. PETERS.

Thousands upon thousands of well-disposed, intelligent, warm-hearted men and women seldom enter the church, except possibly to attend a funeral or witness a wedding. How does it come about that this is so?

Now, one reason, as I understand this matter, so many pews are empty, is because of want of pulpit ability. I am not underrating the ministry. The most attentive and regular church-goers do not fall behind me in speaking freely of the dullness, the sameness, the inconsequence, the length of the sermon. A preacher of any but the highest powers who ventures to detain his hearers beyond half an hour, is regarded as a social criminal, and the prospect of an hour's sermon would keep even most of the "regulars" away. Short services and shorter sermons are insisted on by the taste of the day. The impatience of preaching demands serious attention. The clergy may well say: We have piped unto you, and ye have not danced; we have mourned to you, and ye have not wept.

The want of brains in a preacher is a capital defect, and no amount of moral and spiritual excellence will make a stupid man a successful preacher. It is not true that the apostles were ignorant fishermen. If, for instance, the author of the fourth gospel had been originally an ignorant fisherman, he was something very different when he penned his account of the life of Christ. He is learned in the subtleties of neo-Platonism; he knows the metaphysics of Alexandrism; and unless he wrote down things which he did not understand, we must confess that here we have advanced learning and high and general culture employed in the early propagation of Christian doctrine. Paul stands unequaled to-day as a rhetorician. If high culture and education were necessary in apostolic times to give effect to preaching, how much more necessary must they be now?

It is often said of a man: "He is a good pastor, but no preacher." God sent him to preach. Fifty pastoral visits during the week will not hold a thinking audience on Sunday. Many ministers have brains enough, but not brains enough to know how practically to use their brains.

When Edward Irving published four discourses under the title of "Ovations," he gave as the reason that the very word "sermon" was indicative of dullness. A sermon should be a thing of life and beauty. It need not be great, eloquent, magnificent; but instead of dull, drowsy and dry platitudes, flowery and glittering generalities, but something in the sermon to glow, brighten, convince, subdue—"thoughts that breathe and words that burn."

The gospel affords the grandest theme for genuine eloquence, and the last place on earth one should expect to find dullness ought to be in the pulpit. Our empty pews are in a large measure due to weakness in power of statement, and oratorical inefficiency of the ministry. A preacher asked Garrick, the tragedian, "Why is it you are able to produce so much more effect with the recital of your fictions than we do by the delivery of the most important truths?" "My Lord," said Garrick, "you speak truths as if they were fictions; we speak fictions as if they were truths." The pulpit depreciates too much the importance of manner as an instrument for doing good. The want of rhetorical culture is admitted to be one of the greatest and most constant causes of failure in the pulpit. The graceful gesture, the modulated voice, the logical clearness, the elegant expressions, by appropriate emotion, by graceful action—these things are wonderful aids in sustaining, melting, inflaming and overwhelming our auditors.

Instead of droning, and whining, and canting, and moaning, and croaking, and funeralizing religion, let us freshen up and get out of the old ruts, and introduce into our sermons the brightness, the holy sarcasm, the sanctified wit, the epigrammatic power, the blood-red earnestness and the fire of zeal. Instead of going through our sermons cool, collected and composed, let us surround our pulpit with heaven's fire, and send our hearers away, aroused, saying: "This man is in earnest; we must come and hear him again." No life can be above dull mediocrity without the inward glow and passion called enthusiasm. Kindled from truth and eternal principles, it is, "God in us." Emerson truly remarks, that "every great and commanding movement in the annals of the world is the triumph of enthusiasm." When on his way to Rome, in 1867, Garibaldi was cast into prison, he wrote to his comrades: "If fifty Garibaldis are thrown into prison, let Rome be free." He did not care for his own comfort so long as the freedom of Italy was advanced. If we had such an enthusiasm for the Master and his cause, the prayer put into the disciples' lips by Jesus himself, "Thy kingdom come," would be rapidly and gloriously answered. With a bleeding heart, I think of the thousands in the temples of sin, and the few in the churches who doze and nod over sermons destitute of fire and evangelical fervor. "Give me only fire enough," said Bernard Palissy, "and these pigments will become indelibly fixed upon this china." His derisive neighbors screamed, "He is mad." "More fire!" shouted the determined man; "more fire!" and to-day the name of Palissy is a synonym for determination and success. I say the same—more fire! more fire! More fire in our sermons, more fire in our preachers, more fire in our prayers and songs, more fire in the pew, more fire in everything we do, and we will forever impress the blessed name of the Lord Christ in the dull, cold hearts of men.—Thought and Work.

False Views of Faith.

There is no one matter of which so much is made in scripture as faith. It marks the beginning of the Christian life and its end, and all that lies between. It is the mother of all graces. It is the link that unites the soul to Christ, and the hand of its fellowship with all the redeemed of all ages. Yet while the thing is so important and so far reaching in its influence, it is often grossly misconceived, and with unhappy consequences. Some of these misconceptions have been clearly exposed by Mr. E. C. Richardson, of Hartford Theological Seminary, and it gives us pleasure to put on record his brief, plain and forcible statement of the definitions. The thing is the more important as the proposed substitutes for the faith of the Scriptures are put forth with an air of piety and deference to the supreme will that is calculated to impose upon the unwary.

There are three false definitions of faith especially prevalent at the present day.

1. That of the mind-curer or "Christian scientist," who says that faith is thinking that what is, isn't, and what isn't, is. "You are not sick, you only think you are." "Your broken leg isn't really broken, you only think it is. If you only believe it isn't broken you are well." Faith thus is believing a lie.

2. That of the faith-curers, who say, "If you only insist hard enough, you can do anything." Faith here is self-will. If only you will to have your own will hard enough, it is great faith.

3. A definition very popular among college students, drawn directly from Lord Tennyson's "In Memoriam"—that most unscientific and unphilosophical couplet,

"We have but faith; we can not know;
For knowledge is of things we see."

Here faith is defined as hope—the usual agnostic definition.

There is no faith without knowledge or knowledge without faith. A man can no more believe and not know than he can fall down stairs and remain at the top.—Christian Intelligencer.

Do Not Think for a Moment that catarrh will in time wear out. The theory is false. Men try to believe it because it would be pleasant if true, but it is not, as all know. No one let an acute attack of cold in the head remain unsubdued. It is liable to develop into catarrh. You can rid yourself of the cold and avoid all chance of catarrh by using Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. If already afflicted rid yourself of this troublesome disease speedily by the same means. It has been beautifully said, of every plant, that while it grasps the soil, it seeks the sunshine. Every human life is like that plant. Our roots are in the clay. We are human. We are bound to the earth, and to earthly duties. While in the soil, we must not become soiled. While in the earth, we must not become earthly. We are called to be spiritual, not in spite of these earth-born environments, but by reason of them. While hands are busy with the soil, the strong desires and affections and hungering may go out in search of the sunshine. The first prayer we all learned, teaches us this. "Give us our daily bread;" here is where our roots must strike the clay. "Thy kingdom come;" here the tendrils which can not find their nourishment in the soil, reach upward for the pure sunshine.

What is Scrofula

It is that impurity in the blood, which, accumulating in the glands of the neck, produces unsightly lumps or swellings; which causes painful running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which develops ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or many other manifestations usually ascribed to "humors." It is a more formidable enemy than consumption or cancer alone, for scrofula combines the worst possible features of both. Being the most ancient, it is the most general of all diseases or affections, for very few persons are entirely free from it.

How can it be cured? By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the cures it has accomplished, often when other medicines have failed, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. For all affections of the blood Hood's Sarsaparilla is unequalled, and some of the cures it has effected are really wonderful. If you suffer from scrofula in any of its various forms, be sure to give Hood's Sarsaparilla a trial.

Tutt's Pills

REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Habitual Costiveness

Causes derangement of the entire system, and begets diseases that are hazardous to life. Persons of a costive habit are subject to Headache, Defective Memory, Gloomy Forebodings, Nervousness, Fevers, Drowsiness, Irritable Temper and other symptoms, which unfits the sufferer for business or agreeable associations. Regular habit of body alone can correct these evils, and nothing succeeds so well in achieving this condition as Tutt's Pills. By their use not only is the system renovated, but in consequence of the harmonious changes thus created, there pervades a feeling of satisfaction; the mental faculties perform their functions with vivacity, and there is an exhilaration of mind, freedom of thought, and perfect heart's ease that bespeaks the full enjoyment of health.

SECRET OF BEAUTY

Is health. The secret of health is the power to digest a proper quantity of food. This can never be done when the liver does not act its part. It is the driving wheel in the mechanism of man, and when it is out of order, the whole system becomes deranged, and Fever, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Constipation, Jaundice, Bilious Colic, and General Debility ensue. To restore the functions of the liver and impart that beauty which always attends a healthy constitution, Dr. Tutt's Liver Pills are recommended. They are not a cure-all, but are designed solely for the disordered Liver and the diseases which it produces.

Briefs.

The disposition to "judge and condemn" others grows out of the habit of self-righteousness. Look within, and see if it is not so!

The disposition to "judge and condemn" others, if indulged in by Christian people, will overbalance any amount of preaching and praying and singing they can possibly do. Call to mind your past observations on this point, and the above statement will be fully sustained.

The disposition to "judge and condemn" others should be crushed out of every Christian heart, for it will never lead to any Christian work. It is no part of a Christian's duties, and should be relegated to the police and officers of criminal courts. The greatest authority says: "Judge not, and ye shall not be judged: condemn not, and ye shall not be condemned."

The Revised Version renders Luke xxi. 19, after this manner: "In your patience ye shall win your souls." That brings out the value of the grace of patience in a way that sets it in a new and interesting light. There never was a time when there was more need to "win our souls" in that way. The logicians say that the opposite of every true proposition is true. Then take care that in your impatience you do not lose your soul.

The Nashville Advocate publishes the following, which we reproduce in our paper, in hope that some of our pastors will take the hint before their notices of "poundings" get in the "pound."

We have found it necessary to call a halt on the pleasant literature about stormings, poundings, etc. Our people are so kind, the poundings and stormings are so numerous, and the pastors are so grateful, that these items have outgrown everybody's expectation. So let nobody feel hurt; let the kind offices of the people in behalf of the pastors continue—and send us revival news, and such like, in short, pithy notes that will cheer the hearts of all the Lord's people.

The Louisiana Conference Minutes are out in fine style. Our publisher and foreman deserve the thanks of the church. We exhort the brethren to send in their money to pay for them and to take pains to distribute them judiciously among our members. We note these facts: The membership has increased over last year 540. There is a loss of five churches, but an increase in the value of church edifices of $36,277. There has been an increase on all the financial lines, excepting two. There is a decrease in the receipts of preachers in charge since last year of $1,714. There has been a decrease of eighty-six cents on domestic missions. The whole amount raised for all purposes last year was $98,526. This divided among 16,315 members is a little over $6 per member.

In regard to the pay of preachers of religion and preachers of infidelity, Burdette, of the Burlington Hawkeye, has this:

My son, when you hear a man growling and scolding because Moody gets $200 a week for preaching Christianity, you will see that he never worries a minute because Ingersoll gets $200 a night for preaching atheism. You will observe that the man who is utterly shocked because Francis Murphy is paid $150 for temperance work, seems to think it is all right when the barkeeper takes in twice as much money in a single day.

Pharisaism in the Church.

Every reader of the New Testament ought to know who the Pharisees were, and what they practiced. They constituted a large part of the church in the time of our Savior. Their practices in religious matters consisted in the strictest observances of all the minutiæ of external duty. Their religion seems to have consisted in praying, fasting, giving tithes and hating all who were not of their sect. In two verses of the eighteenth chapter of Luke's Gospel our Lord has drawn the portrait; and the character can not be misunderstood. It is the very essence of egotism in religion—a self-righteousness—whose supreme pleasure is found in parading its performances in the most public manner, and "despising others" with a most greedy hatred. It sought comparison with other forms of religion for the express purpose of exalting itself at the expense of everything else. To the Pharisee the special abomination was "a sinner." He could not endure the presence of such a poor unfortunate, and as for holding fellowship with any such, the idea was simply horrible and not to be entertained. To all his fellow-religionists the Pharisee effectually blackened the character of infinite purity by hurling at Jesus the true taunt: "He receiveth sinners and eateth with them." That statement of fact placed the character of the Son of God down on a level with the lowest in the estimation of the larger part of the Jewish Church. The central point in Pharisaic belief, around which all Pharisaic practices revolved, was simply this: "I am not as other men."

We are sure that there is much of this same spirit in the church of to-day. There is much of the disposition to laud our own performances and depreciate the work of others. There is too much of the spirit that would pull itself up to heaven by pulling others down from heaven. The spirit of envious comparison sways far too many hearts. Loud professions are often so heavily handicapped with hearts full of hate as to defeat the very object of a profession of religion. There is many a man, regular in his attendance upon church ordinances, who carries hatred in his heart for those who do not reach up to his standard of religion! There is many a woman, conforming punctiliously to every external duty, whose soul is black with the envy she bears towards some of her sisters! The sacred precincts of the sanctuary are profaned to-day by men and women, whose outward lives are blameless, looking around upon others, and whispering to themselves the old Pharisaic self-commendation: "I am not as others, nor even as these publicans." These people are not few. Their name is legion. The pastor as he goes upon his rounds finds them everywhere, and his heart is sickened at the amount of envy and jealousy and actual hatred manifested by them. Between the worldlians and the Pharisees his soul is almost crushed, and the daily, bitter, almost despairing prayer of his spirit is: "O Lord, save thy people, the remnant of Israel!"

Now, if we are to make our estimate of a life by taking into the account the way in which it was treated by our Lord, then we must come to the conclusion that such a life as the above is one of the worst things on earth. We find that Jesus treated "outside sinners" with an ever ready compassion, and invariably spoke words which created hope in their hearts. But when he came to deal with "religious sinners"—the Pharisees, the egotists in religion—with an anathema, terrific enough to consume everybody but an egotist, he hurled them down to the deep damnation of hell. He whose heart yearned in pity over adulterers and publicans and thieves and murderers looked upon and spoke of Pharisaism as the vilest abomination under the sun. That twenty-third chapter of Matthew's Gospel contains some of the most awful curses ever uttered, and they were uttered by infinite love against the professors of that religion which says: "I am not as others are." This religion, which "shuts up the kingdom of Heaven against men;" which "devours widows' houses and for a pretense makes long prayers;" which "pays tithe of mint and anise and cummin and omits judgment and mercy and faith;" which "appears beautiful outward, but within is full of dead men's bones and all uncleanness"—of the professors of this religion, Christ has said: "Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers, how can you escape the damnation of hell?" Worldliness in the church is a bad thing indeed. It is hard to eradicate, but it is not hopeless. Pharisaism in the church is an infinitely worse thing, for, entrenched behind the wall of self-righteousness, it is beyond the reach of the ordinary methods of divine grace. The only hope in such cases is in a flash from heaven, like that which prostrated Saul of Tarsus to the ground!

The Mexican Missionary Conference.

On January 31 was held, in the City of Mexico, a convention of the different Protestant bodies that are operating for the spread of the gospel in the republic of Mexico. Eleven different missionary societies were represented in the convention, the convention itself numbering about one hundred missionaries. Rev. W. H. Sloan, of the Baptist Church, was elected president of the convention; Rev. J. W. Macdonald, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and Primitivo Rodriguez, of the Episcopal Church, were the secretaries. Various subjects of importance to missionary work in Mexico were fully and fairly discussed. The two most important subjects, according to our view, were: "The Division of the Country into Separate Mission Fields," and "The Establishment of a School for the Education of the Children of all Denominations of Christians." The report on the former, after a lengthy discussion, was adopted. Its principal features are as follows: In all cities of 15,000 or more inhabitants, two or more missions may be established; in small towns only one shall establish itself; in the case of the present occupancy of a small field by two or more missions, the later arrival shall withdraw; in case of the failure to arrange amicably the details of such a change, such as a sale of property, etc., the whole matter is to be referred to a committee of arbitration, consisting of one missionary from each society, who shall refer their decision to the home Boards for sanction. A committee was appointed to formulate a plan for the establishment of a school for Christian education of the children of all denominations, but we have seen no report of the plan.

These figures were reported to the convention: There are in Mexico 264 Protestant congregations, 45 Protestant Churches, 5 theological seminaries, 82 day-schools, with 3,000 pupils; 36 Sunday-schools, with 4,600 pupils; 13,000 church members, 69 missionaries with their families, 290 Christian workers, and 13 Christian periodicals. It is said that great harmony and peace prevailed in the convention.

The City Missionary Society of Boston expended in its work last year $42,500, of which $19,000 went for distinctively religious work.

The Proposed Educational Conference.

MR. EDITOR: I wish to commend to your readers Dr. Wilbur F. Tillet's article, on "The Educational System of Southern Methodism." Under this heading he points out the defects in our existing school work, and sketches the system proposed as a proper adjustment for our educational needs. He brings into connected view what was substantially given in this ADVOCATE last year in different forms by several writers. Bishop Galloway gave the initial; Dr. T. C. Wier, Dr. Hunnicutt, the editor, and others followed. It was not so much a discussion as the presentation of each one's ideas of what he held important. A proper system was recognized as falling easily and nominally into four well-defined grades—the primary, the preparatory, the college and the university. It was held that the schools of each grade should be kept separate from the others, and have conditions suitable to their own work and discipline; and, at the same time, be so correlated as to form co-operative parts of a harmonious whole, each lower grade being the healthful step to the next above.

There has been for some time, in the minds of our wisest and most experienced observers and educators, a growing discontent with the existing forms and methods of the educational work done in the name of our church. We have now come to a time in the advancements of school work in this country when we must settle upon a thorough system and put it under organic regulation, or else suffer the serious consequences of the neglect. I hope the Conference of educators called for by Tillet will become a fact. It seems opportune; the interests demand something in this way. Such a Conference can not legislate, but it can discuss these matters and give to the church a consensus of opinion which will emanate from the highest sources, and will be of little less authority than legislative act.

One question of moment is, the practicability of organizing primary schools throughout our bounds. We all recognize the importance of having the pupils of this grade under Christian instruction as well as in efficient schools. But a system of common schools is maintained in every State, and will be, no matter what action the church may take. Can we have primary schools where the State has her common schools in operation? Will it be wise to undertake this? The conclusions reached by such men as will compose that Conference will greatly assist in finding right solution.

What we now need most for real education is the training or preparatory school to fit boys and girls for the colleges. How shall we move in this matter? The public high school confronts us here, as well as in the primary, with free tuition. Every Annual Conference ought to have a goodly number of these preparatory schools. The North Mississippi Conference has not one under her own control. I do not know a primary school in this Conference under the care of a circuit or station. One presiding elder will inquire into the possibilities of this case on his second round. But whatever can or can not be done for primary schools as part of our system, the preparatory schools are vital and must be had. The Conference will discuss how. What shall be required to entitle a student to a certificate; what shall be the college courses for degrees; shall the colleges confer all or only certain degrees; shall the requirements for a given degree be uniform or equivalent in all the colleges; shall all degrees depend on accepted results of examination or prescribed courses, or may any be complimentary—these are some of the questions to be settled.

I hope the Conference will be able to formulate and recommend a system so correct, so plain, so simple and practical, that it can be accepted as the true foundation on which to conduct our school work. Whether this can be done or not, the subject can be put in form for discussion, provisional for action by the next General Conference.

What Our Papers Say.

From Zion's Herald we clip this paragraph, on "The Greatest Passion." It is worth the serious attention of every reader.

They talk of avarice, lust, ambition as great passions. It is a mistake. They are little passions. Vanity is the great commanding passion of them all. This excites the most heroic deeds and impels to the most dreadful crimes. Save me from this passion, and I can defy the others. "They are mere urchins; but this is a giant," Sheridan said. In other words, selfishness, the root of vanity, is the parent of all sin. If by some magic touchstone this greatest passion could be made to appear in its own true character in the lives of men, what a stripping of laurels there would be! Too often the hero would seem a selfish monster, slaying to achieve glory and fame; the philanthropist would become a cunning schemer, sacrificing to be advertised; the Christian would be revealed as serving God to win the praise of men. How many eloquent sermons, thrilling testimonies and fervid prayers this passion inspires! It is the devil's most delusive weapon with which to ruin souls. Piety which is not devoid of vanity is impiety. Sincerity and unselfishness are the primal principles of the Christian life. He who seeks to conquer every passion will daily offer the prayer: "Remove far from me vanity and lies, and make me unselfish and true."

For the benefit of those of our readers who never seem to know when the missionary collection is to be taken we present the following story of Stonewall Jackson, clipped from the Chicago Standard:

A gentleman, now a Presbyterian minister in New York City, but formerly an officer on Stonewall Jackson's staff, told me the following story: He said at the time of the second battle of Bull Run the whole Southern country was quivering with excitement, the telegraph wires being down, and the people being anxious to learn the result of the battle which they knew had just been fought. There was, of course, the greatest excitement at Lexington, Va., the home of Stonewall Jackson, since it was known that he was engaged in the battle, and intelligence of the result had not yet been received. But there was a letter at the postoffice addressed in Gen. Jackson's own handwriting to his pastor, the Rev. Dr. White. The good minister took out the letter, the people thronged around him, and, putting him on a dry-goods box, insisted that he should read this letter which had come fresh from the battlefield. With trembling hands he tore it open, and when he could sufficiently control his feelings, read somewhat as follows:

MY DEAR PASTOR: Remembering that to-day is the occasion for taking up the annual collection for foreign missions, I beg leave to inclose my contribution for that object. I remain, yours, T. J. JACKSON.

No word about the battle which was pending. Even then he was not forgetful that there was a greater battle still than the one in which he was engaged—the strife between truth and error, between Christianity and heathendom. It would be well for us if we had such rugged principle in giving regularly for the furtherance of the gospel that we would not let the most important and clamorous considerations hinder and thwart our endeavors to serve him whose claims are supreme.

It is stated that the Methodist Episcopal Church, through its Book Concern, will distribute, during 1889, to its Conferences, for the benefit of the superannuated preachers and widows and orphans, the sum of $100,000.

Notes.

The Society for the Suppression of Vice held its fourteenth anniversary recently in New York. Out of 121 cases brought to trial there were 118 convictions. Obscene books, papers and pictures were destroyed by the ton. Mr. Comstock has the approval of some of the best men in New York.

Bishop Hendrix says that the 78,773 members of our church in Missouri last year sent less than 900 of their children to our church schools, and gave less than thirty-five cents each to give the gospel to the heathen. We suppose that Missouri Methodists are about on a par with those of other States. We certainly ought to do more or quit making such loud professions.

The Revised Version gives the translation of our Lord's warning to Peter in a manner which immediately suggests that strange transaction, the account of which is given in the first chapter of the Book of Job: "Simon, Simon, behold Satan asked to have you that he might sift you as wheat: but I made supplication for thee that thy faith fail not, and do thou when once thou hast turned again, stablish thy brethren." One thing this transaction brings out in the clearest light, and that is the impudence and impertinence of Satan, and the watchfulness of the Son of God over his servant.

The ladies "leap-year privilege" took its origin in the following manner: By an ancient act of the Scotish Parliament, passed about the year 1228, it was ordained that "during the reign of her blessed Majesty, Margaret, every maiden lady of both high and low degree shall have liberty to speak to the man she likes. If he refuses to take her to be his wife he shall be mulct in the sum of one hundred pounds or less, as his estate may be, except and always if he can make it appear that he is betrothed to another woman, then he shall be free."

This note from Lord Macaulay may be serviceable to some of the ADVOCATE readers. At any rate, it is an interesting reminiscence of the great historian:

When a boy I began to read very earnestly, but, at the foot of every page I read, I stopped and obliged myself to give an account of what I had read on that page.

At first I had to read it three or four times before I got my mind firmly fixed. But I compelled myself to comply with the plan, until now, after I have read a book through once, I can almost recite it from the beginning to the end.

It is a very simple habit to form early in life, and is valuable as a means of making our reading serve the best purpose.

Dr. Haygood's report on temperance to the North Georgia Conference is a ringing document. Take this sample:

On no ground can we make peace with the liquor-traffic. This war must go on till the end. Great progress has been made—there is greater before us. To our brethren who have succeeded in closing the drink-shops we tender congratulations; to those who have failed we say, Be of good cheer; organize for another and better planned battle. We tell them: make no compromises—press the battle to the gates. This other word we say to all our people in this holy war: Be as calm as you are earnest. Use fair means only; you can not fight the devil with fire—he is master in his native element. Our cause needs not the language of passion; maledictions are not arguments. Of all men we can not afford to be bitter in spirit, unfair in argument, or corrupt in the use of means. We must fight a pure battle—one that we may pray over, and that our Lord may bless. This war will outlast our life time; be it so. We will fight to the end, and hand down to our children a cause that can not die.

That General Missionary Conference, which is to be held in Exeter Hall, London, next June, is likely to be a gathering of extraordinary significance and value. Forty-eight missionary societies of Great Britain have agreed to send representatives to it, and invite the co-operation of all evangelical missionary societies throughout the world. At a meeting held in the Bible House, New York, recently, more than forty American societies were represented either personally or by letter. Every foreign missionary society in the United States, including the Woman's Boards, is invited to commission one or more persons to represent them in the General Conference in London. The secretary of the American Committee is Rev. William Kincaid, D. D., Bible House, New York. The leading topics which are to engage the attention of the Conference in London are these: Missionary Comity; The Place of Education in Missionary Work; The Training and Support of Native Workers; The Organization and Government of Native Churches; Missionary Methods; Union and Co-operation in the Missionary Work; The Missionary in Relation to Literature; Medical Missionaries; Woman's Work in the Mission Field; Home Work for Missions; and the Relations of Missions to Commerce and Diplomacy.

Personals.

David R. Locke, (Petroleum V. Nasby) editor of the Toledo Blade, died in Toledo, Ohio, February 14, of consumption.

Chief Justice Willie, of the Supreme Court of Texas, has resigned, assigning as the reason the inadequacy of the salary, which is only $3,500.

James Russell Lowell has been elected to an emeritus professorship in Harvard University.

President Fitzhugh, of Whitworth College, was in town last week, looking for another teacher to add to his already large corps. That seems to be a little thing in itself, but is one of the best evidences of successful progress. If that Mississippi brother will now put up the "center building," future Methodists will "rise up and call him blessed."

We had a pleasant call during the past week from E. B. Treat, publisher of the Pulpit Treasury, New York.

President McCosh remains at the head of the School of Philosophy of Princeton College, with a salary of $5,000.

After reading Bro. Kirkland's editorial, "Tribulations of an Editor," we feel called upon to move for a conference of Southern Methodist editors and publishers on the mournful subject of obituaries.

Some brother in California, after a visit to Rev. John Hannon, D. D., announced him a "gilt-edged edition of Sam Jones and Sam Small, bound in one volume." Sometimes first impressions are "deceitful above all things."

Rev. Charles Parkhurst, of Dover, N. H., has been elected editor of the Herald.

We receive frequent notes like this: "Please correct, abbreviate, or in any other way improve the tone of the article sent." With all our diligence and care and study we have never been able to "improve the tone" of our own articles, to our own satisfaction, and this has learned us just sense enough not to tamper with other people's articles.

Gen. Sheridan, having been interviewed on the subject of the presidency, positively declines to be a candidate.

We learn that there is to be a conference of the presidents of the boards of Education of the North Mississippi, Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences, at Vicksburg, Miss., March 6, proximo.

Rev. J. J. Lafferty, of the Richmond Advocate, for some days confined to bed by lumbago and throat trouble, is again at work in his office.

Rev. G. W. Briggs, the editor of Texas Advocate, in chasing a burglar who had entered his dwelling at night, leaped over a low gallery railing, and, making a descent of twelve or fifteen feet, struck an awning rod and fractured his left arm and bruised himself quite badly. The injuries are yielding to treatment and our brother at work as usual.

Items of Interest.

The district court in San Antonio, Texas, did a good work one day last week. Thirty gamblers were tried under the new law and convicted, and sentenced each to pay $25 fine, or ten days in jail.

The Blair Educational Bill passed the Senate by a vote of thirty-nine yeas to twenty-nine nays.

The New York Tribune estimates the present population of this country at 62,523,597. It estimates that it will reach 67,000,000 by the time the next census is taken.

Washington Territory Legislature has passed a woman suffrage law.

Gen. Lew Wallace's book, Ben-Hur, has reached a sale of 200,000 copies.

Sixteen counties in Michigan have voted, good and strong, for prohibition.

A New Jersey factory is turning out paper bed-clothes, and they are said to have quite a warmth-preserving power.

Alaska is turning out gold bullion at the rate of $100,000 a month, and doing a fishery business of $3,000,000 a year, and has a fur trade of more than $2,500,000. Profitable purchase, that of Mr. Seward!

The Executive Committee of the Grant Monumental Fund Association has fixed the cost of the Grant Memorial at $500,000. The committee has in hand $125,000.

Statistics of the life insurances show that there are now 820,000 policies in this country, representing an aggregate insurance of $2,100,000,000.

Among other valuable presents which have poured into the Pope's exchequer as jubilee gifts, he has received 30,000 bottles of port wine. That ought to last the old "prisonor" a good while.

The miles of railway are given thus: America has 155,757; Europe, 121,205; Asia, 13,791; Africa, 4,285; Australia, 3,015.

The City Churches.

Our city pastors are all at work with a will, and at their Monday morning meeting made encouraging reports of their congregations. The class meetings and prayer meetings are largely attended; probably never more so. The missionary collection was taken at Carondelet Street on last Subbath, and all the churches will follow in quick succession. Felicity's collection for the Bible cause was the best in its whole history. The new church approaches completion. Moreau Street has projected a mission chapel, which will doubtless be finished during the year. The Algiers' pastor has been away for several days during convalescence from bilious attack, but is again at his post. The city missionary is full of enthusiasm, and is busy with pastoral work and plans of earnest, vigorous evangelization.

The Tide Is Rising.

We mean the tide of missionary sentiment in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Evidence of this fact is found in the steady decrease of our mission debt. The annual report of the Treasurer, May, 1887, showed the debt at that date to be $90,241 12. The Treasurer's report in the Missionary Reporter, for February, shows that on February 1, 1888, the debt had been reduced to $31,799 46. Since that report was made, our last note in bank, amounting to $10,000, has been paid, which reduced our debt to $21,799 46. Our debt is now less than at any time since 1883. Why not pay every dollar and be done with it? Dr. Allen calls for "one hundred subscribers for $500 each—the object being to relieve the Board of its embarrassment, and thereby secure beyond a peradventure the reinforcement and relief of all our mission fields." Heads the call with his own subscription. Who else will answer this call? Our week of prayer and self-denial, April 1-8, is near at hand. Will each pastor see that it is faithfully observed in his charge? This is our Master's work.

I. G. JOHN, Sec.

Notice.

To the Pastors in the Winona District, North Mississippi Conference—

DEAR BRETHREN: The first week in April has been suggested by the Board of Missions as the week of self-denial and prayer for missions. I desire to call your attention to it, and urge every pastor in the district to observe it. The success of this movement everywhere depends upon the pastors. Last year fourteen of the eighteen charges in the Winona district observed the week of self-denial, and good results followed in every case. Now, let there be this improvement this year: Let not one of the eighteen charges fail to observe it. Of course, on circuits services can not be conducted all the week at every church, but a good plan would be to begin in time to notify your people and urge them to the observance of the week, and appoint service for one day, or part of a day, at each church, at which time the offerings of the week may be received. Please attend to this, brethren, and let us be able to make a good showing at the District Conference.

R. P. MITCHELL, P. E.

District Conference.

The Winona District Conference will be held in Greenwood, April 13-15. Bishop C. B. Galloway will preside. Let all the pastors in the district be on hand and urge their lay delegates to go. And, brethren, please see that the Quarterly Conference records are there. The Sunday-school Conference will be held at the same place, on Thursday, April 12.

R. P. MITCHELL, P. E.

Louisiana Conference Minutes.

The last of the Minutes were forwarded on the seventeenth instant, and by this time should have reached all parties, as they were forwarded by post, prepaid. At this writing but few have sent in their assessment, and the entire expense has been borne by the committee, fully expecting the brethren to respond promptly. We have fulfilled our commission. If unsatisfactorily to any, kindly reserve your complaints until the next Conference, at which time your committee will make a full report. In the meantime see to it that your part of the obligation is fulfilled.

T. K. FAUNT-LE ROY,
Chairman of Committee.

New Orleans District Sunday-School Union.

The annual meeting of the New Orleans District Sunday-school Union, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will be held in Carondelet Street Church, Tuesday, the twenty-eighth instant, at 7:30 P. M. All members are respectfully requested to attend.

If any subscribers have failed to receive their share, I can supply them. There are about one hundred copies on hand. They can be had on application by sending money to pay postage at the rate of two cents per copy.

FOREST, Mississippi.

In regard to preaching—a subject which should engage the prayerful thoughtfulness of every preacher—the Richmond Christian Advocate has this paragraph which is worthy of attention:

The preacher should preach to the whole man—the animal as well as the intellectual and moral. The natural affections should be aroused and sanctified; but it is possible to go too far in this direction. He may take a hop, skip and jump over the intellectual faculties and moral sentiments, and land prematurely among the appetites and passions. He may bend every energy to the "rousement," and the "rousement" may be about the whole result. It is not the preaching that produces the most weeping and shouting that does the most good. There should be a move along the whole line of human nature. The whole head is sick, and must be cured; the whole heart is faint, and must be invigorated. Weeping is not to be despised, and shouting may be reasonable and really philosophical in its causes and manifestations; but true preaching must make the head wise, the conscience quick, and all the passions and propensities subservient to "love the divinest of the train."

The Census reports show that in St. Louis 78 per cent. of the population is of foreign parentage, in New York 80 per cent., and in Chicago 87 per cent.

Books and Periodicals.

BOOKS.

BITS OF KNOWLEDGE TAKEN FROM ALDEN'S MANIFOLD CYCLOPEDIA. The price is fifty cents per volume in cloth; half morocco, sixty-five cents. Postage per volume, ten cents. Eight dollars and sixty cents received on or before March 1, 1888, will pay in advance for the whole thirty volumes. John B. Alden, publisher, 393 Pearl street, New York.

This is a sample copy of fifty-two pages of Alden's "Manifold Cyclopedia." The type is good, clear-faced brevier. The form is easy for the eye and handy to hold. The volume will average 640 pages, and there will be thirty or more volumes. The cyclopedia will embody also a dictionary of the English language. This cyclopedia will give the results of the scholarship of the world up to the time of publication. Editorial talent of experience and skill is engaged upon the work. It will be issued at the rate of one volume a month.

THE LESSON COMMENTARY ON THE INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY-SCHOOL LESSONS FOR 1888. By John H. Vincent, D. D., and Rev. W. G. Holway, U. S. N. Phillips & Hunt, New York.

This is one of the best commentaries on the Sunday-school lessons which we have seen. Dr. Vincent, as all our readers know, is at home in everything pertaining to Sunday-schools, and Rev. Mr. Holway has been preparing the Sunday-school lessons for Zion's Herald for a number of years. In the preparation of this volume the authors have drawn freely upon the best exegetes of the day. The illustrations, notes and anecdotes add much to the interest of the book. The "practical thoughts" are drawn from the lessons with good judgment, and will help to clinch the teaching upon the mind. The Authorized and Revised Versions are both used. We can and do recommend the commentary most heartily.

POEMS. By Josiah Allen's Wife (Marietta Holley). Funk & Wagnalls, New York. George Wharton & Bro., 5 Carondelet street, New Orleans.

From the cheerful, witty and often sarcastic "Samanthy" one would scarcely expect a book of poems. Yet here they are in all the gentleness and beauty and sparkle of genuine poesy. They are tender and true, and will make music in hearts that have often been thrilled by the strokes of wit and humor that flash in her prose writings. Everyone who has read "Samanthy at Saratoga" or "Sweet Cicely" will be pleased with these poetic productions of Josiah Allen's Wife.

PERIODICALS.

—Humboldt Library, No. 97. The "Pleasures of Life," by Sir John Lubbock, Bart. J. Fitzgerald, publisher, 24 East Fourth St., New York. Price fifteen cents.

—The Sidereal Messenger, for February, has "The Lick Observatory," by Prof. E. S. Holden: "The Place of Astronomy among the Sciences," by Prof. Simon Newcomb: "Distribution of the Stars," by W. S. H. Monck, and Editorial Notes. Northfield, Minn. Price $2.

—Journal of Education, for January, has a fine article by Prof. R. H. Jesse, on Sunday Books and Sunday Law, Chemistry as a Study for Women, by E. W. Ordway, and other articles of interest and value. It is edited by Prof. Wm. O. Rogers, P. O. Box 1693, New Orleans. Price $1 50.

—The Old Testament Student, for February, is on our table. It is a valuable monthly for students of the Old Testament. There are several fine articles in this number, among which we mention: "Historical Development of the Messianic Idea," by James Scott, D. D.; and "Inductive Bible Study," by Prof. Burroughs. It is edited by William R. Harper, Ph.D., Professor in Yale College, New Haven, Conn. Price $1.

—Scribner's Magazine, for February, contains Felix Mendelssohn-Bartholdy—frontispiece—engraved by G. Kruell. Mendelssohn's Letters to Moscheles—from the manuscripts in the possession of Felix Moscheles—by William F. Apthorp. Ballade of the King's Way, by Andrew Hussey Allen. First Harvests—Chapters IV.-VI.—by F. J. Stimson. Ephemeron, by Mrs. James T. Fields. The Man at Arms, by E. H. Blashfield and E. W. Blashfield. Love's Ways, by Henrietta Christian Wright. Natural Selection—A Romance of Chelsea Village and East Hampton Town—by H. C. Bunner. The Law and the Ballot, by Joseph B. Bishop. Volcanoes, by N. S. Shaler. The Last of the Ghosts, by Barrett Wendell. What the Will Effects, by William James. Upon a Winter Morning, by Maybury Fleming. The Lantern-Bearers, by Robert Louis Stevenson.

—Outing, for February, has a table of contents that will gratify the tastes of those persons who delight in out-door and in-door sports. It is profusely illustrated, and the price is $3 a year. 146 Nassau St., New York.

—Book Record has many useful and interesting items about books and book-writers and book-makers. Published by W. B. Ketcham, 71 Bible House, New York. Price $1 a year.

—The Magazine of Art, for March, has as frontispiece a photogravure of Virginia, as painted by James Bertrand. The contents are Current Art, American Taste in Art, Progress of English Art, Irish Types and Tastes, The Saone as a Sketching Ground, all of which combine to make a fine number of this fine monthly. Cassell & Co., New York City. Price $3 50.

—The Quiver, for March, is full of the very best reading for "every day and Sunday too." Of all the periodicals which come to our office not one is so popular with the home-folks as the Quiver. Its religious tone is unexceptionable, its literary excellence is equal to that of any, and its price is below them all, being only $1 50 a year. Cassell & Company, 101, 106 Fourth Avenue, N. Y.

CATCHING THE JESUITS.—Bishop Coxe was challenged, not long ago, to give proof that the maxim long attributed to the Jesuits, to wit, "The end justifies the means," is to be found in any of "the authentic works of the thousand authors of the Society of Jesus." He met the challenge by giving the challenger the sentence, "Finis determinat probitatem actus." It is to be found in textual quotations made from three Jesuit writers, "Busenbaum, Laymun und Wageman," in the "Encyclopaedia Britannica," page 651, and certainly leaves the advocate of Rome without a peg to hang a doubt upon that the maxim is thoroughly Jesuitical.—Philadelphia Presbyterian.

What is civilization? I answer, the power of good women.—Emerson.

Mr. Philip Werlein has in stock a beautiful selection of organs. Anyone thinking of purchasing should call and see them before purchasing. Mr. Werlein's terms are moderate; he sells cheaper than ever before, and guarantees his instruments as first-class in every respect. There is no better judge of an organ, and anyone in the country can safely leave such a matter to him, and be assured that their order will receive prompt attention and prove satisfactory in every respect.

EDUCATIONAL.

Mansfield Female College.

1887-8.

THE FALL TERM will open Wednesday, September 15, 1887.

The Faculty has been strengthened by the accession of Rev. M. S. Watts, of Virginia, who will have the discipline of the College, and Prof. D. E. Huddle, also of Virginia, who will manage the boarding department. Both these gentlemen are experienced in school work, and they, with their families, will add much to the social advantages of the pupils.

Other highly qualified teachers have been secured for the Literary, Music and Art Departments.

Annual rate for board and tuition from one hundred and sixty-five to one hundred and eighty-five dollars, according to class. Music, instrumental or vocal, and art lessons, five dollars per month of four weeks, extra.

Instruction in French, ten dollars per year. Use of piano for practice, ten dollars. Total expense for the year for board, tuition, and single course in music or art, paid in advance, two hundred dollars.

A deposit of five dollars for each term must be made for purchase of books and stationery.

Pupils must furnish their own bed-clothing and pillows, towels and toilet articles.

The College is the property of the Louisiana Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the daughters of members of this body receive free tuition in the Literary and Music Departments.

Owing to the steadily increasing patronage during the past four years, the Board of Managers have made arrangements for increasing the capacity and comfort of the buildings, and beautifying the grounds.

Mansfield is on the line of the Texas and Pacific R. R., 285 miles from New Orleans, and forty miles from Shreveport.

ARTIFICIAL EYES

Are Now so Perfectly Made That No One Can Distinguish Them from the Natural Eye.

The Artificial Eye is not only a beautifier, but it serves other excellent purposes.
It enables the eyelids to move as freely as ever.
It restores the functions of the tear passages.
It prevents the eyelashes from turning within, causing inflammation.
It prevents distortion of features, as happens always in case of a young person who has the misfortune to lose an eye—and sometimes in the case of older persons.
Mr. W. BOHNE, our Optician, has made a specialty of selecting and inserting them.

Our Young People.

CHILD'S HYMN TO CHRIST.

BY TURNER PALGRAVE.

Thou that once on mother's knee
Wert a little one like me,
When I wake or go to bed,
Lay thy hands about my head;
Let me feel thee very near,
Jesus Christ, our Savior dear.

Be beside me in the light,
Close by me through all the night;
Make me gentle, kind and true,
Do what mother bids me do;
Help and cheer me when I fret,
And forgive when I forget.

Once wert thou in cradle laid—
Baby bright in manger shade,
With the oxen and the cows,
And the lambs outside the house;
Now thou art above the sky:
Canst thou hear thy children cry?

Thou art nearer when we pray,
Since thou art so far away.
Thou my little hymn will hear,
Jesus Christ, our Savior dear.
Thou that once on mother's knee
Wert a little one like me.

The Successful Boy.

There is so much written about successful men, that we are liable to overlook the fact that boys, too, may be successful. I offer the young readers of the ADVOCATE some reflections on this subject, suggested by a trifling incident:

I was standing in a salesroom, attending to a small matter of business and making observations. A small boy made his appearance. I would not judge him to have belonged to an affluent family. He was not slovenly in his manners, or in his dress, but looked like a boy who knew how his living came, and not the easiest living at that. Something impressed me that he was a successful boy in the establishment, and that he might yet make his mark in the world.

Analyzing the impression, I find the causes to be about these:

1. He was genuinely polite. Not that studied politeness, which is so much stock in trade, but polite from a sense of respect for others. You can tell when a boy is putting on politeness, because he thinks it pays; and while that is better than no politeness at all, it is not near so good as when you feel that the boy has good manners because he is a good boy.

2. I was struck with his attention to accuracy in his business. He was to take some parcels somewhere, and the close attention to instructions, and the quick and pertinent inquiries where he was not certain as to details, all showed him to have a mind in his business. I thought as that boy went out, he knows exactly what he is going to do; he will make no blunders, and have to take no scolding on account of heedlessness. I know boys who would have gone out with their minds on something else, and would have been almost certain to have made some mistake.

3. Then I was impressed by the boy's energy and deftness in getting at his business. There was no lazy, mechanical, wish-I-didn't spirit in what he was doing. His mind was altogether on the one thing, and while there was no unseemly haste, no reckless hurry, he was not dilatory in the least.

Now, I thought to myself, that boy is a treasure to his employers (and they treated him with great tenderness and kindness), and if he is appreciated by his employers, how much help he must be to the loved ones at home. Perhaps he has a widowed mother at home, and what a comfort he must be to her! And not only so; but if he keeps on in this manner of life, what a foundation he is laying for a successful manhood! And how nearly does this sort of life conform to the Bible requirement: "Diligent in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord."

J. W. M.

NEW IBERIA, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: Our presiding elder, Dr. Mangum, delivered an interesting, as well as amusing, lecture to the little ones of our Sunday-school. He greatly insisted that each of us should do some work to aid the missionaries. I was much encouraged to do so then; but since seeing that letter to Dr. Allen, in our column, I am determined to assist as much as I possibly can. So I have concluded to have a cotton patch. Besides, papa has given me a lamb and mamma a hen. I trust I shall make twenty-five dollars. Suppose some of my little cousins try my plan, and at the close of the year inform each other of the amount we have made.

I was eight years old on the third, and mamma gave me a nice dining, which we all enjoyed very much. But I enjoyed having my little sweetheart, Gracie Gayle, with me most of all. I received several birthday cards, but Gracie's was prettiest of all. But oh, I missed my sweet little niece, Lucie, so much! Yet I know that the dear little angel is so happy praising Jesus, and I hope to meet her when God calls me home. I shall answer Alice Whiteman's and Ettie Tinsley's question: "Gold" is first found in Genesis xiii, 2. Where is "ferry-boat" found in the Bible? Your little friend.

LESLIE M. HAND.

COATOPA, Alabama.

MR. EDITOR: As you were kind enough to publish my first letter, I will write again. I am a little girl twelve years old. I am not going to school now. I joined the church last October at our camp meeting. Rhoda Bush, "Rhoda" is found in Acts xii, 13. I will close by asking a question: Who was lifted up in a vision by the hair? Wishing the ADVOCATE much success, I am, Your little friend,

OLIVE A. BLOCKER.

HARRS BRIDGE, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl seven years old. I go to school. My teacher's name is Miss Ida Jones. My grandpa takes your nice paper, and I like to read the children's letters. I wish to subscribe for the ADVOCATE. Enclosed find two dollars for subscription to the ADVOCATE. I want to ask Alice Lewis a question: Where in the Bible is the word "girl" found? I hope to see my letter in print.

Six Reasons Why Youth Should Attend Church.

1. It will please your pastor and elders. They often think of your absence. A minister is often more helped by seeing the young eagerly listening than by those older. Many a minister would gladly exchange congregations with his superintendent. Gratify your pastor and elders by joining in the great assembly for worship.

2. It will do you good. It will help you in your English to hear a scholar use your language correctly. It will guide you to reason correctly.

3. It will aid you to resist temptations. They will come upon you. God's truth must be your armor, or you will fail.

4. It will encourage other youth. The many falling into crime are mainly those who do not go to God's house. You go. You invite others also to go.

5. But it is duty. The youth have blessings for which to give thanks, and they have needs which God must supply. Join then in praise and prayer.

6. But, best of all, it is acceptable to God. He is best worshiped where all that have breath praise him. When Israel presented themselves with wives, and even the little ones, God was very gracious to them. Out of the mouths of babes God ordains praise. God regards the voices of his little ones just as readily as those of adults. The sweetest sight at Jerusalem was the children singing Hosannah. Unite now in that song with the great congregation.—George C. Bush.

A Little Sermon to Young Women.

There is probably no subject which so much engages the thoughts of young women, even of Christian young women, as that of dress. If there is wealth in the family, there are continually new clothes to be selected. If there is a scanty allowance, then so much turning and re-turning is necessary, that the planning and the manual labor required to make a tasteful wardrobe keep the matter constantly in mind. This is wrong; and yet, as society is now constituted, it is impossible to avoid considerable care on this subject. All that we can do is to make as little as possible of this absorbing concern.

The first rule for both men and women to observe in arraying themselves is, as goes, without saying, neatness. The slightest sign of uncleanliness about the person, untidy hair, hanging dress braid, missing buttons, seams pinned together—these are insulting to those in whose company they are displayed. Elaborate and expensive materials and trimmings should be sparingly used for young girls. Youth is in itself so much of an ornament that the addition of rich dress is like "gilding refined gold," or painting the lily. The more simple and unobtrusive a young girl's dress, the more becoming it is likely to be.

It would seem very absurd to warn young men against the dangers of tight dressing, either of their bodies or extremities. No man worthy of the name would endure the slightest compression from his clothes. Yet the young women not only render themselves uncomfortable by snug, if not tight, dressing of their bodies, feet, hands and arms, but harm their health and usefulness immeasurably by so doing. If possible, some pretty garment should be contrived for wear when at work, so that the muscles and blood-vessels need suffer as little compression as possible. Neuralgia, dyspepsia, pneumonia, consumption and all kinds of weaknesses, especially those due to defective circulation, are often traceable to close dressing. Other minor evils frequently follow in their train—such as bad complexion, pale lips, a red nose, falling hair and decayed teeth. Especially must anyone who desires a quick and vigorous intellect take care to dress very loosely.

The plain and almost ugly garb of men requires comparatively little thought from them, and is well adapted to all practical purposes. It is necessary for women to use a great deal of thought in order to make their own costume either healthful or becoming. Yet, in the good providence of God, the right settlement of this matter in the mind of each individual woman is undoubtedly of more consequence to the future development of our race than many of the great political questions now under discussion, important as the latter surely are.—Good Cheer.

HOW TO MAKE A BED.—Says the Philadelphia Press: "Let every bed maker, as soon as all the covers are spread, turn down the upper sheet and all above it, leaving a generous margin below the bolster. Some people, you know, pull all the covers straight up to the top, and lay the bolster upon them, so that when bedtime comes they must be arranged at the head. Boys don't like this way, and, perhaps, some other folks don't, either. It is the custom to pile two big, square pillows on the top of the bolster, and then put on two pillow-shams, and then sometime, or, perhaps, before the pillow-shams, a sheet-sham. This is setting a trap for the unwary. Only a remarkably careful woman is equal to the task of getting off all the 'finery' properly. Why not almost, if not altogether, abolish shams of all kinds? Why not honestly take off the big, square pillows, and supply every bed with a comfortable bolster to take the place of pillows? If you like adornment, embroider or decorate the slips and sheets themselves without any make-believe. Silk, lace and the like seem out of place on a bed, which should suggest repose. Imagine a big boy with boots on, flinging himself into the midst of a fairy creation of pink satin and torchon! Let beds be what they look like, and let them look like what they are—real resting-places."

The Reason Why

Ayer's Pills are so popular is, the while always reliable as a cathar medicine, they never leave any effects. This is because they are pur vegetable, and entirely free from cal mel or any other dangerous drug. In all cases, therefore, whether the pati be old or young, they may be safe dently administered.

In the Southern and Western State where derangements of the liver are general, Ayer's Pills have proved an estimable blessing. D. W. Baine, Berne, N. C., writes:

"I suffered a long time with stoma and liver troubles. I tried various re edies, but received no benefit until commenced taking Ayer's Pills. The pills benefited me at once. I took them regularly for a few months, and my health was completely restored."

Throughout New England, new lung diseases, Stomach and Bow Complaints are the most prevalent.

Dyspepsia

and Constipation are almost univers Mr. Gallacher, a practical chemis Roxbury, Mass., who was long trou with Dyspepsia, writes:

"A friend induced me to try Ayer Pills, and, after taking one box with much benefit, I was disposed to c them; but he urged perseverance before I had finished the second box began to experience relief. I cont taking them, at intervals, until I h used eleven boxes. Suffice it to s that I am now a well man, and grate to your chemistry, which outs mine."

The head and stomach are always sympathy; hence the cause of most those distressing headaches, to wh so many, especially women, are sub Mrs. Harriet A. Marble, of Poughke sie, N. Y., writes that for years she a martyr to headache, and never fou anything to give her more than t porary relief, until she began tak Ayer's Pills, since which she has in the enjoyment of perfect health.

SELBY—Tribute of respect by the Methodist Sabbath-School of Newton, Miss., to Miss MINNIE SELBY:

On Tuesday eve, January 24, the angels left the gates of heaven ajar, for one of earth's weary sufferers, on whom centered all the hopes and fondest love of a devoted family and loving friends, went forth through the gloom of night to join a brother and loved ones gone before. She went not alone, for a convoy of white-winged angels patiently waited to bear her little spirit home. She feared not to die, for she had accepted the Savior's promise—"All the way from earth to heaven I will guide thee with mine own." An angel transplanted just as she was budding into womanhood, for the land was so lovely, what will the flower be?

Love and sympathy avail not when the Great Shepherd slughes out a gentle lamb to be gathered to his flock, and tender embraces that would have shielded her from all mundane harm could only claim the casket when the Master sought to regain a jewel that had so long sparkled to gladden our home.

One chain is not broken: 'tis only another link caught up and riveted in heaven with both ends reaching earth to draw us nearer to the other's side.

Dear Minnie, we will meet and miss you; but when we sing the songs you loved so well and in which your sweet voice led us, we will, with eyes of faith, see you "clad in whiteness, robed in brightness, washed in the blood of the Lamb," singing the new song with the angels around the throne.

MAGEE—Departed this life, in Washington parish, La., September 1887, MRS. CELIA MAGEE, widow of Nehemiah Magee, Esq. Mrs. Magee passed through the terrible affliction of seeing her youngest daughter, just twenty-one years of age, close her eyes in death, when the devoted mother was taken sick, and in the skill of the physicians, care of her affectionate children, sisters and brothers, and numerous kind friends could not avail to save her from the cold hand of death. When this lovely Christian was first conscious of growing worse, she exclaimed "Oh! I am praying for God's will to be done." Her last moments were peaceful, calling her life out sweetly in the arms of Jesus. Mrs. Magee leaves four sons, two daughters, two sisters and two brothers to mourn her untimely loss. Her age was fifty-four years. The remains were tenderly laid by the side of her husband and daughter in the family graveyard. The funeral services were conducted by Rev Mr. Eady. Mrs. Magee was a true Christian, a member of the Baptist Church, loving all Christians without regard to denomination. Two of her children are members of the Baptist, and four of the Methodist Church. May God bless and lead them upward and ooward to the bright home in Heaven, where they will meet their sweet mother and loving sister!

MURRAY—Fell asleep in the arms of Jesus, January 31, 1888, MARY, youngest daughter of Mrs. Virginia Murray, of this city. When we learn all of the lessons life donnies to us; when all our suns and stars have set for evermore, and we clasp the mighty volume of existence to our hearts, how few of us are willing to say, "I am ready." Ready? Where only one-half of life's harvest has been reaped and garnered? Ah, no! human thought can hardly conceive such an idea. Yet the subject of this notice was not only ready, but willing and waiting her Master's call. For months she had been confined to a bed of intense suffering, but no murmur escaped her; an implicit and unwavering confidence in her Savior's love upheld her to the end. Gentle lovable and kind in health, no change was manifested by her in illness. Devoted to her aged mother, brother and three little children, though her young life had been blighted by sorrow, and for months past by extreme suffering, she clung to them in her dying moments, with untold affection, and assurances of a meeting hereafter. Two days before her death, she said to the writer: "I am ready, and so anxious to go. It is hard for all of us, and my poor mother is almost exhausted caring for me; yet I am willing and ready if it is God's will that I must go." Two days after she passed away, like the fragrance of summer blossoms, and even in death her countenance was illuminated with a holy smile, which testified that she had indeed fallen asleep in the arms of Jesus.

LAES.

LINDSEY—Died at the family residence, on Sunday, January 29, 1888, HARRIET WILLIAMS, beloved wife of Berkitt Lindsey, of Dry Creek, La., aged seventy-four years, two months and twenty-nine days. On last Sunday evening there passed from earth the pure soul of Harriet Williams. Deceased was a lady of many virtues, and led an exemplary Christian life for many years, having been recognized by all as a shining light in her community. She was born in Lawrence county, Ark.; removed to Claiborne parish, La., 1850; thence to Caldwell parish, 1860; united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at an early age, and died in the triumph of a living faith. She leaves a husband and nine children, with a large circle of friends, to mourn her loss.

MERCHANT—Died on February 1, 1888, at San Diego, Cal., our sister, ELIZABETH MERCHANT, a faithful member of the Lecompte Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

Resolved, That in her death the temperance cause lost a zealous advocate, the church a worthy member; and that we tender to the bereaved husband and relatives our sincere sympathy and condolence.

Resolved, That our union wear the usual badge of mourning for thirty days.

RICHARDSON—Died near Franklinton, La., November 16, 1887, LITTLE MYRA DEED RICHARDSON, daughter of Bro. S. P. Richardson. At the early age of three years and eleven months this little blossom was plucked from the parent stem by the hand of him who giveth and taketh away. There is now another gem in heaven to make it more attractive to the bereaved friends.

"Obstinate."

This lady was not obstinate, but the disease which vexed her was. For ten years she had a weary and broken-down feeling, with neuralgia and internal troubles, among which were heart palpitation and stomach disorders, accompanied with great pain in the head. Her first report after beginning to take Compound Oxygen showed but little improvement, but she kept on cheerily and hopefully until steady gain rewarded her patient efforts. A month later she noted the temporary disappearance of most of her symptoms. For a while they troubled her by occasional return. In a few weeks she wrote: "The most obstinate symptom is the head trouble. Other symptoms not so severe." Again: "I am now on the third treatment; my stomach and pain in the heart have not troubled me at all since the first three or four days of using it. I am steadily increasing in flesh and strength. You can not imagine how much I have improve in my looks." Thus do the most obstinate maladies yield to the Compound Oxygen treatment; and sufferers who have hardly dared hope to be well have been refurnished with vigor and vitality.

This is a deeply interesting subject. Would you learn more about it? Write to Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa., for books, which will be sent free and will tell all you ask to know.

The true hero is the great, wise man of duty, he whose soul is armed by truth and supported by the smile of God; he who meets life's perils with a cautious but tranquil spirit, gathers strength by facing its storms, and dies, if he is called to die, as a Christian victor at the post of duty.

For physical ailments, especially those incident to declining years, there is no remedy that produces such satisfactory results as Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Balm. Its genial and invigorating effect on Liver and Kidneys is remarkable.

What Can He Do?

The great test in life, says Gen. Thomas J. Morgan, in a paper on "Training as an Element of Education," is rather what a man can do than what he knows. Can he use his eyes? Has he good judgment? Is he a man of common sense? Can he think? Does he reason correctly? Has he power of adaptation? Can he organize? Has he executive force? Is he practical? These are the kind of test-questions that are put to the graduates of our schools. Can the "sweet girl graduate" cook a dinner, sweep a room, or superintend a house? Does she have an intelligent interest in passing events? Has she robust health, good habits, self-reliance, energy, and power of endurance? Can the young man lay aside his diploma and keep his father's accounts, write an article for the newspaper, make a business trip to Chicago, give an intelligent account of the morning's news? Can he lend a hand at home, and turn to some good account in the daily duties of life some of the accumulated stores of knowledge amassed in years of study? Does his education render him more industrious, more skillful and efficient, more ingenious, more persistent, more practically masterful in whatever he undertakes? If he has been trained to use his senses, to acquaint himself with natural phenomena at first hand; if he has been taught to think, to make careful comparison, noting essential differences and significant similarities, making patient inductions and wise generalizations; if he has been led to form fixed habits of thoughtfulness, self-reliance, moral earnestness, inflexibility of purpose, persistent industry, promptness, punctuality, fidelity, unswerving devotion to duty; if, in short, as a result of his school-life, his training has produced a well-rounded character, he will be able to meet all the reasonable demands that society can make upon one who lacks practical experience in actual business. He will readily acquire skill and efficiency in any calling for which his special talents have fitted him. Training gives potency to all the soul's possibilities.—Popular Science.

CAMEOS.—Cameos are made from pieces of sea shell, of which, as everyone must have noticed, while the outside is often rough and unseemly, the interior is perfectly polished, and sometimes of a brilliant color. The shells, which are usually of a species of Cassis and Strombus, natives of the West Indies, are chosen on account of the thickness and hardness of the layers, of the contrast of color between them, and of the presence of knobs on the exterior surface which render it possible to work in relief. When a cameo is begun, a piece of the shell, rather larger than the ornament is intended to be, is cut out and affixed to a holder by a kind of coarse sealing wax. The inner surface of the shell is, of course, the lowest, and on the gray outside the master draws a rough outline of the design, and places the work in the hands of an apprentice, who, by means of a file, reduces the knob to the requisite height, removes all the gray matter that lies outside of the boundary lines, and dresses the whole of the irregular surface. In this condition a cameo looks like an irregular piece of chalk rising out of a small plate of colored glass. It is now returned to the master, who again draws the design in pencil upon it; and from him it passes to another apprentice or workman, who brings out the design with a burin. In late years it has become the fashion to have cameo-portraits taken, but the likenesses, to which the artist usually manages to give a classical turn, are said to be "often striking, always clever, and generally abominable." The great fault of most modern cameo-cutters is an excessive fondness for detail.—Popular Science.

Very Sensible "Japs."

In Japan the old-school physicians are permitted to wear only wooden swords. This is a gently sarcastic way of expressing the opinion that they kill enough people without using weapons. But the druggist who introduced Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery into the Empire carries a fine steel blade. It was found that all who tried this wonderful remedy for coughs, cold, consumptive tendencies, blood, skin and liver troubles, were, without exception, greatly benefited. The Mikado himself is said to have "toned up" his system by its use, and the importer was therefore permitted the exceptional honor of wearing the sword of the nobility.

The Object of the Baptism of the Holy Ghost.

The day of Pentecost is fully come. The disciples are filled with the Holy Ghost, and now they all go forth to be witnesses unto Christ. Do not for a moment think of them all as preachers, and not even of all as doing any distinct and definite work in the church. But all alike go forth to be witnesses unto him—to live over again the life of the Lord Jesus Christ. For this, above everything else, is the power given. They might preach, but the preaching was an empty word without the Christ-like life. The world was to be won not by theories, creeds, methods, but by Christ-like living. Men and women were to go in and out amongst their neighbors, doing their daily work, giving their evidence for Jesus by living him, their lives examined and cross-examined, but their testimony holding good. Whatever difference could it make to anybody that any man should say that Christ was the Son of God, and that he rose from the dead, and that he had sent them out in his name to claim the world for him? The world might well laugh them to scorn. What do these feeble Jews? But when each of them went out to live a Christ-like life, it made a vast difference to everybody—a life of truth, of purity, of self-forgetfulness, of helping everybody, of loving everybody—a life loosed from the pleasure and pride of the world, from the tyranny of its maxims and spirit; a life lifted up from the littleness of the seen and the narrowness of the present, laid out in relation to the Eternal and the Infinite—men could not help feeling that, and believing in it. Very likely they hated the light that condemned them, and the goodness that shamed them, but they could not be indifferent to it. Their very persecution was aimed against its power; it was the acknowledgment: "This is the Heir; come, let us kill him, that the inheritance may be ours." Better, a thousand times better, a persecuted Christianity than a religion which is too weak or too worldly to make anybody feel uncomfortable. Christianity is Christ-likeness—that or nothing.—Pearse.

The peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation of Hood's Sarsaparilla makes this medicine different from others, and superior to them all in actual curative power. Sold by all druggists. Prepared by C. I. Hood & Co., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

Very few people possess the gift of rhetorical eloquence; but it is within the reach of every earnest follower of Jesus, to rise to great eloquence in character and conduct. The best preaching, after all, is the preaching of the daily life. No skeptic ever attempts to refute that. Richard Cecil confessed that when he tried in his early life to be a skeptic, his godly mother's life was too much for him. He afterwards added to this that "his first feelings of religion were made stronger by seeing that truly pious people had a genuine happiness that the things of this world could not give." Sometimes the pulpit discourse is not clear to the understanding, or impressive to the conscience. But the "living epistle" needs no translation or commentary; every child can understand it.—Dr. T. L. Cuyler.

Stamping and Embroidery.

"Yes, Lizzie, I like to do fancy work, but I haven't felt like trying that pattern—or anything else—for a week. These awful 'dragging-down' pains are just killing me"! "I know how you feel, and I can tell you where to look for relief. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a certain cure for all those peculiar weaknesses and distressing ailments. Why! it even cured me of prolapsus, and many of my lady friends have been cured of various grave maladies peculiar to our sex by this wonderful medicine." It is the only medicine sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money refunded. Read guarantee on bottle-wrapper.

They do not really suffer defeat who make their submission to God; they who, while opposing him, seem to conquer, can win but a perilous and short-lived victory.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The American Shipping and Industrial League, to which delegates were in attendance from a large number of States of the Union, met in this city on January 16.

A remarkable phenomenon manifested itself near Akron, Ohio, early on the morning of the sixteenth. People in the vicinity of the seat of the trouble were thrown out of bed, and windows and ceiling crumbled, while the earth rocked, the convulsions being preceded by terrific reports of an explosion.

The Senate has confirmed the nomination of J. Harvey Brigham to be United States consul at Paso del Norte, Mexico.

A most disastrous fire occurred in the heart of Providence, R. I., on January 16. The loss is estimated at nearly $700,000.

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds has authorized Mr. Newton to report the bill recommending an appropriation not exceeding $400,000 for the purchase of the site for the postoffice at New Orleans.

Capt. Richard Sinnott, surveyor of the port, of this city, died February 17.

The strike in the Lehigh and Schuylkill regions is ended. It was terminated by means of arbitration.

The loss of stock in the Navajo county during the severe storms of this winter is estimated at $50,000.

A cyclone struck the town of Mount Vernon, Ill., on February 19, and left it in ruins, killing fifteen to twenty people, and it is feared many more than are now known to have been killed will be found among the ruins of the buildings. A fire immediately broke out all over the city among the ruins, spreading rapidly, owing to the damage done to the engines by the wind. Over 500 buildings were demolished. The loss is estimated at $500,000.

A train on the Alabama and Great Southern railroad dashed through a drove of fifty mules at Akron recently and killed eight of them outright. The locomotive kept on its way without leaving the rails.

Mr. W. W. Corcoran, the aged millionaire and philanthropist of Washington, D. C., is seriously ill, and his relatives have been telegraphed for.

On the morning of February 20 one of the boilers in Bemis' Shingle Mill, in West Melville, La., exploded, totally destroying everything connected with it, killing three persons and injuring several others.

The Senate Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds has agreed to report favorably the bill appropriating $1,200,000 for a postoffice building at New Orleans. Of this amount $900,000 would go to the erection of the building and $300,000 for a site.

The Senate in secret session, February 20, listened to the reading of the fishery treaty, and then for an hour there ensued an earnest but unsuccessful struggle to make it public. The document is commented upon by one side as practically conceding that the Canadian contention has been correct as to the interpretation of the treaty of 1818. Upon the other hand, senators friendly to the administration express the opinion that all has been accomplished by the department that could be expected.

FOREIGN.

In the House of Commons Mr. William O'Brien said that Mr. Balfour had failed to smash the Irish organization or weaken the spirit of the Irish people or degrade them in the eyes of the world.

Full reports concerning the condition of the Crown Prince, issued by Prof. Virchow and Dr. Mackenzie, state that the disease with which he is afflicted is not of a cancerous nature.

Reports from the interior of Russia concur in stating that the publication of the Austro-German treaty, taken in connection with Bismarck's speeches on the military bill, have created intense irritation among all classes.

The Pesther Lloyd says it has learned that the current rumors to the effect that Belgium and Holland have entered into a defensive alliance with Germany are well founded.

It is said that Dr. Mackenzie has protested against the course of treatment by the German doctors in the case of the Crown Prince.

The trial of M. Wilson on the charge of swindling in connection with the Legion of Honor decorations scandals, begun February 15 before correctional tribunal.

The Czar asks a substantial recognition of the rights of Russia to control Bulgaria and Roumelia. Prince Ferdinand and the Sobranje are to be wiped out, and a Russian council with a Turkish collegeare to reorganize the army and control the elections for a new Sobranje. Russia further claims the right to occupy the principality until the Czar deems it proper to withdraw his troops.

The beautiful memorial window to the memory of the poet Milton, presented by G. W. Childs, of Philadelphia, to St. Margaret's Church, London, was unveiled February 19.

It is semi-officially announced that Russia will shortly request the signers of the Berlin treaty to notify the Porte that the election of Prince Ferdinand as Prince of Bulgaria was illegal.

Heavy snow storms prevailed on February 19 throughout England, France and Spain.

The Bishop of Georgia presided at a grand service in Pere Hyacinthe's Church, in Paris, on last Sunday. Pere Hyacinthe preached an eloquent sermon, advocating the unity of Christendom and general disarmament. His listeners frequently applauded.

The Porte has sent a note to Russia complaining that Austria fails to protect her Mohammedan subjects in Bosnia and Herzegovina from persecution at the hands of Greeks, and asking that those provinces be again placed under Turkish administration.

WANTED.—Agents for the marvelous work "Fifty Years in the Church of Rome." Address I. Q. REYNOLDS, 203 Lafayette street, New Orleans.

Another Extraordinary Offer.

After this date we will include in our club arrangement the New York Weekly World, the price of which, including all postage, will be three dollars. This amount will entitle the subscriber to one copy of the "World's History of the United States," post paid.

This history is on a new plan. It is the record of the events of our history in the order in which they happened. There are no moralizings, no opinions put forth, no criticisms offered in regard to anything. It is not a political record merely, but one of all sorts of facts that have contributed to make our history. Discoveries, inventions, financial and literary matters, are all noted. One merit of the work is, that it can not grow old. The date of an event, when once ascertained, is fixed for all time. The book has twenty-four very good illustrations. We regard it as a valuable book for every student.

Old and new subscribers are entitled to the premium. Subscribers who have already paid will receive the History and the Weekly World one year by sending one dollar. Cash to accompany all orders.

My Little Girl

Had a dreadful and a very alarming cough, that at one time after trying every prescription we feared from her not receiving any benefit that serious results would follow. I was advised to try Taylor's Cherokee Remedy of Sweet Gum and Mullein. A permanent cure was the result.

Southern Cultivator and Christian Advocate.

By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer to new subscribers for the ADVOCATE, the Southern Cultivator and Dixie Farmer, combined with the ADVOCATE, for $2 50 for the two publications for one year. The price to old subscribers will remain the same as heretofore—$2 75—with only twenty-five cents extra to either of the above amounts for "Dickson's System of Farming." These rates are postage prepaid. All orders must be accompanied by cash in full; no allowance for commission to agents, and both papers must be ordered at same time. We will, however, fill orders to subscribers who failed to take advantage of the club rate when they last renewed for $1 for the Cultivator for one year.

JANUARY 1, 1888.

The Emperor of Germany is said to be in a very feeble condition. He is almost constantly in tears owing to the news regarding the Crown Prince. The Empress is also deeply affected.

"Fifteen Objections to Church Entertainments."

The contents of this pamphlet is a sermon preached in Carondelet Street Church by Rev. Beverly Carradine, and was published by request. The price is put at about cost—i. e., ten cents per copy, $1 per dozen, $7 per hundred.

HUGH JAMIESON, JR., Publisher,

Count Schonvaloff, Russian embassador, in an interview with Count Herbert Bismarck, suggested that the Powers unite in advising the Porte as Suzerian of Bulgaria to declare Prince Ferdinand's exercise of power illegal.

Our American doctrine of strict separation between Church and State implies no hostility between the two, no necessary estrangement even, and no disparagement of either. Least of all is the church disparaged. In different degrees in its different branches, but more or less effectively in all its branches, it represents the most stupendous realities and interests. It articulates what all men instinctively believe and feel. Behind the visible it marshals the invisible. Underneath all law it discerns and asserts a Legislating Will. In every whisper of conscience it hears the voice of God. In every moment of time it recognizes a suggestion of eternity. In short, its office is to teach us how to live and how to die.—Hitchcock.

PROTECT OUR BREAD.

The machinery of the law cannot be put at work too speedily or too vigorously against the wholesale adulteration of the things we eat. Both the health and the pockets of the people demand protection.

There is no article of food in general use more wickedly adulterated than the lower grades of baking powder.

For raising bread, biscuit or other food only the very best and purest baking powder should be employed. The use of the ordinary cream of tartar, or of baking powders containing lime, alum and phosphates, carries deleterious ingredients into the food to the prejudice of the life and health of the consumer.

The sale of adulterated baking powders has been prohibited by statute in several localities. It will be in the interests of the public health when their sale is made a misdemeanor everywhere, and the penalties of the law are rigidly enforced.

The ordinary baking powder contains either lime, which, introduced into the system in too free quantities, causes serious disorders of the kidneys; alum, a corrosive poison, or lime phosphates, which are condemned by physicians as deleterious in their effect when taken under certain physical conditions. The Royal is the only baking powder on the market that is free from lime, alum and phosphates, and absolutely pure.

The absolute purity of the Royal Baking Powder makes it pre-eminently the most useful and wholesome leavening agent known. Containing no lime, alum, phosphate or other impurity, it leaves no alkaline or other residuum in the food, and its use always insures pure, light and sweet bread, biscuit and cake, that are perfectly digestible and wholesome whether hot or cold, fresh or stale. Its leavening power has been determined the highest whenever tested by official authority, and all chemists and writers on food hygiene commend it for its sterling qualities.

THOSE HOLY TEARS.

BY REV. F. DENISON.

Those holy tears the Savior shed
Above a loved one's tomb,
Reveal his thoughts of our loved dead.
To dissipate our gloom.

His deep compassion gave relief
Before the gate of Nain,
And still relieves the mourner's grief
In every funeral train.

He passed the portals of the grave,
And in its darkness lay;
But, rising, proved his power to save,
And bear our fears away.

Preparing now our homes on high—
Rich mansions of his love—
He speaks to soothe each anguished sigh,
And bids us look above.

Because I live, my followers live."
We hear him, gracious, say—
Sweet words that consolation give
To stricken hearts to-day.

Primacy of St. Peter.

BY REV. J. A. PARKER.

The primacy of the Pope of Rome depends for its existence as a fact on the primacy of Peter by reason of succession.

The passage of Scripture upon which Rome depends for support of this claim is found in Matthew xvi, 18, 19, a correct exegesis of which will, we think, utterly destroy every vestige of foundation for it.

To analyze and explain a passage of Scripture is easy enough when the truth can be ascertained by following other exegetes. But to start out on a line, not exactly in accord with what others have written, is not altogether so assuring. This is especially true of such passages as have been explained along all the lines from the extreme literalism of Rome, on the one hand, to the extreme mysticism of Protestants on the other.

Haganbuch, followed by Edgar and many others, gives four or five distinct versions of the passage under consideration. In none of these opinions, however, can the primacy of the Pope stand alone. Even granting all that the most extreme literalist can ask, it matters not in the least how much or how little supremacy was granted to Peter; if he has no true, divinely appointed spiritual successor to enter into his possession of that supremacy, no one can be the better or mightier for it. The primacy of Elijah descended to Elisha with his robe, and Elisha became his successor in office, having his spirit of gentleness, his heart of love, his soul of mercy, and his word of prophecy. Hence, it matters not whether the church was built upon Peter, and "the keys of the kingdom" given to him alone, or to all the apostles, or to the Lord himself, or to Peter's faith, if the claimant of his primacy be not his true spiritual successor. It is, therefore, clear that the primacy of the Pope of Rome depends on two things, viz.:

1. That the church was built upon Peter, and the keys of the kingdom given to him personally; and

2. That the Pope of Rome is Peter's divinely appointed successor.

If either of these grounds fail, there is no support for the dogmas, and papal supremacy must fall.

The Nashville Advocate, of a few weeks ago, in an extended editorial on Matthew xvi, 18, 19, quoting the text, says: "Thou art Peter (a rock), and upon this rock (in the Greek, this very rock) I will build my church."

We beg the editor's pardon. We can not read it that way. I have examined two Greek Testaments, and I find in each that Petros was spoken to, and the foundation of the church was described as petra. Now, turning to Liddell and Scott (Greek lexicon) I find: "Petros, a piece of rock, a stone, and thus distinguished from petra," etc. "Petra, a rock generally, whether peaked or ridged." There is no example in good authors of petra in the signification of petros for a single stone. Instead, therefore, of the rendering given by Dr. Fitzgerald, I would give this, as more literal and true to the Lord's meaning: "Thou art Peter (a piece of rock—a stone), and on this rock I will build my church." Peter was a part of the Lord's body in that mystical sense that we are "one in him." This view is supported by St. Paul, who declared Christ to be our Rock, our Head, and we "members of his body." (Eph. v, 30.) "Ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular." (1 Cor. xii, 27.) It was, therefore, most fitting for the Lord to guard against the sin of preferment among his disciples, which daily confronted him, and give a form of expression which showed up each one of them in his proper individual relationship to the Master. Moreover, Paul precludes the possibility of building the church on Peter—a piece of rock, a mere stone. (1 Cor. iii, 11.)

This much as to the founding of the church on Peter.

As to "the keys of the kingdom," the case is different. "Unto thee"—the apostles were all present—"will I give the keys of the kingdom: and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth, shall be loosed in heaven." (Verse 19.)

Taking this verse in connection with verse 18, it is about as if the Lord had said: Thou art, by the power of my grace, a fragment of the living Rock, and on this Rock I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. And unto you I give its protection—its keeping—and whatever you do on earth, in your righteous judgment, shall be recognized in heaven, etc.

On this point, however, the only questions between Romanism and Protestantism are:

1. Was this oversight given to Peter personally, or to Peter in common with the other apostles?

2. Did this authority extend to the bodies of men in their relation to the church only, or to the souls of men in their relation to eternity?

No little depends on a correct answer to these two questions, since it matters little upon whom the church is built, if authority over the souls of men is given to any one mortal among men.

That such authority was not given to Peter appears from Eph. ii, 19-22. An examination of this passage reveals the fact that all Christians are equal. "Fellow-citizens with the saints"—"fitly framed together," making one "holy temple in the Lord," and "builded together" in him.

Stronger, and more conclusive still, is Matthew xviii, 15-19. In order that it may be seen that the giving of the "keys of the kingdom" pertained to the government of the church, let it be noticed:

First—Soon after the conversation recorded in Matthew xvi, 18, 19, the Lord and his disciples left "the coasts of Cesarea Philippi," and went to Capernaum.

Second—While here the question of church discipline arose touching offenses.

Third—As a first step, private reproof was to be given by the apostles. If not successfully corrective, one or two witnesses were to be taken to the offender, and, if this failed of correction, then the matter had to be referred to the church. Then said the Master, speaking, not to Peter alone (for it is doubtful if Peter was there at the time—see verse 21), but to all the apostles: "If he neglect to hear the church, let him be unto thee as a heathen man and a publican. Verily I say unto you" (all the apostles except, possibly, Peter), "Whatsoever ye shall bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever ye shall loose on earth, shall be loosed in heaven."

Here, then, is seen communicated to all the apostles the very same power which was given to Peter with the "keys of the kingdom;" and this power demonstrated to be over the bodies of men only, and to that extent only in their relation to the church.

Peter's name—a stone—furnished the occasion for a personal appeal to him, while the appellation of Christ—our Rock—suggested the differentia. Pastoral responsibility, under the symbol of "keys," and enforced by the injunction, "Feed my sheep," was clearly set forth.

In Memoriam.

REV. DANIEL MORSE.

BY REV. H. M. BOOTH.

By the dying request of this servant of God, renewed by the family after death, I will endeavor to give a sketch of his life and death. Associated with him in our early ministry of near half a century ago, in the Mississippi Conference, and the latter years of our ministry in the East Texas Conference, I will seek to photograph a portraiture of this faithful servant of the church, as a memorial of his worth as a man and minister.

Rev. Daniel Morse was a native of New England, and, possessing the energy and enterprise characteristic of his countrymen, he left the paternal roof in boyhood to seek his fortune in a more congenial clime. Coming South, we find him in young manhood a subject of converting grace, and a call to the ministry in Georgia, where he became a local preacher. Emigrating to Mississippi, he soon joined the Mississippi Conference, and traveled several years in that Conference, sustaining himself well on some of the best circuits of the Conference. Coming to Texas about forty years ago, his life-work was consummated in extensive travels and labors abundant in the southwest of his adopted State, reaching to the northeast and south, chiefly as a presiding elder, for which position in the church he had special aptitude and adaptation, traveling more districts, consecutively and continuously, than probably any minister, living or dead, in Texas; commending himself, in this official and important relation to the church, to the Bishops, the preachers of his districts, and the people, as eminently qualified to discharge his high trusts. He had fine administrative and executive qualifications, was a firm disciplinarian, but judicious and mild in its administration.

He traveled districts up to his threescore and ten years, always acceptably to preachers and people. He was a delegate to the General Conference of 1874, from the East Texas Conference. We come now to the elements of his character, which gave efficiency to his life-labors and sacrifices as a traveling preacher. I would record here his dying charge in requesting the writer, his life-long friend, to write his obituary for the NEW ORLEANS and Texas Advocates: "Do not write too much." With a deep sense of his unworthiness and imperfections, he deprecated a eulogistic memorial. Bro. Thompson, in reply to this declaration, said to me: "You can not say too much; so do not restrict your eulogy of his character."

Bro. Morse was endowed with elements of character combining the attributes of the isothermal lines of latitude of his Northern and Southern homes. He brought with him extraordinary energy, strict economy, and an enterprise that never flagged in a laborious itinerant life of near half a century. This indomitable spirit, emancipated from the domination of the isms of the region of his birth, was pervaded by the genial, sympathetic, ardent animus of the clime of his adoption. This combination of character made him a most efficient minister in temporal and spiritual affairs. He was a success in both. We can appropriately place him among the heroic band of veterans who traversed this broad land when a minister's life was no sinecure, but one of toil and hardship.

He possessed good ability as a preacher and writer, and has left memorials of his power of speech and pen. In his social life there was great geniality and conversational versatility, always ready to speak a word for the Master, in whatever company he was found—on horseback, or railroad, or steamboat—meeting with ready repartee the flings of the enemies of Christianity, and ever ready to comfort and cheer the desponding and afflicted. In social life he was very genial and agreeable, very pleasant in the relation of incidents of his itinerant life, abounding in anecdotal recital.

The last years of his itinerant life, in the relations of supernumerary and superannuated, have been devoted to reading and writing reminiscences of the past in the Mississippi and Texas Conferences, with which all are familiar.

In closing this imperfect sketch of my now sainted friend, I will give my last interview with him on his dying-bed. It was on that blessed Sabbath morn of the last East Texas Conference, at Marshall. I rode out to his residence at Hickory Grove instead of going to Conference love-feast, and it was a feast of love to my soul and all who were present members of his household. The dying saint was filled with holy ecstacy, his heart exalting and glowing with the divine attlatus. His words of triumphant exultation will never be forgotten on earth or in heaven. It was good to be there, realizing that the place where the good man dies is privileged above the common walks of men, quite on the verge of heaven. Thank God! "Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his." May God sustain the bereaved and stricken widow and sorrowing children!

Nashville Correspondence.

The Christian element in Nashville has not suffered the question of theatre-going to fall into insignificance as a dead-letter law of the evangelical churches since Mr. Candler's vigorous utterance against the evil last fall. In the subsequent sensational controversy, long drawn out by the daily press of Nashville, the church has suffered from misrepresentation and the folly of one of her most trusted servants; but it is nevertheless safe to say that the Methodist representation among theatre-goers has been relatively smaller this season than ever before. The church needed a thorough awakening on the subject, and there has been a resulting increase of earnestness among church members who are sincerely disposed to abide by the Discipline of their church. Nor has the movement for reform in this matter been confined to the Methodists. The leading representatives of the old-school and Cumberland Presbyterian Churches in the city have given unequivocal testimony against the theatre from their pulpits, and have met with an encouraging response in the pews. Dr. Hubbert, of the Cumberland persuasion, has published his sermon, entitled, "Shall We All Go to the Theatre?" in pamphlet form, and it merits a wide circulation among the people.

In so far as the Missionary Treasurer has been complicated in the controversy, there is little now to be said. Dr. Kelley's latest retraction has opened the question again, and added to the dilemma of the church. Various predictions are hazarded, and the annual meeting of the Mission Board is looked to with an especial interest. The past few months have shown our people that there is no telling what a day may bring forth in the way of startling communications, and any future developments will find us prepared for their reception. Mr. Spurgeon's note to Mr. Candler, emphatically denying the truth of Miss Abbott's boast of his friendship and approval of the stage, has been published in one of the Nashville dailies, and has caused amused gratification in Methodist circles, and an increased confidence in the great London preacher.

The Educational Conference, to be held in Nashville during the month of May, is a wise measure on the part of Southern Methodist educators. The educational forces of the church have suffered through want of proper organization and correlation, and the proposed scheme of this conference is to bring the different Methodist schools into harmonious relations with each other and with the church. The movement is being earnestly pushed by Dr. Tillett, of Vanderbilt University, and the Bishops and leading educators of the church have testified as to their unqualified commendation of the plan.

The new hymn book is going through the press, and will soon be ready for use. Many Methodists feel a sort of reluctance in giving up the old book which has been in use during the entire period of their religious life, perhaps; but there can be no doubt that the new revision will soon prove its superior claims for general acceptance and popularity. Some of the old-time Methodist favorites, obsolete during these later years, are reintroduced in the new book, and the appendix contains many popular gospel hymns of the day, which are yet hardly worthy of an enduring place in the body of the book. The work of the Committee of Revision included the elimination of a number of hymns; but it is safe to say that they can well be spared, and that their places will be more than filled by the new selections made by the committee.

The Nashville preachers, irrespective of denomination, have taken a bold stand against the Sunday newspaper, by means of a resolution according to which all church notices are to be withheld from the Sunday morning paper. Both sides of the question were argued with great earnestness, but the final test showed a vote of twelve to five—the victory for the supporters of the resolution. The only result that can be looked for lies in the possible sympathy and support of church members, for the Sunday paper will continue to publish a full list of divine services for the day, copied from the paper of the previous evening. This question of Sunday observance, or non-observance, has reached alarming proportions in this latter half of our century, and it is time for Christian workers in our cities to make an effort toward stemming the anti-religious current that threatens us from our imported population. In the newspaper matter, however, the newspaper men affirm that it is the Monday morning paper that involves the Sunday work; so some Christians find it difficult to draw the line with consistency and fairness.

Among recent visitors to our Methodist headquarters, the Rev. George Needham, of Colorado, may be mentioned. The courageous and modest preacher from the largest circuit (geographically speaking) in the church gave the McKendree people a piquant and eminently Western touch when he referred to the pleasure he felt in "hitching on" to such a congregation as that before him.

Bishop Keener's recent articles on the location of the Garden of Eden are leading his readers into deep waters, and are exciting much interest. The subject will be a source of conjecture and theorizing with ecclesiastical historians for all time, but not the less interesting on that account are individual expressions of opinion. The Episcopos of the Delta has originality in more directions than one.

The recent severe weather has given proof of the Nashville Methodists' fidelity and punctuality as regards church attendance. The pastors report good congregations and activity in church work, and there is every indication that the Methodist Churches throughout the city are in a flourishing condition, materially and spiritually.

SPECTATOR.

The Study of the Scriptures.

No study is more important! None yields such immense remunerations! None so clears the intellectual faculties! None so purifies the spiritual perceptions! None so exalts a human being! It is association with the pure and the holy Being who is revealed therein, and ends in a transformation into "the same image from glory to glory as by the Spirit of the Lord." Whatever our readers may think of Mr. Gladstone as a politician, the following from him on the subject of studying the Scriptures can not be uninteresting:

"Two things, however, especially I will commend to your thoughts. The first is this: Christianity is Christ, and nearness to him and to his image is the end of all your efforts. Thus the gospels, which continually present to us One Pattern, have a kind of precedence among the books of Holy Scripture. I advise your remembering that the Scriptures have two purposes—one to feed the people of God in green pastures, the other to serve for proof of doctrine. These are not divided by a sharp line from one another, yet they are provinces on the whole distinct, and in some ways different. We are variously called to various works. But we all require to feed in the pastures and to drink at the wells. For this purpose the Scriptures are incomparably simple to all those willing to be fed. The same can not be said in regard to the proof or construction of doctrine. This is a desirable work, but not for us all. It requires to be pursued with more of external helps—more learning and good guides, more knowledge of the historical development of our religion, which development is one of the most wonderful parts of all human history, and, in my opinion, affords also one of the strongest demonstrations of its truth, and of the power and goodness of God."

The following is the definition of a "blizzard" by the Pioneer Press, of St. Paul:

"A blizzard means something as nearly as possible like the sand storm of the desert, with pulverized ice in place of sand, and a temperature as many degrees below freezing as the other marks above. Its accompaniments are perfectly well defined. They are a very low temperature, never in the genuine blizzard rising above the zero point; a tremendous wind velocity, equal to that of the most violent gales of the stormy season at sea; and the filling of the air with needle-points of ice, which blind the eyes and cut and sting like miniature arrows wherever they strike. This is the storm which benumbs, bewilders and destroys life in its path."

When daily life is to do the will of God, no disappointment is possible; neither can failure come in. Step by step following, is the most quieting, disentangling thing in the world.

EVENING INQUIRIES.

BY L. H. STOKES.

What good to-day? Have kindly thoughts been Cherished?
Have words been spoken full of gentle grace?
Some one bear bolted, who but for thee had perished?
Some sad heart seen the sunlight of thy face?

Something, I hope, I prayed for help this morning—
I asked for strength to do some little good;
Asked that the spirit all unworthiness adorning,
Might move my lips with words of gratitude.

One tear was dried! One little tear of sorrow;
One throb of heart-pain found a sweet relief;
My soul was glad and fondly said, "To-morrow,
With help divine, I'll soothe some greater grief."

The Goodness of God.

God is good. He is essentially good. His name means "good." This is the true notion of the Divine and Infinite Being, and it is obliged to carry with it the highest confidence and respect. It appears to me that no one can place confidence in or give his devotion to anything that he does not, in some sense, suppose to be good. To say that God is good conveys to the mind the idea of his immutability; and this should always be thought of in connection with his goodness. "There is in him no variableness, neither shadow of turning." It is hard for human beings to realize that God is good. They argue things in this way: "I do not see how God can allow some things that transpire in this world and be good." Great calamities, they say, befall men; why does he not prevent them? The trouble with men in regard to this lies in the fact that they are deficient as to what goodness is. "My ways are not as your ways," saieth the Lord. There was at least one time in the life of the Psalmist when God's goodness was a problem that he could not fully solve. On account of it "his feet were almost gone; his steps had well nigh slipped." It was a mystery to him how the ungodly could prosper in the world—increase in riches, having more than heart can wish, not being in trouble like other men, and that he who professed to believe in God was "plagued and chastened every morning." Many have failed right at this point. Their feet have slipped, and they have fallen to rise no more. But the Psalmist found a key to this problem: "When I went into the sanctuary of God, then understood I their end." When he went into the house of the Lord, there was such light poured forth that every part of the mystery was made manifest. There is no place to-day that equals the house of the Lord for making clear one's spiritual vision. It is then that anyone takes, if he is desirous to do so, the most satisfactory view of human life. There is a large number of people that do not believe that God is good, and they are in rebellion. For instance, we will say a man of this class has one son, and he thinks that that son is intellectual, honest, high-toned in all respects; and this father willingly and cheerfully spends much money in an effort to educate him—he wants to fit him for some high and honorable position in life—and he gets killed or sickens and dies, but this father can not see how God can be good and allow that; and he says that God has treated him unjustly. The fault is in him, not in God. I met a brother one day. I asked: "How are you getting along religiously?" "Not very well," was his answer. Said I, "Isn't God good to you?" He said: "It does not seem that he is good to me." He was a farmer, and he gave me to understand that God was treating him badly because he made such a poor crop, and that he had had so much sickness. That is just the way that many people reason. One man says God has been good to me. Why? Because I have had such a good time. That is a false idea. God is good, no matter what experience a person has had. God is good to all, and at all times. This is what Job saw. He saw, when he was reduced to the lowest point of poverty and suffering, that God was as good as he was in the brighest day of his prosperity. This was evidenced by this remarkable utterance: "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away, blessed be the name of the Lord." His wife did not believe that God is good. Her saying, "Curse God and die," indicates it manifestly. Intense suffering may be the highest expression of goodness. The surgeon often shows the highest goodness of which he is capable when he is cutting into the most sensitive part of a man's body to save him. Persecutions may arise, losses may occur, afflictions may come, sorrows may fill the heart, and great calamities may befall; but the fact that God is good—worthy of all confidence—affords the strongest consolation and support. To this anyone can cling in the darkest hour.

L. C. CALHOUN.

Stop and Think.

An earnest life is the true life. A life devoid of earnestness can never measure up to that standard of living taught by our Lord. Much has been written against Puritanism. It is the custom of some to inveigh as heartily against the rigid, unbending ethics of that grand old race of men as if they were now living under their stern rule. But, as I conceive it, there is no danger of ecclesiastical or spiritual tyranny just now. The danger is in the opposite direction. It is a lack of "moral thoughtfulness;" defined by Thomas Arnold as "an inquiring love of truth going along with a divine love of goodness." How essential is this element to all true living let the individual possessing it consider. Thoughtfulness, earnestness in prayer, in Christian work, in all Christly service. Superficial work in this sphere seems to me mere mockery. I am sure there is no satisfaction in it, unless it be a transitory gratification of a shameless vanity. Yet thousands grasp the eddying, whirling froth and bubbles on the surface, not discerning the living water beneath which alone can assuage the soul's thirst.

I think of the many earnest men and women who have lived to scatter untold blessings upon the world of humanity about them; and the great necessity for this element in life grows upon me. And then let one look into his own soul. In the glory and splendor of that "inner light," as it beams upon the palace where spirit holdeth communion with spirit, I discern no room for the jester. His cap and bells are excluded. He may dwell in an airy mansion near by; but when thought, reason and reflection come in he is not a welcome guest. "Be ye earnest," would be a good motto to inscribe over the portal of that mansion, "so royal, rich and wide," where dwelleth the soul.

The deepest experiences, the divinest joys—pure pearls and flawless jewels—do not float on the surf of life's fathomless sea, but are found away down in serene depths, in recesses undisturbed by wave, unmolested by storm. A thoughtful, earnest man is a quiet man. Though earnest thought is the mighty agent that says to tempestuous passion, "Peace be still;" and the tumultuous lashings are hushed, even as the Christ calmed Galilee. Thoughtfulness in service, thoughtfulness in prayer, in all our plans, in all our purposes, let this be our vade mecum continually.

S. J. DAVIES.

OCELOUSAS, Louisiana.

A Leaf from a Presiding Elder's Diary.

Feb. —, 1888.—Home again; trip on horseback this time: distance traveled, 180 miles; absent only fourteen days; held three Quarterly Conferences: one at a church on Bogue Lusa—they assess themselves liberally and pay the assessment; next at a little church on the Bogue Homo, where seventy Methodists worship. They are very poor there, but good people. With utmost energy the gallberry flats of that section yields but a meagre support to the farmers. The sterility there pertains to the soil mostly. In conversation with one sister, I learned that she was the mother of seventeen children. I saw many other children thereabouts. The pastor made a speech for the ADVOCATE; got one new subscriber. This, added to the old list at that place, brought the number up—one. The preacher does his full duty in the ADVOCATE's behalf, and I don't know but what the membership do their duty also, at least the majority of them. They make about as liberal an assessment, according to their ability, as any church I know of; and they pay it. Now, one man told me that many families around about lived on bread alone for several months in the year—cornbread, and that scarce and hard to get. Many of the young ladies in that region can't attend church with much regularity for want of proper dressing. They are not Flora McFlimsy's either, but they don't like to go to church barefooted, and are not able to furnish themselves with shoes. They love to go to church. I have known young ladies to walk eight miles to church at that place. The other Quarterly Conference was on the highland. They also pay their assessment: but they have an extraordinary steward, a handy man. He attended a Baptist meeting some time ago; the preacher asked if he would help him in the service. He consented, supposing he desired him to close with prayer; but the preacher asked him to open the service by reading a chapter, singing and prayer. The preacher "not being a very good reader," the steward complied. After the sermon, a young lady applied for membership. They went down to the pool to immerse her. The place being a little miry, the preacher asked the steward if he would assist him. Steward said, "I suppose so." "Well, are you willing to go in the water," said the pastor. "Yes; if necessary," said the steward. So they entered the pool, one on each side of the candidate. It was about two feet deep in water, and one foot deep in mud. In moving around to plant themselves in the proper position, they stirred up the mud. The steward remarked: "This is quite muddy." The pastor said: "I reckon it will do." The ceremony over, the pastor left the subject in the hands of the steward, and made for the shore. He, being a little feeble, and the place miry, had some difficulty in landing. The steward had some difficulty in getting the lady ashore; but he is young and stout. He said the whole affair made him feel a little queer. Being an unordained man, he doubted if it was right for him to take so active a part in this sacred ceremony. Another queer thing occurred not far from this place. A good brother, of quite liberal views—sometimes he is a Methodist preacher, then he is a Baptist preacher, and again a Methodist. On one occasion, when he happened to be a Methodist, a Baptist preacher happened to be present at a service. He called on him to close. The Baptist brother arose, and said: "All of you that will join me in prayer to the Lord to forgive this brother for all his faults and errors, please kneel." Not one remained sitting but the brother that preached. He says he "loves for people to pray for him, but on that occasion, somehow or other, it made him feel mighty curious."

In Memoriam.

Mrs. Thurza Ann Lamkin (nee Killgore) was born in Jasper county, Ga., May 1, 1819, and died at her residence, in Summit, Miss., December 26, 1887. These dates span a life of more than ordinary interest, and which, therefore, deserves more than a mere passing notice.

Miss Killgore joined the Methodist Church early in life—when not more than fifteen years of age. Her membership extended over a period of more than fifty-three years. Of the time and circumstances of her conversion we are not informed, but the fact thereof, manifested by her godly life, none who knew her will question who recognize the rule laid down by Christ: "A tree is known by its fruit." She was happily married, in Columbus, Ga., November 5, 1835, to John T. Lamkin, Esq. Mr. Lamkin was a young lawyer. In January, 1840, he came to Mississippi, and located in Holmesville, then the county seat of Pike. He became one of the first lawyers of his adopted State, and was highly esteemed for his many virtues as a husband, father, neighbor and citizen. No doubt the success of his life was, in a large measure, attributable to the wise counsel and daily companionship of the wife of his youth.

In ante-bellum days Holmesville became a flourishing village. It was the center of an intelligent population. Many cultivated families lived in and around the town. Among the very best of these was the family of Mr. Lamkin. He established an elegant home, and was "given to hospitality." Over that home Mrs. Lamkin, then in the zenith of a splended womanhood, presided with queenly grace and unaffected dignity. Mr. Lamkin attended the Methodist Church with his family, and often entertained the ministers of Christ at his house. His mother was a member of his family until her death, which occurred, I believe, during our Civil War. She was a cultured, consecrated Christian lady, "of whom the world was not worthy." I think she was one of the most saintly women I ever knew. Her presence lent a sacred charm to every circle in which she moved.

Under these hallowed influences the Christian character of the subject of this sketch developed healthfully and symmetrically. She was a model woman in every relation which she was called upon to sustain. "None knew her but to love her." Solomon's description of a virtuous woman, in Proverbs xxxi, may be applied to her. Take these passages especially: "She stretcheth out her hand to the poor; yea, she reacheth forth her hands to the needy." "Her husband is known in the gates, when he sitteth among the elders of the land." "She openeth her mouth with wisdom; and in her tongue is the law of kindness." "Her children arise up, and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her."

But the brightest pictures of human happiness in this life are often shadowed. The war, and then death, brought a desolation to that home that can be better imagined than described. Mr. Lamkin served as captain of a company in the army for a time, and then as a Representative in the Confederate Congress until the surrender. He then resumed the practice of law, but his health soon began to fail; and, after a protracted illness, "the strong man bowed himself," and died May 19, 1870. Mrs. Lamkin endured these afflictions with fortitude. They drew her nearer to Christ and deepened her piety.

In the month of August, 1874, Mrs. Lamkin removed with her family to Summit, Miss., where she spent the remainder of her days on earth. Here she was esteemed by all who knew her as one of the best members of the church of her early choice. She walked in the light of God, and adorned the doctrines of the gospel in all things. She was specially helpful, as a mother in Israel, to the youthful pastor under whose ministry her last years on earth were spent. When her health began to decline so that it became apparent that her departure was near at hand, she felt no fear. She was calm and assured in the face of death.

Sunday evening, December 17, rallying from a severe attack in which it was thought she would have passed away, she talked to her family about dying, giving them every assurance of her readiness to meet her Lord. She also talked to persons who were dead as if they were present (and were they not?), locating them in different parts of the room. Among these were members of her own family who had passed away from earth. When the final test came, December 26, she died in great peace, as only a Christian can die. May God comfort her sorrowing children and bring them all to meet her in heaven!

Women as Stewards.

MR. EDITOR: Can women of our church be elected to the office of steward, and, therefore, become members of Quarterly Conferences? The decision of a presiding elder, at a recent Quarterly Conference, was, that they could not. His decision was made with reference to a decision by a Bishop at a former Annual Conference, of a case regarding the validity of the election of a woman as delegate to that Conference. Two General Conferences (I think) have convened since this Bishop's decision, and yet I find no law on record in our Discipline with regard to this point. The Discipline does say, "That the stewards be men of solid piety," etc.; but I see no stress laid on the "men." If the Bishop's decision referred to has been "approved by the college of Bishops, recorded in a permanent form, and published," where can this record be found? It seems to me that if such decisions become "authoritative interpretations or constructions of the law," they should be placed in reach of our people, for comparatively few of them know that such action was ever taken, and that such constructions apply in the cases as above referred to.

If women should not and can not be elected to the office of stewards, two or three lines inserted in our Discipline at the proper place would be sufficient to settle the question. In many of our churches there is no suitable man to elect, and, of course, women are placed in trust of this office. Now, are pastors and members of Quarterly Conferences violating a known law, or have the proper authorities left them ignorant as to what their duty is? Let us have light on the subject!

GREENVILLE DISTRICT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: I have been patiently waiting for some one of more experience than myself to give you something from the Greenville district, North Mississippi Conference, especially in regard to her report at the last Annual Conference. We think it something of which to be grateful to the "Giver of every good and perfect gift." The most important feature is an increase in membership of twenty per cent. Sardis district comes next with an increase of eleven per cent., Corinth with seven per cent., while the Columbus, Winona and Holly Springs districts show a balance on the other side. Thus, compared with other districts, Greenville has done well, spiritually, for we believe that our new converts will compare favorably in spirituality with those of other districts.

As to her financial report, we let the figures speak for themselves. Expended on churches and parsonages, $3,550; assessed for presiding elder, $1,130; paid for presiding elder, $1,154; assessed for preachers in charge, $7,010; paid for preachers in charge, $7,167 85; average salary for preachers in charge, $651 62; assessed for collections ordered by Conference, $960—which was $1 31 per capita; paid on collections ordered by Conference, $1,051—which was $1 43 per capita; average per capita for all purposes except amount expended on churches and parsonages, $13 28.

This calculation is based on membership of 1886.

We give below the amount paid per capita by each charge in order, leaving out amount paid on churches and parsonages.

Arcola, $28 88; Bolivar, $22 70; Jonestown, $20 83; Clarksdale, $18 72; Concordia, $16 22; Friar's Point, $9 76; Greenville, $8 94; Australia and Rosedale, $8 68; Austin, $8 05; Cleveland, $7 16; Faisonia, $6 96.

This is based on membership of 1887. The assessments were based on membership of 1886, and where there was a considerable increase in membership, in 1887, the amount paid per capita was proportionately lower.

We think our Minutes defective, in that they do not show the increase in membership in each charge as well as the number baptized. We will but add that every assessment in every charge was paid in full.

Much credit is due our efficient presiding elder, Rev. J. W. Honnoll, for this excellent report.

Yours, etc.,

J. A. RANDOLPH.

CLARKSDALE, Miss., Feb. 13, 1888.

HOUSTON, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: January 28 and 29 are days that will not soon be forgotten by us Houstonians. It was the time of holding the first quarterly meeting for this charge. Bro. Kendall was with us, notwithstanding he had to ride sixty miles on solid ice to get here. What a presiding elder he is! In eighteen years he has only missed two Quarterly Conferences. It makes no difference what kind of weather it is. We expect Bro. Kendall, and are never disappointed. He seemed to be in one of his best moods, and preached to the delight and edification of a large, appreciative congregation. Bros. Tucker and Bass also preached during the occasion. We had the most harmonious business session it was ever before my privilege to attend. Bro. Kendall says, taking it as a whole, it was one of the most, if not the most, enjoyable Quarterly Conferences he ever witnessed. I believe that is the general verdict. Oh, what a grand communion service on Sunday! Five Methodist and one Presbyterian preacher bow together around the communion table to renew their vows of consecration to God. Then comes the communicants. Bless God nearly everyone in the house communed! Our hearts are full of gratitude and love to God for his manifold blessings. Houston and Wesley is one of the best circuits in this Conference. The people have been exceedingly kind to us. They gave us a nice reception on our arrival at the parsonage, and a considerable pounding. May God abundantly reward them! We have evidence of God's power upon the people at almost every service, either in the silent tear or in the old-fashioned Methodist style of "Hallelujah!" and "Bless God!"

We are soon to have a preacher's study added to our already comfortable little parsonage home, after which we hope to be able to do better work for God and the church. Pray that God may baptize us afresh with power from on high, and that we may have a glorious revival all over this circuit! I am so happy now that I feel like shouting praises to our blessed Savior for his great love and mercy. God bless you in your good work, my dear brother!

J. R. ROBERSON.

FLOYD AND DELHI.

MR. EDITOR: Despite the rain, snow and mud since Conference, I have moved into the parsonage at Floyd, and have made a round; but, of course, made it in the mud. It is twenty miles from one town to the other, and this wet winter weather the road is—well, what some people call "loblolly." My brother, did you ever wear leggings and ride in the mud? I am not complaining; not at all. This is a very nice charge in many respects. A work of only three appointments, and twenty miles long, our fathers would have laughed at. Bishop Kavanaugh said, at Monticello, Ark., in 1877, just before ordaining my class to deacons' orders: "Brethren, in my early ministry I had twenty-three appointments, and traveled two hundred miles in making a round: was promised one hundred dollars, and the only certainty about this was that I did not get it."

Myself and wife have found some very kind and hospitable people since our arrival upon the work. On reaching Delhi our kind and judicious presiding elder sent us to Bro. R. H. Dollerhide's, whose hospitalities and elegant home we enjoyed several days. Bro. and Sister Hunter also entertained us pleasantly.

Mr. Editor, your footprints are still visible in these parts.

The religious interest at Floyd is exhibited chiefly by the sisters; and a noble set they are! We have never been shown more sympathy and kindness than by the ladies at this place and also at Midway. We expect, by the help of the Lord, to be instrumental in the salvation of many souls on this charge this year. Yes, the souls of good citizens and kind people, now in the broad road, must be saved. One of the greatest obstacles in the way is whisky. Whisky leads to drunkenness, idleness, demoralization, and eternal ruin.

As Weems said in the life of Gen. Francis Marion:

"Ah! brandy, brandy, bane of life,
Spring of tumult, source of strife,
Could I but half thy curses tell,
The wise would wish thee safe at hell."

God bless you!

H. ARMSTRONG.

FLOYD, Louisiana.

WALTHALL CIRCUIT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: Perhaps a few lines from this part of the country will not be out of place. Bishop Keener, at the last North Mississippi Conference, saw proper to send us to the Walthall circuit, and to the Walthall circuit we came. We find a very appreciative people here. We had a very hard time getting here. Big Black was to be crossed, the roads very muddy, and the weather bad; but we got here, and, before we got our affairs fixed up in the house, a storm came upon us. Daylight had faded, the curtain of night had fallen, when, lo! a flash of light gleamed through the darkness; then another. The signs were ominous of an approaching storm; and so it was. The storm began to beat upon us, and for an hour and a half it blew, until heaped up around the lamp on the center-table, and on the floor, were bundles on top of bundles. After the storm subsided we concluded to see what it all meant. We untied the bundles, and, lo! there was cloth, rice, mackerel, ham, sugar, and other things too numerous to mention. The storm blew a jug of molasses into the kitchen and a chicken into the closet. So you see that though the Walthall people are inland from any railroad, nevertheless are a large-hearted people.

Dr. Sullivan, our presiding elder, held our first quarterly meeting here yesterday and Saturday. The weather was so bad that we did not have a large turnout. The financial report up to date is seventy dollars. We took steps toward building a parsonage, which will be completed some time between this and fall. Pray for us, that the Lord's work may prosper in our hands.

E. H. ROOK.

Balaam, Ancient and Modern.

BY J. N. FRADENBURGH, PH.B., D. D.

Bálaam is not a strange character. Every congregation contains several Balaams. Here we behold a man who wanted to hold to both Jehovah and Baal, and did so as long as it was possible. His summons to Balak was the supreme crisis in his life. There came a time when he must definitely decide between Jehovah and Baal, God and mammon. He decided for Baal, and pulled down ruin upon his own head.

Kurtz says: "He stood with one foot upon the soil of heathen magic and soothsaying, and with the other upon the soil of Jehovistic religion and prophecy." Arnold writer describes him accurately: "He was one of those unstable men whom the apostle calls 'double-minded'—an ambidexter in religion, like Redwald, king of the East Saxons, the first who was baptized: who, as Camden relates, had, in the same church, one chapel for the Christian religion and another for sacrificing to devils: A loaf of the same leaven was our resolute Rufus, who painted God on one side of his shield and the devil on on the other, with the desperate inscription in Latin: 'I am ready for either.'" Resting in the fancied security that if he worshiped both Jehovah and Baal, in some way he might be on good terms with at least one of them, he lost both.

His conscience was peculiar. He would not curse Israel, but would resolutely say the words which God gave him; and yet indirectly he would seduce Israel from Jehovah, and get the people cursed with an awful curse. His love of money had brought upon himself a curse greater than that which fell upon Israel—his soul was cursed. He loved not God, but gold. He knew his duty, but did it not, like those of whom Paul speaks, who, "knowing the judgment of God, that they who do these things are worthy of death, not only do the same, but have pleasure in them that do them." Balaam was, then, most inconsistent in his life. The only difference between the historic and the modern Balaams is that in the case of the former, his character developed rapidly, and his ruin came upon him as the legitimate fruit of his wrong-doing, suddenly and tumultuously.

There are multitudinous modern Baalams whose end will virtually be the same. Every person who allows gold, either by its presence or absence, to hinder his religious life and growth, is Balaam. Every man who is conscientious concerning some moral questions, but yields himself to other and different sins, is Balaam. Everyone who will not himself sin openly, but will look upon the sins of others with composure or approval, or will even encourage or instruct them in their commission, is Balaam. Every person who is thoroughly convinced that there is a future life in which God will visit the works of man with just retributions, who is repeatedly warned by his own conscience and knows what will be the issues of his own conduct, and yet lives as though there were no God, and as though he had no personally responsible immortal soul, is Balaam. Every one who has heard the voice of God and yet will attend the Midianitish dance, is Balaam. These modern Balaams, in the church and out of the church, are those who hinder the work of God, and seduce souls to their everlasting ruin.—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

We Must Succeed.

The great word for a Christian church is—to succeed. It will not do to dismiss it, as a scoffing world's word; or to say as if with an air of superior piety, a cover for laziness, "We have nothing to do with results." For, more than any other organization, a church of Christ ought to organize and achieve success. No other society has so important business in hand. No other society has so much capital invested; no other society can possibly bring, by its failure, such loss on men and such reproach on God. And so the eagerness for success, which characterizes much of the church life of the day, is not to be frowned upon as a worldly crime, or an unholy ambition. The danger is in false definitions of the word, and wrong conceptions of the thing sought.

The success of a flouring-mill is in its production of flour which will sell in the world's markets at a profit. The owner would not for a moment think of pointing you to the brown-stone front, where the offices are, or the gilded sign over the door, or the electric light, or the improved machinery, as the success of the mill. It is the flour, wanted in the world's market at a profit and for use, that is the mill's success. So the success of the church is in its product; not its building or appliances, its congregations or social standing, but its product. What that product is, the New Testament declares with sufficient emphasis. Just as certainly and unmistakably as a flouring-mill is for the production of flour, an iron foundry for castings, a saw mill for lumber, is a church for the production of Christ-like men and women. And, like them all, the church is to be tested by its product. Two separate activities go into the product of the mill. First, the acquisition of raw material; and, second, the reduction and fashioning of that raw material into the marketable product. Each is recognized as necessary there; but churches seem at times to undervalue one or the other. There are churches where there is no reaching out after material; but they grind over and over what they have to mere theological dust. There are others where they do nothing else but accumulate new material, and because it is not worked up, some of it grows musty and sour and is spoiled.

To drop the figure, while the only possible success of a church is in the production of Christ-like lives, there are two lines of activity along which that success should be planned and pursued. Men must be brought to Christ for pardon and the renewing of life, and that by the exercise of the converting power with which every church is dowered. And also converted men must be fashioned in growing measure into the real image of Christ. Well for that church, wherever it is, which sets forth on the work of the new year with a sacred and mighty passion for success. We must succeed.—Advance.

A Living Pulpit.

It must have occurred to many preachers during the late visit of Mr. Chamberlain, to Belfast, to ask, What is the secret of so much living interest in his speeches and meetings? How is it that the preacher often speaks to indifferent congregations, and the politician addresses excited crowds? Lord Brougham in his essay on "Massilon" puts the problem in a brilliant manner. He said the preacher had advantages which the politician had not—an attentive and friendly audience, accompanying music, and solemn associations. Yet how frequently the political and forensic orator will succeed in awakening a thrilling interest; whilst the preacher will on the other hand often act as a sedative! This is a problem worthy of thought by preachers and hearers.

Evidently the secret of the politician's success is that the interest which he awakes is a present-day one, a living one. He speaks not of things afar off, nor abstract in nature, but of present-day questions and of practical matters. Now, many preachers deal with religious matters as though they were things afar off, having their chief sphere in another world. Some also treat habitually of abstract themes, and metaphysical subtleties. We believe, however, if the pulpit is to awaken a living interest, religion must be made to be realized as a most pressing present-day matter. The things dealt with by the preacher must be shown to be as important as the fate of a Ministry or the triumph of a conspiracy. The preacher must speak of eternity, heaven, hell and the hopes of the future, but yet amidst all there must be the living interest of present-day topics. The language, style and illustrations must be such as breathe a fresh and living atmosphere. The task of the preacher is more difficult than that of the political orator. It is more difficult to preach a good living sermon that shall awake in the minds of a large congregation a living interest in the claims of religion than it is to speak an hour with success upon Home Rule. Many of the preacher's hearers come to hear with indifferent minds. This acts on the preacher as the tone of a political meeting does on the party orator. Thus the work is difficult. Still it must be done. The pulpit must strive after a living present-day interest, if it is to retain its pre-eminence over the press and the platform. Men generally need to have revealed to them, the importance, the solemnity of the present moment that they are living. In this lies the secret of the platform orator's success, and in this lies the secret of the preacher's power to interest a large crowd.—Irish Christian Advocate.

THE MOTIVE FORCE OF THE WORLD.—The Bureau of Statistics in Berlin has recently issued some interesting information in connection with this subject. Four-fifths of the engines now working in the world have been constructed during the last twenty-five years. France owns 49,590 stationary or locomotive boilers, 7,000 locomotives, and 1,850 boats' boilers; Germany has 59,000 boilers, 10,000 locomotives, and 1,700 ships' boilers; Austria, 12,000 boilers and 2,800 locomotives. The force equivalent to the working steam-engines represents: in the United States, 7,500,000 horse-power; in England, 7,000,000 horse-power; in Germany, 4,500,000; in France, 3,000,000, and in Austria, 1,500,000. In these figures the motive power of locomotives is not included, whose number in all the world amounts to 165,000, representing a total of 3,000,000 horse-power. Adding this amount to the other powers, we obtain the total of 46,000,000 horse-power. A steam horse-power is equal to three actual horses' power; and a living horse is equal to seven men. The steam-engines of the world represent, therefore, approximately the work of 1,000,000,000 men, or more than double the working population of the earth, whose total population amounts to 1,455,923,000 inhabitants. Steam has accordingly trebled man's working power, enabling him to economize his physical strength while attending to his intellectual development.

A Madman at Large:

He is a well-known citizen, and his nearest and dearest friends do not suspect his insanity. How do we happen to know about it? Listen: his appetite is gone, he is low-spirited, he don't sleep well, he has night-sweats, he is annoyed by a hacking cough. These symptoms are the forerunners of consumption and death, and yet he neglects them. Is it any wonder that we call him a madman? If you are his friend tell him to get a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery without delay. It will cure him if he takes it in time. It will not miraculously create new lungs when the old ones are nearly gone, but it will restore diseased ones to a healthy condition. Tell him about it, and warm him that in his case delay means death.

An eminent American biblical scholar who has given the most thorough study of the Sabbath question, takes direct issue with the seventh-day advocates. He says: "There is not one single instance in the New Testament of a meeting of Christians, as such, for worship on the seventh day. In every case of meeting on the seventh day, Sabbath, it is of Jews and at Jewish places of worship. Paul and other Christians go to these places as missionaries to carry the gospel to the places where they would find an audience. In every case where Christians, as such, met for service, the evidence is that the customary day of meeting was the first day of the week." Our pastors will do well to work out this statement, and give their congregations the fullest benefit of it. There are some persons who will refuse to become convinced against their prepossessions, but all others may be saved from the narrow, dogmatic spirit which makes the propagation of such nonsense as seventh-day adventism possible.—Central Christian Advocate.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is a peculiar medicine. It is carefully prepared from Sarsaparilla, Dandelion, Mandrake, Dock, Pipsissewa, Juniper Berries, and other well-known and valuable vegetable remedies, by a peculiar combination, proportion and process, giving to Hood's Sarsaparilla curative power not possessed by other medicines. It effects remarkable cures where other preparations fail.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is the best blood purifier before the public. It eradicates every impurity, and cures Scrofula, Salt Rheum, Boils, Pimples, all Humors, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Sick Headache, Indigestion, General Debility, Catarrh, Rheumatism, Kidney and Liver Complaints, overcomes that tired feeling, creates an appetite, and builds up the system.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Has met peculiar and unparalleled success at home. Such has become its popularity in Lowell, Mass., where it is made, that whole neighborhoods are taking it at the same time. Lowell druggists sell more of Hood's Sarsaparilla than of all other sarsaparillas or blood purifiers. Sold by druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. ARTIFICIAL EYES

Are Now so Perfectly Made That No One Can Distinguish Them from the Natural Eye.

The Artificial Eye is not only a beautifier, but it serves other excellent purposes.

It enables the eyelids to move as freely as ever.

It restores the functions of the tear passages.

It prevents the eyelashes from turning within, causing inflammation.

It prevents disfigurement of features, as happens always in case of a young person who has the misfortune to lose an eye—and sometimes in the case of older persons.

Briefs.

The late Dr. R. D. Hitchcock said: "The coming preacher will preach more on the gospel according to James." And the prediction is being verified. All around there are indications that the ministers and churches are girding themselves for the work of helping the people temporally as well as preaching the truth to them. The "gospel according to James" requires the worker to carry his credentials in the shape of substantial assistance to the needy in the forefront of his faith. "Pure religion and undefiled before our God and Father is this: to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world."

At one of the little mission chapels in the Charlotte Islands no less than 100 blankets, valued at $1 25 each, were contributed on one Sunday by the native congregation toward the erection of a new church.

Not from the superfluities, but the absolute necessities of life. We commend this instance of liberality to that large class who are able to respond to Dr. Allen's call for five-hundred-dollar subscriptions. For shame! that yen let those barely escaped from heathenism surpass you in the expression of faith and love for your Lord! Though you cling now so fondly to your jewels and gold, the time is coming when from inward shame you will drop them as you would a handful of hot coals.

It is said that a hive of 40,000 bees makes only one pound of honey daily; and to do this they must glean from 3,500,000 clover blooms. What an example of patient industry! This, however, is not their greatest virtue. The average life of a bee is not over six weeks, and, consequently, few ever live off the hardly accumulated store. They spend their lives for others. To spend your days revolving the question, "What shall it profit me," is to dwindle below the life of a bee, as small as that is. To make something enjoyable to others—sweetening their cup of sorrow, lightening their burdens, brightening their path—is like the bee; to imitate him "who gave himself for us."

"Noblesse oblige," is a happy French form for saying that nobility puts nobles under obligations to their fellows. It is certainly true that any advantage of wealth, family, intelligence or official place puts one under obligation of service to all about them. Every talent is invested with responsibility: and the talent of divine grace in the experience, giving peace, comfort; hope, God clothes with the most awful responsibility. Is it in your life employed to bless and brighten the path and character of your children, and servants, and neighbors? With the nobility conferred in being a child of God, are you engaged in substantial relief to the hearts of the poor—the wicked and miserable poor about you; and do you really try to lead them to the Savior?

Prof Fisher, in his History of the Christian Church, speaking of the ancient Germans, says that we get four names of the days of the week from their mythology. Tuesday from Tiu, god of war; Wednesday from Woden, god of air and sky; Thursday from Thor, god of thunder, and Friday from Freyr, god of love. The name Easter is from the same source; Ostera, goddess of the morning light or of the return of the sun in spring.

Lying in the Church.

Sin in all its forms abounds almost everywhere: and if there is one species of wickedness that is more prevalent than another, it is that which goes by the name of lying. We suppose one reason for its abounding is in the fact that it is such an easy thing to do; and it is easy to do, because there are so many ways in which it can be done. There are many sins which can be committed in only one way, but lying can be done in a thousand ways. And there is scarcely a sin committed which does not involve lying before it is finished. This sin seems to be a "part and parcel" of many other sins. A man can hardly break a single command of the Decalogue without involving himself in a lie.

Lord Chesterfield, though a man of the world, has given, in his letters to his son, some straightforward talk on the subject of lying. He says: "I really know nothing more criminal, more mean, and more ridiculous than lying." In regard to the genesis of the habit, he says: "It is the production either of malice, cowardice or vanity." If we place the devil back of these, then we shall stand upon Scripture ground in relation to the origin of lying, for "he is a liar and the father of all lies." He is the author of malice, and a malicious lie is one that is deliberately told for the express purpose of injuring another either in person, or property, or character. This class of lies is not so large as are some other classes, but the lie of malice is worthy of the "lake that burneth with fire and brimstone." As awful as is this sin and its ending, many experienced pastors find it not unfrequently among church members.

Lies, which originate in cowardice, are those told as an excuse for something said or done, in order to avoid the danger or the shame apprehended from the saying or doing. Here is where equivocation and evasion come in to excuse the deed or word, and, at the same time, palliate the conscience. In familiar, yet expressive, phrase it is "whipping the devil around the stump;" an exercise that the devil enjoys most heartily. One of the hardest things for a man to do is to confess himself the author of a bad deed or the possessor of a glaring fault. When pressed to that confession, it is one of the easiest things to evade it by an equivocation, which is a seeming truth covering up a real lie. If anyone goes about much among church members and keeps his ears open, he will discover a good deal of this equivocal truth-telling. The excuses which church people make about their dereliction of duty generally range themselves under this head of lies of cowardice. They will neglect their duties and forget all about their solemn vows to God and the church; and when pressed by the pastor for a reason for such remissness, in eight cases out of ten the reason given will be an evasion of the truth or an equivocation. Men generally desire to be thought better than they are; and the average church member is no exception to the rule, and when the pastor gets after him for neglect of duty, his flimsy excuses and ridiculous reasons pour forth in overwhelming volume to hide from view the true state of the case. The fear of being discovered to be different from what they appear to be makes men cowards; and cowardice always takes shelter in a "refuge of lies."

There is another species of lying; and, perhaps, it is more common among church people than either of the others we have mentioned. This species is composed of lies which originate in vanity. There is no doubt about the truth of the saying, that "every man is his own hero." There is a touch of Pharisaism in every man which he takes pains to gratify. He delights to honor himself. "In honor preferring" himself, is the general reading of Paul's admonition. In narrating events in which we have had a part, we generally do honor to ourselves, and oftentimes when we least deserve it. Boasting of our deeds and sayings is gratifying to our Pharisaic pride. But the fact about boasting is, that it is never contented with a simple narration of the naked truth. Imagination is sure to get in its work so effectually as to make us say things which are not true. There is much of this sort of lying in the church, nor is it confined exclusively to the membership. It is sometimes found among the preachers. A plain statement of a fact, whether in reference to ourselves or others, without any embellishment, is what our Lord's Sermon on the Mount requires, for it is there said, "Whatsoever is more than this cometh from the evil one."

The Psalmist prayed: "Deliver my soul, oh, Lord, from lying lips and a deceitful tongue." The wise man prayed: "Remove far from me vanity and lies." Among the last words of the Book of God is this terrific statement: "All liars shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone."

Spring-Time Again.

A few bright days have put life into everything and everybody. The birds are full of glee. The chickens crow and cackle as if full of life and animation. New eggs are coming into market. The cows begin to nip the swelling buds and hunt for spires of grass. The farmers are cleaning up, and turning over the sod. The ladies are busy planting their gardens, working their flower yards and making new hens' nests. The indications are that spring will be here soon. We will be glad to see it come. A hard winter makes us hungry for spring. Some of our chief joys grow out of contrasts and comparisons. Intense cold makes us sigh for heat; and the heat of summer makes us long for the cold of winter. I am glad we have changes. Variety is said to be the spice of life. The Lord has arranged the seasons beautifully and very graciously. I've no fault to find of it, and I am content to take the seasons and the weather as they come. I might as well, for I can not change them if I would; and I would not if I could. It always seemed silly, if not sinful, to hear professedly Christian people grumbling about what they could not help. They fret themselves nearly to death to no purpose. God manages the seasons and the weather, and I am perfectly willing to take what he sends and thank him for it. I'd pray for favorable seasons, for rain or sunshine, as I thought we might need them; but, after I had told God what I wanted, I'd resign the whole matter into his hands. He knows better what is best than I. He is my Father, a perfect Father—perfect in wisdom and goodness. He is too wise to err, too good to do wrong; and his fatherly heart makes him attent to all the longings of all his children in all his realms. Not a sparrow falls, not a child cries, that our Lord does not see and hear.

Not long ago a pious young lady was visiting in what was called a Christian family. The conversation, quite naturally, turned on beaux and marrying. The pious young lady was complimented on the good morals and religious character of her particular young man. "Yes;" she said, "I have besought the Lord earnestly to guide in this matter, and I believe he has heard my prayer." With this the whole family—mother and daughters—broke into hilarious laughter, and said: "My sakes alive! who ever heard of anybody praying on that subject before!" But why not? Are there not many prayerless marriages in this Christian country? Will not our God, who instituted the marital relation before sin entered our world, guide in this, the holiest and most important relation known among men? If there were more prayerful matches, would there not be more happy marriages? We marry for God, or we ought to do so. If we do not, we marry from a motive too low. This closest and sweetest of human relations contains the nearest and best of divine lessons. Husband and wife—Christ and the Church. We live a glorious doctrine, and illustrate a blessed truth in this relation. Enter upon it prayerlessly? Nay, verily.

Our sons and daughters ought to be taught the great importance of seeking divine guidance in this solemn matter. To get a husband from the Lord or a wife from the Lord would insure a holy union and a happy life—if lived in faith. It is surprising to find a Christian—a professed Christian—who does not carry everything, great or small, worldly and spiritual, to God in prayer. The happiest child and the best child is the one who lays the whole heart open to father and mother. It is confidence, faith, that brings happiness to heart and home. A son or daughter with a secret that can not be communicated to father or mother is already far gone on the road to hell. Do we think to hide anything from God? He knows our thoughts, the innermost motives of our souls. Why try to hide anything from him? Why not tell him all? Why not seek divine wisdom to guide in the minutest affairs of this life? Why not ask God to help in plowing and planting as well as in singing and praying? Doth he not care for oxen and birds? Is he not concerned in all we think, or do, or say? Why not plow and plant and reap and trade and housekeep for God? He made us for these. Is our Father—our wisest, truest and best Father—indifferent to anything that concerns the interest of his weakest or humblest child? Strange father if he were! The whole life may be one psalm of praise to God. The spring has come, and the birds praise him; the flowers look up and smile in his face; the trees hold out their hands and clap them before God; the young lambs skip and play as if their hearts were bursting for joy; and shall man, made in the image of God—an intelligent, spiritual being, capable of worship and praise—be less thankful? less worshipful? "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and all that is within me, bless his holy name."

SENATOBIA, Mississippi.

The Power of What Is Expected of Us.

If hope is composed of expectation and desire, fear must be made up of expectation and aversion or dislike. The dread of evil is often so great as to produce, by reaction, an expectation of that which is dreaded. The habit of expecting evil is a sort of faithlessness that not only destroys hope, but banishes cheerfulness and paralyzes effort. Parents often unconsciously fall into this habit toward their children, not being aware that expectations have often a mysterious tendency to bring about their own fulfillment.

When a mother is heard to say in the presence of her child, "If you take that child to church, he will be sure to cry all the time of preaching," there is a strong probability that her prophecy will be fulfilled—a probability arising much more from the mother's expressed expectation than from any predisposition in the child. When the words are heard in positive tone: "Now, you know if you take that from the child, he'll cry," the cry is very apt to come when the thing is taken. The distinct proclamation of the parent's expectation is often to the child a welcome revelation of the best means of preventing the thing on which the prediction is based. "If crying or other ugly behavior will prevent the thing that's about to be done to me, then I'll cry or do something worse," thinks the child. The reasonable expectations of parents concerning their children are apt to be realized. Only be sure to treat the child so that you can reasonably have and express good expectations concerning him. There can be no doubt that the knowledge that good is expected of us by those we love has a powerful influence in causing us to do right. Can anything more strongly check a young man's evil dispositions and actions than the thought that his mother expects to hear not evil, but good and noble things of him? To suspect or accuse a servant of stealing will often make one steal that never stole before; and to expect evil of anyone, especially a child, is to forestall, repress or discourage every noble aspiration that might be in them.

The extent of the influence of what is expected of us in riper years can scarcely be estimated. Do conscience and God's law and the retributions of eternity have as much to do in controlling the average man's life as the known expectations of his neighbors? Are not the eyes of men to the majority of characters what hoops are to a barrel? The eyes of good men are as God's eye to the worthy soul. Well does the wise man say: "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches, and loving favor rather than silver and gold." What signifies a noble ancestry, externally considered, except that it imposes a powerful and helpful demand that we should so deport ourselves as not to forfeit the good name which they bequeathed us? And is there not more in this external bond than in blood itself? It is hard to rob our ancestors and disappoint those we love at the same time.

A man may sometimes be made really better by being credited with virtues which he does not possess. I distinctly remember that my courage in boyhood was pushed up to the wonderful degree of enabling me to pass a graveyard at midnight without showing fear by the simple fact that it got to be believed, I know not how, among my companions that I was not afraid to go into the dark alone. I could not say that I was afraid of darkness after that. I could not afford to forfeit the reputation for courage which they had given me when I did not deserve it.

If no good were ever expected of us, few of us would be apt to maintain a high degree of worthiness very long. Many a man is made what he is chiefly by the expectations of his friends. On this account a pastor has often a great advantage in entering upon a new charge. As he does not know his people, he may expect good of all alike. The genial expectations of a new pastor have brought out many a dormant member and unexpected sinner as the sunshine brings the turtles out of the water. The uninitiated pastor knows no better than to expect as much of these dry sticks and dead sinners as of other people; and to everybody's astonishment they are found to be made of just the common human stuff. Many a man lies useless for years, or for life, by having nothing expected of him. I know a minister of the gospel who carries with him such an evident and imperious expectation that Christians will do their duty that the knowledge of the fact constitutes one of the chief elements of his power among men. Blessed is the man whose spirit and habits justify him in a profound and powerful expectation of good in others!

W. L. C. H.

Notes.

The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church arranged to hold their sessions in New York City at the Metropolitan Opera House, a building which occupies an entire block and furnishes the finest auditorium in that city. The rent of the building will be paid from proceeds of sale of the private "boxes," at present ranging from $50 to $100 for session. Besides ample room reserved for use of the Conference, there are 2,000 eligible seats free to the public. Verily, our brethren have an eye to business, which never closes.

At Guayaquil, in South America, a Spanish priest, temporarily in charge of the bishopric, excommunicated the judges of the Supreme Court, when a mob, among whom were some of the most prominent citizens, wrecked the episcopal residence to the cry of "Death to the priests!" On proceeding farther and assaulting the Bishop's legal adviser, shots were fired and several persons killed, and quiet was only restored by the appearance of troops. Evidently the power of the priesthood is not only broken, but held in contempt when such a scene was possible.

"The best statisticians estimate that the income of the people of the United States is large enough to average forty-five cents a day for every man, woman and child in the country. This gives an average yearly income of $161 25 to each person." Brother, is it too much to say that each adult member of your church has that much income? If not, then we ask, do they give according to the standard in vogue 3,000 years ago; that is, $16 apiece. According to the Jewish law, a church of 1,100,000 members, averaging that much income, ought to give $18,000,000? If we do not give as much as the old Jew, then, in the name of retribution, what is to become of us?

The newspapers are discussing the propriety of using electricity as a substitute for hemp in capital punishment. It will secure a painless transit into the other world, and will be less shameful and terrific to the unfortunate wretches who have with axe or bludgeon or pistol taken the lives of their fellow-creatures. These timid reformers do not go far enough. By statutory enactment the jury who convict the murderers ought to be required to tender to their victims in their last agony some resolutions of regret: the presiding judge be required to assure them of a monumental shaft in bronze or marble, as they may prefer, and the sheriff, just before the fatal circuit is completed, to present them with a bouquet of gay flowers.

The Freeman's Journal, one of the leading Romish papers of this country, says in reference to the murder of three missionaries in Mexico by Romanists: "If the killing of a few more missionaries of this kind would keep others like them at home, we should almost—we Papists are so wicked—be inclined to say: "On with the dance; let joy be unconfined." Usually even Catholics apologize for such lawlessness by pleading the barbarism of the natives. Will they, in this case, admit the barbarism of their literary advocate, or plead that the end justifies the means, or retire upon the precedent of St. Bartholomew's Day as the established principle of the Papacy with reference to Protestants? Are they really devoted as they profess, to the principles of religious liberty guaranteed by our Constitution? We hope so—but such utterances make room for a doubt.

There is nothing so important to the general welfare of the country as having the right kind of men to fill the public offices. The Christians in this country have been so much afraid of the "church getting into politics," that many of the public offices are filled by men notoriously bad. By using their rights as citizens in a judicious manner they could have prevented this, and had men in office who would, at least, administer the existing laws faithfully. We have no patience with that old bugbear of the "church going into politics." It is the scare-crow of the devil to keep good men out of office. It is every Christian's duty to be a good citizen, and to prove his good citizenship by helping to place good and true men in office. We are in entire sympathy with this utterance of a prominent Wesleyan in London: "We do not wish to pry into the past history of candidates; but if a man is notoriously immoral, he must be driven from public life." Amen and amen!

Personals.

Rev. Dr. Arthur Edwards, of the Northwestern, thinks it will be necessary for the next General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church to have a Committee on Credentials, to properly present the matter of membership in that body.

Bishop Fowler was elected a reserve lay delegate from Dakota; John M. Phillips, of New York, was elected lay delegate from Mexico; Gov. Ludlow, of New Jersey, from North India; while some Conference sent Miss Francis Willard to represent them in a lay capacity.

The will of Madame Goldschmidt (Jenny Lind) bequeaths 50,000 Swedish crowns to the University of Upsala, Sweden, for maintenance of its poor students, and 5,000 crowns to the University of Lund to aid students belonging to the Protestant ministry.

The Northwestern Advocate informs us that President William Preston Johnston, of Tulane University, in this city, has not a single hair on his head or face—even his eyebrows and eye-lashes have disappeared. Verily, he must go abroad to become familiar with his friends.

The report that Bishops Merrill and Hurst favor high license because prohibition is impracticable, is flatly contradicted in very vigorous terms.

The subscriptions among Georgia Methodists for Bishop Pierce monumental fund aggregate one thousand dollars.

Rev. Dr. Vincent has entered on the duties as professor in Union Theological Seminary in New York city, where he succeeded Dr. Schaff, transferred to another chair.

The comptroller of Texas reports that in the last year the value of the land and town lots in that State increased $400,000,000, the cattle to over $50,000,000, horses and mules over $33,000,000.

Senator Hogg, of Texas, estimates that his State loses one-half million dollars annually by the refusal of the saloons to pay their State taxes. The tax collectorship is an elective office.

The Rev. George Dana Boardman, of Philadelphia, has in his possession an interesting relic of the first years of the First Baptist Church of Philadelphia. It is the entry book of marriages and births, and is dated as far back as 1690. Many of the marriage certificates are taken out by permission of Gov. Penn, and, curiously enough, the first entry in the book is of the baptism of an infant—infant baptism not being a feature in the doctrines of the Baptist Church, at least, to-day.

Dr. D. R. McAnally, editor of the St. Louis Christian Advocate, has gone to Punta, Fla.

Dr. C. W. Carter, the editor of this paper, has gone to Sour Lake, seeking relief from sciatica, from which he has been suffering more than ever since Conference. It is more than likely that he will go from there to Hot Springs, Ark.

The North Georgia Conference, with 80,000 members and 246 preachers and probationers enrolled, raised last year for foreign and domestic missions $30,000; widows, orphans and superannuates, $10,000. Dr. G. G. Smith, writing to the St. Louis Advocate, speaks of the largest salary paid as $3,100, including rent paid, but says nothing of the smallest, nor the average.

Rev. Dr. J. Ditzler will debate with Rev. J. N. Hall, of the Baptist Church, at Kennett, Mo., March 6, 7, 8, 9.

Rev. Dr. A. G. Haygood, of Georgia, during the last year distributed $40,000 of the Slater Fund among forty-two schools. He recently preached in Columbia, S. C., at the Sidney Park Colored Methodist Church—a church of nine hundred members that came over to the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church of America from the African Methodist Episcopal Church, now homeless because of having to surrender the church in which they formerly worshiped.

"Brethren, Help Us Now."

Dr. I. G. John—

MY DEAR DOCTOR: I send you reports from O. A. Dukes, J. W. Lambuth, C. B. Moseley and B. W. Waters, for the quarter ending December 31, 1887. They are short, but indicate hard work. Our total collections during the quarter amounted to $57 19, a decided increase. Our members are giving systematically. We have adopted the old system. The members bring their weekly contribution and hand it to the class leader, and he turns it over to the steward. Giving is considered a means of grace, and it is the class leader rather than the steward who feels concerned when there is any falling off.

We, or rather all native Christians, have resolved during this last quarter to build two churches—one at Hiroshima and one at Kobe. Their own subscriptions have already reached the surprising sum of two hundred and twenty dollars. This is our second year, remember. One year ago and we had only one member. Other subscriptions bring the building fund up to $420. We need a little help, but do not intend to ask the Board for native churches. We want a large church in Kobe for annual meetings, monthly gatherings—of which the Japanese and Chinese are so fond, lectures, etc.; the Mission will ask the Board for this, but we will build our own native places of worship.

We are trying to put our probationers and members through a thorough Bible drill. Bro. Moseley has a Bible class once a week, and preaches Sunday. Bro. Waters' Bible class two hours every night, and holds two services Sunday. Both these brethren fully occupied with teaching during the week. Dr. Dukes is putting in five hours every day, teaching nothing but the Bible and Christianity. He has a class at every station on the railway between Kobe and Osaka. Trains run every two hours. He begins at the first station in the morning, teaches an hour, and passes on to the next, and so on. Dr. J. W. Lambuth averages four hours teaching in Kobe per diem, and three of that is the Bible, pure and simple. Lectures on Christian biography Saturday nights, teaches two Bible classes in Hiogo, and holds five services every Sunday, occupying seven hours.

Mrs. J. W. Lambuth teaches seven hours every day, more than four being given to the teaching of Christianity. Mrs. Dukes, Miss Gaines and Mrs. W. R. Lambuth teach, and all have Bible classes. I myself am teaching the Bible almost continually. As I can not be in one place very long at a time, it is impossible to have a regular class, but try to make up for it by drilling my interpreter hour after hour as we walk over the mountains, or ride together in jinricks, or crouch down among the passengers on the little steamboats which ply on the Inland Sea. When we reach a town or village where we have organized a Methodist Society, we call on the class leader, and, telling him we have only twenty-four or thirty-six hours to spare, send him out after the members. In the meantime, we eat our lunch, and are ready for from one to ten consecutive hours of Bible-reading, comparing of parallel passages, explaining, catechising and applying. Why, the last time Mr. Oka and I were at Shobara we began at ten A. M., and continued until ten P. M.; then, on the morrow, from half past six A. M. until three P. M., and then rode eleven miles and preached three hours and a half. The people sat in a circle on the floor around us while we ate our dinner and supper, continuing to ask questions.

My dear Dr. John, if we, as a mission, can keep steadily at such work as this for a few years, we will have a disciplined army which will burst the gates of heathenism, break down the shrines of idolatry, and tear up, root and branch, the hoar growth of superstition in Japan.

It has been said of our mission that we are busy teaching English, but are not allowed to teach Christianity. Will you please publish this letter in the Reporter and in the Advocates? One year ago to-night, the Japan mission had one native member; we now number seventy-one native members and seventy-four probationers. Seven candidates for the ministry, and two churches about to be built by natives. If this is the outcome of teaching English, I am inclined to think we will continue. Nay, verily, the Lord has honored his Word, and your prayers and ours, dear brethren. Send us more laborers promptly, as you value what Christ and Christianity has done for you, personally, and for America, lest our steps grow feble, our hands grow heavy, and we falter by the way. Brethren, help us now!

Yours in the Master's service,

WALTER R. LAMBUTH.

KOBE, Japan, Jan. 13, 1888.

"To-Morrow We Shall See Land!"

MR. EDITOR: You will understand the above allusion. The words were spoken by our noble Capt. Wyman when we had been 135 days out of sight of land on our voyage to China in 1859, '60. Their significance to us now is of equally thrilling import, for I believe, with the present bearings of our missionary chart before me, the approaching annual meeting will enable the Board to say, it and say it triumphantly: "Land ought to be there; it is there—I see it now!" Thank God for the prospect! Such news will be an inspiration to the church—the old debt paid to the last dollar! Calms, doldrums, storms, headwinds, dangers—all past, our destination reached at last. Oh! for courage, faith, action! Deliverance is at hand! Now let all our people respond heartily, cheerfully, generously, promptly, and a glorious advance shall crown the efforts of the present quadrennial all along the line of operation. Help, brethren! To you we look in confidence at this juncture.

All is well with me. I speak from six to eight times a week, travel and talk incessantly, eat heartily, sleep soundly, and rejoice in hope. God bless you and send help speedily!

Faithfully,

YOUNG J. ALLEN.

Items of Interest.

The aggregate sales of the Northern Methodist publishing houses, East and West, during the last fiscal year amounted to $1,984,748.

The Northern Methodist Book Concern began operations in 1789 with a borrowed capital of $600. It now reports a net capital of $2,392,366.

It is said that one-tenth of the Christians in the world do nine-tenths of the Christian work! No wonder we see what we do see.

The population of New York City, as estimated by the Sun, is 1,688,423.

According to the Charleston News and Courier, the dogs of South Carolina cost the State the sum of $3,000,000.

It is said that the number of saloons has trebled in Nebraska since high license became the law.

The number of immigrants landed at Castle Garden, during January, is over 10,000. January, 1887, the number was 8,270. "The cry is, Still they come."

There is to be this year a Protestant Bi-Centenary, a Pan-Anglican Synod, a Pan-Presbyterian Council, and a World's Missionary Conference in London.

Monday prayer meetings for men of business are now held in the Board of Trade Rooms, Philadelphia.

Volunteer for Japan.

MR. EDITOR: By the earnest appeals from Japan published in the ADVOCATE, we see that the Lord is waking up the nation. We expected a missionary, provided for by the Mississippi, North Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences to be sent out last fall. I have not seen a notice of anyone having offered, though I suppose there are a score of preachers within the bounds of these Conferences who are willing to go. And then we are informed that there are hundreds in the colleges and universities who express willingness. No doubt there are many better "equipped" for the work than your correspondent; but, "as much as in me is, I am ready to preach the gospel" to them that are in Japan.

I would rejoice to go, but am willing to remain. I think my earnest desire is to do the will of "our Father," which is in heaven.

Oh, how it moves my heart to hear the cry of the poor starving multitudes, while we have an abundance, and it would enrich us to impart unto them. "But how can they preach except they be sent?"

Yours in the love of the gospel,

BENJ. S. RAYNER.

MCLEOD, Mississippi.

The Universalist Register, for 1888, reports 677 preachers, 988 parishes, 730 churches, 37,807 members. Universalism began in this country about the same time with Methodism.

Mr. Philip Werlein has in stock a beautiful selection of organs. Anyone thinking of purchasing should call and see them before purchasing. Mr. Werlein's terms are moderate; he sells cheaper than ever before, and guarantees his instruments as first-class in every respect. There is no better judge of an organ, and anyone in the country can safely leave such a matter to him, and be assured that their order will receive prompt attention and prove satisfactory in every respect.

Old lawyer—"I don't like that case and am sorry you took hold of it." Young lawyer—"Oh! it's all right. We'll win." "Have you arranged for the witnesses?" "No; but I've arranged for the jury."

CHANGES.—We have quite a number of orders to change the address of subscribers; some without signatures, and others who do not give the former address. Under these circumstances, change can not be made.

EDUCATIONAL.

Mansfield Female College.

1887-8.

THE FALL TERM will open Wednesday, September 15, 1887.

The Faculty has been strengthened by the accession of Rev. M. S. Watts, of Virginia, who will have the discipline of the College, and Prof. D. F. Bauldie, also of Virginia, who will manage the boarding department. Both these gentlemen are experienced in school work, and they, with their families, will add much to the social advantages of the pupils.

Other highly qualified teachers have been secured for the Literary, Music and Art Departments.

Annual rate for board and tuition from one hundred and sixty-five to one hundred and eighty-five dollars, according to class. Music, instrumental or vocal, and art lessons, five dollars per month of four weeks extra.

Instruction in French, ten dollars per year. Use of piano for practice, ten dollars. Total expense for the year for board, tuition, and single course in music or art, paid in advance, two hundred dollars.

A deposit of five dollars for each term must be made for purchase of books and stationery.

Pupils must furnish their own bed-clothing and pillows, towels and toilet articles.

The College is the property of the Louisiana Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the daughters of members of this body receive free tuition in the Literary and Music Departments.

Owing to the steadily increasing patronage during the past four years, the Board of Managers have made arrangements for increasing the capacity and comfort of the buildings, and beautifying the grounds.

Mansfield is on the line of the Texas and Pacific R. R., 288 miles from New Orleans, and forty miles from Shreveport.

Our Young People.

THE FARMER'S SEVENTY YEARS.

Ah, there he is, hail, at the plow;
He beats the boys for work,
And whate'er the task might be
None ever saw him skirk.
And he can laugh, too, till his eyes
Run o'er with mirthful tears,
And sing full many an old-time song
In spite of seventy years.

"Gee-i-merning, friends! 'tis twelve o'clock.
Time for a half-hour's rest."
And farmer John took out his lunch,
And ate it with a zest.
"A harder task it is," he said,
"Than following up these steers,
Or mending fences, liar, for me
To feel my seventy years.

"You ask me why I feel so young,
I'm sure, friends, I can't tell.
But think it is my good wife's fault
Who's kept me up so well;
For women such as she are scarce
In this poor vale of tears;
She's given me love, and hope, and strength
For more than forty years.

"And then, my boys have all done well,
As far as they have gone,
And that thing warms an old man's blood,
And helps him up and on.
My girls have never caused a pang,
Or raised up anxious fears;
Then wonder not that I feel young
And hale at seventy years.

"Why don't my good boys do my work
And let me sit and rest?
Ah, friends, that wouldn't do for me;
I like my own way best.
They have their duty, I have mine,
And till the end appears,
I mean to smell the soil, my friends,"
Said the man of seventy years.

—New York Sun.

To the Little Cousins:

The editor will have to call upon you to stop writing for awhile. The reason is, that he has on hand now forty letters from the little folks, and, as he can not print more than six in one week, some of them will have to wait so long that somebody will get out of patience and maybe fret a little. So don't write any more for, at least, a month.

Woman's Department Church Extension.

TO THE CHILDREN.

Dear Children: I will give you your report, and then I will tell you some things I have heard since I last wrote.

The whole amount contributed by the children this quarter is $76 72. I am sorry to see a falling off from last quarter, when $106 34 were reported from the children; and it would have been more but for a mistake, for the children at Blount Springs, North Alabama, raised altogether $31 60 instead of $24 60. I hope next quarter you will make up for this falling off. I know you would if you could only realize how much your help is needed. The roll of honor, giving the names of the children contributing the largest amount in each Conference, is as follows:

Louisville Conference—Helen Wood, of Hopkinsville, $6 52; whole amount in the Conference, $17 64.

Little Rock Conference—Sophia Keith, of Magnet, $5 62; whole amount, $18 35.

Missouri Conference—Lily Bivin, of Centenary, St. Joseph, $5 21; whole amount, $9 50.

Indian Mission Conference—Bettie Crabtree, of Muskogee, $2 20; whole amount, $6 15.

North Texas Conference—Benia Hughes, of Cochran Chapel, $1 66; whole amount, $1 66.

Memphis Conference—Willie Stanfield, of Mayfield, Ky., $1 65; whole amount, $4 90.

White River Conference—Lucy Rhodes, of Golden Lake, $1 20; whole amount, $3.

Holston Conference—Ruby Trinkle, of New Berne, $1 09; whole amount, $14 36.

Mississippi Conference—Mary Watts, of Meridian, 70 cents; whole amount, $2 06.

Los Angeles Conference—Hugh Cooke, of San Luis Obispo, 65 cents; whole amount, $2 10.

Lucy Rhodes, of White River Conference, and her little sister and brother, Nelly and Joe, deserve special mention, because they are the only persons at work in their whole Conference as far as I can hear. Their mamma, who lives in the country, is doing what I wish other mammas would do in the country. She has organized her little ones into a society in their own home, and sends me a report.

During February, when this report reaches you, I want our children everywhere to be regularly organized into societies called "Home Builders." Then we mean to see how many homes they can help to build by March, 1889.

Now, children, I want to tell you of how some of our preachers live. One lived in a log hut that was so open the snow and rain came into it, and his wife had the consumption. Another lived on the prairie in a little frame-house that had such great cracks in the floor and walls that the fierce cold winds that sweep over the prairies rushed up through the floor so they could not keep a carpet down, and through the walls so the bedclothes they tried to fasten up to keep it out were torn down. His two little children took the croup and liked to have died with it. He and his wife had to wrap them up in blankets and sit by the fire to keep them warm and keep them from dying; and his poor wife had no shoes. Would you not hate to walk without shoes over a floor through which the cold wind was blowing? I heard of one who was living with his family in a tent all winter; and of another who actually lived in a hole in the ground. Is it not a shame to let them suffer so when they are giving their lives to the service of God? May our Father in heaven help you to remember them!

MR. EDITOR: I am a little boy eleven years of age. I see so many nice little letters in the ADVOCATE, I thought I would write one also, hoping to see it in print. I am a Sunday-school scholar. My teacher, Miss Lizzie Muggah, says I am the best scholar she has. I only missed Sabbath-school three times during last year. She gave me a nice Christmas card for being so punctual. Our beloved pastor, Rev. F. N. Parker, was not returned to us this year, which was sincerely regretted by the church and community. He was our pastor for two years, and was beloved by all who knew him. He was so good and kind. His good influence will be long felt here. Our new pastor is Rev. C. B. Carter. I think we will love him also, as he looks to be good and kind. Mother has just begun to receive your valuable paper this year. We like it ever so much. I love to read the little letters. With love to the little cousins, and kind wishes to the editor, I will close.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl ten years old, and have never written a letter to your good paper. Papa takes your paper. We children like to read the children's letters; so thought I would try to write a few lines, too. I would have written sooner, but I do have so much bad luck that I am afraid I never will see this in print. I will start to school soon. Our preacher is Bro. Miller. He is a good man. I have three brothers and one sister older than myself: one brother and a sweet little sister younger than myself. I will close by asking you to please let it miss the waste-basket.

Your little friend,

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl five years old. This is Sunday evening, and it is very gloomy. I have not been to school since last Spring, but hope to go soon. I have a little sister four weeks old. She is a Christmas baby. We have a little motherless baby with us, too. He has been here a week to-day. His mamma died last Sunday night. They are both very sweet. Mr. R. A. Davis is our pastor for this year. For fear my letter is getting too long, I will close. Wishing the dear old ADVOCATE great success, I am, Your little friend,

Common Duties.

BY PAUL PASTNOR.

Common duties furnish the only safe and sure plane upon which a man may begin life, whether he believes himself destined to be a hod-carrier or the President of the United States. If there is any fact attested by the biographies of great men, it is this: That the road to success runs at first always parallel with the pathway of humble duty. All successful men have begun to walk in this path, and have continued in it until they found themselves in the highway of success. Indeed, there is no other way of reaching that highway; for it is nothing else than the confluence of many paths of humble duty.

Common duties are those that lie at hand. People do not go seeking fortunes now-a-days. If they do, they are most likely to end in the penitentiary or the poor-house. Any man who has hands, can put them out and find something to do. If Abraham Lincoln had gone to Washington to seek his fortune as President of the United States, he would never have been President. Instead of that, he stayed at home and split rails; and the presidency came seeking him.

We go to school to common duties. A winter at the woodpile will teach a man more than half the things necessary to make him a good President. Ten years at any honest work is a liberal education. There have been men who were splendid blacksmiths before they became splendid preachers: but they never would have become splendid preachers if they had been poor blacksmiths. We learn all the fundamentals in the school of common duty. No quality that makes a man really great is foreign to the faithful discharge of any duty, however humble.

The rewards of common duties are cumulative. It is in this sense that they prepare a man for the higher responsibilities and honors of life. The rewards which follow humble labor, with the interest accruing from them, constitute capital for realizing greater achievements. First learn to do well what lies at hand, and when you have done this, you will find that other things come to hand. The man who splits rails as no other man in his town can split them, is the man whom the world will never suffer to remain always a rail-splitter.

Our humble duties, our common duties—if we only appreciated them as we ought! They are the making of every man and every woman. They are not obstacles, not things to be gotten over, and gotten around in the best way we can, while we endeavor to reach greater things. They are the stepping-stones to these greater things. The world does not ask us what we can do; it asks us what we have done. Is it not plain that no one of us has done anything until he has made a beginning? And that no man ever made a beginning but with the first thing?—Zion's Herald.

A SERIOUS DANGER IMMINENT.—When preaching recently before a company of ministers, the Rev. Dr. Alexander Maclaren, of England, said: "It is a real danger, that definite doctrinal teaching may be diminished in its relative prominence in our churches. There is the danger that we shall so one-sidedly preach the love of God that the righteousness of God shall go into the background. If so, depend upon it the love will not last, and it would not be worth having if it did, and they who think that they know better than God himself, who laid the foundation for the radiant proclamation, 'God is love,' in the thunders and lightnings of Sinai, will find out that they have fatally misconceived the relation of the divine attributes to one another, nor have less fatally misinterpreted the needs and the longings of men." These words are worthy of frequent quotation and perpetual remembrance.

Wonderful Popularity.

The fact that the sale of Dr Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets exceeds that of any other pill in the market, be it great or small, is on account of the fact they they are tiny, little, sugar-coated granules, and that in most cases one little "Pellet" is sufficient for a dose; that they are purely vegetable and perfectly harmless; and for constipation, biliousness, sick headache, and all diseases arising from derangement of the liver, stomach or bowels, they are absolutely a specific. A gentle laxative or active cathartic, according to size of dose.

Martyrs to Headache

Seek relief in vain, until they begin use Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Then they regret the years of suffering they might have escaped had they tried this remedy earlier. The trouble was constitutional, not local; and, until Ayer's Sarsaparilla did its effective work as an Alterative and Blood Purifier, they were compelled to suffer.

The wife of Samuel Page, 21 Adams st., Lowell, Mass., was, for a long time, subject to severe headaches, the result of stomach and liver disorders. A perfect cure has been effected by Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Frank Roberts, 727 Washington st., Boston, says that he formerly had terrible headaches, and until he took Ayer's Sarsaparilla, never found any medicine that would give Permanent Relief.

"Every Spring, for years," writes Lizzie W. DeVeau, 262 Fifteenth st., Brooklyn, N. Y., "I have had intolerable headaches. I commenced the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla last March, and have not had a headache since that time."

"I suffered from headache, indigestion, and debility, and was hardly able to drag myself about the house," writes Mrs. M. M. Lewis, of A st., Lowell, Mass. "Ayer's Sarsaparilla has worked a marvelous change in my case. I now feel strong and well as ever."

Jonas Garman, Esq., of Lykins, writes: "For years I have suffered dreadfully, every Spring, from headache, caused by impurity of the blood and biliousness. It seemed for days and weeks that my head would split open. Nothing relieved me till I took Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This medicine has cured me completely."

When Mrs. Genevra Belanger, of Bridge st., Springfield, Mass., began to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla, she had suffered for some years from a serious affection of the kidneys. Every Spring, also, she was afflicted with headache, loss of appetite, and indigestion. A friend persuaded her to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which benefited her wonderfully. Her health is now perfect. TUCKER—The subject of this sketch, R. W. TUCKER, passed over the river, and planted his feet on the "evergreen shore," and pitched his tent on that eternal rock where Jesus reigns and souls redeemed do dwell, "in a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens," on September 14, 1887. Bro. Tucker was born June 17, 1812, in East Feliciana parish, La. He was the son of Henry and Rebecca Tucker; was married to Miss Harriet S. Scott, February 8, 1844, and joined the Methodist Church in 1855. He leaves eight children, all grown up men and women—six sons and two daughters. Bro. Willie Tucker, who joined the Mississippi Conference at the last session, and who was appointed to Livingston circuit, is his the worthy son of worthy sire. Though sad, it is not unpleasant to chronicle a Christian death like this, realizing with Solomon, that the pleasures of this world are "all vanity and vexation of spirit." For ten years Bro. Tucker, before his death, sold all that he had and bought the priceless jewel, "the kingdom of God." He lived in daily communion with the blessed Savior of mankind. During the last three months he realized that the time was rapidly approaching when he would be called to step on into the dark, rolling river of death that intervenes between this world and the world to come, and stood waiting to obey the call. Ever and anon he expressed his perfect willingness to go, and, in substance, he said, "I want to be where Jesus is." As the chilly waters of death began to ripple on the shore and to throw their spray on his decaying form, a few minutes before he was summoned by the Master to step into the flood, he said, "I have a long journey to make; but Jesus is with me, and I am not afraid." And, then as his spirit glided out on the placid stream, and disappeared from mortal eyes, he triumphantly exclaimed, "Glory to Jesus!" These were his last words. Like Abraham and Isaac and Jacob, and a host of others gone before. We laid his body to rest in the grave, with the full assurance that the soul went exulting home to the God who gave it.

SAMPLE—Died, at her home in Texarkana, Texas, Mrs. ELLA MABEL SAMPLE, December 9, 1887. Born August 28, 1853, of pious parents, H. and E. F. Sinclair, of DeSoto parish, La., she gave herself early in life to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; received her religious training in the Sabbath-school, at Bell Bower Church, and in 1883 experienced the blessing of regeneration, rejoicing in Christ her Savior. In 1885, she was married to Mr. W. C. Sample, of Tennessee, whom she leaves with little Willie, of two years, still to battle with the trials of life. The consistency of her religious life was marked, her friends were many wherever she went; and when the end came she was ready, passing gently over into the rest of God. Thus live and die those who love the Lord Jesus. May the influence of her life, the fact of her death, and the providence of God in it all, but prove to the bereaved the goodness of the Father; and may they meet again in that "life of love!"

W. F. HENDERSON.

DAVIDSON—MRS. ANNIE O. DAVIDSON, (nee Wilder) was born at Bayou Barbary, Livingston parish, La., March 1, 1849; was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at the age of twenty-one years. She married John T. Davidson, at Amite City, La., May 3, 1871. Moved to Cadeasien parish, in October, 1871, and died at Edgerly, February 11, 1888. She was the mother of two children: one boy eleven years, and one girl eleven days old at her death. Sister Davidson has been taken from us to enter into the "joys of her Master," and while we miss her beyond expression we would not call her back. She was always zealous for the cause of Christ. A help and comfort to her pastor, always glad to tell what God had done for her; and when told of her critical condition, she calmly replied: "It is no new thing for me to trust my Savior." Praise God! the religion that had stayed and comforted her through life was sufficient for her in the hour of death. May God keep the husband and children, and comfort the sister and brother, till we all meet around his throne in glory. Amen!

ROBERT P. HOWELL, P. C.

MERCHANT—Resolved, That in the sudden and untimely death of MRS. C. E. MERCHANT, we, the members of the Lecompte Methodist Episcopal Church, have lost a true friend and humble Christian worker.

Resolved, That we deeply sympathize with the grief-stricken husband and sorrowing relatives, praying that they may submit patiently to the will of him "who doeth all things well."

Resolved, That while we miss her from our midst, and deplore her loss, still we feel sure she has but entered into that "rest that remaineth to the people of God."

Reckoning Time.

A very little thought upon the matter will show that if the earth makes one revolution in the course of twenty-four hours, the sun will rise at any particular place earlier or later, according as the place is farther east or west. As all the distance round the globe is three hundred and sixty degrees, and as all this passes under the sun in twenty-four hours, it follows that the distance passing in one hour will be fifteen degrees. We more commonly speak of the sun passing over that number of degrees in an hour, for that is what seems to be done. This gives a rate of motion of one degree in four minutes.

As this rate is uniform, it is a simple matter to convert time into distance, or distance into time. This is just what the navigator does in calculating his longitude—his distance east or west from some given meridian line.

Suppose the meridian of London be taken as the prime meridian from which to reckon. If a ship leave London and sail towards the west, when it has sailed one degree it will have reached a line upon which the sun rises four minutes later than it rises at London. Of course the time will be four minutes later all the day.

If, now, the captain of the ship have with him a chronometer set to London time, and regulated so as not to vary for change of temperature or other cause, this chronometer will be four minutes faster than the true time at the place where he is. The true time he finds by observing when the sun crosses at noon the north and south line running directly overhead.

The chronometer shows the captain London time: he finds the time where he is by observation of the sun every noon when it is not cloudy. Every four minutes of difference counts for one degree of longitude.

If he kept on in this way until he had sailed around the globe, which is a distance of three hundred and sixty degrees, he would lose just twenty-four hours. His chronometer would again agree with the sun, but his calendar would be at fault. The day of the month and the day of the week, if he had made no change, would require dating forward by just one day—that is, if his record showed that it was Tuesday, April 15, it would actually be Wednesday, April 16.

To keep as near the true date as possible, the change is always made when the ship has completed half the circuit of the globe—having made one hundred and eighty degrees of longitude. At that point the chronometer will be just twelve hours ahead of local time, half a day fast as the calendar stands.

But the calendar is now set ahead one whole day, thus making the chronometer slow by twelve hours in comparison with local time. If from this point the ship continues her voyage around the world, it will be gaining at the same rate, and come to London on the right minute, hour, day of the week, and day of the month.

Few vessels make the complete circuit of the globe, but it is the practice of all to change the date when they cross the meridian of one hundred and eighty degrees. By following this rule all records made on the voyage will bear the proper date. Of course, when they cross from west to east the change is made by dropping out a day, or setting the date back.—Youth's Companion.

Reasonable Expectations May Be Realized.

Although the body is the growth of a score of years, and the chronic diseases which trouble it are, sometimes, also the growth of years, there are a few people who expect the oldest and most obstinate maladies to be cast out in twenty-four hours. Compound Oxygen, the great vitalizer, works surely and reasonably, but not necessarily with railroad speed. On some persons it at once shows its beneficent work. Others have taken it for a week or two, or even more, before beginning to receive marked benefit: for instance, Mr. C. E. Cady, of New York, who was cured of an old catarrh, says, "The benefit I experienced was within four weeks from the time I began. Until then there was little or no effect; then my recovery was rapid." On the other hand, Mrs. Mary Cator, of Camden, New Jersey, says, "The Oxygen had an immediate effect on me the first time Dr. Starkey gave it to me at the office." This lady had a happy experience in being entirely rid of neuralgic pains of long standing. There is hope for everybody who will make a fair trial of Compound Oxygen.

The treatise on this subject, which Drs. Starkey & Palen will send you free by mail, is well worth reading. Address them at 1529 Arch St., Phila., Pa.

THE POWER OF TRUTH.—A striking illustration of the power of truth is seen in the following narrative related by Pastor Fleidner, Spain: "One of our Spanish colporteurs sold a Bible some time ago, and the priest rushed up to a man who had bought it, exclaiming, 'Those heretical books shall not come into this village,' snatched it out of his hand, tore it, and threw it on the ground. The colporteur was stoned and driven out of the village. Some weeks after, being obliged to pass through the village again, he hoped to do so unobserved, but almost immediately was recognized. 'Are you not the man that sells Bibles?' he was asked, and on replying 'Yes,' instead of an angry outburst, he received the invitation, 'Well, then, come into our village; we want your books.' The explanation of this changed manner was that the village grocer having wrapped up his goods in the pages of the torn Bible, which had come into his hands, the people read these beautiful histories, which they had never read before, and then asked God to send the man back to them. Not only did he sell all the Bibles he had with him, but they made him stay with them two or three days to give them instruction."—Maritime Presbyterian, in Church at Home and Abroad.

A good appetite is essential to good health, and loss of appetite indicates something wrong. Hood's Sarsaparilla creates and sharpens the appetite, assists the digestive organs and regulates the kidneys and liver. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla this season. Sold by druggists.

Mr. Darwin was not regarded as a Christian, but he had the greatest respect for good in Christianity, and was great enough to acknowledge it. This is the way in which he answered some shallow critics of foreign missionaries: "They forget, or will not remember, that human sacrifice and the power of an idolatrous priesthood; a system of profligacy unparalleled in any other part of the world; infanticide, a consequence of that system; bloody wars, where the conquerors spared neither women nor children—that all these things have been abolished; and that dishonesty, intemperance, and licentiousness have been greatly reduced by the introduction of Christianity. In a voyager, to forget these things, is a base ingratitude; for should he chance to be at the point of shipwreck on some unknown coast, he will most devoutly pray that the lesson of the missionary may have extended thus far."—Missionary Outlook.

Consumption Surely Cured.

To the Editor:

Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the above-named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy FREE to any of your readers who have consumption, if they will send me their Express and P. O. address.

Respectfully,
T. A. SLOCUM, M. C.,
181 Pearl St., New York.

Dr. Nehemiah Adams once said, "Religion is hostile only to that which is hostile to religion." What that is, experience soon detects. "That your prayers be not hindered," is a good motto for the spiritual detective. Prayer is the Christian's vital breath, and on spiritual breathing depends spiritual life. What hinders prayer? Detest it. Mark it for rejection, for abhorrence. Hindered prayer asphyxiates the lungs of life; unhindered prayer is oxygen and ozone to every spiritual tissue.

ONE of the first symptoms of a derangement of the digestive organs is constipation, and should be promptly attended to, or inflammation of the bowels may follow. Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Pillets will promptly cure, and are agreeable to take. 25 cents per vial.

All the waking hours of all the day may be made to tell on the Christian's growth. Is not that the meaning of the apostle's saying, "that whether we eat or drink, or whatever we do, we should do all for the glory of God."

To promote a greater activity of the kidneys, accelerate circulation of the blood, and prevent a tendency to fatty or granular degeneration of the kidneys, use Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Balm.

"Prayer is the key of the morning and the lock of the night." Happy is the family whose day holds nothing which the one may not fitly open, and the other peacefully close.

WHEN you are constipated, with loss of appetite, headache, take one of Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Pillets. They are pleasant to take, and will cure you. 25 cents a vial.

Some things you may have without seeking, some you may seek and not find; but there are things, and those you most need, that you will never find without seeking.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

President Cleveland and party received an enthusiastic welcome in the South last week.

The fisheries treaty has been the subject of much comment. The President and Secretary Bayard receive much criticism, and some declare that the treaty is a disgrace to all American citizens.

The National Democratic Committee having met in the city of Washington, on February 23, has appointed Tuesday, June 5, at noon, as the time, and chosen the city of St. Louis as the place for holding the National Democratic Convention.

W. H. Gray, of Chicago, arrived in Richmond, Va., February 23, bringing with him the cash to make the first payment for the Libby Prison, which he will have removed to Chicago.

The North Carolina Democratic Executive Committee decided to hold the next State Convention in Raleigh, on May 15, and passed resolutions in favor of abolishing the whole internal revenue system.

A bill authorizing the removal of the quarantine station from Ship Island, Miss., and appropriating $45,000 for the purpose, was passed by the Senate, February 23.

Mr. W. W. Corcoran, the venerable philanthropist, died in Washington, D. C., February 24, aged eighty-nine years.

Martin Irons, the leader of the strike on the Missouri Pacific system two years ago, who has been on trial in St. Louis for three days on the charges of attempting to tap telegraph wires and obtain dispatches going to and from Jay Gould and Manager Hoxie, was acquitted on February 25.

Tilly's Hotel, in Shreveport, La., was destroyed by fire on February 26. The loss is estimated at $50,000. A commercial traveler perished in the flames.

The strike of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad was inaugurated February 27. The strikers may be replaced by ex-employees of the Reading railroad, Knights of Labor, whose places were recently taken by the Brotherhood during the strike of the former organization on the Reading road.

The steamer "Julia," was blown up in San Francisco Bay on February 27. The hull was burned to the water's edge, and engulfed with a number of passengers. Between thirty and forty lives are estimated to have been lost.

The Ragsdale House, in Meridian, Miss., was burned on February 27. Loss, $70,000.

The Henderson Steel Works, in Birmingham, Ala., which were completed a few days ago, made their first run February 27, and it was successful. This is the first steel ever made in Birmingham; and this test adds 25 per cent. to the iron ores of the valley.

FOREIGN.

Major Saunderson, the well-known Orange leader and member of Parliament for North Armagh, in a speech at Brighton, February 22, declared that as long as the men of Ulster had right hands to strike with, the Nationalists would never reign over them.

The Esercito Italiano calls attention to the massing of French troops on the Italian frontier and says the government is taking the necessary counter-measures and arranging to increase the militia and the cadres of the territory.

It is stated that Austria agrees with Russia in holding that Prince Ferdinand's presence in Bulgaria is illegal, but recognizes his election to the throne as legal Italy is said to have declared that she will co-operate with England and Austria in any action they may take in regard to Bulgaria.

The fisheries treaty is denounced in Nova Scotia. Prominent members of the Liberal party denounce it as the almost total surrender of the fisheries to the Americans, while moderate Conservatives admit that it is at best disappointing.

Mr. Phelps, the American Minister, had a long interview February 22, with Lord Salisbury on the subject of the fisheries treaty, the text of which was before them.

Mr. McCarlan, member of Parliament, has granted his tenants a reduction of 55 per cent.

It is reported that the Prince of Wales, on the occasion of his silver wedding banquet, will announce the betrothal of Prince Albert Victor to his cousin, the Princess Alexandria of Greece, and the betrothal of the Princess Victoria to the Duke of Sparta, Crown Prince of Greece.

Dr. Mackenzie has been appointed successor to the late Sir George MacFarren in the Royal Academy.

Prince Louis of Baden, grandson of the Emperor of Germany, is dead.

It is reported that a syndicate of French, Belgian and Dutch bankers has advanced to Russia the sum of 830,000,000, refusing to grant a larger loan unless the Bulgarian question is settled peacefully.

Lord Salisbury, in a speech on February 25, urged the necessity of the Conservatives organizing in order to battle their enemies. He said the Conservatives had nothing sensational to offer Ireland; but the advice they gave her was based on scientific principles.

La Temps reports that England is negotiating with Turkey for the cession to England of Salonica and the Islands commanding the Dardanelles, England guaranteeing to the Sultan the possession of Stamboul with the immediate district, the Dardanelles and all the Asiatic provinces.

It is stated that the Porte has rejected Russia's suggestion that Turkish troops occupy Bulgaria.

Mr. Gladstone has written a letter to the electors of Deptford in support of Wilfred Blunt's candidacy for the House of Commons.

WANTED.—Agents for the marvelous work, "Fifty Years in the Church of Rome." Address I. Q. REYNOLDS, 203 Lafayette street, New Orleans.

Notice.

The Brookhaven District Conference will be held in Summit, April 13-15. Bishop J. C. Keener will preside. The opening sermon will be preached on April 12, at 7 P. M. Brethren will please have their Quarterly Conference records at the first session of the Conference, Friday morning. Essays will be read during the District Conferences on the following topics: The Bible in the Sunday-school; Obligation of the Church to her Schools; Our Obligation to the Foreign Mission Work; Why We Should Support our Church Papers; Church Finances.

JAS. M. WEEMS, P. E.

Another Extraordinary Offer.

After this date we will include in our club arrangement the New York Weekly World, the price of which, including all postage, will be three dollars. This amount will entitle the subscriber to one copy of the "World's History of the United States," post paid.

This history is on a new plan. It is the record of the events of our history in the order in which they happened. There are no moralizings, no opinions put forth, no criticisms offered in regard to anything. It is not a political record merely, but one of all sorts of facts that have contributed to make our history. Discoveries, inventions, financial and literary matters, are all noted. One merit of the work is, that it can not grow old. The date of an event, when once ascertained, is fixed for all time. The book has twenty-four very good illustrations. We regard it as a valuable book for every student.

Old and new subscribers are entitled to the premium. Subscribers who have already paid will receive the History and the Weekly World one year by sending one dollar. Cash to accompany all orders.

HUGH JAMIESON, JR.,
Publisher.

Notice.

I have the following books on hand and for sale at forty per cent. below catalogue prices (purchaser to pay postage or express charges): Wesley's Notes on the New Testament; Summers on Baptism; Broadus on the Preparation of a Sermon; Milman's History of Latin Christianity.

Address H. BRADFORD,
Meadville, Franklin county, Miss.

Southern Cultivator and Christian Advocate.

By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer to new subscribers for the ADVOCATE, the Southern Cultivator and Dixie Farmer, combined with the ADVOCATE, for $2 50 for the two publications for one year. The price to old subscribers will remain the same as heretofore—$2 75—with only twenty-five cents extra to either of the above amounts for "Dickson's System of Farming." These rates are postage prepaid. All orders must be accompanied by cash in full; no allowance for commission to agents, and both papers must be ordered at same time. We will, however, fill orders to subscribers who failed to take advantage of the club rate when they last renewed for $1 for the Cultivator for one year.

GOVERNMENT TESTS.

The Royal Baking Powder Declared Superior to all others.

The fact that Royal Baking Powder is, in all respects, the best baking powder offered to the public has been established beyond question.

Prof. H. A. Mott, when employed by the U. S. Government to analyze the various baking powders of the market to determine which was the best and most economical, after an extended investigation, reported in favor of the Royal, and it was adopted for government use.

Prof. Mott has continued his examinations of baking powders sold at the present day, and now affirms it as his deliberate judgment, arrived at after most thorough research and a careful examination of the principal brands of the market, that the Royal is undoubtedly the purest and most reliable baking powder offered to the public. Prof. Mott, in his recent report, says:

"The Royal Baking Powder is absolutely pure, for I have so found it in many tests made both for that company and the U. S. Government.

"I will go still further and state that, because of the facilities that company have for obtaining perfectly pure cream of tartar, and for other reasons dependent upon the proper proportions of the same, and the method of its preparation, the Royal Baking Powder is undoubtedly the purest and most reliable baking powder offered to the public. DR. HENRY A. MOTT, PH.D."

ONLY.

BY W. J. H. BRADLEY.

It was only a tiny seed at the first.
And its power I little knew;
But 'twas sown, and the germ from its prison burst,
And was nourished by sunshine and dew.
The germ of the past was a blessing at last,
In the bountiful harvest that grew.

It was only a twittering song that I heard,
The singer I could not see;
It had burst from a caged, but happy bird,
Yet it carried a lesson to me—
Our hearts may have cheer, though in limited sphere,
Whate'er our surroundings may be.

It was only a word by the wayside spoke,
And uttered with faltering breath;
But a soul from the slumber of sin it awoke,
And saved from the grasp of death.
As a sparkling gem in a diadem,
It shone in the Savior's wreath.

Go hopefully on in the work of the day,
Scatter broadcast the seed of the Word;
Sing thy song, though unseen; drop the word by the way,
And leave the results with the Lord.
Though but little at most—and with nothing to boast,
"What she could" will insure a reward!

In Memoriam.

MRS. ANNIE M'GEHEE DANDRIDGE.

BY W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D. D.

More than a passing notice is due the sacred memory of one of the noblest, truest women of these times. Mrs. Annie McGehee Dandridge, the elect lady, the earnest, humble Christian, the model woman, the genuine friend, admired and honored of all, passed from her work on earth to her reward in heaven on January 21, 1888. While the fatal pneumonia was dissolving this tabernacle, she was calmly, trustingly waiting for the message that should summon her to the "house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." Her pastor, the Rev. E. H. Moon, writes: "I visited her several times, and prayed with her. From the time she was taken ill she did not think she would recover. She said she had no choice in the matter; that she was in the hands of the Lord, and she prayed for his will to be done. I buried her at Fredonia, beside her lamented husband and son, and in that quiet, secluded spot their bodies sleep together." Yes, "sleep together," not dead, for, "Whosoever liveth and believeth in me, shall never die." There, nearly twenty-six years ago, she had laid away the body of her only child, a noble, devoted son, brought fresh from the field of Shiloh to rest in a soldier's grave. That crushing blow swept from her the treasure and the hopes, so rich in the promises which his cultivated, Christian young manhood gave of an earnest, useful life. Scarcely had one year of this first deep sorrow passed over her bowed head, when an added bitterness came to her cup in the sudden death of the husband who shared her fortunes, and on whom she tenderly leaned for counsel and companionship. Hopeless night settled over all that she had cherished in the plans and labors of her home-life on earth. But earth had never been all to her. It was but the footstool of her God. He had given and he had taken away, and he was able to make all things work together for her good. Bereaved and desolate beyond the power of language to describe, she yet did not yield to the seductive sense of loss, but held it true in her soul that her departed were alive with God, awaiting the resurrection of the just. The Lord's truth and grace gave her inspiration and purpose to devote her remaining years to doing good to those that were left around her. Her sad experience was a religious training. The peaceable fruits of righteousness came from her sore afflictions. Covering her graves with the evergreen of hope, she turned with generous heart and busy hand to gather around her the young of her family, whom she might train and fit for the work of life. Her estate, distracted and imperiled by the fortunes of war, was held and managed with marked skill and success.

Hollywood, her ample and elegant forest home, was adorned with flowers and books and works of art, for the sake of the choicest influences for good to all who might breathe even a temporary life under that noble roof. Everything in the appointments and habits of the home showed the delicate tastes and strong religious force of this cultured Christian matron. The young lives that grew up there under her molding tuition, she has left as a stream that shall perpetuate the virtues of her own living. People of all ages felt the force of her great qualities, and held in deepest reverence the exalted purity of her unselfish character. She was not sectarian; she had love and fraternity for all Christians; but she was loyal and devoted to her own church. She was a Methodist from principle as well as training. The doctrines, usages and enterprises of her church were dear to her heart and had the liberal support of her hand. She was the life of the Woman's Missionary Society in her pastoral charge. Appeal and example from her so often saved the interests of her church from threatened failure. She was the preacher's friend. To her he was the servant of God, and her home his resting-place. To her pastor she was at once sister and brother. With tender sympathies and delicate intuitions she combined courageous enterprise and wise counsel.

Fredonia, the little country church where she worshiped, and where she gathered the young people into her Sunday-school class, can scarcely be identified without her name and presence. How much she has done with her own hands to keep the consecrated house in condition for comfort and worship! May the divine Master use her life to inspire other hearts and hands for this good work!

Mrs. Dandridge was born in Wilkes county, Ga., April 10, 1818, and came with her parents, in early girlhood, to Pontotoc county, Miss., whence they moved to Panola county. She was a member of a very large family connection, which has had a strong social and industrial influence in the State, her father being the late Mr. John S. McGehee, of Panola county, and the late Judge Edward McGehee, of Wilkinson county, being one of her uncles, both prominent in the business affairs and social life of the church of their choice. Mrs. Dandridge inherited the strong intellectual and practical qualities of her family, and possessed the advantages of wealth and literary culture. She represented the best type of our Southern womanhood. On August 29, 1839, she became the wife of Dr. Charles F. Dandridge, a practicing physician, a man in every way suited to her genius and tastes. Their wedded life of twenty-four years was one of singular happiness and prosperity, saving only the loss of their only child.

Mrs. Dandridge was a woman of strong convictions, ready and clear perceptions of the right, the true, the proper. Though charged with so much business, she loved knowledge, and the society of good books and literary people. She was engaged in the Chautauqua course, and was deeply interested in Montagle, where she had arranged for annual visits. In all her pursuits she was unselfish, seeking how she might help others to the enjoyment and profit of the best forms of life in this world, and how she might win them to the love of the Savior and his righteousness. Who that has known her is not thankful to God for the knowledge and for the influence of that lofty Christian character upon himself. She has ceased from her labors, but her works do follow her.

The Christian Home.

BY REV. W. B. LEWIS.

Mother, home and heaven are said to be the three sweetest words in the English language. Mother and home are associated together in our conceptions, and these are a type of heaven, the home of the souls in eternity. If I mistake not, the great need of these times for both Church and State are true Christian homes in which to develop character in the rising generation. Much depends upon the blood that courses through the veins of our children, and much depends upon the school in which they shall be educated; but much more depends upon the homes in which they are to be reared. It is, therefore, the imperative duty of those who are at the head of a family to establish and maintain a Christian home of the purest and best type.

A Christian home is one dedicated to the service of Christ, in which he is worshiped and over which he reigns. The father and mother of that home are both truly pious. Their daily walk and conversation are such as becometh the gospel of Christ. They have a good family government. It is mild and affectionate, but wise and firm. They never disagree in the presence of their children. All differences of opinion are reserved to be discussed when their children are absent. Their children are trained to obey them readily and cheerfully. The habit of loving obedience being thus formed in childhood, they make good citizens and good church members in their mature years. Family worship is never neglected in that home. If the father should come home from his business at night worried and wearied, and thus vulnerable to the temptation to omit it, the mother, in her wisdom and goodness, perceives her opportunity, and prepares the family, the table, the light and the books, and, in a gentle, assuring tone, says, "We are ready for prayers," and Satan is defeated. Those children attend Sunday-school, if one is accessible to them. They are regular and punctual. They always know their lessons. They never give the teachers or superintendent any trouble. They also attend church with their parents. Those parents know the value of the sanctuary, "with its living voice and solemn service," as an influence in forming the character and shaping the destiny of their children. The Sabbath is sacredly observed in that home as a day of rest and worship. The secular affairs of life are shut out on that holy day. The secular daily, if it comes at all, is laid aside 'till Monday. A little self-denial here may be necessary on the part of the father, if he is a business man, but he knows how to deny himself. The ADVOCATE comes regularly to that home. It is paid for, too. The father does not complain because it costs $2 a year. He knows it is worth twice that amount, and that it can not be published for less. His children read it, and become acquainted with the practical operation of the church, and interested in the various enterprises thereof. They are also supplied with good books. Each one who can read has his own Bible, and reads it. And no other book is admitted to the library that can not keep company with the Word of God. The father knows the value of good literature with children, and also the danger there is in a bad book in the hands of a reading boy. The pastor of the family is a frequent visitor to that home. He is always greeted in such a manner as to make him feel glad he came. They never turn the "pastoral gimlet," that horrid instrument that makes the heart of the pastor bleed in some homes. They are too polite for that. They never speak disparagingly of the pastor in the hearing of their children. When the pastor comes he always meets the children if they are at home. And he don't have to ask permission to have prayers. They propose it. If they feel the need of more of his influence in the family, they invite him around some time when all are at home, and thus facilitate his difficult pastoral work. There may be paintings, and music and social gatherings there, and many other things that add to the beauty and attractiveness of that home; but cards and dancing are excluded as schools of vice. The family life in that home runs "like crystal waters over shining stones." It is both beautiful and happy, and it is as sacred as the sanctuary and the Sabbath. The children of that home grow up to be strong in character. When they go out into the world, as they must do ere long, they carry with them the sweet memories of their child-life, and these are an abiding benediction and inspiration in after years. Give us Christian homes all over our land, and the church and country are safe. But who can tell what our future shall be if these are lacking? What a fearful responsibility that parent assumes who brings up his children without the silent and constant influence of a well-regulated Christian home! "Through wisdom is an house (household or family) builded; and by understanding it is established: and by knowledge shall the chambers be filled with all precious and pleasant riches."

LAUREL, Mississippi.

The Young Preacher.

At Chicago recently the Presbyterians and Baptists held a love-feast, at which were present, besides some 600 members, all the pastors of each denomination. After a sumptuous banquet wit and wisdom flowed in post-prandial speeches. One of these we give below.

Dr. D. C. Marquis, of the McCormick Theological Seminary, said:

"The young preacher is in many respects a highly favored individual. In one particular, at least, his position is altogether unique, absolutely without a parallel among the occupations of men. His is the only calling, and he is the only person who, at the threshold of his career of active service, finds a premium placed upon his inexperience.

"In the other learned professions, experience counts for something. It has a value in the increasing confidence it commands and in the weightier influence it brings. The physician may have a struggle for it in the beginning. Waiting for patients is likely to prove a sore trial to his patience. But if he is industrious and faithful and true, he is almost sure to find his practice and his income increasing with his years. The lawyer has to win his clients by proving himself worthy of them. But when he has them, his bald head and his gray hairs only bind them closer to him and serve to increase the number and importance of them, instead of serving as a reason why clients should forsake him. The man who looks after the body, and the man who looks after the purse, may both of them be like Lazarus at the outset, but they both have a fair prospect of becoming like Dives at the close. (Laughter.) I mean, of course, like Dives in his earthly condition. But the man who looks after the soul can, from the very outset, begin to bank upon his youth and inexperience. He is all the more certain of position and employment just because he has no record to commend him or to handicap him. He starts with place to work and with promise of support. Instead of having to wait through weary years, as the lawyer and the doctor must do, before he can invite Daisy to come and share his home, the young preacher can build his home even before he begins his work, and it is considered the proper thing for him to bring Daisy with him when he enters upon his field. But though he has this advantage at the beginning, he finds it to be an advantage that doesn't grow as the years and the responsibilities increase. If he escapes the fate of Lazarus in the outset, he is pretty sure to come to it in the end. For although it stands to reason that advancing age and increasing experience ought to make his services more valuable, the very reverse appears to be true. It would seem that in caring for the body, and in guarding the purse, the people will be satisfied with nothing but well-grown beef; and the older it is, and the tougher it is, the better they like it. But in caring for the soul, they want nothing but the tenderest of veal, too young as yet to assimilate its food, and so near to the period of nativity that its bones have not yet begun to harden.

"I used to wonder why this was so, and, when I was somewhat more inexperienced than I am now, I used to denounce it as being utterly unreasonable and wrong. But experience has taught me that there is reason in it, whether it be right or wrong. And the reason I take to be this: that the young preacher, if he is possessed of the zeal and enthusiasm that every preacher of the gospel ought to have, will undertake and carry to a successful issue many an enterprise which a little experience would make him cautious about attempting. His zeal has not been chilled, as yet, by a wet blanket of indifference. His enthusiasm has not been curbed by snubs or criticisms or antagonisms. He believes in the truth he has to tell, and he believes in the cause he represents, and he believes that the church of God is as deeply interested in the truth and in the cause as he can possibly be. Believing thus, he strikes from the shoulder, and his very boldness carries him forward and enables him to lead the church forward where the caution born of experience would have stranded him. He has no hesitancy about preaching the most unpalatable truth, because he takes for granted the church believes it, and is joining with him in prayer that the Holy Spirit will make that truth to be the power of God unto salvation. I don't wonder, indeed, if the church should find a charm in the freshness of that conviction whose enthusiasm has never been chilled by disappointment in expected co-operation. The congregation enjoys it. It is splendid while it lasts. It awakens attention in the community; increases the attendance; rents the pews, and adds members to the church. Besides, the young man sincerely believes that the church is in hearty sympathy with every principle of Bible morality. He has a right to think so. That is the church's profession, and he, in his unsophisticated innocence, proceeds as though the profession were the fact. Accordingly, he plays the part of Paddy at the fair. He keeps his shillelah upon the whirl, and, wherever an evil shows its head, he hits it. That, too, attracts the attention of the public. It swells the congregation and rents the pews. As long as it is only 'Jones' that's hit, 'Smith' rubs his hands, and whispers, 'Sick 'em.' But, after a while, Smith gets a wipe, and then he and Jones both grow lukewarm, and presently the young preacher discovers that, in his advocacy of truth, and in his crusade against evil, he is practically alone, because he has gone beyond where the conscience and thought of the church is willing to follow him. He finds that if he would mould the church into a concentrated force, to be wielded in behalf of truth and right, he must consult the prejudices of Smith, and the preferences of Jones, and, although he may not do this to the extent of sacrificing a principle, or of yielding an iota of his own conviction of what is true and right, yet the very effort to conciliate acts as a curb to his zeal, and throws a wet blanket over his enthusiasm; and then he is a 'young preacher' no longer. (Laughter.)

"The young preacher has this further advantage. He thinks that the measures and the methods which he proposes to adopt are entirely new. Mother Goose's melodies are as fresh and as interesting and as novel to our children to-day as they were to the childhood of our grandparents, two generations ago. The method of catching birds by sprinkling salt upon their tails is just as real and just as attractive to the four-year-old of to-day as it was to the childhood of two centuries ago. And I do not doubt that five centuries hence, if the world should last so long, the children of that day will be prompt to do just what you and I did at their time of life, ready to march forth with salt in hand, to sprinkle birds' tails, in the vain hope of catching the birds, never questioning but that the method is entirely original and altogether new. (Laughter.)

"The young preacher of our time, just like his predecessor of the generations past, is a firm believer in the salt-sprinkling method. He may use a different quality of salt from that of the olden time, but he believes in it, and with full confidence he undertakes to use it. One grasps his handful of salt in the shape of a 'service of song.' Another, in the form of an 'historical lecture.' Still another adopts a 'Lyceum,' or a 'Chautauqua Club,' or a tableau, and all of them with the firm conviction that such sprinkling of salt will surely capture the birds and bring them within the influence of the truth. But he soon discovers that the world and the flesh and the devil are old hands at that business. On that line of operation they can beat him out of sight. If he is a wise man, it doesn't take him long to learn that so long as he puts his work before the public under the guise of attraction and entertainment, the devil can discount him a hundredfold. He soon discovers that he is only playing into the devil's hand, for the salt that he sprinkles only gives the birds a taste of that which Satan and the world can furnish in far greater strength and in far greater abundance. And when he makes that discovery and begins to see that his only instrumentality for winning men is the truth, and that the only power on which he can depend is that of the Holy Ghost—when he reaches that conclusion and begins to act upon it, then he is a young preacher no longer."

Christian, the background of your life, that against which the knotted outline of every trial reveals itself, is the light of the celestial city. What can you not endure if behind it spreads the eternal glory? If the great hope throws its illuminations of joyous color over all the western sky toward which you journey, how beautiful do the events of your life, even those which are commonplace, become against its divine screen of heavenly, many-colored light! Every believer may look at his life as set against this golden background of the heaven to which he hastes. The King's palace is just below the horizon. The glory of it lightens our western sky and streams far up toward the zenith!

THE SECRET OF A HAPPY DAY.

Just to let thy Father do
What he will;
Just to know that he is true
And be still;
Just to follow hour by hour,
As it leadeth;
Just to draw the moment's power
As he needeth;
Just to trust him—that is all.
Then the day will surely be
Peaceful, and whate'er befall,
Bright and blest, calm and free.

Just to let him speak to thee
Through his Word;
Watching that his voice may be
Clearly heard;
Just to tell him everything
As it rose;
And at once to Him to bring
All surprises;
Just to listen, and to stay
Where you can't but miss his way—
This is all! and this to-day
Continuing if you shall rejoice.

Just to ask him what to do
All the way;
And to hear his voice, quick and true
To obey;
Just to know the needed grace
He bestoweth;
Every hour of time and place
Overfloweth.

Just to take thy orders straight
From the Master's own command,
Blessed day! when thus we wait
Always at the sovereign's hand.

Just to recollect his love,
Always true;
Always shining from above,
Always new;
Just to recognize its light,
All enfolding;
And to claim its present might,
All upholding.

Just to know "it is thy own,"
That no power can take away,
Is not this enough alone
For the gladness of the day?

Just to trust and yet to ask Guidance still;
Take the training or the task,
As he will;
Just to take the loss or gain
As he sends it;
Just to take the joy or pain
As he lends it.

He who formed thee for his praise
Will not miss the gracious aim;
So to-day and all thy days
Shall be filled for the same.

Just to leave in his dear hand
Little things;
All we can not understand,
All that stings;
Just to let him take the care
Sorely pressing,
Finding all we let him bear
Changed to blessing.

This is all! and yet the way
Marked by him who loved thee best,
Secret of a happy day,
Secret of his promised rest.

"The Blest Advocate."

BY MRS. L. CRARY SADLER.

Many write of the "dear old ADVOCATE," and "our ADVOCATE," but a friend, whom I have never met, says, in a letter to me: "I have known you a long time through the columns of the blest ADVOCATE." That sentence speaks volumes. It falls as the dew of Hermon upon one heart that has often been "cast down and disquieted" because of the lack of "tokens of good" that even the Psalmist of Israel prayed for.

"The blest ADVOCATE!" It has gone to that home, where it found a welcome from the mother and father and nine children. The ADVOCATE has been to them a comfort, a friend, a joy, a preacher, a teacher and a blessing. If it has been that in the home of which we speak, it has been so in many others; and yet there are many homes of Methodist families that never see the "blest ADVOCATE."

Meeting an old friend, I asked if he took the ADVOCATE. Laughing and nodding his head, he said: "Why, I could not do without it." His father had taken it from the beginning, and still lives to read it; and when he visits his seven children, who all have homes of their own, he finds "the blest ADVOCATE" at each home. But to enumerate the many facts of the good accomplished by the weekly visits of the blest ADVOCATE would be to write a book. The ADVOCATE speaks for itself in every family where it is taken and read. It not only speaks, but leaves its impress upon the minds of its readers. From quite an extensive field of observation, I can advisedly say that the children (in the homes where the ADVOCATE is among the lares and penates of the household) are more intelligent and refined than those who do not have this great educator. Like a photograph, as it were, of the mind in the faces and actions of those who read it habitually.

Several years ago a friend was showing me some photographs—most of them were of gay, fashionable and worldly friends of hers—when one attracted my attention, and I said: "That gentleman is not one of your society friends?" She asked "if I knew who it was." I had never seen it or the original before, but told her it was the picture of a Christian gentleman of the very highest type. She was much moved, and said: "That is the photograph of Dr. H. F. Johnson, of Whitworth College, and had belonged to one of the pupils that died there." As pictures tell the character of a person, "the blest ADVOCATE" photographs the minds of its readers.

The Agony in the Garden.

MR. EDITOR: "Gilderoy's" view of the cause of the agony in the garden I could not entertain for a moment. To my mind the very thought of the infinitely perfect Deity suffering is horrible.

Bro. Oats gives as a cause that which, to my mind, is wholly insufficient. For him to have endured such agony, either because of the character of the death he was to die or because of separation from friends, is to say he was wanting in fortitude possessed by the thieves who were to die by his side, or by men generally. I really think Bro. Newsom is exactly on the right line. If the preacher, as he enters the pulpit, could realize that certainly upon his preaching at that hour the salvation or damnation of some soul depended, how his agony would increase! But suppose, instead of seeing that the interests of one soul depended upon his preaching, that the interests of all the souls of his congregation thus depended, how his agony would increase! It was the realization that the salvation of all souls depended upon his death that caused the Savior's agony. Bro. Newsom is also right in saying that this realization came through the revelation of the divine to the human nature. This revelation was not made till necessary; hence the agony came just at that time. I thank Bro. Newsom for his views, and especially his illustration.

Yours truly,

J. D. CAMERON.

Week of Prayer and Self-Denial.

Brethren of the North Mississippi Conference:

Let every pastor faithfully observe the week of prayer and self-denial. Urge self-denial as an indispensable condition of discipleship. On circuits let all the Sabbaths in April be devoted to this interest, and a collection taken at the close of every service. The results of the week depend on the interest the preachers manifest. The responsibility of failure will be upon the pastor. Then let me beg every one of you, in the name of the Master, to observe the week. It will be a blessing to you and your charge.

Let presiding elders follow the example of Bro. R. P. Mitchell, of the Winona district, and urge their preachers to do what they can to make this movement a success throughout the North Mississippi Conference.

J. W. PRICE,
Pres. Conf. B'd Missions.

Mansfield Female College.

MR. EDITOR: We have been comfortably quartered in the college for one month, and the weather has been—I will not say, bad, but unfavorable for getting out, yet favorable for staying in, so that we have had a good opportunity of seeing the internal working of the college.

The school is not large, but respectable—respectable in numbers and excellent in quality. With Dr. Grace at the head, and a competent and faithful faculty, the work of training the minds of the young ladies is quietly and constantly carried on from day to day. There is a larger number of music scholars than usual in proportion to the number of pupils. We learn that there will be a goodly number of graduates at the close of the present session as there has been for several years past. The boarding department is successfully conducted by Prof. Huddle and wife. The buildings and all the appurtenances thereto belonging are in a healthy condition. The college is out of debt, independent of the world and self-sustaining.

Mr. Editor—as old-fogy as it may seem to many of the readers of your excellent paper—I always entertained a sort of pious contempt for an enterprise which was not self-sustaining. The college is on as firm a footing to-day as it ever was, and needs no co-educational interference to save it. Perhaps no community ever felt more indignant—not to say, outraged—than this when they heard that it was proposed at the last Annual Conference to make it a mixed school. The time has not come for that yet with this college and community, if we are to judge from the expressions of the people. There is no institution in the land—other things being equal—that is doing more benevolent work than this. Many a poor girl has received a college course here who would have lived and died without it, had it not been a gratuity. The people might afford to, at least, to talk for it. Sam Jones never uttered a truer saying than when he said any institution can be talked up or talked down. Let a community get in the habit of complaining, fault-finding and berating their schools or churches, and, if they prosper, they do it in spite of circumstances. The traveling preachers of the Louisiana Conference can well afford to talk this college up, as it proposes to give their daughters the benefit of the entire literary course, and then throw the music in, which no other president has ever consented to do, and which no other one ever will do, because they can't afford it.

Mrs. Cooper, wife of Rev. Silas Cooper, is here with her little daughter, who has entered college for the session; also Bro. Fred White has moved here to educate his children.

Bro. Christian Keener and wife are here in good health and spirits, and have commenced their church work with a commendable zeal, with good prospects ahead.

MR. EDITOR: On my return to my work I was received by the people with many expressions of gratification, and many good things were sent to the parsonage as tokens of appreciation, which finally culminated in a considerable storm, a few nights ago—not of wind and rain, but of the fat of the land in considerable quantity. From donations done we have received about forty dollars worth of groceries. I can not express my appreciation for the multiform kindness of these good people. May God reward them!

From the Work.

EMORY CIRCUIT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: I am at my post of duty with my work fully in hand. I have made two rounds, and find that my predecessor, Rev. J. H. Brooks, has left the work in fine condition. What a privilege to follow such a man!

Our first Quarterly Conference has been held. The presiding elder was with us, and preached a good sermon, which was well received. But the falling sleet and cold day kept us from having services on Sunday.

Last year this circuit paid up everything in full except the salary of the preacher in charge. Only a small deficit. We have raised about $175 for repairing churches, and about $230 to complete a new church at Red Banks. One hundred dollars of this is borrowed from the Church Extension Fund.

We feel very much at home with the people here. We hope for a good year.

O. L. SAVAGE.

SPRING CREEK CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: As I have never written a letter for the ADVOCATE, I will write one this morning. We arrived on this work about three weeks ago, and found no house suitable for a minister to live in; but we did find some of the best Methodists in Louisiana. The next day after my arrival we commenced to agitate the "parsonage" question, and now, Mr. Editor, we are actually living in a "new parsonage" just built. It is not complete yet, but soon will be.

Doctor, you just ought to come out here this summer to our camp meetings. We have two camp grounds on this work. I know you would be pleased to meet these brethren, for they are every inch Methodists. As this is my first letter, I will be brief. Yours in Christ,

W. H. HILL.

BEAR'S BRIDGE, Louisiana.

GREENVILLE, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: The special revival services continued twenty-three days. But the good work goes on with power. Six more joined yesterday by profession, making twenty-eight since Christmas, 1887; several of them by letter. The entire membership revived and moving forward. I will write you more fully next week. Pray for us.

Yours fraternally,

J. A. BOWEN.

M'COMB CITY, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I have just closed a delightful meeting at this place. We have had ten accessions by profession and nine by certificate. The greatest blessing, perhaps, was to the church. I feel that our Methodist Zion has been greatly strengthened in faith and zeal by the meeting. We would have protracted longer and accomplished much more, I am sure, but for the almost incessant rain for the past few days. We were rained out.

Bros. Weems and Keen kindly assisted me.

Fraternally,

WESSON, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: We have "cleared the decks" at Wesson and Beauregard, and have cash and the very best of subscriptions for Bishops' salary, ministerial education, foreign and domestic missions, and Conference and church extension collections, with more to follow. Salary of the preacher in charge has been increased. We are steadily moving forward to the grade of a first-class station. Fifteen accessions since Conference.

CARROLLTON, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: Please announce that McNutt and Sunnyside station, Grenada district, North Mississippi Conference, has forwarded to me five dollars, thus making Sister W. S. Shipman a life patron of "The Preachers' Wives' Loan Fund." The money goes to Dr. Morton at once. This is the second charge in North Mississippi to respond. I urge our sisters to respond at once to this call.

The Young Preacher Dwarfing Himself; or, Putting together "Knock-Down" Sermons.

To the Editor of the Evening Post—

SIR: A Methodist Bishop was talking with some elderly friends, the last week in November, 1887, of the high average of efficient ability in the —— Conference. The Bishop had known the Conference a long time, and many of its members were considered in a kind appreciative spirit. Some were talked of who thirty years ago were men of might, some of them having entered into rest, a few of them still waiting. A half-dozen or so between forty and sixty were spoken of as strong thinkers and men of power. Some talk followed concerning men from forty and under to the beginners. All agreed that the average for the younger men is higher than it was with men of the same ages a generation ago. A question was raised that was not settled to the satisfaction of anyone in the company: Whether the younger men give promise of growth to the full stature of the mighty ones who are gone and are going? It was naturally suggested that some of them, were the average what it was when these great old men were boys, would be counted among those who would grow to greatness. But it was plain enough that this view did not satisfy even the brother who offered it rather as an inquiry than a statement. One of the company ventured the notion that no matter how many young mastodons there may be, the bones will declare the species. In weighing the opinions advanced in the conversation referred to, a good deal, perhaps, should be set down to the fact that the youngest of the company was no longer young.

But the questions brought up in that conversation return to this writer and demand further reflection. The subject grows in importance and difficulty as it is thought upon and turned about. One should not be over-positive about such matters. We forget many of our younger days who were only commonplace—they were always the majority; we can not be sure of our prognostications concerning the young men about us to-day. Perhaps, we do not know them as well as we think; the man past fifty may even misjudge his younger brother.

This writer will do the young men justice, if he can. Some things are tolerably clear. To begin with, the younger men, for the most part, are better educated, better read, and better informed as to what is going on in the world than their fathers in the ministry were at their ages. They touch life at more points, and are in completer sympathy with it. Their views have been tempered by wider travel and intercourse with men. They can hold their own in more conversation circles. The young ministers of our time may not be more zealous, but they know the methods of church business better and work with more system. Many of them are "diligent in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord;" they are consecrated and successful.

But are they sending their tap-roots deep down into the ground where the springs of water never fail? Will they grow to stand among the great cedars of Lebanon when they, too, belong to the past?

We are getting at the matter rather vaguely, it must be admitted, but the subject is itself ill-defined and hard to hold in the grasp of positive convictions: one may feel a strong persuasion without certainty and be mistaken after all.

If we should conclude that, with the admitted higher average, there is lack of material for the making of first-class men, we can not be content without seeking explanations. If there is scarcity of young timber of the sort that may grow to be great trees, there are, of course, remediable conditions that enter into the case. For it can not be that nature is exhausted; a man believing in God, and, therefore, in progress, can not rest in the pessimistic notion that life is deteriorating into degeneracy. The race is not undergoing a dwarfing process; such a view we must withstand to the utmost. It is too horrible; it means ultimate extinction.

It would be rash to seek the explanation—assuming the lack of potential greatness of which we have been thinking—in the "schools of the prophets." There are not only more of them—they are doing better work than in former days; they not only teach more—they do it with more thoroughness. Compare —— College in 1858 and 1888; the course of study is broader, the corps of teachers more capable now than in the old days. After leaving college, the preacher of to-day has, it seems, every advantage of his father and grandfathers when they began. The preacher of forty years ago had no such apparatus as the "pastor's study" contains to-day. The young preacher of 1888 has a "kit of tools" the beginner of a past generation could not have used; of some of these many implements he would not so much as have known the use. Possibly the trouble—if there be a trouble—is just here: the young man may have too many implements.

Let us visit the bright young man who fills the pulpit in the little city of ——. He is entering his sixth year of service, and should begin to show his real quality and to indicate his possible power. His sermon last Sunday was admirable after its kind. It was free of faults; it was not sensational, not sophomoric, nor flippant, nor loose in arrangement. Nor was it a "pun" on a word in the text. It did not offend good taste, nor grieve the spirit of reverence. It was clear enough and bright enough; what he said was true and interesting. It did not tire the people with its length, nor weary them with any conscious effort to take it in. The people spoke well of it as they went home, and he will almost certainly hold his congregation till his "four years" are out if he will add to his preaching the charm of timely hand-shaking and the attractions of a gracious and sympathetic pastorate.

But the sermon yesterday did not satisfy the more thoughtful of his hearers; they had a feeling that he should have gone deeper into his subject and deeper into them. There was a half-nervous feeling at times that his grappling-irons were slipping. This deeper work the young preacher can not do now; with his methods he never can. A Methodist Bishop's talk started these reflections about the young men of —— Conference; they apply as well to the beginners in other than Methodist pulpits.

We have reached the young pastor's study, and we will consider his case in his workshop. There are many books here, and enough of strong books for his needs; the old masters are not lacking. But these great books are not the well-thumbed volumes. Our young minister is not so far "gone from original righteousness," in mental as well as moral habits, as to steal sermons, or to depend out and out on those snares for lazy men, well named "Skeletons of Sermons." But here are "Homiletical Monthlies" of all sorts and from all sources. They are the young preacher's chief joy. His sermons, if not ready made, are too easily and quickly made to be well made. Such a preacher makes one think of the furniture dealers who order from the makers what they call "knock-down wardrobes," or other things. They come in sections, matched and ready to be "put up." Cheap hands, with easy work, unpack the pieces and put them together, but this is not making furniture. After a long time such work becomes so utterly mechanical that it is done without thought; after that the man who does it can do nothing else.

Our young preacher has good skill in putting together the "knock-down" sermons that come to him month after month. His peril is that, when he is forty and more, he will have a warehouse full of sermon lumber; when the fire of youth begins to cool he will find that even his skill in putting the pieces together will begin to fail him, and his skill in getting out the pieces from the live timber of unbroken forests will be clean gone.

We need not mince matters; our young preacher does not do enough thinking on his own account. He will promptly deny the charge, and in perfect sincerity—he does not yet know what thinking is. He has been making up sermons; he should have been digging down to the roots of great questions, not that in his preaching he may seem to be profound to those who do not understand him—"this also is vanity"—but he must dig deep that he may be a man. When he "becomes a man he can put away childish things"—among them ready-made discourses that make the best people weary with their commonplace. The great men of the past dug for their best things, and they grew into greatness by their digging. They grappled with the greatest truths of the gospel and the greatest laws of life. The sweat of mental toil was upon them; they endured parturition pangs. So were they counted worthy to be teachers of men.

Other thoughts press themselves upon the attention of one who knows something of life in considering the case of the young preacher who is dwarfing himself, to say nothing of his hearers. It is enough to mention them now. He has discovered that those of his people who talk most love best the preaching that surprises by its novelties. He has unluckily formed the habit of looking over the Monday papers for notices; he is pleased when the reports are full and the comments laudatory; he is unhappy if his sermon is overlooked; he is vexed—to state it mildly—if there is an undertone of disapproval. Presently this young minister will be clipping all "notices" and preserving them in scrap-books. Among his helps to sermon-making he will hunt for themes and materials he thinks most likely to win newspaper attention. Soon the itch of praise will seize upon him; mere professional ambition will dominate him; he will fall into such mental and moral habits that his vocation will be sunk in his profession. Then the end will not be far off.

ORANGE.

THE CEDARS, January 26.

The soul that contains divine grace is the Lord's flower house. It is his blooming garden, fenced about and covered over. The snows of winter may fall; the frosts may flake the fields with the white of death; the piercing cold may bind creation in its glittering manacles; yet the plants put forth their beautiful blossoms in the greenhouse. So with the person that lives in the love of Jesus Christ. The surface of the sea may be tossed with billows, but the pebbles lie quietly at the bottom; troubles may rush over the limitations of the believer, but the pearls of true grace are undisturbed in the depths of his nature. The eagle can soar above the storm; so can the soul on the wings of hope. The whale can descend below the angry waves; so can the soul in resignation. The safe can preserve its treasures in the fires; so can the soul through patience. The oak can gather nourishment from the leaves stripped from its boughs by last year's storms; so can the soul gather strength from every distress through which it passes. The river can bear down or pass over any obstruction cast in its way; so can the soul by its heaven-given power.—Christian at Work.

A Protecting Providence.

John Knox, the Scotch reformer, had many enemies, who sought to compass his destruction. He was in the habit of sitting in a particular chair in his own house, with his back to the window. One evening, however, when assembling his family, he would neither occupy his accustomed seat, nor allow anybody else to do so. That every evening a bullet was sent through the window with a design to kill him. It grazed the chair he usually occupied, and made a hole in the candlestick.

It is related of Augustine that he was going on one occasion to preach at a distant town, and took a guide to direct him on his way. By some means the guide mistook his way and got into a by-path. It was afterward discovered that a party of miscreants had designed to waylay and murder him, and that his life was saved through the guide's mistake.

Charles of Bala was once saved from death by what some would call a foolish mistake. On one of his journeys to Liverpool his saddle-bag was put into the wrong boat. He had taken his seat when he discovered it, and had to change at the last minute. At first he was vexed and disappointed, but he afterward learned that the boat in which he intended to go was lost, and all its passengers drowned.

Howard, the philanthropist, was once preserved from death by what some would call mere chance, but which was no other than a special Providence. He always set a high value on Sabbath privileges, and was exact and careful in his attendance on the means of grace. That he might neither increase the labor of his servants, nor prevent their attendance on public worship, he was accustomed to walk to the chapel at Bedford, where he attended. One day a man, whom he had reproved for his idle and dissolute habits resolved to waylay and murder him. That morning, however, for some reason or other, he resolved to go on horseback, and by a different road. Thus his valuable life was preserved.

The Rev. John Newton was in the habit of regarding the hand of God in every thing, however trivial it might appear to others. "The way of man is not in himself," he would say. "I do not know what belongs to a single step. When I go to St. Mary Woolnoth, it seems the same whether I go down Lothberry, or go through the Old Jewry; but the going through one street and not another may produce an effect of lasting consequence. A man cut down my hammock in sport, but had he cut it down half an hour later I had not been here, as the exchange of the crew was then making. A man made a smoke on the sea-shore at the time a ship was passing, which was thereby brought to, and afterward brought me to England." —The Quiver.

The Pre-eminence of Christ.

Christ is pre-eminent in the element of pity. Take, for example, the general influence of Christianity upon the world in the relations of men to nature. Superstition has been one of the great curses of the race. The terrors of a perverted imagination among the heathen are most pitiful as described by those who have mingled with them. Nature's rude forms for expressing energy, the stormy snow, wind, hail, the earthquake—all these are clothed with imaginative terrors that increase tenfold the fear which naturally may be associated with them. Even nature's milder forms the unchristian peoples clothe with terrors. The depths of the forests are peopled with grim and vengeful spirits, waiting at every turn to torment or destroy man. Night brings deeper horror, and its shadows and dim shapes are distorted by superstitious fears into dragons and gorgons, dire. On every side hateful and hostile deities wait under cover of night to prey upon human beings. Cowering over their camp-fires, or huddled in their huts, these victims of superstition shiver at every sound of the wind among the forest trees, at every voice of a night bird, or night beast, or insect of the night, or failing branch, or rustling leaves, all which seem to them the voices of monsters equally dreadful whether demons or deities. Christ's pitiful heart brought deliverance from this wretched bondage. Christ teaches men to look out upon nature with a fearless eye, regardless of those malign and haunting spirits invoked by superstition. Christ bids men see in every force and form of nature a manifestation of God's taste and power and wealth of love toward the children of men. Sweeping a hand around the whole horizon of creation, the genius of Christianity exclaims, "This is the studio of the Divine Architect, our heavenly Father! This is our Father's workshop; here 'the Father worketh hitherto.'" Not a sparrow falls without your Father. His hand is seen and felt in "preserving and governing all his creatures and their actions—all his creatures, from an ant to an elephant, from a diatom to immortal man!"

Surely it is Christ and the development of the Christ-spirit as voiced in the Christian science which have enabled men to look upon the natural world with the eyes of the poet of "The Season."

* * * * * * *

One day last week, while making a birthday visit to a friend, I noted among the little tokens sent by loving hearts to commemorate the occasion, a picture which much interested me. It was intended to illustrate a motto taken from Mrs. Browning's verses: "Round my restlessness his rest." On one corner were painted branches of a tree from which the leaves were being stripped by the wind, and driven in confused orbits. In the sky were clouds fretted, broken, and whirling in circles, while birds were beating against the storm with laboring wings. On the other side of the picture the clouds were stretched into those striate bands which mark the glory of a quiet sunset, and home-flying birds were skimming across the placid sky. Not a token of storm or commotion was visible in that horizon. On the one side, among the emblems of commotion and storm, the artist had painted the words, "Round my restlessness." On the opposite side across the peaceful clouds of the quiet evening sky were painted the words, "His rest." Yes:

> "The little birds sang east,
> And the little birds sang west.
> And I smiled to think God's greatness
> Flows around my incompleteness,
> Round my restlessness His rest."

Restless, troubled soul, hear the lesson of this parable. Open the gate of your being and let the infinite rest of God flow into and possess you. Then shall come to you a poise of spirit, a quiet of conscience, which your life has not yet known, and, with all that, a hope of heaven which will permit you to sing as you have never sung before:

> "There shall I bathe my weary soul
> In seas of heavenly rest,
> And not a wave of trouble roll
> Across my peaceful breast."

—The Philadelphian.

The Time in Which We Think.

One of the most beautiful applications of electricity which has of late been made is its use in the study of psychological phenomena. And why, indeed, is not the subtile power by which time and space are being annihilated, and human labor rendered less irksome, the most proper agent to assist man in the study of the facts of his own consciousness? In an elaborate article in the Nineteenth Century, Dr. J. McK. Cattell gives an account of the time measurements of thought made by means of the line drawn on a rapidly moving surface by a pen attached to the prong of a tuning fork vibrating at a constant rate by means of electricity. By a delicate apparatus constructed on this principle duration of time may be measured to the one ten-thousandth of a second. The writer above named has found that the process of thought varies in its degree of rapidity in different individuals, children and old persons thinking slower than people of middle age, ignorant persons thinking more slowly than educated persons. In this way he also found he could measure the time it takes to perceive, that is, the time which passes from the moment when the impression reaches consciousness until the moment at which we know what it is. In his own case he found that it took 1-20 second to see white light, 1-10 second to see a picture, 1-8 to see a letter, and 1-7 to see a word. It takes longer to see a rare word than a common word, or a word in a foreign language than in our native tongue. It even takes longer to see some letters than others. Will time, or time taken up in choosing, can be measured. It takes 1-13 second to judge between blue and red. To recall the name of a printed word takes 1-9 second, to a letter 1-6 second, to a picture 1-4 second. It takes less time to remember the name of a familiar word than of a letter, though it takes less time to see the letter. The time of remembering can be measured. It takes 1-4 second to translate a word from one language to another when you are familiar with both. It takes 1-20 second longer to translate a word from a foreign language to your native tongue than it does in the other direction. We can think of the name of the next month in half the time we can think of the last month. It has been demonstrated that sensation does not travel through the nerves to the brain so fast as has been supposed. Its speed is not much greater than sixty miles an hour.—Light and Heat.

Coming to Close Quarters.

Five minutes' private, personal entreaty will often accomplish more in winning souls to Christ, than five months' public preaching. Close action is effective. A pistol at a man's breast is more dangerous to him than a hundred cannon thundering at him two miles away. The preaching may mean anyone or no one in the crowd; but when you talk to me, you mean me. David might have listened calmly to long exhortations and pious counsels without number, but Nathan's "Thou art the man!" cut him to the heart and brought him to his knees. Preaching often runs all around men and all over them, like a bucket of water sprinkled over a pile of corked bottles. Personal effort uncorks the bottles one by one, puts in a funnel, and pours them full of water.

"But I do not know how to talk to people personally about Christ and salvation." Then learn. Confessed ignorance is a good preparation for learning. How will a man know anything unless he is taught? You can talk to people about rain, sunshine, crops, weather, fashion, fires and news of the day—"out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh"—why not read God's Word, pray for his Spirit, and pour out that which burns within?

Study your own heart. Know yourself, and you will know others. Talk to others as you used to wish some Christian to talk to you. Seek God's direction. Speak when he gives the word, and wait and pray till it comes. Do not talk when you have nothing to say, nor bore people with endless exhortations and dry disputes. Observe, think, pray and act.

"Yes, but it is such a cross." Ah, you do know how to do it, but are not willing to try. Well, the rod is heavier still, and the rod may yet make you love the cross. You must learn to bear the cross if you would be Christ's disciple. A word spoken for Jesus may cost you a momentary struggle, but it may also win a soul to God and open to you a well-spring of joy. Try it.—H. L. Hastings.

"A Word to the Wise Is Sufficient."

Catarrh is not simply an inconvenience, unpleasant to the sufferer and disgusting to others—it is an advanced outpost of approaching disease of worse type. Do not neglect its warning; it brings deadly evils in its train. Before it is too late, use Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. It reaches the seat of the ailment, and is the only thing that will. You may do yourself with quack medicines till it is too late—till the strangler becomes a resistless foe-rent. It is the combined invention of a scientific physician. "A word to the wise is sufficient."

Said Mr. Joseph Cook in his Boston lecture the other Monday: "The nearly one thousand million dollars paid annually to retail dealers in liquor in the United States might far better be cast into the sea. The indirect economic damages of the liquor traffic in the manufacture of paupers, criminals and madmen are ghastly in their enormous and permanent total."

ARTIFICIAL EYES

Are Now so Perfectly Made That No One Can Distinguish Them from the Natural Eye.

The Artificial Eye is not only a beautifier, but it serves other excellent purposes.
It enables the eyelids to move as freely as ever.
It restores the functions of the tear passages.
It prevents the eyelashes from turning within, causing inflammation.
It prevents distortion of features, as happens always in case of a young person who has the misfortune to lose an eye—and sometimes in the case of older persons.

Briefs.

Why is it that we think so much of the gifts God bestows and so little of the giving by which they come to us? We could not have the gifts without the giving, and, yet, as a rule, the gift is enough and the giving is nothing. Why should we not look back of the gift to see the giving, and beyond the giving to behold the Giver? Alas! for our short-sighted ingratitude!

This clipping from an exchange is very suggestive to the readers of the ADVOCATE who are possessed of money:

Dr. J. M. Holland relates that after the Chicago fire three friends met, two of whom had been burned out of house and home and the immense accumulations of successful lives. One of the unfortunates said to the other two: "Well, thank God, there was some of my money placed where it could not burn;" saying which he turned upon his heels cheerfully, and went to work at his new life. His brother in misfortune turned to his companion, and said: "That man gave away last year nearly a million of dollars, and if I had not been a fool, I should have done the same thing."

And this, on the same subject, from F. W. Robertson, is commended to the same readers:

Many a Christian do you find among the rich and titled who, as a less encumbered man, might have been a resolute soldier of the cross: but he is now only a realization of the old pagan fable—a spiritual giant buried under a mountain of gold. Oh! many, many such we meet in our higher classes, pining with a nameless want, pressed by a heavy sense of the weariness of existence, strengthless in the midst of affluence, and incapable even of tasting the profusion of comfort which is heaped around them.

This item from the Interior may set some of our readers to pondering over some curious matters: "Official documents show that of the $318,147 annually paid by the government for the education of Indians in contract schools, the Roman Catholics, who compose about one-seventh of our entire population, receive $176,592, or more than one-half the entire amount; while the non-Catholics, composing about six-sevenths of the same population, receive only $141,555. Commissioner Atkins is reported to explain this by saying that the Catholics receive the most because they ask for the most." Keen-scented and sharp-eyed Jesuitism is recognized in all such transactions.

What a full armory the Christian minister has to draw his weapons from, and what wonderful weapons they are, by use of which the minister commends himself and his work to men's consciences! Read Paul's catalogue of them: "But in all things approving ourselves as the ministers of God, in much patience, in afflictions, in necessities, in distresses, in strifes, in imprisonments, in tumults, in labors, in watchings, in fastings; by pureness, by knowledge, by long-suffering, by kindness, by the Holy Ghost, by love unfeigned, by the word of truth, by the power of God, by the armor of righteousness on the right hand and on the left, by honor and dishonor, by evil report and good report: as deceivers, and yet true; as unknown, and yet well known; as dying, and, behold, we live; as chastened, and not killed; as sorrowful, yet always rejoicing; as poor, yet making many rich; as having nothing, and yet possessing all things." By all these the minister is to approve himself to God and men!

The Editor Abroad.

And why should not an editor pick up his grip-sack occasionally and hie him to "green fields and running brooks," of which rural poets sing so sweetly? Why should he, above all others, confine himself, perpetually to the cares and distractions and worriments of the editorial office, and subject himself forever to the ills that editorial flesh is heir to? Why should he sweat and tug with his brain and scratch with tired pencil and read manuscripts, unreadable to ordinary mortals, and chip and paste, and fume and fret over unreasonable correspondents, when, by a little persuasion, he can induce an uninitiated brother to take his place for a month or two? I once saw one of the great preachers of the South, who had been given the first place on a program of exercises commemorating the centennial of the greatest movement of modern times, get up before an immense audience, and say: "I never knew what true eloquence was until I persuaded Dr. S. to take my place on this program;" and then he very gracefully introduced Dr. S. So my condition and appeals, both most eloquent, have persuaded a good Doctor to try the editorial chair, while I run away to smell the opening buds and listen to the sweet songs of the birds, and quaff the healthful atmosphere of beautiful, sunny, spring days in the country. I am fully persuaded that I shall never get rid of the desire to be in the country in spring-time. It is an annual homesickness that comes as regularly as the sun crosses the vernal equinox. The bursting of the buds and blooming of roses in the city gardens have the same effect upon me that the notes of the Alpine horn have upon the Swiss soldiers in a foreign land. Those notes call up memories so tender that the rough, hardy mountaineer soldier is so affected by them as to render him unfit for duty. So when spring-time comes, to me there invariably comes the yearning for the country and a distaste for city life and work that renders both a "burden grievous to be borne." And what made the matter worse this time is the fact that since the last spring-time I have been subjected, almost without intermission, to a wearying, worrying and, at intervals, harrowing pain, for the relief of which the city materia medica has been exhausted in vain, and all the laws of therapeutics set completely at naught. My departure from the dreary drudgery of office work was hastened by the ready acceptance of the editor's chair by the kind Doctor aforesaid; and it was gladdened by a good brother who, having heard of the editorial desire and intentions, placed a roll of greenbacks in my hand, with the remark: "Allow me the privilege of paying your board for two or three months." And he was allowed. That brother's name is not to be written in such a small place as the columns of this ADVOCATE. It is, no doubt, "written in heaven;" and this good deed, just at the right time, has sprinkled that name with a perfume which renders it "a sweet-smelling savour" to him who said that even a cup of cold water given in his name would in no wise be without appropriate reward.

Just one night's run from the city brought me to my destination. How short a time sometimes suffices to fill up the desire that has lain in the heart for years! That twelve hours' run garnered into fruition the wish of twenty-five years, and yet the accessories to that wish—those circumstances which were to render its accomplishment a joy beyond all earthly joys—can now never be realized. The "full fruition" will be realized only on the other shore, "where friends shall meet again who have loved."

Here I am in the country in spring-time. No "car rattling o'er the stony street," no deafening noises, no hurrying crowds, no anxious countenances, no miserly graspings after "sordid pelf." The humdrum of exacting toil, the fierce lash of business routine, the excitement of questionable pleasures invade not the precincts of these sacred solitudes. Here the heaven is bending its "body of clearness" and kissing the earth with its smile of sunny beauty, and the tips of every tree and bush and shrub and spire of grass swell with a gladness that throws off the winter attire and unveils emerald gems flashing in every direction. The birds of the forest are breaking the long silence of winter with notes of a truer joy than any caged canary ever poured forth. There is nothing like freedom to inspire a glad song, even in a bird. The cattle greedily crop the first tender grass as if it were the sweetest morsel that bovine jaws ever crunched. The lambkins frolic the sunny days away in the open glade, while their sober sires and staid mothers lie on the little hillocks, chewing the cud of a deep satisfaction. The domestic fowls are crowing and cackling for joy that the spring has returned, and laying plans which, when carried out, will enable the good housewife to set before her preacher a most savory dish of chicken pie! Alas! for the stomach of the brother who eats a city chicken pie!

And, then, these woods! Oh, these "darkling woods" where, amid "the cool and silence," a man may muse and ponder and "offer solemn thanks and supplication" to the Great God! Who would exchange worship in such a place for worship where the lofty, man-built vault "gathers and rolls back the sound of anthem"? Who would exchange the "gray old trunks" with their "mossy boughs" and "green tops," with their inspiration of the thought of boundless Power and inaccessible Majesty, for any temple that human hands can rear?

> "Ah! why
> Should we, in the world's riper years, neglect
> God's ancient sanctuaries and adore
> Only among the crowd and under roofs
> That our frail hands have raised? Let me, at least,
> Here, in the shadow of this aged wood,
> Offer one hymn; thrice happy if it find > Acceptance in his ear."

This grove of mighty oaks is a fitter shrine for humble worshiper to hold communion with his Maker than any cathedral can possibly be! Their "venerable columns—massy, tall and dark"—speak more eloquently of "goodness, strength and grace," and point more meaningly to God than any shaft ever hewn by skill of man! Here, then, amid these sacred influences, "far from the maddening crowd's ignoble strife," let me bow in humble penitence and earnest prayer.

TEXAS.

In the Advance, of February 16, there were four obituaries of ministers. Their ages were 21 years, 60 years, 65 years, and 76 years. The obituaries filled, respectively, 10 lines, 13 lines, 9 lines and 14 lines. That is getting this troublesome matter towards the example set in the Scripture. One of the useless things in a newspaper is a long obituary of a person who was entirely unknown to ninety-nine out of every hundred readers of the paper. As Bro. Kirkland, of the Southern Christian Advocate, has said, the Methodist papers are the only ones that publish these long obituaries. It is rare to see one of any length in some of the largest circulating papers of other denominations. Why should our papers be burdened after that manner?

The Reformed Episcopal Church, after fourteen years' existence, has now 30,000 adherents, 100 clergymen and ten Bishops.

Exhorters.

That the Quarterly Conference is still required to pursue the inquiry, "Are there any applications for license to * * exhort?" is in proof that the church still values the exhorter as a factor in our propagandism. That the question is so universally answered in the negative may well give us pause. Time was when some of our most pious, zealous and gifted men filled this office and did us noble service. Then most of our itinerant preachers first demonstrated their gifts in this office. Then the preachers had for pastoral and evangelistic work a band of coadjutors in exhorters, local preachers and class leaders that made them manifold more effective than now. Now that the class leader has almost disappeared, and where he still exists has dropped the pastoral function; now that the local preacher is most generally in demand exclusively as a supply for an absent pastor or vicant church; now that the Sunday-school teacher's work is largely confined to the questions of the lesson-paper—now, more than ever, is there need for the exhorter; and yet the exhorter is wanting. One explanation may be found in the late habit of railroading our itinerant preachers into the Conference. He applies for license to preach, and is recommended for admission at the fourth Quarterly Conference. It may be that in the itinerant the exaggerated care of building up and broadening the character of the membership and solicitude for the numerous enterprises of Christian faith and charity have, in some sense, depreciated the aggressive spiritual work for which alone the exhorter exists. Whatever the cause, is it not time to survey the situation afresh, and recur to the use of all the instruments of aggressive work provided by our economy? This will be the more apparent on reflecting that exhortation itself is a diminishing element in modern preaching. The effort to teach and dazzle and confound has elbowed into the shadows what once gave popular grace and power to the Wesleyan revival. The increase of facilities for Bible knowledge, together with the generally improved intelligence of our people in religious matters, would seem to relax the necessity for teaching and increase the demand for exhortation. But exhortation is fast becoming a "lost art."

Confronted, as we now are, in all of our large towns and cities with an increasing population of non-church goers, with the problem of hoodlumism and its concomitants of ignorance, poverty and wretchedness, we must fall back upon exhorters, and the exhorter must come again to the front. Red-hot exhortation, born out of deep study; out of prolonged reflection; out of profound sympathy; out of constant observation of the people's sorrow, vice and suffering; out of a quick faith in the tremendous significance of life and the fearful certainty of the last judgment. Red-hot exhortation—in short, simple words and saturated with prayers and tears, is what we need. Less controversy, less refinement and analysis, less elocution—more of the appeal which will encourage men to do right and "flee the wrath to come."

This will make room for the old-time exhorter. The people need to be pursued into their homes with the sympathies and solicitudes of the gospel. The cottage prayer meetings and informal class meetings should abound in every charge. Halls in obscure places should be occupied with singing and praying bands under the leadership of men whose sole purpose is conviction and conversion. In desperate neighborhoods street services must substitute and prepare the way for closer approaches. Erudition and formal discourses at such places would be a simple impertinence. The administration of the sacraments may wait for the opportunity of the chapels. Even the skill and deeper lore of the pastor may wait for a fuller life. But for such occasions is the exhorter. Every congregation that has spiritual life in it can furnish enough men for its exigencies. Young men are the best; their earnestness, directness and simplicity, their faith in God, confidence in human nature, and straightforward zeal, are invaluable. Unemployed, their talents either perish with rust or, perverted into other channels, will fret and corrode the health and efficiency of the church. The dissensions, the rage for dramatic and literary pastimes, the sense of unappreciation and neglect with which some congregations are afflicted, find their explanation in the idleness or perversion of gifts which were intended for exhortation and prayer.

Women as Stewards.

BY "GILDEROY."

In your issue of March 1, J. E. B., of Plattsburg, Miss., raises this question: "Can women of our church be elected to the office of steward, and, therefore, become members of Quarterly Conferences?" This, really, is but one question: "Can women be elected to the office of steward?" If elected, they are members of the Quarterly Conference. There is nothing in the Discipline forbidding the election of women to the office of steward, and nothing requiring the election of men. The question, as presented in the Discipline, is a question of character, not of sex. Every church in a charge is entitled to one steward; and if there is not a male member in the church, as I know to be the case in several places in Mississippi, why, then, that church must go without a steward, or have one from some other part of the pastoral charge. The steward must be a man of solid piety, who knows and loves the doctrine and discipline of the church, and he must have the natural and acquired ability to transact the business of the church. I have known a good many churches where a man of this description could not be found, but there was a good woman or two who filled the bill exactly. Now, as the question is one of character and not of sex, I would prefer a good woman for steward to a man who had nothing to commend him, only that he was a male. I know one place in Mississippi where a good woman raised the money, built the church, or had it built, acted as trustee, class leader, sexton and Sunday-school superintendent. This church and class she turned over to the preacher in charge of the nearest circuit to her. Her zeal, piety, enterprise and force were highly commended. When she was nominated for steward, there was a flutter—"She is a woman; that will not do." That grave Quarterly Conference elected a man—a male, a figurehead—steward, with the distinct understanding that the woman was to do the work; and she did it splendidly. She was always at Quarterly Conference with a good report, and reported and acted in the name of the man who was not worth a notch on a stick. Really, he was a reproach to the office of steward. If men of solid piety can not be found, why, take women who are pious. If the men do not know and love our doctrines and discipline, why, some of the good women do. Elect them; they fill the bill. Some of the men will not ask for money, but you get a woman who loves God and his church, and I be bound she asks for it; and she will get it, too.

The fact is, our women are doing a great work in this age of the world in several departments of Christian enterprise. Don't hinder them, but help them. Give them a chance. This is not a male world we live in, nohow. Nearly half the inhabitants are women—by far the best half, particularly, in Christian countries. The church is not a male church; was not organized for men alone. I have yet to see a church that did not have more women than men in it, nor one where the women were not better than the men. During the war there were hundreds of churches all over the land where women were stewards—elected stewards by the Quarterly Conference; and they kept things going right along just as well, or better than the men. I'll tell you, if the men were all dead, the women would keep the church going right along. They love the Lord, and this is the reason.

Notes.

A Roman Catholic paper, The Universe, declares a Bible Society a "criminal association." "The most flagrant instance of systematized plunder, undertaken for the worst of motives, and perpetuated by the worst of agents."—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

Charity would require us to suppose the author of this precious morsel to be demented, were it not that so frequently, sentiments bordering upon this phrensy emanate from papal sources. However, the Bible still circulates, and increasing numbers of men are finding out that Jesus alone can save, and he bids all men "come boldly to the throne of grace."

The inherent meanness of many church-goers is hard to realize. Why should a nickel, invested in kindness of character and faith and love, be so much larger than a nickel invested in drunkenness? And yet it is so to the average man. The question, "How much better is a man than a sheep?" if there were no hereafter, might be answered: "In many cases, none at all." In the Episcopal Missionary Convention, Bishop Cox said he knew of a person in Western New York who paid $700 for an opera box, who went to a free church and there dropped into the alms-basket five cents. "Such things make me sick," said the Bishop in conclusion. Surely it takes a "mighty Savior" to lift up our fallen race.

Economy is a good thing—a laudable thing when practiced from a good motive. It, however, sometimes springs from stinginess, and then is anything else than laudable. Of all the economy that is practiced, the smallest, the most niggardly, and that which least deserves the name is that which is seen in a well-to-do family refusing to subscribe for a religious newspaper because it is too dear in price and can not be afforded. On this subject one of our exchanges has this: "There is no conceivable economy so petty and, at the same time, so blindly wasteful as that of saving one or two cents a week at the expense of the most important spiritual, moral and intellectual instructor that can come into the house." Put the expense of four cents a week over against the loss of such an instructor, and you have the "gains" of such a household. In the expressive language of Scripture, that is "gaining a loss."

Every city in the nation has an army of unemployed people, among them many good, thrifty and sober people, and very many more lazy, dissipated and vicious. Whatever the cause of their idleness, no improvement is likely to come from the tide of immigration that has, with one exception, been without check. The time has come to bar our gates against immigration and let the country's resources open up sufficiently to employ our people. Besides, we need time to Americanize the enormous mass of foreign population, with which the body politic has been already overfed. The New York Tribune, which rather caters to the prejudices of the foreign-born voters, at last speaks on this wise:

> The time has long since gone when alien assistance is required for the development of our resources. If the tide of immigration were cut off short, it would take less than a century, according to the natural law of increase, to make the United States as thickly settled as Europe. It is not desirable to throw away our advantages. The signs of general discontent among workmen and the plainly nervous disposition of capital are due to no one circumstance so much as to the influx of hordes of semi-barbarians who care nothing for law or human rights, and of large masses of creatures, devoid of all honorable ambition, willing to work for a mere pittance and content to live after a fashion cheap and filthy enough to disgust a dog.

pulpit prodigy has appeared at ilansburg, Ky., in person of Rev. ent Porter, who, is only eleven rs old. He possesses a wonderful mory and vocabulary, and his ser- ns are said to be both logical and mond. As soon as he was old ugh to talk he manifested a desire reach and make the world better. s. L. E. Sterling, of the Prytania et Presbyterian Church, in this left this week to join the mis- force of that church in a. Is it not time for some of churches in Louisiana to send a resentative to our China or Japan sion? New Orleans Methodism rnishes a score of preachers for nual Conference, but only one mis- nary, and that one a woman, for foreign field.

he Rev. E. R. Fulkerson, who is now ching in the Tokyo Anglo-Japanese lege in Aoyama, writes that "all students in the dormitories, except or three, have been brought to dst. They all seem to want to ach just as soon as they are con- ted. Nor are their efforts in vain. ey returned recently and reported out 300 hearers and twenty conver- ns during a single afternoon."

Rev. J. D. Hammond, of our "First urch" in St. Louis, is wanted as ncellor of University of Georgia, place of Dr. Mell, deceased.

Rev. H. C. Kelley, in a recent ser- on in Nashville, Tenn., reviewed the troversy going on in the North nerican Review between Dr. H. M. ield and Robert Ingersoll.

Rev. J. G. Sibley, of Monticello, iss., sends a fine list of subscribers th the money. According to prom- , he is doing his best. He is laying undation wisely for a happy and ccessful year. How many others ill spend a week in this good work wards securing the highest useful- ss and greatest results for his minis- y?

Rev. J. A. Ellis, P. E., of Wood- lle district, Mississippi Conference, tifies that his preachers are all their posts, "buoyant, hopeful d faithful," and the "laymen e in full accord and favor, l desirous of vigorous work." ook out; then, for a grand District nference. The editor hopes to be esent and enjoy it.

Rev. J. V. Penn, of Mississippi Con- rence, gave us a visit this week. He full of hope for Centenary, and re- orts increasing enthusiasm among is brethren for our Institution.

Rev. W. H. Milburn, the blind man loquent, has been very critically ill Washington, D. C., but is now out danger.

The Law and Order Society of hiladelphia held a public meeting ecently, at which addresses were ade by Hon. W. M. Evarts, of New ork; Hon. A. H. Colquitt, of Georgia, nd Hon. C. C. Boney, president of he National Law and Order League.

Dr. J. J. Lafferty, of Richmond, is rying to untie from rheumatism in Florida.

An Earnest Appeal.

An opportunity is now offered for an investment in a Christian work, next akin—germane to Mexico, viz.: the building of a church for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in one of the centres of Romanism in Louisiana. Let each one whose eye shall providentially fall upon this notice, and who loves Methodism and our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, send me promptly one dollar, and speedily a Protestant monument—a church of God—will be erected in a community where Romanism now greatly predominates. The name and the amount will be acknowledged in the ADVOCATE.

Notice.

To the Preachers and Membership of the Grenada District, North Mississippi Conference—

DEAR BRETHREN: Do you earnestly desire a gracious revival of religion this year in your pastoral charge? If so, please observe the week of prayer and self-denial. I call upon the local preachers and laity to help the pastors in this work. I have written to the pastors, but publish this, fearing some one may not receive my card. Preach it, talk it, and pray it. Work yourself into the spirit of missions, and then you will be able to help others.

Where meetings can not be held every day in the week, you will please call a meeting for April 1 and 8, and take up the offerings April 8. Please attend to this. Push with a vim, and the Lord will help you, and you will be astonished at the success.

A Request for Prayer.

A dear friend of mine—a former pupil of Old Centenary—writes me and my wife, earnestly requesting prayer in behalf of her husband who has fallen into the awful habit of intemperance, that he may be brought to God before it is too late: and, further, she desires me to ask prayer of every reader of the ADVOCATE who feels for a poor woman bound to a drunken husband. And now, I earnestly request everyone who reads this notice to unite in earnest, fervent prayer for this dear Christian woman in her deep affliction, and to remember while they pray that God has said, "The effectual, fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much."

City Mission.

The first annual meeting of the City Mission Association, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will be held at Carondelet Street Church, at half-past seven P. M., Tuesday next, March 13. Let all the members of the association be present. The election of officers for the ensuing year will be held, and a full meeting is, therefore, desired. The anniversary meeting will be held on Sunday, March 18, at the same hour and place.

The Prince of Wales.

Why is the Prince of Wales like a cloudy day? He is likely to reign. Taylor's Cherokee Remedy of Sweet Gum and Mullein is now the king of all cough medicines, and is a croup preventive.

Temperance Notes.

The internal revenue reports show that more than 15 per cent. of the total decrease during 1887 in the number of retail liquor dealers in the United States is found in the four States having prohibition. In Missouri, Nebraska, Illinois and Ohio, where the high license law has been most thoroughly tested, there is a total increase of liquor dealers equal to over 47 per cent. of the decrease in the whole country.

Ten years ago statistics reported but one cabaret or saloon to every 300 voters of Paris. Now there is one to every 25 voters.

Seven hundred and thirty-three thousand gallons of rum were sent to Africa last year from the port of Boston alone.

A clear case of bribery has been exposed in DesMoines. Under an order of the court three wholesale liquor establishments were seized by two constables. The officers then offered to dismiss the case for a consideration. A trap was laid for them, marked bills were paid as bribe money, and when it was well in hand the officers were suddenly arrested and taken into court with the evidence of their guilt upon their persons. One of the men tried to get rid of the evidence by throwing $200 of the bribery bills in an alley, but the money was found. With such officers it will be a difficult matter for prohibition to prohibit.

The mayor of Buffalo, N. Y., and sixteen others of the city officials are liquor dealers.

The Masonic Grand Lodge, in session at Columbus, Miss., adopted a resolution that is likely to create a sensation in that State, to the effect that "saloon keeping" is an offense against Masonry, and that no saloonkeeper can be a Mason.

Philadelphia brewers, themselves disqualified under the new license law, are said to be transferring property to other citizens in order that they may go upon saloon keepers' bonds.

The Astors, of New York, who own about five hundred houses and large real estate, have recently decided not to rent any one to liquor dealers. The great Trinity Church property is also free from the curse.

A recent Canadian Associated Press dispatch reads: "In retaliation for the hard fight being made by the temperance people of Leeds county, eleven buildings have been burned at Irish Creek, the Methodist Church and a tannery have been burned at Kemptville, and five constables have been stoned and assaulted. Dr. Ferguson, member of Parliament, and three others, one of them a minister, were assailed and threatened with murder, and two deacons of a Baptist Church have been warned to dismiss their minister or have their church burned. The temperance people are undismayed, however, and have had forty tavern-keepers fined; have sent three offenders to the penitentiary, and have had the assailants of the constables fined $800."

Before the Senate Committee, in Washington City, considering the Platt Bill, Hon. H. B. Monhen, president of the Prohibition Union, submitted statistics showing that under high license during the last five years in the district, the saloons have increased 40 per cent., and youthful crime has increased enormously, and that there is now in Washington a saloon to every 19 homes. It takes only 19 homes to support one saloon, while to support any other business enterprise it takes 100 to 250 homes.

At Greenwich, R. I., an attempt was made to destroy, by dynamite, the residence of Rev. O. H. Still, a Baptist minister and active prohibitionist, and at the same place a large quantity of arsenic was found in the well of a lawyer, of like anti-liquor zeal. In one bucket of water was found enough arsenic to destroy a dozen men.

Items of Interest.

In Dr. Paxton's church (Presbyterian), in New York, the pulpit notices are read by the clerk of the session, and Dr. Meredith, of Brooklyn, has them printed and circulated through the press.

A correspondent of the Louisville Courier-Journal, writing from Kansas City, a few weeks ago, remarked that "he had seen and heard many new and wonderful things about Kansas City. Among other things, he had seen a Methodist preacher worth $5,000,000, and another worth $1,500,000. He had always thought the Lord never intended they should own anything except a good horse."—Presbyterian.

America has the longest river, the Mississippi; the longest suspension bridge, the Brooklyn bridge; and the highest monument, the Washington Monument.

Plymouth Church will seat 3,500 persons; Spurgeon's Tabernacle, 7,000; St. Paul's in London, 25,000; Milan Cathedral, 37,000; St. Peter's at Rome, 54,000.

The Central Methodist has absorbed the Methodist Standard, and is under the skillful business management of Rev. J. S. Scobee and editorship of Rev. Zeph. Meek; is under full sails making for the open sea of prosperity. We wish the consolidation great success.

Bishop Wilson announces that a layman of the Baltimore Conference, whose name can not be given, has contributed $500 toward the sending out of Rev. J. C. C. Newton to Japan from the Baltimore Conference.

It is said that a single day of heavy fog takes the additional sum of $200,000 out of the pockets of the Londoners for gas bills.

Dr. Cuyler says: "Out of the port of Boston between June, 1885, and June, 1886, there was shipped 733,000 gallons of death-dealing New England rum into the Congo country."

The longest street railroad in the country is in operation between Elizabeth and Newark, N. J., the round trip being thirty miles and the fare twenty cents.

Mayor Hewitt, in his late message, estimates that the work which should be done at once on the streets of New York will cost not less than $3,000,000.

Address H. BRADFORD,
Meadville, Franklin county, Miss.

Rev. Dr. S. J. McPherson, in delivering the address at the inauguration of Dr. Robinson as president of Lake Forest University, uttered some timely truths upon "four essentials of education:" (1) Home training; (2) stimulus of a healthy student life; (3) inspiring teacher, and (4) an institution equipped with resources for communicating the whole circle of ascertained knowledge. On the third point he says: "The third necessity of an educational institution is to have inspiring teachers. So far as internal forces go, this is the prime essential. A college may be great without great age, great endowments or great buildings, but never without great teachers."

Half-Rate Excursions Southeast.

Half-rate excursions to Birmingham, Chattanooga, Atlanta, Gadsden, Tuskaloosa, Macon, Savannah, and other principal points in the Southeast, will be run from New Orleans and Shreveport, via Queen and Crescent Route, on March 13 and 27, April 10 and 24. Tickets will be good for 30 days, with the privilege of stopping over on the outward journey. The Queen & Crescent is the quickest and most direct route between the Southeast and Southwest, and tickets should so read. J. D. Grant, Passenger Agent, 311 Elm street, Dallas, Texas, will gladly furnish all particulars.

Eureka Yeast Powder.

This article, it is admitted by those who have tested it, has no superior, if an equal. It is known to be absolutely pure, and, when fairly tested, rarely fails to retain a foothold. It is a home production, and the manufacturer has given substantial evidence that the ingredients used will always be of the first quality. Try the Eureka, and be convinced.

Remarkable Inventions.

Most people have heard of the man who invented a machine that would do EVERYTHING, but was so complicated and delicate that it was liable to go all at "half cock," and when set to wash the china the coal breaker would slip in gear and play havoc with the dishes, &c. We believe that the Greenwood Convertible Basket, while not claiming to be adapted for all uses, is really one of the most ingenious arrangements that ever found a place in the household or office. It is advertised in another column and is a most wonderful illustration of the progress of simple mechanical inventions.

EDUCATIONAL.

Mansfield Female College.

1887-8.

THE FALL TERM will open Wednesday, September 15, 1887.

The Faculty has been strengthened by the accession of Rev. M. S. Wade, of Virginia, who will have the vice-Presidency of the College, and Prof. D. F. Hodgin, also of Virginia, who will manage the boarding department. Both these gentlemen are experienced in school work, and they, with their families, will add much to the social advantages of the pupils.

Other highly qualified teachers have been secured for the Literary, Music and Art Departments.

Annual rate for board and tuition from one hundred and sixty-five to one hundred and eighty-five dollars, according to class. Music, instrumental or vocal, and art lessons, five dollars per month of four weeks, extra.

Instruction in French, ten dollars per year. Use of piano for practice, ten dollars. Total expense for the year for board, tuition, and single course in music or art, paid in advance, two hundred dollars.

A deposit of five dollars for each term must be made for purchase of books and stationery.

Pupils must furnish their own bed-clothing and pillows, towels and toilet articles.

The College is the property of the Louisiana Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the daughters of members of this body receive free tuition in the Literary and Music Departments.

Owing to the steadily increasing patronage during the past four years, the Board of Managers have made arrangements for increasing the capacity and comfort of the buildings, and beautifying the grounds.

Mansfield is on the line of the Texas and Pacific R. R., 298 miles from New Orleans, and forty miles from Shreveport.

Our Young People.

WHEN JESUS CAME.

Some household cares perchance had chained our feet,
Or passing guest beguiled with converse sweet;
A little languor loitered our desires
For heavenly dew or Pentecostal fires;
But afterwards we owned—we owned with shame—
Alas! we were not there when Jesus came.

Yet, if a king gave audience for an hour,
And bade us wait on him for wealth or power,
How hastened we through dark, unlovely street
To pour our supplications at his feet!
Our King gives audience, Jesus is his name:
Alas! we were not there when Jesus came.

It might have rained or winter winds were rough,
It was too hot or was not warm enough!
And so we let the hour of dew pass by,
And so we let the precious moments fly
Which might have nursed a holy, steadfast aim;
Alas! we were not there when Jesus came.

Yet there may be a faithful one who keeps
A mournful vigil where a sufferer sleeps;
Balm for the grief he'll give and rest for toil.
So she who tarries shall divide the spoil;
Though all unpraised and all unknown to fame,
She shall be satisfied, for "Jesus came."

Our tender babes may claim our patient care;
God's children these, his little hands they are,
A circle very close unto their Lord,
Their voices will not drown his whispered word.
All unrequiting, let us own his claim,
And say, "We were at home, yet Jesus came."

Let naught but duty keep us from his feet
Whose invitations are so free, so sweet,
Outrun the earnest, break through every press;
He must not miss us when he comes to bless.
Else shall we own—and own with bitter shame—
Alas! we were not there when Jesus came.

A Word to the Boys by a Boy.

Some boys think they are men when they put on a pair of red-top boots. They stick their pantaloons inside, mount a pony and gallop off to the nearest town to get a dram. Others when they are in a social circle, sitting cross-legged, smoking a cigar, poisoning the air with the offensive odor. Others when they can rip out an oath as big as anybody else. Others when they speak of their father as "the gov'ner," and their mother as "the old lady." Others still think it is the height of manhood to take a young lady by the arm and strut along as if they were conferring a great favor, instead of being honored by her company. Others they are that think it is the "feathers that make the bird;" so they put on the finest feathers they can get and imagine they are as great as Alexander.

But this is not the true manhood that boys should aspire to. Let us all spur up and march in the front of the coming boys that will soon be the rulers of our glorious country. Let our motto be, "Onward and upward!" Let us cultivate the Christian graces. Let us shun the saloon as we would the gates of hell. Let our adornment be the humility that will shine in our every-day life. Let us pay due respect and reverence to our parents, be kind and obliging to our brothers, sisters and associates. Let us "dare to do right" and "dare to be true." This is the road to travel if we want to be noble men.

I hope all the ADVOCATE boys are on this road.

MR. EDITOR: I thought that I would write a few lines to the dear paper, as I have never written to it. My papa takes your paper, and I enjoy reading the little cousins' letters so much. I am a little girl twelve years old. My papa lives two miles from town. I am not going to school. The nearest church is Beauregard. Bro. Mellen is our pastor. We are much pleased with him. My grandpapa and grandmamma live with us. I am reading through the Bible with my grandmamma. My papa has a saw-mill in Osyka. He comes home every two weeks. I am so glad to see him. I have a little sister three years old. She sings for papa when he comes home. I will ask the little cousins a question: Where in the Bible are three verses found alike? I will close, hoping to see my letter in print.

Your little friend,

MOLLIE SARTIN.

BEAUREGARD, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: My aunt, Mrs. Coker, takes your valuable paper, and I thought I would write a few lines to the young folks' department. I live in Tupelo, Miss. Our pastor is Rev. Eugene Johnson. I will answer Mary Kendall's question: "Where the verse is found in the Bible that contains all the letters in the alphabet except 'q?'" It is found in Ezra vii, 20; but in that verse it is all the letters except "j." I will close, hoping to see this in print.

Your little friend,

MAUD M'CANLESS.

MR. EDITOR: I thought I would write a story about Noah: "God told Noah to build an ark. It had a very large door in the side and a window. It took him more than a hundred years; but men lived longer then than they do now. Noah not only worked on the ark, but preached. He told them to repent, but they would not. At last Noah finished the ark. Then God told Noah to go into the ark and take his wife and sons and their wives and two of every sort of birds and animals in with him. Then God closed the great door and window. It rained forty days and nights and drowned the people, and covered the mountains. At last it stopped raining and the water began to fall. Noah sent a raven out, but it didn't return to him. Then he sent a dove out; the dove came back. He waited seven days longer and sent it again. This time it came back to him. Then Noah knew that the mountain tops were out. He was on Mount Ararat. Noah came out, and built an altar and offered up offerings to God. God sent a rainbow to remind Noah that God promised not to send another flood on the earth again. Noah lived after the flood many years; but when he was 950 years old he died."

MR. EDITOR: Will you permit me to write you a short letter in the children's column. I am a little boy eleven years old. I am attending day-school taught by Bro. Price. I am studying reading, spelling, arithmetic, practical and mental, grammar, history and geography. My step-father and grandfather take your valuable paper. I will answer Mary Kendall's question: "What verse in the Bible contains the whole alphabet excepting 'q?'" It is found in Ezekiel xxviii, 13. I will ask the cousins a question: What was the weight of gold that came to Solomon in one year? With many good wishes for the success of your valuable paper, I am, Your little friend,

JAMES HIGHTOWER.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little boy seven years old. This is Monday night, and we are all sitting around the fireside, so I thought I would write to the dear old ADVOCATE. I am named after our beloved preacher, Albert T. Galloway. I hope he will see this and send me his photograph, as I have never seen him. I have not been to school any in very nearly a year. When I went I studied spelling, third reader, writing, dictionary, and arithmetic. Papa takes the ADVOCATE. I will close, as my letter is getting too long. Hoping it will escape the waste-basket, I remain,

Your little friend,

ALBERT G. HAMMETT.

CAMPTE, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: Seeing letters from different places written by different little cousins, I thought I would write one, too. Papa takes your valuable paper. Rev. T. B. Holloman is our pastor. We all love him. Mrs. A. E. Flowers, wife of Rev. French Flowers, of the Mississippi Conference, is my teacher. We love her very much. One of the cousins asked how many verses there were in the Bible? I think I can answer it correctly. There are 31,173. I will ask them a question: How many letters are there in the old Testament? Mamma and papa will be surprised to see my letter in print. I am,

Your little friend,

Teach Your Children the Proper Use of Money.

Many parents permit their children to spend for candy or toys every cent that is given to them. Others are continually instructing their children to save all their "pennies." In either case the parents evince a deplorable ignorance of the true uses of money; namely, spending with discretion, saving and giving. Even very young children can be taught, to a certain extent, the real value and best use of money. Wise parents will ever strive to impress upon their children the necessity of forming prudent habits: of spending money to advantage so that some article of utility or value is always obtained for it: the duty of exercising systematic and judicious charity, and that the purest happiness that can be experienced upon earth springs from the practice of benevolence.

We have in mind a little one who, like most children, lost no time in visiting the candy or toy store after he had received a penny. If his parents had allowed him to continue in this habit he might have grown up a spendthrift. By judicious training, however, this tendency was checked, and he was early made to understand the most judicious way of using his money. The possession of a bank note aroused his business instincts and made him ambitious to add to his little capital from time to time. At the same time he was encouraged to occasionally buy a toy of the kind best calculated to furnish occupation or amusement for a considerable length of time. He always remembered "the poor children" in his prayers, so strongly were his sympathies excited in their behalf; and, unlike too many adults, his sympathy did not begin and end in prayers.—American Agriculturist.

GOOD NURSING.—There are few things that require more strength of character, more general excellence, aptitude and deftness, than the charge of a sick-room does; and the very first thing that one must do, upon undertaking it, is to forget one's self. You become from that moment impersonal: you are to have no sensation, no identity, no wishes, no fatigues: you are to be utterly out of the question; you are to be only a healing force, a machine; there is nobody in that room but the patient. You are to abandon yourself wholly to determination, to one determination that the sufferer shall recover; and that since you are there to insure it, you will not leave a thing undone, any more than if in case you did, the death should lie at your door.

How refreshing to a patient is the passing of a wet cloth over the face and hands, carefully wiped again at once; the turning of the heated pillow, the fanning of the aching forehead, the rearrangement of the coverlets, the murmuring of the tender or reassuring word; and then how refreshing it is to be let alone. For the nurse who fusses forever over a sick person is as bad as the nurse who neglects him.

There is no physician who will not tell you that more cures are wrought by good nursing than by medicine; and, though it is, of course, impossible for many of us to reach the eminence of a skillful administration of medicine, yet it is within the power of all of us to make the cures that are wrought by faithful nursing.

The Arabs have a saying that to get your house to do his best you should drive moderately, till he has sweated and dried off three times, and after that you can let him go forward freely, and he will not disappoint any reasonable expectations.

A "Put and Call."

This is a funny phrase to the uninitiated, but all the lookers understand it. They use it when a person gives a certain per cent. for the option of buying or selling stock on a fixed day, at a price stated on the day the option is given. It is often a serious operation to the dealer; but there is a more serious "put and call" than this: when you are "put" to bed with a severe cold and your friends "call" a physician. Avoid all this by keeping in the house Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the great cure for pulmonary and blood diseases. Its action is marvelous. It cures the worst cough, whether acute, lingering or chronic. For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Short Breath, Consumption, Night-Sweats, and kindred affections, It surpasses all other medicines.

WILLIAMS—Died at her residence, in Ouachita parish, La., January 7, 1888, MRS. PHOEBE WILLIAMS. Her maiden name was Faulk. She was born in Ouachita parish, La., November 14, 1826. She joined the Methodist Church when she was about thirteen years old. Assuming the vows of the church, at that tender age, she lived a consistent and faithful member to the day of her death. She was married to Stephen Williams, March 30, 1843, he preceding her to the better world just fifteen years. Being left a widow to combat with the cold charities of the world, she never lost sight of him in whom she trusted. Aunt Phoeby, as she was generally called, was universally loved and respected by all that knew her. She was a kind neighbor, a devoted wife, and affectionate mother. Like Dorcas, was known for her good works and upright Christian character. A mother of twelve children, eleven preceding her to the better world. One son and three grandchildren only left to wait the Master's summons. To them we will say, "She awaits you up yonder." Sister Williams lived right; therefore, it would be natural to expect that she died right. Then let us look to him who has said, "I go to prepare a place for you."

THOMAS—BENNIE THOMAS, son of Benjamin I. and M. M. Thomas, was born January 22, 1859; departed this life, February 6, 1888; professed faith in Christ and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, 1886. He lived a very consistent member until death stopped his suffering. He died of consumption. Bennie Thomas was one of the most exemplary young men I ever knew, even before his conversion to the Christian religion. As a Christian, a son, brother and friend, he came up to the full measure. He leaves a widowed mother, brother and sisters to mourn his loss. He was willing and ready to go at the bidding of the Master. At the first of his affliction he said it looked hard for a young man to die in youth, but he became fully reconciled. May the good Lord bless the bereaved family, especially the widowed mother!

"Nature's Sweet Restorer."

Thrice happy is he who can fall into sweet, refreshing sleep nearly as soon as his weary head rests upon the pillow, to slumber on till rosy morn arouses him to conscious duty, just as the sweet babe, weary from constant tottering of its little feet, has closed its silken lashes and floated to the land of dreams, while its cherub form lay cradled in its mother's arms.

Not so the tortured sufferer, languishing from exhausted nerves and feverish illness. To him the bed seems as though it were filled with nettles instead of feathers. He finds no sleep either on right side or on left; the bed is uncomfortable, the clothes too heavy, the air stifling, the pillow too low or too high. Sleep, he declares, has gone to the dogs, and he wishes the bed had, too.

A mother in Eastland, Texas, in June, 1886, wrote of the benefits of the Compound Oxygen which she had received from Drs. Starkey and Palen.

"It is doing a great deal for me, too (in relief from kidney disease and neuralgia), though more slowly. I am able to resume my place as organist in church without being made so very nervous, as I have been, and am getting some good sleep every night."

A farmer, writing from Bareville, Pennsylvania, February 7, 1886, stated his case as follows:

"Age 37. Rheumatism. A year ago pain commenced in hollow of foot; very severe in damp weather, extending to hips, and shoulders and sides, so severe sometimes was not able to turn in bed. Lost twenty-nine pounds in weight."

March 22 he submitted the following report:

"I have been taking the Compound Oxygen for rheumatism, and I have had good, comfortable sleep for six weeks, which I had not had for six months previous to taking the Compound Oxygen. I also have a good appetite, which is worth more than I paid for the Compound Oxygen."

A lady writes from Macon, Ill., May 3, 1886:

"Please to send your treatise to address below, as I think he will get a supply as soon as he knows what it will do. I feel like a new woman now; such sweet sleep I have not had for years."

From Wilbraham, Mass., we have this report:

"My ability to sleep is quite satisfactory—i. e., it has wonderfully increased. Mother thinks she has slept better since taking Compound Oxygen than she has in the same length of time for twenty years."

For full particulars of revitalizing power of the Compound Oxygen, write to Drs. Starkey and Palen, 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa., for one of their brochures, and it will be sent free, postage paid.

Nature of Electricity.

It is not yet known to a certainty what electricity really is. It has been thought by different persons at different times to be a fluid, or only a form of energy. The view that it is only a force has been strongly suggested by our finding heat and light to be manifestations of force. The analogy between these "modes of motion" and electricity no doubt led to the practice of classing heat, light and electricity together in treatises upon natural philosophy. The subjects have been joined in elementary instruction, until the popular mind has come to look upon the grouping as made on philosophical principles.

A paper devoted to this subject was read before the Midland Institute of Birmingham recently by Dr. Lodge. The author takes the ground that electricity may be a form of matter. He remarks that it is never created nor destroyed, it is simply moved and strained just as matter is moved. When we speak of generating electricity, the expression is misleading. Instead of saying that we excite it in a body, the Doctor's view would lead us to say that we pump it into that body, and to the same extent we exhaust it from neighboring bodies. He would have us think of the electrical machine as a pump.

But how are we to think of electricity itself? The reply given is, in terms, just as it behaves. The remark is made that it behaves just like a substance. This was seen by Franklin, and it has led to the practice of speaking of electricity as a liquid or a fluid. It can be accumulated upon a conductor, as water or air might be pumped from one elastic bag to another. The strain upon one bag, and the relief of pressure upon the other, would represent the condition of positive and negative charging with electricity.

Electricity, also, assumes a whirling motion like the whirlwind and the waterspout. It can be given a wave-motion similar to that which occasions sound. In all these ways it behaves like a substance.

It is not necessary to consider electricity and the ether as identical. Dr. Lodge vaguely suggests that the ether may possess a certain amount of rigidity for very rapid and minute wave-motions. In such case we can think of it as containing electricity just as a jelly contains water.

Regarding electricity as being entangled in the ether after such a manner as described, it will appear that all space is, of itself, a universal insulator. In this insulating space, all bodies that are conductors, not only our lightning-rods and telegraph wires, but all forms of conducting substances and the earth itself, may be looked upon as so many cavities and seams and channels, through which the currents of electricity may flow without resistance.

Whenever a current forces itself from one passage to another through the jelly-like envelope in which it is embedded, this action must be attended by a rupture of the inclosing ether. This corresponds with the behavior of electricity under such circumstances.

It has been common from Faraday's time to the present to speak of "lines of force" when discussing electrical action, very much as we speak of rays of light in optics. But as we abandon rays at a certain stage and attend only to the waves, which are the essence of the phenomena of light, so Dr. Lodge recommends that in electricity we abandon lines of force and "try to conceive the actual stuff undergoing its strains and motions. It is then we get urged towards ideas similar to those which are useful in treating of the behavior of an incompressible fluid."

This brings us back to the fluid theory of Franklin and the natural philosophers of his day. Of course, this theory has been much modified by subsequent observations and reasonings, but it is left substantially the same. To show the extent of this identity, two remarks of Dr. Lodge's are quoted.

"Franklin's view that positive charge was excess, and negative charge was a deficit in a certain standard quantity of the fluid which all bodies naturally possessed in their neutral state, remains practically true. His view that the fluid was never manufactured, but was taken from one body to give to another, so that one gained what another lost—no more and no less—remains practically true."—Youth's Companion.

How to Kill Sin.—Wouldst thou have much power against sin and much increase of holiness, let thine eye be much on Christ; set thine heart on him; let it dwell in him, and be still with him. When sin is likely to prevail in any kind, go to him, tell him of the insurrection of his enemies, and thy inability to resist, and desire him to suppress them, and to help thee against them, that they gain nothing by their stirring but some new wound. If thy heart begin to be taken with and moved toward sin, lay it before him; the beams of his love shall eat out the fire of those sinful lusts. Wouldst thou have thy passions and love of the world and self-love killed, go sue for the virtue of his death, and that will do it. Seek his spirit, the spirit of meekness and humility and divine love. Look on him, and he will draw thy heart heavenward, and unite it to himself and make it like himself. And is not that the thing thou desirest?—Leighton.

Dyspepsia, indigestion, sick headache, and that tired feeling are cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, which tones the stomach, promotes healthy digestion, creates an appetite, cures sick headache and builds up the whole system. Sold by all druggists. 100 Doses One Dollar.

The peculiarities of human disorders are many and various and a constant source of astonishment to physicians and surgeons, but no more curious case has ever been reported to the faculty than that narrated in the following lines, the subject matter of which is at present greatly interesting medical men and specialists:

Some time ago an engineer on the Little Miami railroad was suspended because, after having been examined by Dr. Clark, he was found to be quite deaf. The engineer claimed at the time that he could hear everything while running his engine, but the doctor found that in a still room he could not hear ordinary conversation a foot away. The engineer lives in Cincinnati, and received treatment in that city for his disease, but without any special benefit. After being suspended eight months, the engineer again came to Dr. Clark and insisted that he could hear perfectly well while on a moving engine. The doctor thought he would test the case, and accompanied the man to Cincinnati and made a number of experiments with him on engines. The result was that the doctor found the engineer was telling the truth in regard to the matter, and that the deaf man could hear low remarks and whispers on a moving engine that even Dr. Clark's keen ear failed to catch. The engineer was reinstated to his former position.—St. Louis Christian Advocate.

If Sufferers from Consumption, Scrofula, Bronchitis, and General Debility will try Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites, they will find immediate relief and permanent benefit. The Medical Profession universally declare it a remedy of the greatest value and very palatable. Read: "I have used Scott's Emulsion in several cases of Scrofula and Debility in Children. Results most gratifying. My little patients take it with pleasure."—W. A. HULBERT, M. D., Salisbury, Ill.

The fiscal year ending November 30, 1887, was the most prosperous in the history of the Publishing Houses of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The aggregate sales, East and West, for the year were $1,984,748 50, and $7,314,390 51 for the quadrennium. The East and West will both be able to report to the General Conference debts paid or payment provided for, leaving a net capital of $2,392,366 94.

Consumption Surely Cured.

To the Editor:

Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the above-named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy FREE to any of your readers who have consumption. If they will send me their Express and P. O. address.

Respectfully,

A RARA AVIS IN CENTRAL PARK.—Last night an Englishman was taking a stroll near the lake in Central Park. "What is that bird?" he said to a New York friend; "its harsh note is familiar enough, yet I can't name the bird." "The bird," replied the Manhattanite, "is a bull-frog."—New York Musical Courier.

INACTIVITY in the kidneys and bladder should be speedily overcome or danger is to be looked for. A genial and safe stimulating medicine that never fails, is Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Balm.

At the close of January, Texas had a surplus in her treasury of $1,725,000. Some of the leading papers are calling for a reduction in her taxes.

YOU can cure rheumatism and neuralgia when arising from kidney troubles by the use of Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Balm.

For The Nervous
The Debilitated
The Aged.

Medical and scientific skill has at last solved the problem of the long needed medicine for the nervous, debilitated, and the aged, by combining the best nerve tonics, Celery and Coca, with other effective remedies, which, acting gently but efficiently on the kidneys, liver and bowels, remove disease, restore strength and renew vitality. This medicine is

Paine's Celery Compound

It fills a place heretofore unoccupied, and marks a new era in the treatment of nervous troubles. Overwork, anxiety, disease, by the foundation of nervous prostration and weakness, and experience has shown that the usual remedies do not mend the strain and paralysis of the nervous system.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The strike on the Burlington road continues. Contrary to expectation, the Brotherhood of Engineers is encouraged by the Knights of Labor, who, it was thought, would replace them.

All the freight conductors and brakemen on the Atlantic and Pacific road at Albuquerque, N. M., went out on a strike March 1. Everything in the freight line is at a deadlock.

A most disastrous conflagration took place in New York on the first instant, eating out a square of 200 feet. The losses approach a million dollars.

There is no longer any question about the removal of the Libby Prison to Chicago. The final transaction was completed March 2, and the building is now the property of a Chicago syndicate whose purpose is to transplant it to that city by June 1.

The House Committee on Post-offices and Post-roads ordered an adverse report on the two bills prohibiting the mailing of newspapers containing lottery advertisements.

Jay Gould's latest scheme, as discovered by the enterprising reporters, is to make the mouth of the Brazos river the terminal point of his Southwestern system. To this end he will clean out the bar of the river and make a channel up the Brazos to admit the largest ocean steamers. The Columbia Tap railroad is to be immediately extended to the mouth of the Brazos, and lands about the proposed terminus have advanced 500 per cent. lately.

The Burlington strike grows gradually worse in its ramifications. The words of Chief Arthur are the best index to the situation: "We must win this fight. The men of the Brotherhood are pledged to each other. The Brotherhood will not compromise, but rather dig the ditch in which they propose to die in case they can not win."

The news of the completion of the contract by which the old Libby Prison is to be removed from Richmond, Va., to Chicago, to be there converted into a "War Relic Museum," creates in Richmond much sorrow not unmixed with indignation.

Mrs President Cleveland and Mrs. Secretary Whitney, having been favorably impressed with the quaintness and beauty of San Augustine, Fla., have decided to return in about two weeks for a visit of three or four weeks.

On March 3 some Mexican soldiers crossed into Texas to capture a deserter. A conflict with the civil authorities at Eagle Pass ensued. Two of the Mexicans were killed and one wounded; also one American wounded.

New York City, on March 5, had a million-dollar fire.

The State Immigration Convention assembled in this city, on March 5, at Washington Artillery Hall. The attendance on the first day was very large.

FOREIGN.

The Russian frontier force has been increased by 200,000 men.

M. Wilson, son-in-law of ex-President Grevy, who has been on trial for complicity in the legion of Honor decoration scandal, has been convicted. He was sentenced to two years' imprisonment, to pay a fine of 3,000 francs, and to be deprived of his civil rights for five years.

Lord Salisbury in an interview with Baron de Stuel, the Russian Embassador, on March 2, declared that he would oppose the deposition of Prince Ferdinand, unless the powers agreed upon his successor on the Bulgarian throne.

Russia has sent to the Porte a second and more decided note requesting Turkey to intimate that Prince Ferdinand's position is illegal. Russia is supported by Germany.

Archbishop Ryan, of Philadelphia, who is in Dublin, in an interview, said that no sensible American approved of Ireland's separating from England.

MM. Wilson and Ribiden, who were sentenced, in Paris, to two years and eight months' imprisonment for trafficking in decorations, have appealed from the decision of the court.

The Express, of Dublin, affirms that there are internal dissensions in the Parnellite ranks which will produce a rupture that will shake the foundations of the National League.

The bodies of over 200 victims of a recent avalanche in the Italian Alps have been recovered.

Premier Crispi has sent a telegram to Count Menabrea, the Italian Ambassador at Paris, instructing him to demand of the French government the punishment of fifteen French soldiers who stopped some Italian railroad officials at Modane, and by threatening them with bayonets forced them to kneel before them.

Gen. Bragg, the new American Minister to Mexico, was given an audience by President Diaz, March 3. The reception accorded him was most cordial.

The Czar reviewed the Guards, on March 1, from the Winter Palace. No review has occurred in such cold weather since the days of Emperor Nicholas.

Mr. Gladstone, in returning thanks to 250 clergymen of the Church of England for a memorial drawn up by them in favor of Home Rule, said he believed it would have the effect of greatly increasing the growing conviction that neither honor nor advantage can possibly be gained by a continued refusal to accede to the moderate and constitutionally expressed demands of the Irish people.

Justin McCarthy has declined to become a deputy speaker of the House of Commons, giving as his reason that he is nearsighted.

A naval guard on the Prussian border is being organized at all south Russian seaports.

All railway traffic in Sweden and Denmark has been stopped by heavy snowfalls.

WANTED.—Agents for the marvelous work, "Fifty Years in the Church of Rome." Address I. Q. REYNOLDS, 203 Lafayette street, New Orleans.

Southern Cultivator and Christian Advocate.

By a special arrangement we are enabled to offer to new subscribers for the ADVOCATE, the Southern Cultivator and Dixie Farmer, combined with the ADVOCATE, for $2 50 for the two publications for one year. The price to old subscribers will remain the same as heretofore—$2 75—with only twenty-five cents extra to either of the above amounts for "Dickson's System of Farming." These rates are postage prepaid. All orders must be accompanied by cash in full; no allowance for commission to agents, and both papers must be ordered at same time. We will, however, fill orders to subscribers who failed to take advantage of the club rate when they last renewed for $1 for the Cultivator for one year.

March, April, May

Are the months in which to purify the blood, as the system is now most susceptible to benefit from medicine. Hence now is the time to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, a medicine peculiarly adapted for the purpose, possessing peculiar curative powers. It expels every impurity from the blood, and also gives it vitality and richness. It creates an appetite, tones the digestion, invigorates the liver, and gives new life and energy to every function of the body. The testimony of thousands, as to the great benefit derived from Hood's Sarsaparilla, should convince everybody that it is peculiarly the best blood purifier and spring medicine.

"Fifteen Objections to Church Entertainments."

The contents of this pamphlet is a sermon preached in Carondelet Street Church by Rev. Beverly Carradine, and was published by request. The price is put at about cost—i. e., ten cents per copy, $1 per dozen, $7 per hundred.

Easter Cards.

Prang's Easter cards, novelties and satin prints of 1888 are on sale and are certain to meet with a royal reception. The designs are elaborate and the artistic merits are in advance of former efforts. Delicate landscapes, birds, Easter lilies, and other spring flowers are largely represented. Among the many useful and fancy articles into which the satin prints are wrought are book-marks, satchets, satchet-bags, handkerchief-cases, banners, portfolios, etc. Altogether, the line of cards and novelties are of a very high order. For sale at principal book-stores and fancy-goods dealers.

The disestablishment of the Catholic Church in France is being discussed by the French people. The government finances persist in yearly deficits, and the people are impatient at the annual direct support of the church to the extent of $9,000,000, and indirectly by the municipalities $2,000,000 additional. Cutting off these expenditures would enable the government to balance accounts every year, and the sentiment grows against the establishment. The world moves, and so does the kingdom of God.

Hot Bread Made Wholesome.

The Royal Baking Powder possesses a peculiar merit that is not possessed by any other leavening agent. It provides bread, biscuit, cake, muffins, or rolls which may be eaten when hot without inconvenience by persons of the most delicate digestive organs. With most persons it is necessary that bread raised with yeast should lose its freshness or become stale before it can be eaten with safety. The same distressing results follow from eating biscuit, cake, pastry, etc., raised by the cheap, inferior baking powders that contain lime, alum, or other adulterants. The hot roll and muffin, and the delicious hot griddle cakes, raised by Royal Baking Powder, are as wholesome and digestible as warm soup, meat, or any other food.

Another greatly superior quality possessed by the Royal Baking Powder is that by which the preservation of important elements of the flour is effected in raising the bread by the mechanical operation of the gas without fermentation. Yeast, and all baking powders that produce the leavening gas by fermentation, as is well known, destroy a portion of the nutritive elements of the flour, and particularly those which are the most healthful and the greatest aids to a perfect assimilation of the food. The Royal Baking Powder, while perfectly leavening, retains without change or impairment all those elements which were intended by nature, when combined in our bread, to make it literally the "staff of life."

No leavening agent or baking powder, except the Royal Baking Powder, possesses these great qualifications.

THE TRANSFIGURATION.

BY ARTHUR PENRHYN STANLEY.

Master, it is good to be
Here on the mountain here with thee;
Here stand revealed to mortal gaze
Those glorious saints of other days;
The one received on Horeb's height
The eternal laws of truth and right;
One caught the still small whisper, higher
Than storm, than earthquake, or than fire.

Master, it is good to be
With thee, and with thy faithful three;
Here, where the apostle's fear of rock
Secured against temptation's shock;
Here, where the Son of Thunder learns
(Though) that breathes, and word that burns;
Here, where on eagle's wings we more
With him whose last best creed is love.

Master, it is good to be
Entranced, enwrapt, alone with thee;
To watch thy glistening raiment glow
Whiter than Hermon's whitest snow;
The human lineaments that shine
Radiant with a light divine;
That we, too, change from grace to grace,
Gazing on that transfigured face.

Master, it is good to be
Even on the holy mount with thee;
Then darkling in the depths of night,
Then dazzled with excess of light,
Bow before the heavenly Voice
That bids bewildered souls rejoice.
Though love wax cold, and faith be dim,
"This is my Son, O hear ye him."

The Texas Capital.

MR. EDITOR: These are "red-letter" days I am spending in the beautiful capital city of the Lone Star State. When I awoke this morning, and felt in my face the electric, invigorating breezes of my own, my native land," I felt my pulse and brain quicken into higher action. At sunrise I threw up my window to look abroad. The master painter was touching up the morning with the most delicate tracery: Heaven's own blue above, the shimmer of water under the golden sunbeams, and a peep of evergreens in the distance. The softest wind, like a "sweet breath of spring," came in and played so gently with my bangs that I wondered if it could be the same wind that has been sending us such hyperborean blasts all winter. Then the russle of the cedar boughs from the top of Mt. Bonnell, and the rippling of the Colorado over her silver sands, made the sweetest music for my listening ear, and I appreciated the sentiment which makes an exiled Scotchman's bosom heave when he hears, even in dreams, the whispering of "fair Scotia's" happy strand, and I sympathized with the patriotism which sends a blaze of enthusiasm to the eyes of an Irishman, do the seas but waft him one sweet strain from his own loved Emerald Isle. I could even repeat, "Breathes there a man," etc., did I not fear to quote a thing so often quoted would send this, "my brain rambling," whirling into the yawning, capacious waste basket of the editor; but, to come to the point, the spirit moves me, as the Friends say, to tell you all about this lovely little city of Austin.

I was here only a few years back, but, so great have been the changes since then, that one would think these people had been diving into the occult sciences of the middle ages, and were scattering tangible evidences of their researches all about them, for, when I look at the great dome of the new capitol building rising so majestically on the same site where I left the modest old building, I can but think:

"This palace standeth in air,
By necromancy placed there."

The building is second only to the National Capitol in magnitude, and the architects say it is far more symmetrical. It is built of granite from Burnet county, Texas. Specimens of granite from numerous quarries were submitted to the superintendent and commissioners, who personally examined all materials presented. All specimens were also subjected to mechanical tests, and to chemical analysis, and this Texas stone was chosen. The pillars look strong enough to uphold untold weight for all ages, and in color the granite is soft and beautiful, and restful to the eye. Three million acres of Texas land went to pay for this gigantic structure. The corner-stone was laid with impressive ceremonies on March 2, 1885, the forty-ninth anniversary of Texan Independence. This stone, which is of red granite from the Burnet quarry, weighed 16,000 pounds in the rough. The building will be completed and ready for occupancy in May. Antequarians tell us that the pyramids probably stand to memorialize the sweat and groans of the Israelites; the strange tumuli of the mound builders mark the industry and skill of that unknown race; and who knows but that time may evolve a race who will gaze upon this impressive structure as the only monument left to the love and pride of the Texans, and find sermons, indeed, in all its massive stones. I went up into the dome and looked down upon the kingdoms of this world. The city beneath me looked like a fair Greek city. The university grounds might well pass for the ancient walks of the academicians. I thought what wonderfully long-headed men those early Texas fathers must have been, who located so well these sites for capitol and university so long ago. Men have been murdered by savages here after these spots were chosen. Those old heroes knew even then the possibilities of the greatest State in the Union.

This same University of Texas has thrown her door wide open to women, and the part that I particularly exult in is that the women yearly take all the highest honors.

They have here also a home for disabled Confederate soldiers, a Blind Institute, Deaf and Dumb Asylum, Insane Asylum, etc.

Austin is destined to be a great city. She is favorably located for commerce; her State institutions add hundreds to her population; they are going to have manufactories, and in this immigration movement these people move under the "Iron Duke's" orders: "Let the whole line advance." Nothing can divide them in a work that brings good to their beloved State. They are not even politically intolerant. Being from Louisiana, and from Shreveport, this was passing strange to me, and I can still find only this solution for the mystery, perhaps. "The Golden Year" that Tennyson tells us about has opened her first circle here—

"Where all men's good
Is each man's rule, and universal peace
Lies like a shaft of light across the land,
And like a line of beams athwart the sea."

Ah! Mr. Editor, I could a tale unfold all about "Vanity Fair." A moderate interest in "Vanity Fair" is a femininity that I can not overcome; but I will resist the gossiping propensity for once. You may hear again from,

Yours truly,

SHREVEPORT.

The Duties of Stewards.

In a communication recently published in the columns of this paper, the writer, in making reference to the duties of Boards of Stewards, stated that he would say something more at another time on that subject. He desires now to offer a few suggestions to the stewards of the several church organizations, who may read this, and remind them of the obligations imposed upon them, both as individuals and as "Boards." The office of steward is not meant simply as an honorary recognition of the good standing of a member. He was not selected to be an "ornament" only. There is something else for him to do besides "take up the collection" on Sunday. The very name which our church wisely deemed appropriate for the office is significant. He is a servant. He acts under general and binding orders. The members of the Board are the business managers of the society. Our church laws requires especial capacity in the members of the Board individually. They must "be men of solid piety, who both know and love the Methodist doctrine and discipline, and of good natural and acquired abilities to transact the temporal business of the church." Now, mark you, there are no such requirements as these placed upon the office of trustee; but it is to the stewards that it is directed. The stewards are, in fact, the Advisory Board to the pastor. They are the executive committee, the committee on Finance, collectors of funds, and standing parsonage committee (where there is no parsonage). They have a plenty to do. Do they do it? Their responsibilities are grave. Do they realize it?

The chief duty of the Board of Stewards is to "transact the temporal business of the church." But, alas! how often is this undertaking forced upon the pastor, either through neglect of the stewards, or their ignorance of what is really required of them as officers. Now, brother steward, please turn with me to your Discipline for a moment. Notice that the preacher in charge is directed to superintend generally the spiritual affairs, see that the ordinances are observed, and to be the leader of the membership. Is there anything requiring the preacher in charge to conduct "temporal business," or about him raising the finances? Then turn to the chapter on stewards. Observe, they shall make "provision for the support of the gospel," write circular letters to the congregation, report "the financial state of the church," and see that the contributions are duly collected. These are wise provisions of the statute law of our church. It is a disagreeable restriction upon the pastor, in his efforts to save dying humanity, to have to be continually begging for money. You, through and by your society, undertake to pay your pastor a certain amount for his services; and generally it is a very small salary. Is it proper that he should be compelled to ask you repeatedly—in fact, keep up a regular system of "dunning," in order to get enough to barely support himself and family? Does your employee have to spend a good deal of his time collecting what you promised to pay him, when he should be engaged in the work allotted to him? But you, perhaps, may remark right here that you will raise the pastor's salary, but you think it to be his duty to collect the Conference assessments. Let me say right here, that it is far the best plan to raise all amounts together. The members would much prefer to give a certain amount to cover all demands rather than be asked every Sunday or monthly for a new contribution; so either you, brother stewards, or the pastor must raise the finances. Besides, when a Board wants to shirk any of their work and throw it on their pastor, you may just reckon on them shirking it all. And, then, the poor preacher will go on and raise his Conference collections, and, in the meantime, no one is raising his salary; consequently, he will be reduced to very needy circumstances, and it, doubtless, has often been the case, that he and his family will actually be without the necessaries of life. This seldom happens among stations; but we regret to believe often among circuits. The writer does not propose to recommend here any special financial plan. He has already expressed his preference. But, brother stewards, adopt some plan and work it vigorously. You must be aggressive. The age is aggressive. And if you are not, also, you will be left behind. One of the most admirable features of the Methodist Church is industrious activity. Let us keep up our reputation in this respect. It is required of you to "transact the temporal business" of the church. Is it proper, is it manly, is it right for you to dodge your duty, and let your overworked pastor conduct the temporal as well as the spiritual affairs? You free him from the embarrassing position of being a general collector, of having to ask for money at every round of his pastoral visits, and see how much more effectual work he can do in bringing souls to our blessed Savior.

There seems to be a prevalent opinion among officers and members of our church that it is not their duty to pay the preacher if he does not happen to come up to their ideal. If he is not quite so eloquent, or so genial, or lacks some other requisite according to their model, then he must not be paid. My friends, that won't do. The obligation upon you to support the ministry is sacred. It is a liability which should come first of all others. Then let me suggest, that from a business view you are wrong. Perhaps you think that if you fail to pay the pastor who is serving you, that the Conference will send you a superior man next time, and one more suited to your taste. Why, if you fail to pay the pastor whom you dislike, do you think that will raise your circuit or station in the estimation of the Conference? And is it reasonable to think that the man of highest ability will be sent to a place that does not pay its pastor? The very man with whom you are most dissatisfied should be the one to receive the most of your aid.

Now, then, we see that the Board of Stewards have their duties clearly defined, and these duties require considerable time and labor. The question, therefore, is, whether or not we should give this time and labor. Can you hesitate a moment about the answer? For whom are you working? What has your Master done for you? What debt do you owe him? He has ransomed us where we could not ransom ourselves. You are business men. You consider a surety debt peculiarly binding. Here is a debt something similar, but infinite where the first is finite. Will you not spend some time, and do some work for him who has been your substitute in the great atonement for sin, and who is now pleading for your salvation? As a fellow-steward, I ask your careful consideration of this matter.

RICHARD F. REED.

NATCHEZ, MISS., Feb. 29, 1888.

Conscience and Comity.

The following address by Dr. S. P. Henson was delivered at the love-feast in Chicago, held by the Baptists and Presbyterians, and published in the Advance:

"Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen: I find myself painfully embarrassed by reason of the fact that I come so late. I am reminded of the aphorism that 'the full soul loatheth the honeycomb,' and I am sure I have nothing of the honeycomb save the wax. (Laughter.) I greatly fear that the most of you are in the predicament of an unsophisticated granger, who, upon the occasion of a visit to the city of New York, accepted an invitation to dine with a quondam country friend, who had come to great estate and was living in great style upon a fashionable avenue. Writing home an account of his experience, the granger told of the largeness of his expectations and the keenness of his appetite, as well as of the keenness of his disappointment at finding absolutely nothing on the table but 'some bric-a-brac and a bowl of soup.' Determined to make the most of the situation, he took a dozen plates of soup, after which, to his great disgust, there was set before him a dinner so bountiful that the very sight of it almost took away his breath. 'And yet,' he said, pathetically, 'I could not eat a mouthful of it, but could only sit there, like a fool, chock-full of soup.' (Laughter.)

"The moral of this story I am too modest to draw. And yet, though embarrassed, I am proud and happy to be present on so auspicious an occasion, the like of which has never been seen in the world before, and could not be seen now anywhere outside of Chicago.

"This city has witnessed many notable gatherings, and been the theatre of many illustrious events, but nothing more august or sublimely significant than this remarkable convocation of representative Christian denominations sitting at a love-feast so happily together has ever occurred in its history. So much alike all seem to be, that one is not disposed to do, as did a simple-hearted bachelor, awhile ago, when his attention was called to a baby carriage, in which were nestling a pair of twins, and he innocently inquired, 'Are both of them twins?' (Laughter.)

"Whatever doubts may have existed before, it begins to be manifest that the two denominations, whose 'flower and chivalry' meet here to-night, are twins, both of them, and I hope are proud of the relationship.

"And yet, for one, as I survey this multitudinous and double-headed assemblage of magnificent Christian men and women, I can not suppress the upspringing of a pardonable covetousness, and can not help wishing that all these were one, and that one Baptist. What mighty movements might not be inaugurated and consummated, if all this Niagara of power were turned upon a single water-wheel! In a very true and blessed sense we are one already, and are 'striving together' for the furtherance of the gospel, and therein we have occasion abundantly to rejoice—and all the more to rejoice because it is being accomplished without a compromise of principle. Christian comity is beautiful, but, when it is pressed to the point of a sacrifice of conscience, then, however man may praise it, in God's sight it is simply an abomination, and ought to be an abomination in the estimation of all honorable men. (Applause.)

"There is a species of liberalism, greatly affected in our time, for which I confess I have the deepest detestation—a liberalism that is generously tolerant of every pestilent error, and only waxes fierce in the presence of old-fashioned orthodoxy. (Applause.)

"'We are all at peace among ourselves,' said a Baptist Church letter to a district association. 'Yes,' whispered a cynical and skeptical listener to the letter, 'at peace with the world, the flesh, and the devil.' This is a peace that is not to be desired, but rather to be deprecated and deplored. 'Are you all united in your parish now?' was the sympathetic inquiry made of a minister. 'Ah, yes, we are all frozen solid,' was the witty, yet sadly significant reply. Better the hottest fires of controversy than a frozen church. Better the fiercest fight than conscienceless, characterless indifference to the truth. Very little disposition is there now observable in some quarters, to fight for the truth, which may be due to the fact that we love the truth less or our neighbors more.

"The tendency in our churches is very widely prevalent to be carried away with 'the gospel of gush.' Never mind what form of faith you hold in your head—so we are told by our modern evangelist—provided your heart be full of love. Never mind about the sturdy stock of doctrine—the sap of the tree is the principal thing—and so there be those who have all gone to sap. And yet let us be sure of this, that if the sturdy stock of doctrine be cut away, by the reckless ax, the sap will presently be buried in the ground, and the fruits of righteousness will perish from the earth.

"For myself, I beg leave to say that I believe in stock as well as sap, in grit as well as gush, in conscience as well as comity, in contending for the faith as well as loving the brethren. Nor are these incompatibles, for, as a rule, it will be found that the sturdiest conservators of Christian doctrine are the foremost exemplars of true Christian catholicity. I have come more and more to believe in people who believe in what they believe in. I believe in vertebrates rather than in jellyfish, whether the vertebrate be a hard-shell turtle or a soft-skinned whale, or a human being standing erect and looking devoutly up to God, his Maker.

"I believe in the pluck of that famous public man, who, when taunted about the diminutiveness of his stature, replied: 'It is true I weigh but ninety-five pounds, but I want you to understand that ninety pounds of it are backbone.' And yet a man may mistakenly suppose that a proper kind of backbone is an iron rod, instead of an articulated vertebral column, that can gracefully bend when occasion demands. And conscience may be blinded by prejudice or goaded by passion.

"An English gentleman, who was traveling in America, was constantly complaining, as Englishmen will sometimes do, of the newness, the courseness, the vulgarity of everything. It was just at the time when we were having those supernal sunsets, which, a few years since, so puzzled the philosophers. 'Just look!' said an American to the Englishman, 'at the matchless beauty of that western sky! Where in all the wide world will you find a finer sight than that?' The Englishman shaded his eyes with his hand, and, looking westward for a moment, said: 'Yes, that is very gorgeous, doubtless, but don't you think, my friend, that it is just a little overdone?'

"This thing called conscience is very often overdone. It certainly was, when Saul of Tarsus persecuted the church of Christ, and when Calvin burned Servetus, and when 'the Pilgrim fathers' fined and whipped our Baptist fathers, and chased them out of Massachusetts to seek refuge in Rhode Island. Far be it from me to disparage the Pilgrims. They were honest, certainly, if not always kind. They had fibre in the muscle and vertebræ in the back, and a conscience in the bosom.

"And, for one, I am heartily grateful for all the persecution with which they pursued our Baptist ancestors. All this turned out rather for the furtherance of the gospel. Those stern old Puritans made a man of Roger Williams, just as Joseph's brethren made a man of him. They meant it for evil; but God meant it for good. Had Joseph, for life, remained at home and strutted about in that fantastic garment that his father gave him, he would probably never have been anything better than a dude. But his brethren sold him into Egypt, and Potiphar threw him into prison, and the iron entered into his soul, and into his blood, and so was laid the foundation for his magnificent character and illustrious career."

SHUT OUT FROM HEAVEN.

BY MRS. L. O. KING.

Shut out from heaven?
To be too late
To enter at the beaut'ful gate?
To turn away with deep despair?
No hope of ever entering there?
What woe or pain could be so great
As that of being for heaven too late?

Shut out from heaven?
To turn away
From the wonderful glories of endless day,
From the home which Christ has gone to prepare
For those who accept of his love and care?
What earthly joy can compensate,
For the thought of being for heaven too late?

Shut out from heaven?
With anguished heart
To know that with Christ I had no part:
No hope of singing the new song,
Or meeting of friends 'mid the glorified throng.
What feelings of sorrow the thought would create—
The knowledge of being for heaven too late.

Shut out from heaven?
Our Father, I pray
That thine erring child may never stray
So far away from the Savior's fold
As to miss the glories of heaven untold.
May holy angels around me wait,
And guard me from being for heaven too late.

—Christian Press.

To the Rev. J. A. Parker, of Louisiana Conference.

My Dear and Highly Respected Brother in the Ministry:

There are no ministers for whom I have a higher regard for personal worth and, I might add, for talents and learning than for yourself and Dr. Fitzgerald, of the Nashville Christian Advocate. And yet I am forced, by both duty to our church and common honesty, to express my sincere regret on reading his editorial of January 28 and your communication in reply to it in this ADVOCATE, of March 1, on the blundering papal muss about Peter, petra, church and keys, alluded to in Matthew xvi, 18, 19. I can not fully agree with either.

I must insist that a spyglass is not always useful. A little, plain, simple thing lying before you ten inches distant can not be well examined with Ross' telescope. Better look at it with the naked eye.

If there is a plainer, more simple passage of Scripture, one more free from doubt or ambiguity than this, I hardly know where to look for it. Now, I pray you hear me patiently.

First: Let a huge, monstrous and mythical papal brushheap be cleared away—as huge as it is monstrous—viz: that Christ made, founded or organized a new church. I regret that this awkward, ecclesiastical monstrosity is not even yet wholly eradicated from Protestant Christendom. Now, and not otherwise, are you in condition to listen to this important colloquy between Christ and the apostles; a brief, but sufficient synopsis is given to us in this text. No new church—no other than the one church of the apostles and prophets then existing, of which they were all members—was alluded to or thought of.

Second: The remarks of the Savior, though set forth in one sentence, relate to two very different things not necessarily connected; so that in inquiring into his meaning in either one case it is not necessary to examine into the other. These two things are: first, what he said about Peter, his characteristic name (hardness, rock or stone), the power of revealed truth wielded by the ministry under the guidance of the divine Word; and, secondly, what he said about the church.

Now, let his remark about Peter, likening him to a stone, etc., lie in abeyance for the present, and see what he said about the church. He said he would build it; and, in doing so, he would establish it so firmly and securely that all Satan's combined forces should not be able to jostle it, or in the least prevail against it. He would build, bless and protect it.

Now, what is the meaning of the verb to build? If I were writing to catechumens, I would answer: "Look in the dictionary." I quote from Webster, 1857; the last edition edited by Noah Webster himself: "In Scripture, to increase and strengthen; to cement and knit together; to settle or establish and preserve: Acts xx, 32; Ephesians ii, 22; I Samuel ii, 35." Again: The word translated "build," with its derivations, is used about seventy times in the New Testament; about half the times it is rendered build, and the other half, edify, according to taste, euphony and English idiom. So that to build and to edify are mostly or quite synonymous in this use of the word. Of course, there are several meanings to the word, like all others of its class. So Milton, when he brings the Jews back from Babylon, says:

"Their sacred house they first re-edify."

Here the word refers to the temple, not to the church.

Again: To build the church, I will build the church, or my church—or any such expression—can by possibility have but one meaning without a savage butchery of the king's English. It means to improve its spiritual condition. Any other meaning would be no meaning at all. We have, moreover, this fact: In every place in Scripture where the word translated "build" is used, and the reference is to God and not man as the agent or builder, it refers to the improvement of a well-known, existing thing, and never to the making or bringing into existence of a new thing. Now examine.

If the Savior, when he said, "I will build my church," had had reference to another and different church from the one they were then in to be brought into being in the then future, he certainly would not have said, build. He would have said, Make, organize, found or institute, or some word of similar meaning. Moreover, we all know this without being particularly told so by Matthew, viz: that Christ never did do anything in this world but build the church. He is doing it now every day, as he said.

My great objection to both your article in the ADVOCATE and Dr. Fitzgerald's editorial, to which you reply, is, that you both go upon the supposition precedent that Christ intended in the then future, or then to organize a new church, and, of course, do away with the old and then existing church. I think you are successful enough in refuting Dr. Fitzgerald's teaching that the church was built on Peter. What does that expression mean, anyhow? I am not able to give it any meaning. Improve the church on a man! Does that expression convey an idea? If so, it is beyond my reach. I can very easily understand that Christ meant—for he said so—that he would build, strengthen, improve and bless the church (the only church that is or was) on—that is, in pursuance of; or in consequence of—the answer of Peter that he was the Christ. It is unmistakably certain; whether anybody said so or not, that any advantage of any kind the church ever received from Christ or anybody else was on—in pursuance of, or in consequence of—that great fact. A very bungling idea, clothed in very awkward English, might suppose that if Christ intended to destroy the church, excommunicate its millions of members, himself and the apostles among the rest, and organize a new church, that in fixing its officers he intended to make Peter the president. Even then the "on Peter" is a nearly meaningless expression.

I need hardly repeat my sincere regret to see, in such high theological and ecclesiastical quarters, the slightest admission of the great lying monstrosity that Christ destroyed the church and made a new one! This great, wily, mischievous perjury has been the cause of about all the troubles the church, in its associate capacity, ever encountered. They all flow from this source. And why popery should seek shelter under this colloquy—Matthew xvi, 18—is a marvel. Look at its plain, simple, spelling-book reading, and it proves conclusively and unanswerably the very opposite of what papists want to show. The Savior said he would build his church. Now, pervert the meaning of that very innocent word, "build," and make it mean moonshine, or something it does not mean, and they can prove anything almost.

The query in the Nashville Advocate, to which Dr. Fitzgerald replies, is not a question that is susceptible of an answer. "Does our Savior intend to convey the idea that he will build the church on Peter, or upon Peter's confession, or that he himself is the rock upon which the church is to be built?" This supposes that a new church "is to be built." That is the same as to inquire: What sort of government did Julius Cæsar establish in ancient Mexico? The inquirer asks how, or on what would the new church be built; and the whole new church jumble being a papal myth and an absurdity, of course, the question asks nothing. And yet both you and the editor treat it as a question, tacitly recognizing the new church theory, and gravely inquiring into it! And yet I am well persuaded that neither of you will plainly and in terms give the slightest heed to this old Romish abomination. You will say that I criticise with very blunt plainness. Well, I can't write any other way. I never studied the circumlocutionary style.

I am well aware that this new church perjury has been taught by the church and all over the church for fifteen hundred years, and, until lately, with little or no objection; and, as a natural consequence, has kept the church in a continual turmoil of discontent. And I am somewhat, though I confess but slightly, aware of the powerful influence that must be produced on human credulity by the every-day, life-long ringing in the ear of any one thing, however absurd or preposterous.

The conclusion is, that all the "battle-ground" troubles about this text has arisen out of a false meaning given to the word build. Supposing a new church to be made, thereafter, this word is distorted to conform to that idea.

While I feel the responsibility of so square a criticism of two such men as you and the Doctor, I have the consolation of knowing that it is against my personal friends.

Conference of Southern Methodist Educators.

A conference of the representative educators of Southern Methodism will be held in Nashville, Tenn., the first week in May, at which time and place the College of Bishops, the Book Committee and the Mission Board have their annual sessions. The suggestion made by Prof. Tillett, of the Vanderbilt University, in the Christian Advocate, concerning the advisability of holding such a convention, has taken definite shape. In a series of articles in the same paper he has published letters expressing approval and readiness to unite and co-operate in such a conference from eight of the Bishops and from presidents and professors representing the following universities, colleges and preparatory schools, viz: Randolph-Macon, Emory and Henry, in Virginia; Trinity, North Carolina; Wofford, South Carolina; Emory, Georgia; Southern University, Alabama; Centenary, Louisiana; Southwestern University, Tennessee; Vanderbilt University; Kentucky Wesleyan; Central, Missouri; Hiwassee, Tennessee; Pacific Methodist, California; Central Collegiate Institute, Arkansas; Belleville, Missouri; Wofford Fitting School, South Carolina; Grenada, Mississippi; Greenville, Kentucky; the Webb School, Culleoka Academy and Brownsville District High School Tennessee; and many other institutions. They all agree that the time is ripe for such a gathering and express the opinion that it will result in much good to the church and the institutions of learning under its control. Each institution will be entitled to two representatives. The conference will not only bring together for friendly interchange of opinion the leading educators of the church, but will doubtless, by the discussion of all timely and suitable subjects, serve to stir up the whole church to an intelligent and aggressive interest in her educational institutions and their endowment. The railroads, it is expected, will give considerably reduced rates for the round trip, and the delegates will be entertained free of charge in Nashville.

Among the topics that have been suggested for discussion in the proposed conference are the following:

1. College endowments. The necessity of and how best secured. Is it not advisable to make a united connectional move to endow all our colleges?

2. The relation of the church to the work of education. The relation of church schools to public schools and State universities. The policy of free tuition in State universities as related to denominational colleges. To what extent should the church attempt to have within its school system all grades of institutions—primary, preparatory, college and university? The importance of education being under positively Christian influences.

3. Should co-education in colleges and universities be adopted as the policy of the church?

4. Different institutions properly defined as to their specific province in an educational system—the work of the preparatory school, college and university each differentiated from the other.

5. Preparatory schools. The wisdom of building up training-schools as feeders to the colleges. Should it be the policy of the church to establish in every district one or more high schools?

6. Colleges. Where should the preparatory school course end? and where the college course begin? Are preparatory departments at college best as a permanent policy? or should it be our policy to abolish them as soon as good preparatory schools can be established to which this work can be committed? Entrance examinations to college. The relative merits of the four-year curriculum course and the elective system for college work. College degrees—the desirability of uniformity among our colleges—what proper for each degree? What degrees should be honorary? and upon what conditions should such degrees be conferred?

7. The university. Its relation to the college. To what extent is "higher education" and special university training needed and to be provided for by the church?

8. Ministerial education. The demands of the church at this day in the education of the ministry. (Laymen to be heard from.) Ministerial helping funds—how best secured and used.

9. Religious work in our church schools. How best promoted? The Young Men's Christian Association at college. College revivals. The Bible in college—should it be in the course of study? The missionary spirit among college students—how best cultivated.

Woman's Department of Church Extension, North Mississippi Conference.

More than a year ago I was appointed Conference secretary for the Woman's Department of Church Extension, for the North Mississippi Conference. All of last year my health was such that I was unable to attend to the duties of this office; but my heart has been all the while greatly enlisted in the cause. I fully appreciate the fact that nothing connected with our church work is more important than securing homes for our preachers. With our system this is absolutely necessary to success. Now, by the blessing of God, my health is restored. I feel like beginning in earnest to do all I can in this direction, and, as I, of course, can not travel through the Conference, therefore, I know of no other way to awaken an interest in the matter than to appeal to the good women through the Conference organ, to rally to this good cause, and let us do something worthy of ourselves and the cause represented. There are but two Parsonage Societies in this Conference that have come to my knowledge. These are at Carrollton and Corinth. Will not the district secretaries urge the organization of societies in every pastoral charge? And I specially and earnestly ask the pastors everywhere to assist us in this work. I well know they must be the leaders in every enterprise of the church, and without their co-operation we can not hope to succeed.

The North Mississippi Conference has always kept fully abreast with the sister Conferences in all connectional enterprises; but in this we have fallen woefully behind. Let us seize the opportunity, while it offers, to take away this reproach. Just think what good may be accomplished by this movement if encouraged and made a success. "A parsonage in every charge," and fifty per cent. of the funds raised remains in the hands of the Church Extension Board, to assist in building parsonages in our own bounds, while the other fifty per cent. goes to the General Board, to be used where most needed abroad. All who are familiar with the workings of the Church Extension Society know that many churches have been built by its aid, that probably would never have been built at all but for this new movement; and homes in like manner may be secured for our preachers, their wives and "little ones." Surely our preachers will need no urgent appeal to induce them to rally to this cause.

Miss Lucinda B. Helm, the general secretary for the Woman's Department of Church Extension, is working in its interest with a zeal and enthusiasm born of deep devotion, and her efforts should be seconded by every Southern Methodist.

Will the corresponding secretaries please send me reports of work done in their respective societies since their organization, so that I may be able to make a full report to the general secretary by March 1. If blanks are needed upon which to make out these reports, I will furnish them upon application.

Dear sisters, remember the "watchword" of the Woman's Department of Church Extension is, "A Parsonage in Every Charge."

MRS. R. P. MITCHELL,

DURANT, Mississippi.

A Wide Opening and a Loud Call.

"If I thought any belief or creed would make me such a man as he is, I would readily adopt it," wrote a young man who, though reared in the heart of Christendom, had not always seen Christianity so represented in the lives of its professors as to commend its practical truth to his mind. Godly lives are more needed than convincing sermons, even among us: how much more among the heathen! Say and think what we may about Bishop Taylor's or any other self-supporting missions, one thing is certain: the gospel very greatly needs, in order to its efficiency both at home and abroad, that mightily convincing power which only a practical exhibition of its teachings can give it. Among the heathen the daily conduct of foreigners from Christian countries is often an unanswerable argument against the preaching of the missionary. Suppose America should send to China and Japan 500 or 1,000 young Christian men and women, not as preachers, but as teachers of literature and science, supporting themselves thereby, and preaching only by their daily lives the gospel which Christians believe. Does anyone doubt that such a procedure would give a mighty impetus to the cause of Christ among those people? And is there not a wide opening and a loud call for Christian teachers for schools, especially in Japan? See the reports and calls of our missionaries in all our church papers. A devout young man came to consult me about going to a foreign mission field as a teacher. I advised him to correspond with those already there, and, if a place was offered, to go at once. Why should a Christian layman not help to spread Christianity among the heathen? What could preachers accomplish among us without the moral support of godly men and women? Let hundreds of those young persons in our colleges who have already professed a call in the direction of missionary fields, go out as soon as they can. When they have developed such qualifications for missionary work as to deserve it, the church may employ them. As it is, the church spends almost half her missionary money in sending out and preparing her missionaries. God calls some to teach.

W. L. C. H.

Church Extension—Woman's Department, Mississippi Conference.

The changes made by the appointments of the ministers necessitated a change of the district secretaries of Woman's Department of Church Extension. Miss Clara Harmon is secretary for Vicksburg district; Mrs. C. S. McRae, assisted by Miss Annie Gibbs, for Jackson district; Miss Addie Purnell, for Meridian district; Mrs. T. S. West, for Seashore district; Miss E. Maggie Ellis, assisted by Mrs. J. A. Ellis, for Woodville district; Miss C. A. Lamkin, for Brookhaven district; Mrs. P. A. Johnston, for Brandon district. It is greatly desired that our parsonage work be adjusted to the demands of the church. Dr. C. K. Marshall published another article, on the distribution of cheap literature, etc., in the Nashville Advocate, of January 7, in which he referred to the memorial presented to the General Conference, recommending the formation of societies, etc. We have a "Visiting Committee" in the auxiliaries to Parsonage Society, whose duty it is "to visit from house to house," etc.; "to report to the pastor the names of strangers who are members of the Methodist Church, and any cases of suffering or destitution they may find." This is valuable aid for the pastor, and can be utilized for this distribution. Should not every available means be used to awaken and instruct the people?

If our people would become familiar with all the departments of the work of our great and growing church, they would find that all are mutually helpful, and none can be dispensed with without great detriment to extension and permanent establishment of Christ's kingdom.

Those who have been so fortunate as to have heard Dr. Whedon's addresses are prepared to welcome cordially our Woman's Missionary Advocate. This paper will somewhat compensate for the loss sustained by those who are not thus blessed, and will serve as a help in the preparation for the observance of the week of prayer and self-denial. With it affords knowledge, it gives strengthening, spiritual food to be appreciated by its constant readers. Terms, fifty cents per annum, payable in advance. To those subscribers who fail to get the paper regularly will confer a great kindness, which is thankfully received, by giving notice of this fact at once.

Miss Mary Helm's missionary programmes, price, twenty-five cents, containing recitations, dialogues, etc., is a valuable book.

BELZONA CIRCUIT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: The first quarterly meeting for Belzona circuit was held at Belzona, February 25 and 26. Our good presiding elder, Rev. R. P. Mitchell, was present, and did some preaching. The weather was very unfavorable, which compelled us to omit the evening service both days. A collection was taken for the Bishops, and the whole amount assessed was raised in a few minutes. We have reason to believe that the quarterly meeting occasion will be the means of accomplishing much good at Belzona. Pray for us and our work. We expect to send you some subscribers for the ADVOCATE soon. God bless you and the ADVOCATE!

Yours in Christ,

W. W. MOSS.

CONEHATTA, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: My first quarterly meeting just over. Our new presiding elder, P. A. Johnston, was on hand with an abundant supply of cheering words to comfort and console those who feel the weight of responsibility resting heavily upon their shoulders.

We ask the brethren to remember us in their prayers, that the cause of Christ may prosper in our midst, and our labors be abundantly blessed.

Curiosities of the Voice.

Dr. Delaunay, in a paper read before the French Academy of Medicine, gives some details of the history and limits of the human voice, which he obtained after much patient research. According to the Doctor, the primitive inhabitants of Europe were all tenors; their descendants of the present day are bass tones, and their grandsons will have semi-bass voices. Looking at different races, he calls attention to the fact that inferior races, such as negroes, etc., have higher voices than white men. The voice has also a tendency to deepen with age—the tenor of sixteen becoming the bass of twenty-five, and bass at the age of five. Fair-complexioned people have higher voices than dark-skinned, the former being usually sopranos or tenors, and the latter, contraltos or bassos. Tenors, says the Doctor, are slenderly built, and thin; bassos are stoutly made, and corpulent. This may be so, as a rule, but one is inclined to think there are more exceptions to it than is necessary to prove the rule. The same remark applies to the assertion that thoughtful, intelligent men have always a deep-toned voice; whereas trifling and frivolous persons have shrill weak voices. The voice is perceptibly higher, he says, before than after a meal, which is the reason why tenors dine early in order that the voice may not suffer. It is almost superfluous for him to remind his learned audience that singers who would prudent eschewed strong drink and spirituous liquors, especially tenors; for the bassos generally eat and drink with impunity. The South, says the Doctor, furnishes the tenors; the North the bassos; in proof of which he adds that the majority of the French tenors in vogue come from the south of France, while the bassos belong to the northern department.

A preacher can travel a great deal further and endure a great deal more hardship on a clear conscience than he can on a full stomach.—Bishop McTyeire.

es, but remember how low is man's estimate of the of life. He wanted $1,000 nd in rioting and drunken- He thought that A. B. had the money; so he waylaid him, killed him and robbed him. A life for $1,000! We have a right to take him at his own figures. He has set the value in that murder for money. He can not complain if we think the forfeiture of his life at his idea of life values is small compared with the useful life in which many were interested, that he so suddenly and cruelly cut off. No, Seneca, the more I think of it the stronger is my feeling that hanging is not punishment enough for such a man. It is the best that we can do, but it is less than he deserves, and we send him over to the perfect Judge to render to him according to his works.

"And did you never think that there is another respect in which the murderer, when executed, fails to suffer as his victim does? He comes upon that victim suddenly, without a moment's warning. He gives him no time to say farewell to his wife and children, to arrange his business, nor to make any special preparation for death. He shoots him down as if he were a dog, ere he can even cry, 'God have mercy on me.' But when we arrest the murderer and condemn him to die, we give him months to fix up all his worldly affairs and to make his peace with God. Ministers of the gospel visit him in his cell and go with him to the scaffold. What a contrast! The murderer ought to be profoundly grateful that society does not treat him as he treats its honored and useful members. Suppose this man had killed your son or your brother in cold blood as he killed A. B. Would you go around asking people to petition the governor to spare his life? I think not. You would feel in that case that the life that he cut off in order to get a thousand dollars was worth ten times as much as his. But A. B. was your brother man. He was somebody's son, somebody's husband. There were human hearts that loved him, and are now utterly sad and desolate. All my sympathy is for them. I have none to waste on the murderer. I want him punished, that God's law may be vindicated, that his career of crime may be arrested or that others may be deterred from killing their fellow-men. It is to such silly sentimentalists as you are that we owe in no small degree the fearful prevalence of crime—the sad insecurity of life. We must always kill these human tigers when we catch them with the blood on their hands, or society will soon go back to barbarism."

Senaca Soft tore up the petition and confessed that he had been persuaded by a hired attorney to circulate it. But the Soft family is a very numerous one in this land to-day. They are, unconsciously, the friends and confederates of the dangerous classes, and the enemies of that vigorous enforcement of law which is mercy to society and the safeguard of property and life.—Obadiah Oldschool, in Interior.

Stick to Your Doctor.

If your physician is doing you good, you are improving, and you feel assured he is curing you, then stick to him Follow his directions. Give him a chance to do the best his skill and experience will allow. But if you do not appear to be improving, or worse still, if you seem to be slowly but surely growing weaker, then do not hesitate to send to Drs. Morbus Sabbaticus.

The Lebanon Standard and Times publishes the following diagnosis, by Rev. George H. Means, of a peculiar disease, which has not heretofore been described technically:

Morbus Sabbaticus, or Sunday sickness, a disease peculiar to church members. The attack comes on suddenly every Sunday; no symptoms are felt on Saturday night; the patient sleeps well and awakes feeling well; eats a hearty breakfast, but about church time the attack comes on and continues until services are over for the morning. Then the patient feels easy and eats a hearty dinner. In the afternoon he feels much better, and is able to take a walk, talk about politics, and read the Sunday papers; he eats a hearty supper, but about church time he has another attack and stays at home. He retires early, sleeps well, and wakes up Monday morning refreshed and able to go to work, and does not have any symptoms of the disease until the following Sunday. The peculiar features are as follows:

1. It always attacks members of the church.
2. It never makes its appearance except on the Sabbath.
3. The symptoms vary, but it never interferes with the sleep or appetite.
4. It never lasts more than twenty-four hours.
5. It generally attacks the head of the family.
6. No physician is ever called.
7. It always proves fatal in the end—to the soul.
8. No remedy is known for it except prayer.
9. Religion is the only antidote.
10. This disease is often called "Systematic Lying," but its true name is "Morbus Sabbaticus," or Sunday sickness.
11. It is becoming fearfully prevalent, and is sweeping thousands every year prematurely to the devil.

That was a splendid sentence by Prince Bismarck uttered before the Reichstag the other day: "We Germans fear God, and nothing else in the world." Long after the burly old diplomat shall have been gathered to his fathers opinions will differ as to the wisdom and rectitude of some features of his statesmanship. His political attitude is called in question by men quite as honorable as himself. But when those words were uttered, friends and foes alike for a moment paused in their critical attention to join in spontaneous applause. It is the truth contained in that statement, and its general application to the great European races, that has made possible the magnificent history of the last four centuries. Many personal and national sins have stained the record of Germany, England and America; but the profound fear of God in the hearts of the common people, and "the fear of nothing else in the world," has secured them places in the foremost rank. It was this that gave to us Martin Luther and John Knox, Oliver Cromwell and Abraham Lincoln. The English Revolution, the American Constitution, the German Empire; the great modern missionary movement, the abolition of slavery, and the quickly-coming prohibition of the liquor traffic are all directly traceable to this; and as long as Bismarck's stirring sentence can be truthfully uttered of a nation or a man, the future of that man or nation is secure.—New York Advocate.

Honeymoon.

"Say, Perkins, old boy, why don't we see you at the club any more? Has your mother-in-law shut down on you?" "No, Brown; the fact of the matter is, my home is so happy now that there is no inducement for me to leave it. You look incredulous, but it's a positive fact. You see, my wife used to suffer so much from functional derangements common to her sex, that her spirits and her temper were greatly affected. It was not her fault, of course, but it made home unpleasant all the same. But now, since she has begun to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, she has been so well and so happy that we are having our honeymoon all over again."

A MONSTER EVIL.—Before God and man, before the church and the world, I impeach intemperance. I charge it with the murder of innumerable souls in this country, blessed with freedom and plenty, the Word of God and the liberties of true religion. I charge it as the cause—whatever be their source elsewhere—of almost all the poverty, and almost all the crime, and almost all the misery, and almost all the ignorance, and almost all the irreligion, that disgraces and afflict the land. "I am not mad, most noble Festus, I speak the words of truth and soberness." I do in my conscience believe that these intoxicating stimulants have sunk into perdition more men and more women than found a grave in the deluge which swept over the highest hill-tops—engulfing a world of which but eight were saved.—Dr. Thomas Guthrie.

Dyspepsia

Makes many lives miserable, and often leads to self destruction. Distress after eating, sick headache, heartburn, sour stomach, mental depression, etc., are caused by this very common and increasing disease. Hood's Sarsaparilla tones the stomach, creates an appetite, promotes healthy digestion, relieves sick headache, clears the mind, and cures the most obstinate cases of dyspepsia. Read the following:

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced. It relieved me of that faint, tired, all-gone feeling. I have felt so much better since I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, that I am happy to recommend it." G. A. PAGE, Watertown, Mass.

EPPS'S COCOA.

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

Briefs.

When we get at the bottom of the Sunday traffic, no matter in what it consists, we will find that it is based upon this sentiment: It is better to make money than to obey God.

In the beginning of this year we predicted that it would be a year of wonderful activity in missionary enterprise. Already we see signs to verify the prediction. The receipts of the American Board of Foreign Missions for the first four months of the fiscal year are in advance of those of the corresponding four months of the preceding year by $50,000.

An exchange reports a certain lady, of great wealth and social influence, who saves her church ten thousand dollars a year. She accomplishes this by the plain and inexpensive dress she always wears to church. Such is the confidence of the congregation in her good sense and taste that her example in plain dressing is accepted as the rule of propriety. It has long been a wonder what excuse women make to themselves in justification of rich and costly apparel when calicos, of far greater beauty at trifling cost, are in easy reach. The extravagance of church costumes keeps thousands away from the house of God; and women ought to have a stronger reason than custom for indulgence in it.

From the Evangelist:

The Hemlenway expedition, under the direction of Frank Cushing, has been at work for several months unearthing the buried cities of Arizona. There are nineteen in the Los Muertos Valley alone, and Los Muertos, which had a population of 10,000, was one of the smallest of them. The entire valley was once a system of cities, with adjacent farms, and up in the mountains are sacrificial caves and pueblos of stone, many of which never have been explored, and are entirely unknown to the wandering tourist and sightseer. The people who lived in these were not Aztecs, as has been supposed. They were of the race that preceded the Aztecs, and had upon this continent a civilization older than the pyramids. This is proven by the human remains and the relics found.

Ethnological research, prosecuted by Mr. Cushing, by the comparative method, demonstrates that the dwellers of the plain were Toltecs, and that they reached a high state of civilization centuries before the Aztecs appeared. The excavations have brought to light systems of canals and irrigation ditches far superior to any now in existence in that part of the country, the ditches being fully 300 miles in length, often cut through solid rocks at a great depth. Ruined buildings of adobe of vast size have also been unearthed. Twenty-two large blocks of buildings have been uncovered, and three carloads of relics have been sent to Boston. These relics consist of pottery, implements and skeletons. One of the ruined buildings is 400 by 375 feet, another is 480 feet long, and many of the buildings are 300 feet square. The adobe walls are sometimes seven feet thick and two stories high.

A BEREAVEMENT.—It is with great sorrow we announce the death of Mrs. W. H. Foster, of this city. She passed away on Monday, March 5, at 10 A. M., after an illness of about two weeks. She was a woman of great personal beauty and a most exemplary and devoted Christian, and from the beginning of her residence here took an active part in church work.

The Editor Abroad.

The modern mode of travel has but one advantage over the old methods; and that is an advantage in favor of only business men. To be whirled through a country at the rate of forty miles an hour affords no opportunity whatever to see anything well. No matter how lovely, or picturesque, or grand the scenery through which you are passing may be, the pulling locomotive turns it all into an evanescent panorama; and the glimpses you get of its scenes show them to be hurrying backward at the same rate of speed with which you are rushing forward. The most difficult, if not an impossible, thing in these days is to make a leisurely journey by public conveyance. The great end of everything seems to be to make money; and to "make time" is to make money, for "time is money." That is as big a lie as Satan ever imposed upon the unthinking world. It is an insult to any man's intelligence to endeavor to lower the value of his time down to a level with the value of money. This exaltation of money above everything else is driving all God's laws out of the minds of the people. The Decalogue is fast becoming a fossilized remnant of a superannuated morality under the influence of the teaching of modern business philosophy. If a man has money enough, he can, in most communities, offset the transgression of any and all of its commands. This hurry to make money has affected everything, even modes of travel; so that now, instead of going along leisurely and enjoying the scenes and taking in all points of interest, the railroad, bent on making money, whisks you along at a rate that will make your head dizzy. The idea of a man traveling for three hundred miles through a most interesting portion of Louisiana, and not seeing one single acre of it, gives some notion of the disadvantages of modern methods of travel. "But, then, if you can go three hundred miles in twelve hours, instead of expending eight days in making the trip, as was formerly done, don't you see that you have saved seven days and eight nights by the operation?" Yes, I see; but I don't exactly see how to turn that fifteen-sixteenths of saved time into money, and I have missed the only opportunity I ever had of seeing that part of Louisiana. "Well, well—time is money, anyhow; and if you have not tact enough to make the exchange, the fault is your own." I stand flat-footed upon that fault. I don't believe the saying—"Time is money." These railroads, making money by making time its equivalent, have done more to destroy our Sabbath than all other causes combined. They have weakened the sense of moral obligation in thousands of persons who would not have been touched by any other influence. Their thousands of employees have it continually impressed upon them by precept and example, that "the Sabbath was made for man" to make money in. They stand out in this country, and in all countries, as the great exception to the Fourth Commandment: "Thou shalt do no labor on the Sabbath day." That a railroad corporation can carry on its business on the Sabbath just the same as on other days, while other lines, just as important, must cease operations, shows that the Christian sentiment of Christendom needs the application of a powerful tonic at this important point. Christian Legislatures legislating for every other branch of business to suspend on the Sabbath, but making an exception of railroads, have brought themselves under the direct pressure of that tremendous law of God, which says: "He that keepeth the whole law and yet offendeth in one point is guilty of all." The impertinence of a human law nullifying a law of God is enough to send a shudder through the moral universe. There is no more reason for Sunday railroading than there is for Sunday buying and selling. To say that the Christian sentiment of this country can not modify and eventually put a stop to this national sin, is to say that the Christian people here have no influence. The sad fact is, the Christian sentiment is not only weak at this point, but its weakness panders to the growth of this evil; and the evil is strong in proportion to that weakness. There is great need of a general toning up of the Christian church on the practical precepts of the gospel. A more earnest study of the Epistle of James, and a thorough, practical application of its principles for the next thirty days to all the concerns of life, will do the church and country more good than anything that has been done for a long time. I do not say, nor would I be understood as saying, that the church is not alive to many important works which will issue in good to our race. She is doing grander work to-day than ever before! Her influence is greater than ever before! Doors of opportunity are opening to her as never before! And her responsibility has augmented fearfully from the very works which she has done. To-day she stands, like a fabled Atlas, with the whole world upon her shoulders, and, no doubt, is illustrating "the manifold wisdom of God unto the eternal principalities." But that she has a conscience, whose tenderness to violation of law has been benumbed, is manifested by the fact that her protests against the national sins of the country are less frequent and weaker by far than they should be. "Cry aloud, spare not, lift up thy voice like a trumpet, and show my people their transgressions and the house of Jacob their sins"!

C. W. C.

TEXAS.

The Sabbath Desecration.

From Elgin, Ill., the Sabbath Association of Illinois are sending to all the pastors in this country blank petitions to the managers of railroads, telegraphs and public press, and to the National Congress, for the suspension of all Sunday work by their employees. The pastors are urged to distribute these petitions among their congregations for signatures, and return them to Hon. G. Lord, Elgin, Ill.

The most conspicuous evil now threatening our people is the disregard of the Sabbath. It looks like the whisky curse—to the relaxation of physical health and domestic purity—and, like it, proceeds from greed of gain; but with swifter feet it moves to the undoing of the soul and the snapping of all obligations, both human and divine. The men who think are appalled at the audacity with which the worst classes of society are trampling upon the traditional sanctity of this day, and their temerity in either bribing or defying the executive and judicial branches of the government to relax enforcement of Sunday statutes. What right have the great corporations to compel a service which is forbidden the merchant and farmer—the two classes upon which society is mainly dependent. If they impudently trample upon God's law of rest, they teach their laborers to trample upon God's law of honesty and regard for human life. If the money of the land and the newspaper press combine to modify the rigor or relax the obligation of Sabbath observance, the inevitable result is anarchy; and when the bonds are once broken, they must, of necessity, be the first victims. Labor riots are too numerous and recent for us to fail to see the disregard for property which has grown out of the exactions of capital. Though unprofessed, seven days' work for six days' pay—instead of the divine rule of seven days' pay for six days' work—lies at the bottom of the laborer's poverty, ignorance, unhappiness and crime, and shall hereafter lie at the slipping of all values and the breaking of all bonds in the crumbling of the nation. Our tolerance of the atheism of pleasures, and the atheism of trade, and the atheism of politics will nullify our labor and prayers; and we need just now to invest our religion and manhood in obtaining and enforcing better Sabbath laws. In republican France, very recently, Col. Pons, commanding Third Infantry of Manne, who, contrary to orders, called out his regiment for practice, was sent to Penal Colony, in Caledonia. The United States government, and all of our State governments, maintain rigidly the sanctity of the Sabbath by making it a dies non, and arresting all criminal and civil proceedings in its courts and Legislatures, but it remains for pettifogging officials and lawless citizens to set at defiance the principles of public economy and justice accepted and maintained by statesmen and philanthropists.

In the enforcement of the Sunday Law the chief obstacles are the officers themselves—the mayors and police, the sheriffs and prosecuting attorneys. Very frequently they belong to the class who habitually violate this law. Of course, they put very little sincerity and honest zeal into the prosecution. They are easily persuaded of its impracticableness. Very early in their work they complain of want of support. They are without the support of a good conscience in communities that know their habits. They are easily approached by lawless people with whom they have consorted in violating the law, and by them are flattered and petted. The better class have endorsed them sufficiently in electing them to office, and trust their honor and manliness to do what they have solemnly sworn to do. It is absolutely disgusting to hear these officers complain of insufficient support in execution of the law, when behind them is the whole strength of the government. The moral sentiment of every community is in favor of the law; and the point upon which the strength of the pulpit should bear is not the general public opinion, but the cowardice, dishonesty, truculency and general inefficiency of the officers. Open your batteries upon them as the chief law-breakers.

Mizar.

In a time of great trouble David recalled the Hill Mizar. He gives us no intimation where it was, or the occurrence there which brought up the remembrance of God. The hill is never mentioned again in Scripture. Horeb and Sinai, Hebron and Olivet, are frequently cited as the scenes of great divine manifestations, and are used to warn, instruct or encourage the saints. The signification of Mizar is "little," and was probably a knoll in the plains of Bethlehem, or the cap of some of those majestic mountains around Jerusalem. It was doubtless the scene of some deliverance wrought for David which was personal and without political or ecclesiastical significance. Maybe it was where he was delivered out of the paw of the lion and the bear when he was but a lad. There are critical times when great events, whose influence is intended to be many-sided, fail to serve us. Not that they have nothing to teach, but that we are without eyes to see or ears to hear. There are but few of us to whom, at some time or other, the trifles of past life do not return to exert a very important influence upon our purposes and experience. The soul is peculiarly susceptible to gentle and tender impressions. While David did not overlook Jordan—the place of battle and victory, the prophet's latest miracle and rapturous flight—nor Hermon, whose generous dewdrops were its treasury and providence, yet he was still drawn fondly to some minute expression of God's fatherly care at Mizar. Out of our own history we may draw some of the most effective lessons of Deity: some exhibition of the divine power—to us more wonderful than the transfiguration; of the divine justice, more startling than the destruction of the Egyptian host in the Red Sea, and of the divine goodness, more thrilling than the multiplication of bread to the starving thousands in the desert. We may not be sufficiently informed to appreciate the difficulties overcome in those miracles, and we have heard them alluded to so often that they seem quite natural events. But our difficulties oppressed us, and relief was so precious; our reliances had actually failed, and, in the supreme exigency, God's help came with memorable significance.

What a benign arrangement of Providence it is that every man is accessible for good by the return of past experiences of fear and hope and love, though they were not extraordinary or overpowering! If we must wait for what is phenomenal for comforting or inspiring views of God, or learn his nature from the exceptional and miraculous in our history, most of us would never catch a glimpse of him. Only a few men, and they at long intervals of time, cross into the atmosphere of the awful and the terrific—most of us live among very small events. The Croton Aqueduct tower, in New York, is several hundred feet high; and from its summit one has a fine view of the city of one and a half millions of people. A slower, but better, view is that obtained by taking street after street, and house after house, and marvel after marvel. And so, like David, we may study God in the minute movements of his gentle providence, and remember our childhood's pleasures, so sweet, so guileless: the benedictions around our later paths; the quiet love and security of our happy homes; the food that has never failed; the friends that have never forsaken; the hours when heaven was so real; the distinct and clear apprehension of the Savior's love; the gush of our warm affections toward the Redeemer, and the exhilaration of hope and faith in which the world seemed all too poor to tempt us from God; and under the spell of "the Hill Mizar" we may understand God as the heart alone can understand him.

W. H. Foster.

The startling news of the death of this noble and honored layman has just reached us. In this issue we chronicle the death of his saintly wife, and now, with trembling hand, note his departure on Friday, the ninth instant. How soon he hastened to meet her on the invisible shore!

Bro. Foster was probably the best-known layman of Methodism in the Southwest. He was easily the prince of Sunday-school superintendents, and for forty years continuously has been at the head of some one of our city Sunday-schools. Probably no man has been so universally loved by the children of this city. He has been a devoted, self-sacrificing, painstaking, laborious and generous Christian; and but few Methodist enterprises in this city have been prosecuted without his counsel and toil; and he has filled every place in church work accessible to a layman. Since the introduction of the laity into our church councils he has, with the exception of only one or two years, been a delegate to the Annual Conference, and thrice a delegate to the General Conference. With him originated the idea of the Seashore Camp-Meeting, and from the first he has been the president of its Board of Trustees. A large part of its success is attributed to his courage, fidelity and perseverance. When he crossed over to the shining shore a host of souls, converted through this enterprise, gave him a glad greeting with the songs of Christian triumph he so much loved to sing.

For a brief time, veteran, valiant soldier, farewell! We'll miss you at the seaside this summer. Your flowing white locks, your open, cheerful, benevolent face will be missed in our gatherings; but we expect to greet you in the better world to which your counsel and example pointed us.

A suitable memorial will be prepared.

Notes.

There are some signs made now and then which show that the church, in the matter of music, is coming back to the time of David and Solomon. Bishop Mallalieu, in giving an account of the dedication of a new church in Florida, says: "Nearly all the instruments mentioned in the Psalms were in use and with most excellent effect. It was an occasion of superb dedication music." Why musical instruments should not be used now in the worship of God, as well as in Solomon's day, we have never been able to see the reason. The 150th Psalm can not be used at all by persons who are opposed to their use! What we want is to draw the people to hear the gospel, and no orchestra rendering choice music will draw the people.

Whether a man sees clearly depends much upon his attitude towards the light. Many a man is walking in the darkness of his own shadow, because his face is turned from the light. If he would only turn around he would have the full blaze beaming brightly upon him. Many Christians are in this sad condition. Having their backs toward the Sun of Righteousness, they see only the shadows which his light creates and walk on in darkness. If they would only turn, how beautiful everything would be! Many an agnostic unbeliever would have all his doubts resolved by simply turning his face towards "the light which lighteth every man who cometh into the world." "The light of the world" is Jesus, and in fellowship with him all darkness is dispelled, all doubts given to the winds and the soul made strong in his grace.

We commend to our young preachers this criticism from an unknown pen. Probably the special reason for your personal call to the ministry is found in your personality. Let the gospel, therefore, come through yourself.

"I take it that when a man is preaching a sermon, he is giving himself the thoughts that burned his brain on Monday, the aspirations that fired his soul on Wednesday, the inspiration of the presence of his auditors on Sunday. The best test, after all, of a man's calling to the ministry is his ability to translate his life into a sermon. When I go to church, I want the minister's personality to touch mine, if not to absorb mine, and to the very smallest degree can this be accomplished if the preacher is giving us the thoughts of some one else. True, he may be en rapport with the author of the production he is reading, but one is less influenced by ideas than by personal character and individuality of him who animates the ideas."

It makes the heart sick to read the plaintive pleadings for reinforcement of men and women that come with every mail from every mission field. Our God is shaking the nations loose from superstition and from prejudice, and exposing to view the emptiness of all earthly dependencies and comforts, and the hunger of the human heart everywhere is crying for the Bread of Life. There are thousands of devoted men and women begging the various Mission Boards to send them, who are repulsed with the answer: "No money." What are you doing to wipe out this reproach? Have you ceased giving? Have you diminished your contribution under the plea of hard times? Do you give only what you did before God's mighty opportunities opened. Brother, wake up! the world is trembling with unimagined possibilities of life and holiness and happiness, and waiting on you to do something and give something worthy of yourself and your Savior.

Personals.

Dr. Howard Crosby has been twenty-five years pastor of the Fourth Avenue Presbyterian Church of New York.

Dr. David Hostetter has his life insured for $800,000. He certainly don't believe in his "bitters."

A. S. Barnes, the New York publisher, died some weeks ago. He was a consistent Christian and a large giver of the money he made.

Gen. Lew Wallace will make his home in Indianapolis this coming spring. He is spoken of as a possible candidate for governor of Indiana.

A memorial window, in memory of Gen. Gordon's last days at Khartoum, is to be placed in the Manchester Cathedral.

Rev. William Wimberly is in the midst of a glorious revival at Plaquemine. An overflow meeting is being conducted in the public square by Rev. H. H. Kimball, of this city, and many penitents come forward for prayers at every service.

Rev. Bishop C. B. Galloway was present at the Searcy Educational Convention, and was felt, as he always is. The State Female College was located at Searcy, and over $25,000 was raised, and a building committee appointed with instructions to proceed at once to the erection of suitable buildings. The Bishop is magnifying his office all over the State in heroic episcopal labors.
